5th to 9th Prizes, each $10.00 in Cash.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of any one else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

A Natural Question.

Our small daughter is very fond of her bath, writes a contributor to Harper's Magazine, but she objects vigorously to the drying process.

One day, while we were remonstrating with her, she said: "Why, what would happen, mamma, if you didn't wipe me dry? Would I get rusty?"

Natural Animosity.

"I saw a most unusual sight of harmony at the dock this morning."

"What was it?"

"And old seadog getting on finely with a catboat."—Baltimore American.

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

A good remedy for a cough is to put a lemon into boiling water. Boil it for a quarter of an hour. Then press out the pulp into a jar, removing the pips, and mix it very thoroughly with a quarter of a pound of honey. Take a teaspoonful when required.

If by chance your vegetables or preserves scorch while cooking, remove the vessel instantly from the range and set it in a pan of cold water, letting it remain there for ten or fifteen minutes. At the end of that time you will find that scorched taste has all vanished from the food.

Cover the patient over while airing the sickroom. Let down the window at the top, swing door rapidly but quickly for a few minutes backwards and forwards. This will quickly pump the bad air out and draw in the fresh air from the window.

An egg that has been too lightly boiled may be put into the saucepan again, even after the top has been taken off, if an ordinary pin be dropped into it in a conspicuous place, when it will be found that none of the egg has been lost. Care should be taken to remove the pin.

In roasting any bird place the breast down in the pan when first put in the oven. By so doing the juice will run out of the back into the breast, making it more juicy, instead of the juices from the white meat settling in the backbone, as happens when a bird is placed back down in the pan.

To cure squeaking shoes take a large plate and pour just enough oil on it to cover the bottom. Then stand the shoes with their heels propped, so that the soles rest in the oil. Let them stand overnight, and in the morning wipe off any excess of oil there may be.

To keep a coffee pot sweet put a tablespoonful of baking soda into it. Fill it two-thirds full of water and let it boil for an hour. Then rinse very thoroughly. If this is done about once a week the pot will always smell fresh and clean.

Apron Pockets are Time Savers

A kitchen apron with big roomy pockets will save the busy housekeeper a great many unnecessary steps.

If she keeps her "small change" purse in her apron pocket she will save steps running back and forth to pay the laundryman, the grocer or the peddler. She will find it useful as a "catch-all" for the odds and ends picked up as she is doing her housework—misplaced toys, bits of paper and odds and ends of all kinds may be gathered in that capacious pocket without wasting a single step.

If there's a needle and a spool of thread in her pocket the housekeeper will be sure to find it useful as she is going the rounds of the house in the morning.

Lesson IV.—First Quarter, For Jan. 24, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Judg. vii, 1-8, 16-23—Memory Verse, 7—Golden Text, Zech. iv, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The call of Gideon to be the Lord's representative in the deliverance of Israel at this time was made very plain in our last lesson. Today's lesson and the chapter following tell of the actual deliverance and that under Gideon the country was in quietness forty years (chapter viii, 28). In these three chapters Gideon's name is mentioned thirty-nine times, but some name of God is used sixty times. In all things He must be pre-eminent. It is God who worketh; we are only instruments. Interesting references to this great deliverance, with an outward look to a greater deliverance by a greater Deliverer, are found in Isa. ix, 4 7; x, 26, 27; Ps. lxxxiii, 9.

When the Spirit of the Lord clothed Himself with Gideon and he blew the trumpet 32,000 from several of the tribes were gathered unto him, which seemed a very small number to go against an army which was without number and as grasshoppers for multitude (chapter vi, 5, 33-35). According to Deut. xxxii, 30, they would, however, be equal to 32,000,000 of the enemy or even 100,000,000, but the Lord said to Gideon, "The people that are with thee are too many for Me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel vaunt themselves against Me," and so all the fearful and afraid ones were requested to return home (verses 2, 3). This was according to the law in Deut. xx, 8, and reduced Gideon's army to 10,000.

I am interested to know what Gideon thought when the Lord said "The people are yet too many" or if he made any remarks when he saw the 10,000 dwindle down to only 300, but I shall have to wait. The lesson of II Chron xiv, 11, is strongly impressed upon me—"Lord, it is nothing with Thee to help, whether with many or with them that have no power." As then, so now, God is seeking the whole hearted ones whom He can use. He is ready to save all who will come to Him and not willing that any should perish (John vi, 37; II Pet. iii, 9), but for service it is still true that of the many who are called few are willing to be His chosen ones. The cost of discipleship seems too great (Luke xiv, 33). If all the fearful ones and the ease loving ones in our churches were turned down would there be only one in a hundred ready to deny self utterly?

An interesting incident of encouragement for Gideon is found in verses 9-14, for, though listeners are not supposed to hear any good of themselves, this was certainly an exception, for it was of the Lord, both the dream and the interpretation and the time of telling it. Now, try to imagine Gideon's advance—three companies of 100 each and each man with a trumpet in one hand and a concealed lamp in the other. Was there ever anything so seemingly ridiculous in the annals of warfare? But He did it who uses things that are not to bring to naught things that are. He filled with food thousands of hungry people by means of a few loaves and fishes which a little boy had. He overthrew an army of 185,000 by one angel. His name is "Wonderful." "Look on Me and do likewise. As I do so shall ye do" (verse 17). These are the Captain's orders, and to us today the word is "Follow Thou Me!"

Not worldly ways nor schemes of any kind to draw or hold the people, young or old, but just the clear note of the gospel trumpet and the lamp of a consistent Christian life, for the life is the light. When the 300 lights shone forth, and the trumpets sounded, and the cry arose on the midnight air "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," and every man stood in his place round about the camp, then the host of the enemy ran and cried and fled and slew each other, and the Lord wrought the victory (verses 19-23). It is still true that the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds (II Cor. x, 4).

There will always be faultfinders like the men of Ephraim, and we are apt to forget that a soft answer turneth away wrath (chapter viii, 1-3; Prov. xv, 1). There are often ungrateful scoffers who need to be taught by thorns and briers (chapter viii, 6-9, 16, 17), and there is rarely an Abigail to plead for the fools who act thus foolishly (I Sam. xxv, 10, 11, 23-31). The wisdom of Gideon is seen in his saying to those who desired him to rule over them, "I will not rule over you; * * * the Lord shall rule over you" (viii, 22, 23). The folly of Gideon is seen in his leading Israel to worship an ephod instead of the Living God, who had spoken to Israel by the Urim and Thummim in the breastplate on the ephod (viii, 24-27; Ex. xxviii, 6-15, 30).

Oh, the weakness and sinfulness of our poor humanity, and how necessary the admonition, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall!" (I Cor. x, 12.) So we learn again that there is no perfection of human nature but in Christ Jesus, no perfect deliverer or ruler but Himself, no perfect rest for Israel or the nations till He shall reign in righteousness, and then, and not till then, shall the work of righteousness be peace and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance forever (Isa. xxxii, 1, 17).

YESTERDAY & TO-DAY

CHEE-POOS-TE-TIN
Old Veteran seen in middle of Group

FILE HILLS INDIAN COLONY BAND

CHEE-POOS-TE-TIN, the 107-year-old veteran of the File Hills Agency Indians in Southern Saskatchewan could tell many a wonderful tale of the changes he has seen among his fellow tribesmen since the days of George the Third, but nothing has caused him greater pride than the work now being done by the young bloods for the Patriotic Fund. There is no better band in Western Canada than the File Hills Band, all the members of which are Indians, and so enthused have they become about the war that they have arranged a series of patriotic concerts in the schoolhouses of the surrounding districts. Star Blanket, the Chief of the tribe approves, and so do the other elders, O-Hoo, Ah-tim-ai-qui-sit, Ki-so-kow-no-tat, Wah-o-Koot, O-Son-Si-Ko-Peas and Noes-ta-tik. They have already given away many a bushel of wheat to be sold for the fund, and their interest in the War-Far-Away-Across the Oceans increases every day. The younger generation have adopted more up-to-date names, such as Alex. Brass, F. Gordon, H. McLeod, Joe. Mackay and Philip Jackson, but they are good Indians for all that as their present work shows.

WHY SHE WROTE A NOVEL

By F. A. MITCHEL

Miss Winifred Wells, who had written a novel under the name of Thomas Erskine Mortimer, received a letter one morning which read as follows:

Thomas Erskine Mortimer, Esq.:
Dear Sir—I write to ask you where you got the name of your hero, Edgar Wheatleigh? My name is Edgar Wheatleigh, and I am curious to know how you happened to hit upon it for your clearly drawn character. I am very truly yours,
EDGAR WHEATLEIGH.

Now, Miss Wells, a young lady of twenty-one summers, had taken the name from the city directory, and it occurred to her that it belonged to her correspondent. She was about to reply that she had done so when an idea popped into her head whereby she might have some fun. She wrote Mr. Wheatleigh, signing herself Mortimer, that she had heard a friend speak of a Mr. Wheatleigh in high terms and had been given the salient points in his character, which she had embodied in her hero. This person of her novel was undoubtedly another than her questioner.

This brought a reply from Mr. Wheatleigh giving a few points as to his antecedents with a view to discovering whether or not he was the hero of the novel. Miss Wells, effecting to be much surprised at the points he gave her, admitted that he was doubtless identical with the man who had been described to her. In this letter also she wrote under the guise of her nom de plume.

Mr. Wheatleigh wrote again, asking for the name of the friend who had described him. The reply was that the writer was doubtful whether he should give the name. However, since his informer might not be the original observer he would strain a point and do so. The outline from which the character had been drawn was a Miss Winifred Wells. To this she added her address.

The next scene in this diminutive comedy was a call from Mr. Wheatleigh. Miss Wells came down with his card in her hand looking very much pleased.

"It's a long while since we have met," she remarked. "You have grown from boy to man since I saw you last. I should not have known you."

Mr. Wheatleigh in the novel was a copy of a grand gentleman character in one of Ouida's novels. He would not be so ungallant as to admit that he did not remember this friend of his childhood.

"I would know you," he said, "had I not had the slightest knowledge of your identity. The only reason I might not have recognized you is that from a rather pretty child you have grown to be a superb woman."

Miss Wells was not only delighted with her device, but with a man of such unblushing assurance.

"But how," she asked, "have you found me out after all these years?"

"In a very singular way. My friend Tom Mortimer wrote a novel naming one of his characters for me. When I asked him how he learned certain features concerning me, the original of his character, he said that they had been given him by an old friend of mine, Winnie Wells."

This came very near being too much for the authoress, but she repressed her mirth.

"How long have you known Tom?" she asked.

"Tom? Why, I have known him ever since we were little toddlers together, our homes having adjoined each other."

"Did he say I gave you any points as to your character?"

Mr. Wheatleigh, though a scamp, was, so far as his own merits were concerned, a modest one. He said that Tom had endowed him with traits he did not possess. Nevertheless he knew that Miss Wells had spoken very highly of him. He was bent on knowing who she was and what had been this child connection between them; but, although he beat the bush incessantly, he uncovered nothing. At last Miss Wells gave him all the information he wished and more, too, had he known it was manufactured.

"You have evidently forgotten what passed between us the night you went away," she said, revealing what it was by dropping her eyes to the floor.

"Forgotten it! I shall never forget it. What I said then I repeat now. I am as unchanged as the rocks."

"Then why did you never write?"

"Why didn't I write? Why, for the best of reasons. I broke my right arm three days after we parted."

Miss Wells burst into a laugh that made the house ring. When it subsided she told Mr. Wheatleigh the whole story. He was as much delighted with it as she was with the success of her trick.

"Well," he said when it was all out, "for once in my life I'm a hero—the hero of a story. What I said when last we met I repeat now. I said then that you were the girl for me, and I say it now. I'll have no other. I swear it."

Miss Wells laughed again, taking the declaration as a matter of gallantry. And so it was at the time intended. But the acquaintance having been thus pleasantly formed was continued. Mr. Wheatleigh insisted on the authoress making him the hero of a novel. She declined to do this, but the matter was finally compromised by his making her his wife. He now accuses her of having written a novel for no other purpose than to secure a husband.

ACTIVITIES OF Y.M.C.A.

Our membership committee organized a canvass for members in October and did some earnest work in connection with the same. This effort would have been more successful but for the fact that so many men were out of employment.

Our membership statement up to January 18th, 1915, is as follows:

Senior members paid in full...	283
Senior members paying on instalment	28
	311
Boys' members paid in full....	219
Boys members paid in part	38
	257
	568
Number of seniors granted an extention of time for the renewal of memberships	40
Boys members carried by special arrangement	61
	568

Total amount received in membership fees during 1914 $2,154.45.

We are sure, the report continues, that Dr. J. L. Gordon's meetings in October and November were a help to our work and we believe that the meetings addressed by Dr. Gordon under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. in the Opera House will long be remembered. About thirty-five hundred men attended these two services.

As we look into the year 1915 we can see now doors of opportunities for service being open so we trust that we may have the courage and zeal and faith in God to do our very best work in face of obstacles and handicaps that may confront us.

We wish in closing to thank the members of the Board of Directors, our members, the citizens of Peterborough, for their kind support and co-operation and wish to express appreciation for the efficient service rendered by boys' secretary Galley, physical director Carson and our caretaker, Mr. James.

Boys' Department.

The report of the Boys' Secretary, G. L. Galley, gave in detail, the work carried on in the boys' department showed a fully paid up membership of 219. Five tickets were presented. Number of new members, 98.

The attendance at the boys' rooms showed a daily average of 88. The boys' secretary has assisted in the following ways during the year:

1. Big Brothers' Club at the toboggan slide and skating rink taking charge of the children.
2. Canadian Bible Study examinations at headquarters, Toronto.
3. Jr. Church hockey league.
4. Taught Sunday School classes at Charlotte St. and St. James' Methodist Churches.

The secretary thanks all those who have so kindly assisted him in carrying on the work of the boys' department; the staff for their kind co-operation and help: Mr. McCarrell, chairman of the boys' committee for his devotion and help to the work and to the boys' cabinet who have done excellent work in their department.

Physical Department.

The physical director's report deals with the boys' camp, swimming campaign, athletics, fall conferences of physical work, social activities, basketball, bowling, Leaders' Corps, Life Problem Club, Open House New Year's, gymnasium classes and wrestling.

In conclusion the report says:—

A report of our activities from the opening of the gymnasium until Jan. 1st shows 212 classes with a total attendance of 2723. This does not include Collegiate classes of which there were 70 classes with a total attendance of 1270 making a total of 282 classes with a total attendance of 3993.

Ways in Which the Physical Director has served outside of the Association:—

On committee and officiated at merchants' picnic.

Refereed and helped in organizing Labor Day sports.

President Church Hockey League.

Leader Young Men's Excelsior Club, George St. Church.

Filled the pulpit and spoke in several of the different churches.

INQUEST IS POSTPONED.

Whitby, Jan. 20.—The inquest into the death of Wm. Stone, the young telegraph operator who was fatally shot while on duty here a few weeks ago, which was to have been held yesterday, had to be postponed for two weeks owing to Col. J. E. Farewell, the County Crown Attorney, being too ill to attend.

There is this difference between reason and instinct: reason often makes mistakes, but is apt to be found on the job; instinct rarely makes a mistake, but jumps the job without notice.

GRAND AND PETIT JURORS

The following men of the County of Peterborough have been selected to act as jurors at the High Court and Criminal Court of Inferior Jurisdiction during 1915:—

Annual Report of Ladie's Auxiliary

The report of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A., made to the directors last night follows:—

In giving our annual report for the year we feel as never before how necessary it is to exert our influence for good while we have opportunity. Many of our young men who have enjoyed the benefits of this association are now enlisted to serve their country on the field of battle. We hope some of the influence received here will be of great benefit to them in a far off land, and that they may be spared to return.

Early in the year we were favored with an entertainment given by the Charlotte St. Methodist Ladies' Aid which helped us financially at the close of which we tendered the society a banquet.

In March we entertained the boys to the number of about three hundred at a banquet which they thoroughly enjoyed.

The works accomplished during the year consisted of rooms committee supervising the dormitories several times, and in cases where needed renewed curtains, etc. The social committee have been very diligent in their work looking after the kitchen and have purchased many new articles such as dishes, cutlery, kitchen utensils, also lumber for the platform for gymnasium.

This society has held seven regular and two special meetings, with an average attendance of nine.

We are sorry to have lost one of our members, Mrs. Goheen, by removal, but we are glad to have welcomed some new members, and hope if spared the coming year to welcome many more.

HATTIE S. CLEGG,
Secretary.

A "SCRAP OF PAPER"

At ten minutes past seven in the evening of the fourth of August, 1914, within the four grim walls of the Berlin Foreign Office, there transpired a twenty-minute interview, the most dramatic of which history holds record. * "Will Britain," queried the German Chancellor, "fight just for a scrap of paper?" The British Ambassodar made terse reply, "That solemn compact simply has to be kept." For that "scrap of paper" was the public law of Europe guaranteeing the independence and neutrality of the Belgian nation. * Eighty-three years ago Britain had signed. And, whatever the consequences, the mightiest of empires was tossed into the melting-pot of a world-war. Belgium also had subscribed. Would she, too, risk all for honor? Her reply was sealed in blood on the ramparts of Liege; and, forthwith, Devastation laid waste her smiling fields and piled her cities in smoking ruins. An empire in arms, a country in ashes, a nation homeless—and all for a "scrap of paper!" * Magna Charta, too was but a "scrap of paper," but it was the earliest monument of Anglo-Saxon freedom. The Declaration was only a bit of parchment—but it heralded the birth of the American nation. Just such scraps of paper have marked the milestones in mankind's upward climb to freedom. * Mortgages, bonds, debentures, promissory notes—all are but scraps of paper. But no self-respecting man and no honest corporation can wantonly repudiate such commitments. * As it lies in your drawer or your safe, your life assurance policy measures but four inches by nine. It, too, is only a "scrap of paper." But the scrap of paper bears on its face the corporal seal of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada. It is backed by over Sixty Millions of Assets and nearly five decades of honorable dealing. In times like these it may easily spell the salvation of your business. Should you die, of all your scraps of paper it alone may be worth one hundred cents on the dollar. In years to come it alone may be left to buy bread for your mother, your wife, or your children. * That "scrap of paper" represents the most sacred of your obligations. Respect for it is the measure of your honor. * Keep it inviolate, whatever the cost!

CANADIAN-MADE AEROPLANE EQUIPPED FOR WAR PURPOSES

An Up-to-the-Minute Exhibition

Montreal, Que., Jan. —, 1915. — Through an "eleventh hour" arrangement, the handsome new Branch Building and assembly plant of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, has been secured for the annual Montreal Motor Show, which opens here next week. To this city will go the honor of holding the only spring motor show in the British Empire, and, from al reports, it is not only going to be worth seeing, but one of the best ever held in Canada. With the Toronto show abandoned, a number of firms that formerly did not go outside of Toronto have entered this exhibit.

The Ford Branch Building, recently completed at a cost of something over $250,000, is an ideal location for the show. It has a floor area of 124,000 square feet, and is four stories high. The construction is fireproof, of brick and reinforced concrete, trimmed with mat glazed terra cotta, with a granite base. It is larger than some automobile factories.

Originally it was planned to hold the show in the building of the Allan Line, situated on the docks, but at a meeting of the show directors this week it was unanimously decided to change to the Ford building. Besides being practically new, the latter is centrally located and accessible to two car lines.

Exhibits for the show will be "up to the minute," as they include a Canadian-made aeroplane fully equipped for war purposes and carrying a Ross rapid fire gun. There will also be on show an armored car such as is to be sent to the front. A display of motor boats will add much to the popular interest.

Both in number and variety of exhibits, the coming show will surpass all previous ones. The display will include pleasure cars and commercial cars and accessories. Concerts will be given every afternoon and evening by the orchestra of the Grenadier Guards.

Mercier Makes Strong Protest

LONDON, Jan. 20. — The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. telegraphs that Cardinal Mercier has made formal protest against his treatment at the hands of the German authorities in Belgium. The cardinal has published his protest in the form of a letter, dated Jan. 10, and has sent copies to all points in his diocese.

He declares the statement of the German governor of Brussels, that he (Cardinal Mercier) has not been hindered in his episcopal work is "far from the truth."

GERMAN AIR-CRAFT MAKE AN ATTACK ON ENGLISH TOWNS

EXCITEMENT IN GREAT YARMOUTH

London Chronicle Describes Bombing of Town

LONDON, Jan. 20. — The Chronicle's correspondent says:

"About 8.30 last evening a German aircraft dropped five bombs into Great Yarmouth. The first warning that the town received was a flashlight in the sky and then came the bombs. The airship arrived from the north and passed off due south, and people on the marine parade distinctly saw the outline of the airship. It was not more than five minutes passing over the town. Considerable excitement prevailed and people rushed into the streets screaming. Flashes from bombs were seen by many hundreds, who rushed off to the south quay. Children ran into the streets screaming. The military authorities ordered all lights out on the marine parade. At 10 o'clock news came that another aircraft was expected, and this did not alleviate the public fears. Householders followed the advice given by the police and military and for the most part kept indoors. Those who had basements immediately took refuge there, and those who braved the danger out of doors were constantly colliding in the streets. Tramcars and motors were held up by sentries and ordered to put their lights out and had to comply.

Mr. Ruffolds, a news agent of Great Yarmouth, said last night, describing the Zeppelin raid there: "I was walking along King street when suddenly I heard a terrible explosion like the roar of mighty thunder. I looked up toward the sky, but could see nothing. The explosion seemed to have come from a spot a few hundred yards away. I ran toward St. Peter's Plain and found that in St. Peter's Plain and St. Peter's road two houses had been wrecked. Many other houses and shops in the district also had been damaged, and everywhere windows were broken."

LETTERS READ

At Second Day of Union Life Trial

TORONTO, Jan. 20. — The second day of the trial of Dr. F. G. Hughes and Harry K. Symons, K.C., on the charge of conspiring to defraud the public in connection with the Union Insurance Co. and National Agency was mainly taken up with the reading of copies of letters purported to have been written by Dr. Hughes to Mr. Symons while on a tour trying to sell stock, and a report of the evidence of the latter taken before commission in the Supreme Court in October, 1913. Nine more witnesses were called for the prosecution, and the case adjourned until to-day.

Counsel for the crown wanted to put in process, a bundle of copies of letters alleged to have been written by Symons and Hughes. This was objected to by defending counsels refusing to admit that they were copies of letters written by the accused.

Subsequently the counsel for Dr. Hughes admitted the letters purported to be written by him and these were read to the jury. The letters referred to the trouble of selling stock.

NOT OFFICIALLY AT WAR.

Yet Portugal and Germany Are Fighting Hammer and Tongs.

LISBON, Jan. 20.—Portugal is today in a singular situation in reference to the great war. German forces have invaded Portuguese Angola and fighting has been going on here between German and Portuguese forces for a couple of months. Yet Germany has not declared war on Portugal, the German minister remains in Lisbon and the Portuguese minister in Berlin.

An official casualty list gives Portuguese losses in Angola, which is on the western coast of Africa as one officer killed, six wounded and one taken prisoner. The number of casualties among the soldiers is not mentioned, but unofficially it is said that the Portuguese have lost about 800 all told in killed, wounded and prisoners. On the other hand the Portuguese have killed, wounded or captured about 200 German cavalrymen. Fresh Portuguese troops numbering about 4,000 are ready to embark for Angola. Some orders for equipment have been placed in the United States.

The German legation here is well guarded day and night.

Terrorism In Constantinople.

SALONIKA, Jan. 20.—It is declared here by arrivals from Turkey that a reign of terror now prevails in Constantinople compared to which the worst days under the rule of Sultan Abdul Hamid were mild.

The city is now ruled by Enver Pasha, former Minister of War. Anyone attempting to spread the news of the latest defeats of the Turkish army is summarily hanged on Galata bridge. The truth of the setbacks in the Caucasus and the abandonment of the designs upon Egypt is becoming gradually known to a large part of the population, however. The people it is said, are ripe for revolt against the rule of the "Young Turks" party and domination of the Germans.

Long Heralded Raid is Made in Early Hours of Night.

Bombs Are Dropped at Yarmouth, Sandringham, Kings' Lynn, Cromer, Sheringham and Beeston, About 150 Miles Northeast of London.

LONDON, Jan. 20. — German aircraft made their long-threatened raid on England last night and attempted to blow up with bombs the King's royal residence in Sandringham, County Norfolk.

This intention was ill-timed for King George and Queen Mary with their family, who had been staying at Sandringham, had returned to London yesterday morning to resume their residence in Buckingham Palace.

It is still not definitely known whether the raiders were Zeppelins or aeroplanes, but Zeppelins were reported yesterday afternoon as passing over the North Sea in a westerly direction and most of those reporting that event incline to the belief that those were the raiders.

The night was quite calm, but very dark and cloudy, which made it impossible for the people in the towns over which they passed to distinguish even the outlines of the raiders, though the whirr of their propellers and the droning of their motors could be distinctly heard.

A Zeppelin is reported to have been brought down by the fire of a warship at Hunstanton, a few miles north of Sandringham.

Bombs were dropped in Yarmouth, King's Lynn, Sandringham, Cromer, Sheringham and Beeston, and everywhere except at Beeston, casualties and damage to property resulted.

The first place visited was the well-known seaside resort and fishing town of Yarmouth, where the people were taken by surprise at the sudden visit.

Two persons, a man and a woman were killed and a number of other persons were injured and much damage to property was done by the raiders in their visit which lasted less than ten minutes. Four or five bombs were dropped in Yarmouth.

Apparently the raiders, after visiting Yarmouth, proceeded to Cromer, where they also dropped bombs and thence went to Sheringham and Beeston. Then turning inland they made for Sandringham, dropping explosive missiles there and at King's Lynn, where a boy was killed and a man, a woman and a child were injured and two houses were destroyed. It was variously reported that five and seven bombs were dropped in King's Lynn. The damage done in Sandringham has not been reported.

Confirmatory despatches have been received by the Press Association of the dropping of bombs by an aircraft near Sandringham, which is a royal residence. Four bombs were dropped on King's Lynn, and others fell near Sandringham Palace.

The police say that two houses were demolished by the bombs dropped, and that one house was damaged in Bentinck street. In one house a boy 17 years old was killed. His father was buried in the debris of their demolished home, but was taken out alive and later sent to a hospital. In another house a mother and her baby were slightly injured.

It is variously reported that five and seven bombs were dropped here.

According to accounts of the air raid received in a despatch from Norwich, aircraft dropped bombs on Yarmouth, Sheringham, Cromer and Beeston in Norfolk County. At Sheringham a bomb, dropped in Wyndham street, went through a house, but did not explode, apparently because the fuse became detached in the descent.

The bomb dropped at Beeston did no damage. The bombs measured nearly four inches in diameter.

An Amsterdam despatch says: Three German airships passed over the Island of Ameland, in the North Sea, at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, according to telegrams from Nes, the principal town of the island. They were flying in a westerly direction.

A Yarmouth despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says it is believed that it was an aeroplane and not a Zeppelin that attacked that city. The machine later visited Sheringham, five miles from Cromer, and dropped two bombs. No damage was done at that place.

The towns of Yarmouth, Sandringham, King's Lynn and Cromer are all situated in the Province of Norfolk, which abuts the North Sea, about 150 miles northeast of London.

Yarmouth, known as Great Yarmouth, and Cromer, are favorite water resorts, while Sandringham contains the country palace of the late King Edward. King's Lynn is a seaport and market town. It contains shipbuilding yards, iron foundries, machine factories, oil mills and other industries.

If the aircraft which made the attack were the ones that passed over the Island of Ameland they probably started from the vicinity of Cuxhaven. In this case they would have had to fly about 150 miles across the North Sea to reach England.

SNOWSTORMS DISRUPT OPERATIONS IN THE WEST

Purpose of Foe to Make Good Their Gains Has Been Defeated.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Complete victory in the battle for the possession of La Boisselle, northeast of Albert, defeat of the German purpose to make good their gains north of Soissons, and capture of a new field work, with the occupation of five hundred yards of hostile trenches northwest of Pont-a-Mousson in their movement to take St. Mihiel and carry out their drive on Metz, were the features of the French official report published last night.

Snowstorms of blinding fury have intervened to disrupt the offensive plans of the allies along the whole battle line from Flanders to the Vosges. The valley of the Aisne alone afforded the hostile forces a field for combat.

Despite the snow, the French artillerists in the region of Arras attacked heavily the German batteries, which, after a terrific cannonade, were reduced to silence.

At La Boisselle, where previous official statements from Paris had been chronicled, the recovery by the French of their positions in the town, the futility of a counter-offensive evidently has been effectively impressed upon the German commander, for the expected attempt to retake the town failed to materialize, and the French remain in full possession.

Paris looks upon the situation in the west with optimism, and these is a disposition to await with patience the fulfillment of Gen. Joffre's promise that the real offensive movement will be carried out in the spring.

Last night's official statement from the French War Office merely said:

"There is no incident of importance to report."

The afternoon communique at Paris said:

"In Belgium there has been a snowstorm and also intermittent artillery exchanges at certain points. There was also a fall of snow yesterday in the region of Arras, where our heavy artillery on several different occasions silenced the batteries of the enemy.

"As we set forth yesterday, a fairly spirited engagement has been developing at La Boisselle, where, following the breaking out of several fires, we were compelled during the night of Jan. 17-18 to evacuate our positions. These, however, we recaptured Jan. 18 at daybreak. The enemy has not renewed his attacks on this part of our front.

"In the section of Soissons the bombardment of the suburb of St. Paul during the night of Jan. 17-18, was not followed by any infantry attack, and the day of Jan. 18 passed in absolute calmness.

"In the Valley of the Aisne, to the east of Soissons and in the section of Rheims, there were yesterady artillery exchanges.

"To the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson we yesterday occupied another field work of the enemy in the forest of Le Pretre, where we to-day occupy 500 yards of the trenches of the enemy.

"In the Vosges yesterday saw a snowstorm. Here also there has been artillery fighting, particularly in Ban De Sapt and in the neighborhood of Thann."

French Close To Metz.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20. — A Paris cable to The Tribune says: "By a determined assault the French have captured nearly a third of a mile of strongly fortified German positions in the forest of Le Pretre, about three miles from the German border east of St. Mihiel, and within ten miles of Forts Sommy and Wagner, in the outside ring of earthworks surrounding the stronghold of Metz."

German Leader Killed.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 20. — (Via London.) — Lt.-Gen. Freiherr von Ompteda of the German army has been killed in the western arena at the head of his brigade.

Prince Visits Battlefields.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Prince of Wales, according to The Times, just concluded a visit to Nancy, Luneville and the battlefields in Lorraine.

Canada's imports were: Cartridges $17,542; gunpowder, 13,825 pounds; firearms, $96,668.

RECRUITING IN INDIA

Great Enthusiasm Marks Enlistment Throughout Empire

LONDON, Jan. 20. — (Through Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A special despatch from Delhi says:

All India re-echoes the tribute paid by his excellency the viceroy at the recent opening of the council to the commander-in-chief of the army. The work of the military departments is regarded as splendid. Large numbers of Indian army reserve officers are offering to serve with the Indian regiments.

Recruiting for the Indian army continues with remarkable enthusiasm. The fighting races have been greatly stirred by the news of Indian successes at the front. Indian wounded who have returned are most enthusiastic in their praise of the kindness and attention which they have received in Europe. The volunteer movements has been given great impetus throughout the country, and useful gifts to be forwarded to the combatants and the sick are being received daily.

ONLY A MYTH

Some Stories of the Patricias are Pure Imagination

LONDON, Jan. 20—Capt. Cuthbert Smith of the Princess Patricia's who has been in an hospital here, wounded, was positive when see yesterday that all stories of the "Pats" being in a charge and so forth were pure imagination.

Capt. Smith met with his own injury the day before Capt. Newton was killed. He was in the trenches along with the "Pats" for four days and nights. It was towards the end of this spell of heavy duty that he had the misfortune to stray away from his own line. From the darkness he fell into a German trench. Fortunately, it was only occupied by many dead Germans. The enemy had evacuated that particular position for some time and Capt. Smith lay there a long time while waiting to ascertain if the Germans were in the vicinity. At length, having satisfied himself on this point he crawled out with the greatest difficulty, the fall having injured his knee considerably.

The casualties among the Princess Pats so far, he says, have been five killed and sixteen wounded.

When you are ill some persons act like a poultice and help a lot, but they are as hard to get rid of afterward as a porous plaster.

EAT LIKE A BOY

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Assist Your Stomach Whenever It Needs Help. They Are Safe and Sure.

RUSSIANS PREVENTING JUNCTION OF GERMANS

Large Fires Are Reported in the Vicinity of Siepe and Enemy Are Believed to be Devastating the Country Preparatory to a Withdrawal—Russians Unite Forces in Hungary.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Gen. von Hindenburg continues to pound his huge machine to pieces against the Russian defences in Poland. After five months the German offensive has absolutely failed to attain its objective. Now the Russians, in conjunction evidently with the vigorous offensive on the western front, have commenced a big sweeping movement to preven a junction of the German troops in Poland and East Prussia. With the big reinforcements now at his disposal, the Grand Duke Nicholas is apparently burling his weight once more on the enemy's left flank, which may be forced to abandon its attack on Warsaw.

The Russian troops which crossed the Carpathian Mountains are reported to have emerged into the plains of Hungary and to have effected a junction. When the plans for an advance into Transylvania are complete an attempt will be made, it is said, to invade Hungary from the north and east.

Granville Fortesque, the special correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, in a despatch from Warsaw says:

The war area here has been the scene of extraordinary activity during the last ten days, and it is clear that new dispositions are under way. Masses of cavalry swarm over the country along the Vistula to smother such forces of the enemy's mounted troops as they encounter. One cavalry division had considerable success in an engagement at Radzonow, and another pushed the enemy's patrols beyond Sierpc. The Cossacks are now skirmishing beyond Sierpc, backed by important forces of mounted infantry and field artillery.

So successful has been the deployment of this army that the Germans are trembling for the fate of the Vloclawek - Lomicz - Thorn Railway, which at Sierpc makes a bend that brings it close to the Vistula. The present Russian march threatens this link of the enemy's communications.

Large fires are reported in this vicinity, and the inference is that the enemy is devastating the country previous to his retirement. The collapse of the Warsaw campaign was not expected so early.

Bird's Milk.

"I fed him with bird's milk." This curious expression was used by the old Sultan of Turkey, while a prisoner on his way to Saloniki, with reference to his brother Mohammed, his predecessor on the throne. Abdul Hamid was lamenting his own fate and telling his captors how little he deserved it and how kind he had been to his brother. "I fed him with bird's milk," he said, as if that were the greatest kindness he could show. What is bird's milk? Not the Turkish equivalent of the milk of human kindness, but a European brand of condensed milk bearing on the can a picture of a bird on a nest.

Strengthening the Sound Waves

AFTER travelling a certain distance the electric wave which carries the human voice along the telephone wire becomes attenuated and speech becomes too faint to be heard.

Just as in the old stage-coach days fresh relays of horses at regular intervals along the way, enabled the traveller to continue his journey with undiminished speed, so by means of the newly invented "loading coils" inserted at proper intervals, the electric waves are strengthened and long distance telephoning is made easy.

We have lately finished the "loading" of our long distance lines and speech transmission has been very greatly improved. This is especially noticeable on extra long talks. Our "long-haul" transmission is better than ever.

Begin the New Year by making systematic use of the Long Distance Telephone in your business. It will save you time and labor, as well as much money in the shape of travelling expense.

Every Bell Telephone is a Long Distance Station.

FALL FAIR MEN ANGRY

Will Protest Against Reduction of Annual Grant

TORONTO, Jan. 20.—Committees on fairs and exhibitions throughout the province are declaring themselves up in arms against the action of the Ontario Department of Agriculture in cutting the annual grant in half. Representatives claimed yesterday that when the annual convention assembled in Toronto on Feb. 2 that a monster deputation will approach the Government and urge that their support be made the same as in the past. Some were very outspoken in discussing the affair, and stated that it was a most inappropriate year to launch such a policy. If the department pursued such a course how could they expect that the farmers would rally in a great production campaign.

The official explanation of the Department is learned to be that an announcement of this change was given early last fall, and that the majority of the fairs will not suffer much because of their present strength.

Austria Massing Against Serbia.

ATHENS, Jan. 20. — A despatch from Salonika declares an important concentration on the part of the Austrians is under way on the Serbian frontier. The army which, re-formed under Archduke Eugene, after it had been driven out of Belgrade, has been reinforced by fresh troops and by a contingent of Saxons detached from the German reserve force, originally intended to go to Poland.

It is believed a renewal of the action against the Serbians is imminent.

Socialists To Urge Mediation.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 20. — "It is the duty of all Socialists to work to bring about peace. To this end Socialists of all neutral countries will urge their Governments to offer plans of mediation."

These two resolutions were adopted at the closing session of the conference of Socialists of neutral countries, which began here Sunday.

The United States was not represented. One Italian delegate was present and four each from Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Holland.

Borden Battery Authorized.

MONTREAL, Jan. 20. — Definite authorization was yesterday given by the Minister of Militia for the formation of the "Borden Battery" for the second contingent, which has been arranged for by a number of Montreal capitalists, including C. B. Gordon and Hon. Robert Mackay. As a matter of fact, recruiting for the battery has been going on for some time, many of the men being brought from the Cobalt mining district and mobilized at the Grenadier Guards' armory here.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 18.—Quite a sharp reaction took place in wheat prices today. Opening figures were ⅝c to ⅞c lower and at noon a further decline of 2⅛c to 2⅜c had occurred. The influences causing the break were weaker Liverpool cables, heavier arrivals there and Argentine wheat now in competition.

Inspections on Monday totalled 503 cars and in sight today were 190 cars.

Wheat futures closed 1⅞c to 2⅛c lower, cash closed 2c to 2⅛c lower on contract grades and oats ¼c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—There was no improvement in the overseas demand for Manitoba spring wheat today and business in consequence was very quiet. Cables stated that there was considerable reselling at less money than stocks were bought for. The market for coarse grains is quiet, with a steady trade passing in car lots. Spring wheat flour was in demand and a few sales were made. Local and country demand was also better and the market on the whole is more active, with a firm undertone.

Millfeed was in good demand, butter was unchanged, cheese steady and eggs active and firm.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.38⅜; No. 1 northern, $1.32¾ to $1.37⅜; No. 2 do., $1.29¾ to $1.34⅜; May, $1.34⅛ to $1.34⅜.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 67¾c.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

OSHAWA-PETERBOROUGH GAME HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

The game Friday evening between Peterborough Intermediates and Oshawa will, it is expected, afford as much real fast hockey as any game of the season. There was always great rivalry between Oshawa and Peterborough and the Oshawa fans would rather their team defeat the Petes than any other team in the group. With Billy Eaton's town pulling for Picton to win the Petes will step out on the ice determined to further cinch the group honors. Oshawa have some very speedy players including Wieler, the brick topped wing man, and the locals will be called upon to play above par if they win.

The weather has turned a trifle colder thus the ice will be good. The Petes will in all probability line up as follows:—

Goal—Janes.

Defence—Pethick, Spratt.

Forwards—Halpin, Park, Kelly, Moinse, Hunter.

EXPECT TO WIN TOMORROW NIGHT

Juniors Confident of Victory Over Port Hope

The Peterborough Juniors play in Port Hope tomorrow evening as a result of last night's game being postponed. The Blue and White are confident of defeating Sandy Locklington's seven but are fully aware that the task will be no easy one. The following will be the line-up:—

Goal, Legros; r. def., Long; l. def., Morrow; rover, Rose; centre, Jackson; r. wing, Knapman; l. wing, Richardson.

G.N.W. AND G.T.R. WON FROM C.P.R.

Last night in the Brock Street rink, between 10 and 11 o'clock, the boys of the G.N.W. Telegraph Co. and the Grand Trunk blanked the C. P. R. septet in a fast, exciting game of hockey by the score of 3-0. The score would no doubt have been much larger had it not been for the good work of Holyman in goal for C.P.R. He handled a lot of hot ones, while Taylor was idle. Some rough play was started but it didn't down with "Scorcher" Bartley who handled the bell quite satisfactorily.

The teams:—

G. T. R.		C. P. R.
Taylor	goal	Holyman
Phillips	defense	Snelgrove
Lipsett		Dunn
Cook	l. wing	Tully
Moffat	r. wing	Torrance
Martin	rover	Brooks
Guerin	centre	Kemp

COMMENT As You Like it

OSHAWA will be the guests Friday evening. It hardly matters who they are, since the Petes have hit their stride.

PICTON meets Whitby tonight. Whitby have a lot of friends in Peterborough who would like to see them win. At that the late victims of the Petes will give Walter Knox's team a great battle.

LINDSAY expects to defeat Cobourg in Cobourg on Friday night. It's either up to Cobourg or the Petes to stop the Midgets. The Petes play Lindsay here on Friday, Jan. 29th.

IF PETERBOROUGH Juniors win from Port Hope on Thursday and Lindsay suffers another defeat this district will be tied up with Lindsay, Port Hope and the locals on equal footing. To keep in the running at all Harold Long and Co. must win tomorrow evening.

THERE'S A RED LIGHT on the track for —— etc. Notwithstanding the recent peace meeting and the resolution that all armaments should be discarded, the staff of the Review has secured this inch of space to voice a challenge to the Examiner. Following John L. Sullivan's reasoning that "the bigger they are the harder they fall," the Review wishes to meet our esteemed contemporary in a gome of hockey, the said battle to be staged any time, and day, any place.

THE LONDON COUNCIL is in bad with the sports of that city. They have refused to purchase medals for the Western University rugby team, winners of the Canadian Junior Rugby championship. The London Advertiser announced the council action as follows:—

"The city council last night refused to award medals to the Western University Canadian junior rugby champions, because, as some one weakly explained, it would mean that everybody would be seeking medals from the council, and it was not wise to establish this precedent. Last year's council agreed just before the new year that the team deserved the medals, and the aldermen were unanimously in favor of awarding them. However, owing to the fact that it was the last meeting the matter was left over for the new council to deal with.

The new council's excuse for not awarding them is ridiculous. London can boast of very few champions, and only champions get medals. The city should show some slight recognition of the advertising it gets as a result of Western University's work on the gridiron, and should also encourage the men who are trying to make London prominent in the world of sport. Giving medals is slight enough recognition, and it is hard to grasp the council's reason for turning the matter down.'

MARK STREET WON FROM GEORGE STREET

Last night Mark Street won from George Street by 7 to 2. The boys were inclined to be a little too rough however, and many penalties resulted. For Mark St., Nellist, Lipsett and McIntyre starred, while Simpson and Graham played good hockey for George St. The score at half-time stood 4-1. Mr. Alf. Austin refereed. The lineup:

Mark Street—		George St.
Nellist	goal	Patterson
McIntyre	l. def	Simpson
Lipsett	r. def	McGee
Williams	rover	Hilson
Gillespie	centre	Rutherford
Cook	l. wing	Hamilton
Hagerman	r. wing	Graham

Tonight St. John's play Knox at six o'clock.

WELLINGTON'S NOSE

A favorite story of the Duke of Wellington—if not his most favorite story—concerned an incident which happened during the Peninsular wars when, to quote his own words, "my looks were of great use to me."

After the army passed from Spain into France, and occupied the low plains at the northern foot of the Pyrenees, the duke directed Lord Hill to take up a position at a short distance from the main body, across one of the many streams in that locality. The water was very low, and easily fordable at the time; but during the night a very heavy rain came on. The next day the stream was nine or ten feet deep, and Lord Hill, with only a few thousand men, was in dangerous proximity to Marshal Soult's whole army.

Nothing was heard of Lord Hill during the whole day, for his position evidently had not been discovered by the French. On the following morning the duke became anxious. He determined to cross over himself to ascertain the state of affairs, and a small boat was procured. The duke got into it and remained standing. The stream was very narrow, but deep, and the boat touched the opposite bank, close to where an Irish sentry was posted. The man challenged the party, who could not give the countersign, on which Pat levelled his musket to fire at them. Looking along the barrel he recognized the commander-in-chief just as his grace stepped on shore. He immediately brought his musket to the salute and, with the greatest good humor, called out, "God bless your craegid (crooked) nose! I'd sooner see it than then thousand min."

The duke used to finish his story by adding, "And I protest that that is the greatest personal compliment ever paid me in the whole course of my life."

Lure of the Opera.

The music of operas always has been and always will be the lure of its millions of patrons; the singing too, is frequently brilliant and perfect, but the presentment of scenes from life upon the stage where everything, however commonplace and banal, is sung, however beautifully, will always sadden the soul by the very impossibility and inappropriateness of the spectacle. Fat tenors and sopranos expire in flights of high notes, choruses express various quite unnecessary sentiments with what vocal skill they may, and the average person who likes music and a little logic, too, is thrown into ecstasies of wonderment.

THE SITE OF WATERLOO

Forbear! This plain is still too deal with cries.
This soil too sanguine for thy stucco lies.
Shall earth where reeled the guard thy villa pen,
Where nations groaned be heard the cackling hen?
A mansion mark where in the gathering murk—
Those terrible gray horsemen so did work?
Here wilt thou dare to live, where such men died
And on that memorable dust reside!
Here only ever let the solemn moon
Uninterrupted weave a spirit noon.
Here only falter down a pensive dew
From skies too wistful to be purely blue.
But shouldst thou build on consecrated ground,
Then be those houses filled with spectral sound,
Of clashing battle and the ghostly war
Of charging hosts against the battered door!
Let solemn bellow of hollow cannon boom,
A dreadful cavalry invade the gloom!
Until in awe of those who fell or fled
The living flee from the more living dead!
That silence now too conscious is for sound,
It broods upon itself and is self bound
Then let no builder of this field have lease,
'Tis let to time, the property of peace!
—Stephen Phillips in Poetry Review.

TURKISH SHIPS ARE TORPEDOED

SEBASTOPOL, Jan. 20. — (Via Petrograd.)—A detachment of Russian torpedo boats have entered the Bay of Sinope, a Turkish port of the Black Sea in Asia Minor, and have sent to the bottom a Turkish steamer and three sailing vessels. The crews of all four ships were saved. The name of the steamer appears to have been the Meorges. No date of this engagement is given. The news is trustworthy.

Karnak's Sculpture.

Of all the villages of Egypt, Karnak is most noted for its architectural antiques. It is situated on the bank of the Nile and built over the site of Thebes. The buildings date from 1500 B. C. and some contain mural decorations that give interesting views of those ancient times. Many interesting colored marbles were also used in the decoration of these huge temples and much sculpture is still to be seen.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Lillian Dean left on Monday for Port Elgin on a visit to Mrs. Currier.

There will be no meeting of the morning musical society tomorrow morning nor again till Thursday, February 4th.

Mr. Ford Strickland of Toronto spent the week end in Peterborough as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hill.

Invitations have been issued for the eighth annual at home in the conservatory of music, of the Belmont Club, Friday evening, January 29.

Mrs. J. Donald Shook received for the first time since her marriage yesterday afternoon at 176 McDonnel Street. Mrs. J. C. Shook assisted.

The library tea which is to be held under the auspices of the Girls' Auxiliary of the Y.W.C.A. will take place on Saturday next from 4 to 6. It is expected that Miss Saunders will be present.

A reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Allan in the school room of St. Paul's on Tuesday evening in honour of the members of the Adanac Quartettte and Mr. Hesselberg.

The wedding took place at the Dovercourt Presbyterian Church, Toronto, of Miss Alba Isabel Henricks, to Mr. James Robert Gifford, both of Toronto. The bride has many friends in this city. For some time she held a position with R. Hall and Son.

The date for the bonspiel for the ladies' curling clubs of Ontario has been fixed for February the 18th. It is expected that there will be visiting rinks from Toronto, Belleville and Kingston. Peterborough will have two rinks on the ice, one skipped by the president, Mrs. Sanderson, and the other by Mrs. Matthews and a very great effort will be made to keep the Tankard in Peterborough for this year.

The most enjoyable musical event of this winter was the concert in St. Paul's Church on Tuesday evening. The audience have every reason to be grateful to the members of the quartette and Mr. Hesselberg for the generous manner in which they responded to the numerous encores. Amongst those present were Mr. and Mrs. Pogue, Sheriff Hall and Miss Hall, Major and Mrs. Medd, Mr. Mrs. and Miss Allan, Mrs. Roger, Mrs. George Roger, Dr. and Mrs. Carmichael, Mrs. Hopwood, Mr. and Miss Neill, Miss Laidlaw, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hill, the Misses Hill, Dr. and Mrs. Holloway, Dr. and Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Gliddon, Mr. and Mrs. Madill, Mr. and Mrs. Morphet, Mr. J. E. Fisher, Mrs. Greer, Mrs. Cubitt, Mr. and Mrs. Kent, Mrs. Barnes, Miss Lancaster, Miss Peacock, Mrs. Walker, Miss Morrow, Mrs. Fortye, Mr. and Mrs. Yokome, Mrs. Mann, Mrs. Dearle, Mrs. Hazlett, Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. Fessenden, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Suckling, Mrs. Sherwood.

The Canadian Kitchener League are doing good work in providing warm clothing for our soldiers, and no doubt a large number will patronize the Tipperary Tea to be held by them in the Y. M. C. A. parlors tomorrow afternoon and evening. Silver collection.

St. Peter's Court of Foresters Meet for Installation

A largely attended open meeting of St. Peter's Court of the Catholic Order of Foresters was held last evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. The meeting was marked by the installation of officers and addresses made by very prominent Foresters. Deputy High Chief Ranger J. P. Shevlin installed the following officers:—

Chief Ranger—Jos. Denne.
V.C.R.—William Garvey.
P.C.R.—William Perdue.
Speaker—N. Thombley.
Rec. Sec.—J. P. Bryson.
Fin. Sec.—F. Eano.
Treasurer—James Clancy.
Trustees—John Halpin, William McAuliffe, Charles Meyette.
Sen. Con.—P. Collins.
Jun. Con.—William Woodhouse.
Sentinels—James Tobbin, M. J. O'Toole.

Rev. C. J. Phelan, chaplain of the order acted as chairman, and introduced the speakers of the evening who were His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Provincial Chief Ranger L. V. Dusseau, High Court Trustee, M. F. Mogan, J. V. McElderry and Dr McNulty. A musical program consisted of solos by Messrs. E. Hanrahan, George Daly, J. Minicola and E. Bartley. Mr. J. Armstrong rendered the accompaniments.

The St. Peter's Court is considered one of the highest in Ontario. It was organized August 31st, 1891, and since then has paid sick benefits amounting to $12,000, funeral benefits amounting to $1,250 and $25,000 in death claims. The membership is about 280.

CONCERT BY ADANAC QUARTETTE

The concert given in St. Paul's Church last night was one of a high character and fully appreciated by the large audience in attendance. Save for a few empty seats at the very front of the church the building was filled before the time of starting. The programme commenced on time with "Hymn Before Action," by the Adanac Quartette. The encore was a very sweet lullaby song "Po Little Lamb."

Mr. Edouard Hesselberg's first number was exceedingly delicate and sweet, "Recit and Song to the Evening Star" (Tannhauser). This piece dwelt on soft notes, gentle melodies and was attractive by its soothing passages. It was in strong contrast to the Rhapsodie of Liszt that followed, with big, strong, thundering periods, like the strokes of a giant's hammer, but withal finely balanced and harmonious. Chopin's Nocturne in D major was rendered as an encore.

Mr. MacDonald then sang "The Horn," the opening line being "I love the sounding horn at eve in forest found." Mr. MacDonald's voice ran up and down this line like a warhorse in the chase and captivated his audience. The encore was "I cling to Thee My Saviour," by Crozer.

"Excelsior" was sung by Messrs. Hollinshead and Blight, the encore being "A Heart that Loves Thee," by Gounod. Mr. Dixon followed with "Open the Gates of the Temple," and, like Excelsior, it was a fine song well rendered. Mr. Dixon put the right force, swing and volume into this beautiful and dignified song.

Part II. of the programme opened with a double selection by Mr. Hesselberg, the first one being Chopin's Nocturne in C minor. The program contained the following estimate of these pieces: "It is an indisputable fact that this nocturne in C minor is the noblest of them all. Biggest in conception it seems like a miniature music drama. 'It is a tale of greatest grief told in an agitated recitando; celestial harps come to bring one ray of hope which is powerless in its endeavor to calm the wounded soul, which sends forth to heaven a cry of the deepest anguish.' It requires the grand manner to read it adequately, for it is known to some as the "contrition of a sinner"—the Chopin of the Mode masculine." The second piece was National Folk Song and Dance by Rubenstein, and was divided into two scenes. "Scene First—A bright spring day in Russia, everything is jubilant in nature. The beautifully located village is picturesque. A jolly crowd of girls and boys assemble in the village square. Some begin to sing, some to dance, but are interrupted by others. A sad strain is heard, which is soon forgotten in dance and flirtation. They are happy.

Second Scene.—Sunset. Harvesting over, peasants return from the fields. One starts a song, and the crowd joins in the chorus. A dance, lively and rustic, full of energy and youth, follows. Swifter and swifter the dance goes on, till, suddenly, it stops for a moment, and then ends up with dash and fire."

A most vigorous encore was answered by the playing of "Russian Nightingale." A Folk Song arranged by Mr. Hesselberg himself.

Mr. Hollinshead sang "The Sorrows of Death" from Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise, instead of the "Song of Songs," and his encore was "A Farewell," by Liddle. Mr. Hollinshead gave a fine interpretation of these songs. "The Bridge," by the quartette was also highly appreciated and the encore was "O To Be a Wild Wind," by Sir Edward Elgar. Mr. MacDonald's reading "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," was a pleasing variation, the piano obligato being by Mr. Hesselberg. Mr. Blight sang "It Is Enough," from Elijah, a very beautiful composition, in a way that was a pleasure to all. A lullaby song was his encore. "Pilgrim's Chorus" and the encore "Lead Kindly Light," by the quartette, concluded the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan entertained about one hundred and fifty of the musical people of Peterborough after the recital.

WHAT MEMORIAL ASKS FOR CITY

Provide Fast Train Between Peterborough and Toronto

AMEND TIME TABLE

In the memorial presented to the manufacturers and merchants last night the petitioners asked that the local express from Tweed to Toronto be made a fast express between Peterborough and Toronto without stop except at Burketon Jct. for Lindsay connection and that upon the return trip the same policy be observed.

They also asked that an accommodation train be added between Peterborongh and Toronto to take care of the intermediate stations and the milk business.

To accomplish what was desired in the shape of better service they stated that it might be necessary to restore the Canadian, Dominion and Wolverine trains, to the Peterborough line.

The memorial said that time tables should be so amended as to give passengers on through trains connections with St. John's, N.B., and Chicago and points east and west, and that whereas there is no morning mail from Toronto until after the arrival of the 12.13 p.m. train, that a local to Peterborough from Toronto to leave at 7 a.m. be added to accommodate the stations as far east as Peterborough.

Sergt. Lightfoot is Laid at Rest

What war really means was brought home today when Sergeant John Lightfoot, who died in Winnipeg, was buried with full military honors in Little Lake Cemetery. Eloquent and expressive references to the courage and character of the deceased young man were made at the service conducted at the home of Mr. W. H. Collier, brother-in-law of deceased. Few there were who lined the route of the cortege but who felt the realities of war brought home by the death of one well known to them all, who died under arms, dying just as bravely as though death had come in actual conflict.

A firing party composed of fourteen preceded the cortege, walking with slow and measured tread to the strains of The Dead March. After them came the 57th Regiment Band, followed by forty eight members composing a guard. While the cortege was not lengthy, it was composed of those to whom the deceased young man had been intimately acquainted during his residence in Peterborough.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, who conducted the service, referred to Sergt. Lightfoot as a loving brother, a dutiful son and a brave soldier. Beautiful floral tributes from Winnipeg and Peterborough surrounded the casket.

The bearers were: Quartermaster Sergt. Edwards, Staff Sergt. Matchett, Staff Sergt. Roberts, Col. Sergt. Dawes, Col. Sergt. Dummitt and Sgt. Targett.

The firing party consisted of twelve men, one corporal and one bugler, in charge of Col. Sgt. Dodds, who had charge of the military arrangements.

Capt. K. G. Lech, Capt. Cameron and Capt. Spencer were in the cortege while the police and fire departments were also represented.

Bugler Sharp sounded The Last Post at the graveside, where three volleys were fired as the body was lowered to its last resting place.

RECRUITS FROM SONS OF ENGLAND

Twenty-four Lodge Members Have Given Their Services

The members of Lansdowne Lodge Sons of England held their installation of officers at their regular meeting on Monday, January 18th. District Deputy Supreme Lodge Officer Bro. Richard Waram conducted the installation ceremonies.

The following were the officers installed for the year 1915:

Wor. Past President, Br. J. Williams.
Wor. President, Bro. A. Frick.
Wor. Vice-President, Bro. E. Kitney.
Wor. Chaplain, Bro. A. Fallis.
Wor. Financial Secretary, Bro. S. A. Oke.

SENIOR LEAGUE AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

The senior league meeting held at George St. Church on Monday evening was a decided success. The increase in attendance was very encouraging indeed and the interest shown was very manifest. The subject chosen was practical science and it was dealt with by Mr. A. D. Hone, one of the science masters at the Collegiate Institute. The effectiveness of his talk was greatly increased by the experiments performed throughout it.

He first dealt with the origin of chemistry. It was first practised among the Egyptians. For many years it was confined to the church which used the art to work on the suspicions of the ignorant people. The great advances made in chemistry during the last fifty years or more were also touched upon and a few experiments were carried out, illustrating the properties of some of the common elements. The industrial value of chemistry was also spoken of and the talk was closed by the elements of chemistry being all traced back to the divine work of God.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Hone for his splendid talk. The Misses Mather and Gumpricht favored the audience with an excellent instrumental duet.

A skating party was announced for Friday evening, Jan. 29th, and the plan of the efficiency contest, being started, was explained.

Death's Awful Sweep

By F. A. Conners.

(By F. A. Conners.)

A half million souls each day
Death brings to early graves,
By gun and knife and alcohol,
Earthquake and tidal waves.

Hot lava bursting from the hills,
Explosions in the mines,
Auto smash-ups on the roads,
And train wrecks on the lines.

Fire, too, its victims claims,
A thousand in a day:
Rivers, lakes and ocean waves
Make men their constant prey.

Lightning flashing east and west,
Hailstone, snow and rain,
Cyclones in their fury sweep
Buildings, stock and grain.

War is raging everywhere,
On land and on the sea:
Cannon roar and bugle call
Make dreadful melody.

From whence, Lord, have these evils come?
Or where did they begin?
We trace them to the fall of man—
They are the fruits of sin.

And where will these evils cease?
Or when shall we be free?
Not till we pass the veil of Death
And rest in peace with Thee.

UNITED STATES NEWSPAPERS CONDEMN GERMAN ATTACK

Was Brutal and Wanton Disregard of Hague Rules and of Humane Principles

ZEPPELINS ARE A FIZZLE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. — Leading newspapers here, in Boston, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and other cities strongly condemn the German airship attack on the British coast as brutal, and wanton disregard of The Hague rules and of humane principles, and without any military effect.

The New York Times says Zeppelins, so far as war machines, are a fizzle.

GOOD BALANCE FOR EXHIBITION

Field Crop Competition to be Held in May

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was held yesterday afternoon in the council chamber. It was decided to hold the 1915 exhibition on September 16th, 17th and 18th and to hold a field crop competition for white oats toward the latter part of May. The financial report showed a balance of $753.64 which was very fair considering the depression, which was felt last fall.

The following officers were elected:

President—J. H. Garbutt.

First vice-president—G. A. Gillespie.

Sec. vice-president—Roland Denne.

Secretary-Treasurer—F. J. A. Hall.

Directors — Wm. Roberts, Jas. Baptie, J. A. Storey, T. O. Gibbs, C. E. Moore, J. J. Turner, W. J. Oke, R. M. Glover, W. J. Cox, S. Milburn, T. H. Hooper, E. Duffus, J. O. Ball, A. B. Mann, T. Cruickshanks, Frank Wise, C. F. Kitney and Thomas Brown.

Auditors—E. M. Elliott and William Collins.

The meeting decided to ask Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. E. B. Clegg and Miss Bennett to act in conjunction with the Board of Directors. They will give special attention to fine arts, ladies' work, etc. The financial statement was as follows:—

Receipts.

Balance on hand from 1913	$ 243.41

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE ARE DOING A GOOD WORK.

The Peterborough Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire are doing a commendable work by distributing literature dealing with the present great European war.

They have furnished each of the public schools with copies of the War Number of the Round Table magazine; also the pamphlet entitled, Why the Empire is at War, by Sir Edward Cook, and other literature.

In this and other ways they are assisting the teachers to develop in the young a patriotism which is both a sentiment and a principle because it is based on reason and justice.

NOT ALL GOLD THAT GLITTERS

And City Water May not be all Some Consumers Think

That there possibly exists need for better filtration for the city's water supply, was ascertained during a conversation which a Review reporter had with Sanitary Inspector Spence. The inspector stated that the average water consumer believes that all the water which comes through the pipes, first undergoes a process of filtration before it is delivered to them. The inspector however said this was not a fact and that there was nothing to check foreign objects coming through from the river save a few bars at the intake, which are ineffectual in keeping out small objects.

In connection with the purity of the water, he stated that a test made a few days ago disclosed conditions which might be a great deal better, and showed the presence of organic matter which comes from foreign substances. He quoted another instance which came to his notice last August which was reported but of which he heard nothing further. Tests which had been made of the water revealed an undue amount of impurities and Medical Health Officer Dr. McPherson instructed the inspector to make a survey of the river above the waterworks to see if the cause could be located. This the inspector did, making a thorough examination of both sides of the river, although strictly speaking, his jurisdiction does not extend beyond the city limits. At a point half way between here and Lakefield, he came upon a large quantity of refuse left in the river by lumberjacks who had camped there during the summer. A little further on, he discovered a dead sheep, in the last stages of decay. These facts were reported to the water commissioners he claims, but that was the last that be heard about the matter.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE OFFICERS

New Members Also Initiated Into the Order

Officers for the ensuing year were elected last night by the Loyal Order of Moose, who met in their rooms in the Bank of Commerce building. Initiations also took place, and final arrangements made for the visit of the Grand Dictator and the Secretary, who wil come to Peterborough in the very near future. There was a large attendance. The new officers are:

Hon. Past Dictator—G. N. Gordon.
Past Dictator—E. N. McWilliams.
Dictator—W. B. Warne.
Prelate—Geo. F. Toone.
Secretary—W. B. Manning.

Visiting Committee—E. H. Bartlett, F. Miller, W. B. Warne.

Entertainment Committee — Messrs. Haskins, Allan, Sturgeon, Barleau, Brenton, LeBar, Toone, Coster and Beach.

Induction at Knox Church This Evening

The public is invited to join the congregation of Knox Presbyterian Church tonight, at Knox Church, when Rev. J. A. McKenzie, M.A., B.D., will be inducted.

The service will be carried out as previously announced.

For the Soldiers

The women's war fund committee this week have sent seven boxes to Salisbury Plain. These contain 129 pairs of hand knitted sox and several cholera belts and were directed to Miss Plummer with the request that they be distributed among the Canadians most in need. The committee wishes to thank the ladies of Bridgenorth and of the Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church and also other ladies who so generously contributed their work, so that the boxes contained much more than at first anticipated.

To those interested in knitting for the soldiers, wool for sox may be had at the armouries, every Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock.

of Wiltshire, Eng., a petty officer on H.M.S. Audacious which was sunk off the north of Ireland some time ago. This picture which was taken on the deck of the Audacious was forwarded by Mr. Goodman to a sister who lives in Toronto. A brother-in-law of the young man was killed in the trenches in France.

Bakers Have New Offer to Grocers

Some hair-splitting has been done by the bakers since they increased the price of bread on their fellow tradesmen, the grocers, and their latest move has been to offer grocers a margin of one cent and a half profit.

This looks like a compromise but it has not thoroughly satisfied the grocers who have asked for a meeting of the retail merchants association tonight. The matter will be laid before the meeting as the grocers are anxious to have all friction and dissatisfaction eliminated.

It will be decided tonight whether the grocers shall agree to a cent and a half profit or hold out for the full two cents as was previously obtained. Two bakers, it is said, have agreed to let the price for the grocers remain as it was.

The meeting is called at 8 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A.

WILL DEAL WITH SALARIES PAID CITY OFFICIALS

The Finance Committee meets Friday afternoon of this week and will consider the resolution brought up at the last council meeting, calling for the salaries of the city officials to be reduced to what they were before the last increase, and a committee will be authorized to go over the list of employes and see if the number can be decreased. The meeting will also go through the estimates of the Board of Education.

AMMUNITION DEPOT OF FOE IS BLOWN UP

Infantry Charge Immediately Made by French Gained for Them Several Trenches

WIN ALSO IN APREMONT FOREST

Three German Positions Northwest of Beausejour Taken After Artillery Duels

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 21. — The destruction of a big ammunition depot from which the German forces operating near Rheims drew their supplies, was reported this afternoon in official despatches. According to unofficial reports, the explosion of huge supplies of powder resulted in many deaths. French aviators located the ammunition depot and furnished the range to the Allies' gunners. The guns had scarcely been trained in its direction when a shell burst through the roof. A tremendous explosion shook the earth for miles around. Before the depot was blown up, French artillery destroyed German field works in the same vicinity. Immediately following the explosion, an infantry charge was ordered, the French taking several of the enemy's trenches.

Furious fighting along the German battle line extending from St. Mihiel to Metz, with first one side and then the other having the advantage, was also reported today in an official communication.

Following a long artillery duel, French troops in the forest of Apremont suddenly rushed from their trenches. Dashing across a stretch of clear ground, they drove the Germans back 150 yards, capturing several lines of trenches. The Germans hastily re-formed and counter-attacked, but according to the war office, were driven back with severe losses.

In the same region, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, Germans who have halted the French advance towards Metz, continued their offensive movement today. It is officially admitted that the enemy recaptured several yards of French trenches.

On the north, artillery duelling at long range continued throughout yesterday, the French taking three German positions northwest of Beausejour.

BERLIN ADMITS LOSS OF TRENCHES.

BERLIN, Jan. 21. — The official report issued today says:

"Only artillery duels took place yesterday between the coast and the River Lys. Trenches occupied Tuesday near Notre-Dame-de-Lorette were lost again today.

"We repulsed an attack by the French northeast of Arras, and near Berry-au-Bac took two trenches.

"Northwest of Pont-a-Mousson we captured four cannon and several prisoners."

KAISER'S TROOPS PASS THROUGH HUNGARY.

LONDON, Jan. 21. — The Times' Bucharest correspondent telegraphs that twenty trains containing German troops passed through Hungary last week on the way to the Servian frontier.

The German contingent of the invading army is said to number eighty thousand, and they are well provided with artillery.

MIGHT TRY TO DESTROY FINLAND RAILWAY.

LONDON, Jan. 21. — An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Stockholm says that German airships have been reconnoitering the frontier between Sweden and Finland with the evident purpose of destroying bridges on the Finland railway, thus interrupting communication between Sweden and Russia.

GERMANS EVEN DECEIVE THEMSELVES.

BERLIN, Jan. 21. — Morgen Post today says: "The isolation of the British Islands is conquered successfully. Of what use to Britain are the surrounding seas and her warships, if our airships cross the water, droping bombs?"

AUTHORITIES WARNED OF PLAN TO ATTACK.

GENEVA, Jan. 21. — It is declared that the German plan for a Zeppelin raid on England was known before-hand in Switzerland, and that warning was given to British authorities, who are reported to have said that they attached little importance to it.

TURKISH REARGUARD IN PRECIPITOUS RETREAT

Give Way After Series of Actions, Russians Take Many Prisoners

TWELVE TURKISH VESSELS SUNK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 21. — The general staff of the Caucasus army reports that on Tuesday a Turkish rearguard retreated precipitately after a series of actions, losing many prisoners.

A Russian torpedo boat has sunk twelve Turkish vessels with cargoes near Archava.

LONG WAY FROM BEING FIT FOR HARD FIGHTING

Canadians not Ready, is Opinion of Sergt. Maj. Guerin

Sergt. Major Guerin of the 24th Field Battery C.F.A., who enlisted with the first Canadian contingent writes from Salisbury Plain to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Guerin, Lafayette Ave.

They intend to send us to France next month, he writes, but don't worry, it will be a long time before they send us to the firing line as we are a long way from being fit. Our horses are in a very bad state because of so much mud at the camps. I would rather be in five feet of snow than in the foot of mud here. This last week has produced the best weather since we arrived. It is freezing very hard tonight.

That the soldiers encamped at Salisbury Plain, appreciate the kindness of Peterborough ladies in sending them useful gifts at Christmas time is shown by the following letter received by a friend of one of the boys from this city. It is as follows:—

"Just a few lines to thank you very much for your Christmas card which I received with a nice warm pair of socks on Xmas Day. I can assure you the presents we received from the Peterborough people were very much appreciated by the boys in the camp especially under the conditions we are now living.

We get lots of rain and cold weather so you can guess we find it rather rough living in tents but we are making the best of it knowing that we have something far worse to face when we get in the trenches.

No doubt you would like to know that by the time you receive this let-I shall be wearing the socks, which I received with your card in France as we expect to leave here about the middle of this month. Again thanking you kindly for your card and useful present, I remain,

Your soldier friend,

MOVE ON TO OTTAWA SOON

Mounted Rifles Recruited Here May Leave This Month

WILL BE PICKED BODY OF TROOPS

Ottawa, Jan. 21. — Appointments of officers for the Toronto and Peterborough squadrons of the 8th Regiment Mounted Rifles have been confirmed by the militia authorities.

The Toronto, or C squadron, will be under command of Major W. T. Brown, with Capt. T. D. Archibald second in command. The other officers are Lt. L. A. Gianelli, Lt. Harlinge, and Lt. H. K. Clemmins, of the 2nd Dragoons. Major S. T. Medd will be at the head of the Peterborough squadron, with Capt. E. B. Nelson of the 5th P. L. D. G., second in command. The lieutenants will be Lt. J. Johnston, Lt. T. D. Sneath, Lt. H. K. Rogers, and Lt. E. R. Hughes.

It was announced today that Major (Dr.) Embers, a Western Ontario man, is to be medical officer of the 8th C. M. R.

Lt.-Col. Munro, commander of the regiment of mounted rifles, recently returned from an inspection of the other two squadrons, and both are about recruited up to strength.

Changing Quarters.

Within ten days it is expected that the headquarters and two squadrons of the 8th Mounted Rifles will be quartered at Howick Hall, Lansdowne Park. After the live stock show it will take some days to put the building in shape for the soldiers, but work will be commenced immediately the exhibition closes on Friday. The Peterborough squadron will likely be brought here about the end of the month.

Practically all the men required for the headquarters and A squadron have been enrolled here. They are of an excellent type physically.

MEMBERSHIP AT ST. PAUL'S SHOWS INCREASE TO 1032

Givings for Current Revenue and Missions Have Been Advanced

The annual meeting of St. Paul's Church was held last evening in the Sunday school hall. After devotional exercises by the pastor, Mr. John Crane was elected chairman. The reports were all of the most encouraging character, and nearly all showed a decided advance over a year ago. The report of Session is supposed to pass in review all the work of the church. That report says in part:

"At this time the nations of the world are being drawn closer together than ever before. When we note the part that heathen countries, such as Japan, India and Turkey, are taking in the European conflict, we recognize the strength of the call that comes to us to prosecute with diligence and consecration of purpose the work of carrying the gospel to all people. This is not a time for retrenchment, but rather for a bold advance, and for an increase in giving and sacrifice, in order that we may take full advantage of the doors that God is now opening for us. We record with great gratitude, therefore, that our resident pastor in Korea, Mr. D. A. MacDonald, has been vigorously extending his activities in the special field assigned to him, and that his efforts have been attended with an increasing measure of success. Our church organizations have been active in extending him their support. The ladies of the congregation forwarded him and Mrs. MacDonald a sum of money as a Christmas gift. In addition, the members of the Young Men's Bible Class have been informed by Mr. MacDonald that $100 of the $200 previously forwarded to him by them has been used to wipe off the debt on one of the local churches, while part of the money has been employed to purchase a site for a new church for still another congregation. The young men have also set aside a sum of money with the object of defraying the expenses in due time of sending a missionary from our own congregation to the foreign field, and ask for the prayers of the congregation that a missionary may be raised up among us for God's service abroad. As yet, St. Paul's has never sent any of its own members to the foreign field. In our petitions to the throne of Grace, we would ever remember Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald and their little one, that God's power may abide with them. In this connection, we would note with gratitude that the missionary givings of the congregation are in advance of last year, notwithstanding the financial depression occasioned by the war.

Missionary Work.

The missionary work of the women of the church, with the amalgamation of the home and foreign departments, has been widened, and the field of their endeavors has been enlarged. Now we refer to the Women's Missionary Society, rather than to the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, as formerly. Our women have not fallen behind other years, either in their interest in missions or in the gifts which they have made. It is worthy of note that the total raised this year was $1,283.00, of which the Fraser Mission Band contributed $226, and the Faithful Workers' Mission Band $29. This, we believe, is a larger amount than was raised by any other society in

IS THERE ANY BASIS FOR FRENCH-CANADIAN CLAIMS?

THOSE who read carefully the editorial reply of La Patrie to Mr. Burnham's letter, a translation of which editorial appeared in yesterday's issue of the Review, could hardly have been impressed otherwise than by the almost total lack of proper foundation for the claims advanced. Just note this important statement, which we reprint:

> "The provinces are supreme in matters of education, but as every individual before the law is equally restrained from inflicting injury, no one has the right to maltreat or to persecute minorities. There is a way out of this difficulty, and that way is to the foot of the throne. We have already gone there with success. The claims of our fellow-citizens of Ontario are clear and simple. Our people ask that in school districts where their children are in the majority, French shall serve as the language of communication between the teacher and the pupil, in order that the latter may acquire more quickly the knowledge of those things which he desires. They ask, in fine, that there be given to their properly qualified bi-lingual teachers, inspectors of the same origin and of the same religion."

After admitting that the provinces are sovereign in matters of education, La Patrie supports the action of Sir Lomer Gouin in going beyond his jurisdiction and interfering with educational affairs in Ontario. La Patrie speaks of maltreating citizens and persecuting minorities, the insinuation being that French-Canadians in Ontario are maltreated and persecuted. Such an insinuation is absolutely without foundation. French-Canadians in Ontario are not maltreated nor persecuted, unless making them amenable to the laws of this province is so considered.

La Patrie goes on, then, to say, in clear, blunt language, that the claims of the French-Canadians are that in school districts where their children are in the majority, French shall serve as the language of communication between teacher and pupil, and that bi-lingual teachers and inspectors of the same origin and religion shall be appointed. These claims are only claims, and La Patrie refuses to resort to historical or constitutional proofs.

But notice what these claims mean. If French-Canadians were given this privilege (for it is not a right), every other community of people in Canada, or at least in Ontario, would be eligible, and justly and legally so, for the same privileges. There are German settlements in Ontario that would be entitled to German teachers, and inspectors, and schools, wherein German served as the language of communication between teacher and pupil. Would La Patrie support this principle to this extent? How could it do otherwise and be fair? There are in Toronto large Italian communities that would be entitled to the same privileges, to Italian teachers and inspectors and schools, where Italian served as the language of communication between teacher and pupils. In the West, there are Russian and Galician settlements, that could claim the same privileges. Will La Patrie support this contention? Is Canada to be a British Dominion or eventually a disorganized conglomeration of mutually jealous and distinct nationalities? Italians, Germans, Russians, who are sending their children to Ontario schools, are not complaining of being maltreated and persecuted because their children are taught English in the schools of Ontario. They speak their native tongue when and where they please, but the parents want their children to receive an education good enough to insure the child's success in this country. Where is the injustice and persecution that La Patrie and prominent French-Canadians complain of?

What is desirable in this controversy is an understanding of the two sides of the question, so that a fair and just conclusion may be drawn. No good will result by merely asserting a claim and refusing to discuss the legal and constitutional aspects of the question, as La Patrie has done.

Bi-lingual schools, in practice, were not a success, and it was their backwardness and inefficiency that led His Lordship Bishop Fallon of London, to protest against them. They existed as a special privilege or concession, not as a right; they were not a success, and were consequently discontinued. Where is the injustice here? La Patrie should show wherein there is any injustice, what legal foundation there is to the claim for bi-lingual schools, or otherwise cease from speaking of rights and of injustice and of persecution.

IMPLEMENTS AND THEIR CARE.

WINTER is for most farmers a season in which there is comparatively little outdoor work. There is, however, always work of some kind for the energetic man on the farm. The care and protection of his investment in implements should be one of his important duties. By this care, not only can he prolong their usefulness, but he can save considerable time.

It is of paramount importance that implements and tools, when required for use, be in condition for satisfactory service. Especially at harvest time, it may be a matter of hours to get the crop secured, and it is then that the results of care and inspection are apparent.

Machinery consists of fixed and moving parts, and it is necessary for their successful operation that they remain in this condition. Use, however, causes vibration, which tends to loosen and wear bolts and other parts of machines. An inspection will discover where these are, and nuts may be tightened and worn parts renewed; these, if neglected till the machines are required, may cause the loss of valuable days through the loss of bolts or nuts, or while new parts are secured. All moving metal parts should be covered with vaseline or other grease to protect from rust and consequent increased friction in operation.

It is a good plan to have on hand an assortment of bolts, nuts, screws, and cotter-pins, as well as wrenches, especially socket wrenches and extensions. A surprising number of bolts and nuts are put in the most difficult places to get at, and, if proper wrenches are not available, many delays result.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE TORONTO GLOBE is making a big noise about "shoes that failed." No one expected that Salisbury Plain would be flooded as it was by a rainfall three times the normal amount. The British Rainfall Association records a fall of 6.34 inches, the greatest in 57 years. The authorities felt constrained to equip the first contingent and send it to the war in record time, and the case of the shoes shows how an unlooked-for contingency arrived that was not fully provided for. The experience will be of service in providing the shoes for the second and third contingents.

NAPOLEON, at Saint Helena, said, in reference to brute force: "The more I study the world the more I am convinced of the inability of brute force to create anything durable." It took a great war to convince Napoleon. One hundred years after his defeat, another great war is required to convince the Kaiser. Will he come to a like conclusion in a similar place?

The Realms of the Hapsburgs.

(The London Economist.)

It is quite possible, of course, that Austria-Hungary may gradually fall to pieces. The collapse which has been prophesied may be at hand. There is certainly no complete cohesion, no common patriotism of race and speech like that which animates Great Britain, France and Germany. Disgust at the utter barbarism and ferocity of modern warfare is reported by all who have seen it. Everywhere people are beginning to ask how long human nature itself can endure the awful anguish of this indescribable war, how soon exhaustion and the approach of privation will drive the peoples into revolt. Some of the German newspapers look for a revolution in Russia. They may have to count with one at home, for nothing is more likely than that the working classes of Germany will turn savagely upon the aggressive militarism which has been their bane. It is perhaps even more likely that revolution will raise its head first in Austria or Hungary, and so fulfill the warning prophecy uttered by Sir Edward Grey to Count Mensdorff that if war broke out "many things might be completely swept away." But those who, like Mr. Lowes Dickinson, look for a reasonable settlement based upon the principles of political and religious freedom and the rights of nationalities, may find that after Austria has been extinguished another will have to be invented. Ethnographic and linguistic charts are no sure guides in the manufacture of new boundaries for Europe. Old frontiers and historic traditions and century-old associations cannot be moved, broken and dissolved with impunity. In attempting to address grievances and assuage discontents, it would be only too easy to set up a new Europe less stable and less workable than the old. If it believes in its pet theory of the balance of power, British statesmanship will have nothing to do with crude schemes for the dismemberment of Austria or the crushing of Germany, however great our military successes. And if the war is to end in the enlargement of Russia, let it be at the expense of a less civilized power whose inhabitants have never experienced the benefits of civilization. You might substitute chaos for order, new grievances for old, and then the settlement from which sanguine philanthropists anticipate an earthly paradise might be merely the beginning of a long train of civil and military commotions.

A Poser for Lavergne.

(La Patrie, Montreal.)

Armand Lavergne himself is enrolled in the Canadian militia. He has won his title because he is a lieutenant-colonel, but he is evidently a lieutenant-colonel only on parade. In entering the militia, the member for Montmagny could not ignore the fact that he engaged himself to serve in any part of the world, whether for the defence of Canada or of the Empire. These obligations are clearly defined in the Militia Act, promulgated by the Parliament of Canada, and as to which there has never been any doubt as to the constitutionality. Mr. Lavergne finds our participation in the war dangerous. It is assuredly so for him. And it is still more so because men, like the member for Montmagny who wear the uniform and the sword, seek to paralyze the national effort. . . . In the whole breadth of the British Empire, in France or in Russia, we would seek in vain to find one snob (pekin) who would not be ashamed to see himself in the position which "Lieutenant-Colonel" Armand Lavergne takes before the representatives of the country.

The World's Gold Production.

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

Canada contributes but a small part of the world's production of gold, but her proportion is slowly increasing. In the past year Canada produced $16,550,000 worth of gold out of a total world output of $455,305,385.

The Transvaal still remains the world's greatest producer of the yellow metal, her output last year amounting to $173,275,000, a decrease, however, of $8,500,000 from the figures of the previous year. Altogether, Africa produced $201,808,000 worth of gold. America came second with $130,373,000, of which the United States produced $82,823,000, Mexico $17,500,000, and Canada $16,550,000. Australasia is another considerable gold producing country, the amount produced last year being $51,250,000. India produced $12,258,000 worth. The world's production, amounting to $455,305,385, showed a considerable decrease from the figures of 1913, when the total amounted to $462,699,558.

of Ottawa, and his "continever tent," which was adopted by the War Office. The small darwing shows the interior of a tent with part of the floor raised on its hinges.

When the British War Office found itself faced with the problem of providing suitable winter quarters for thousands of men who were in training for service on the continent, it carefully examined the merits of a great many different types of shelter submitted from all parts of the Empire, but it was the invention of a Canadian, Mr. F. P. Aylwin, of Ottawa, that was finally adopted. Mr. Aylwin calls his invention the "continever tent." The tents are constructed of canvas on a wooden framework, and can e put up in sections very rapidly. They are made to accommodate five men each, or double the number on a pinch. They are 12 feet long, 7½ feet wide and 7 feet high., the roof sloping slightly. The light board floor is covered with cocoanut matting and also is in sections. The windows are of mica, while canvas flaps provide ventilation. A tent can be unloaded from the ransport wagon and erected for habitation in 2½ minutes, and when "knocked down," makes a package of but half the size of the floor and 1½ feet high, weighing 450 pounds. At present these tents are being turned out at the rate of nine thousand a week.

THAT "TIPPERARY TEA."

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I notice in your edition of the 20th inst., what is evidently an advertisement under the heading "Tipperary Tea." I do not know who the ladies and gentlemen are, who comprise the Peterborough Branch of the Kitchener League, but I certainly think they have shown very bad taste indeed in having inserted such a vulgar caricature of the Irish.

As a loyal Canadian and son of an Irishman I wish to enter a most solemn protest against such caricature.

There are as many or more of the Irish—in proportion to their population—fighting for the Empire today on the battlefields of Europe, than any other race on the face of the earth and surely they are entitled to some consideration and respect from loyal and enlightened Canadians. I have contributed to the Patriotic Fund to the very best of my ability and was one of those who made a house to house canvass for the same purpose, in a section of our city and I will continue to do whatever little I can for the cause we all have at heart, and I can assure my readers with all sincerity, that the writer of this letter or his remains—would not today be a thousand miles from the firing line were he eligible for enlistment. But as a son of an Irishman I certainly do protest as strongly as I possibly can against this caricature of the race from which I am sprung.

Respectfully yours,
J. W. FITZGERALD.

Carlyle on War

What, speaking in quite unofficial language, is the net purport and upshot of war? To my own knowledge, for example, there dwell and toil in the British village of Dumdredge usually some 500 souls. From these, by certain "natural enemies" of the French, there are successively selected during the French war, say, thirty able-bodied men. Dumdredge, at her own expense, has suckled and nursed them. She has, not without difficulty and sorrow, fed them up to manhood and even trained them to crafts, so that one can weave, another build, another hammer, and the weakest can stand under thirty stone avoirdupois.

Nevertheless, amid much weeping and swearing, they are selected, all dressed in red and shipped away at the public charges some 2,000 miles, or, say, only to the south of Spain, and fed there till wanted. And now to that same spot in the south of Spain are thirty similar French artisans from a French Dumdredge, in like manner wending, till at length, after infinite effort, the two parties come into actual juxtaposition, and thirty stands fronting thirty, each with a gun in its hand.

Straightway the word "fire" is given, and they blow the souls out of one another, and in place of some sixty brisk, useful craftsmen the world has sixty dead carcasses which it must bury and anew shed tears for. Had these men any quarrel? Busy as the devil is, not the smallest! They lived far enough apart; were the entirest strangers; nay, in so wide a universe there was even, unconsciously, by commerce, some mutual helpfulness between them. How then? Simpleton! Their governors had fallen out, and instead of shooting one another had the cunning to make these poor blockheads shoot. Alas, so it is in Deutschland, and hitherto in all other lands. Still, as of old, "What devilry so ever kings do the Greeks must pay the piper!"—Thomas Carlyle.

"Sleeping" Bullets.

The distance which a bullet travels is divided into three parts. The first distance the bullet travels in a wabbly manner, either up and down or sidewise; the middle distance it "sleeps" or moves on an exact plane, and the third distance, being partly spent, it wobbles in a serpentine movement again. When the bullet "sleeps" it cuts a clean hole through the part of the body hit, but when it is on the first or final distance it tears a jagged hole and moves either up or down and is likely to remain in the body. When the battle range is regulated in such a manner that the line of soldiers is exposed to the range of the "sleeping" bullets there is less work for the ambulance corps.—Chicago Tribune.

An Attempt At Conversation

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Jim," said Ned, "what do you suppose has happened in our family?"

"What?"

"Sallie has joined the suffragette movement. She's full of it, as all new converts are of the cause they are converted to. She's bound to march in a big procession they're preparing for. And, worst of all, it's making her a man hater."

"Edith has gone the same way. I've lectured and scolded to no purpose. She says that women have been subjugated long enough, and it's time for them to achieve their independence."

"I wonder, Jim, if you could have any more effect on Sallie than I. I think she rather admires you. Maybe if you show her a little attention and bring in your antipathy to the suffragette movement you might draw her away from it."

"And you might try for the same result with Edith. But, for my part, I wouldn't come down on her fad at first. I'd out-Herod Herod till I got some control over her, and then I'd put the screws on."

"Right you are! If you agree we'll start in at once. Will your sister be at home this evening?"

"I reckon so."

A few weeks later these two young men met on the street where a parade of suffragists was forming. Each man carried a banner on which was inscribed "Votes For Women."

"Hello, Jim!"

"Hello, Ned!"

"What you doing with that thing?"

"The same as you're doing with yours, I suppose."

"I'm playing suffragist in order to work my way into the good graces of your sister."

"And I'm doing the same to ingratiate myself with your sister."

There was silence for a few minutes, each eying the other somewhat contemptuously.

"Seems to me," said Jim, "that you look ridiculous holding up a banner like that."

"How do you think you look yourself?"

"I couldn't say it to any one except you, but I'm on the eve of an engagement with your sister, and it's arranged between us that if I'll march just this once with a suffragette parade she'll have me. She says it's a matter of pride with her before sheering off from the cause to show the sisters that she doesn't do it to please any man, her fiance being in favor of votes for women."

"That's funny. I have the same arrangement with Edith."

"You have?"

"Of course I have. Do you want me to keep saying it all day?"

"Well, I'll be jiggered!"

At that moment came an order to fall in, and each one of these young men shamefacedly took position in the ranks, and beside each was the girl he was converting. But the procession had no sooner moved than each girl dropped behind the man with whom she had made the agreement aforesaid and, taking a stuffed club from a neighbor in the ranks, went through a pantomime of striking the banner carrier before her, only the club was not permitted to reach his back. The consequence was that the spectators were enjoying a performance of which the principals were ignorant. Finally a blow fell unintentionally on Ned's shoulder. He turned and saw the ranks in the rear laughing at him. Throwing down his banner, he left the procession in high dudgeon.

The lines moved on, and pretty soon along came Jim, whom Ned's sister was treating in the same way Ned had been treated.

"Come out of that, Jim. You're making a guy of yourself. Look behind you."

Jim turned and saw a dozen or more women showing their pearly teeth—except those that were golden—and he, too, threw down his banner and joined his friend. The two elbowed their way through the crowds of spectators, not speaking till they reached one of those side streets whereon are located peaceful homes.

"It's my opinion," said Ned, "that we've been done."

"I think you're right."

"I could have told you that any such contract as that when made with my sister Sallie would be a snare."

"And I could have told you that any man who would make such a contract with my sister Edith was a natural born fool."

"Here's the club. Suppose we drop in for rest and refreshment."

"Suppose we do."

Later Ned received a phone message from Sallie that Edith would be with her in the evening and he was asked to bring Jim around. When they found the two girls together they were informed that they had both confided their plan of conversion to others and there had been a leak. The girls laughed heartily, but the boys couldn't see the joke.

There was a coolness between Ned and Edith and Jim and Sallie which, considering the position the girls had placed the young men in, bade fair to be interminable, but a treaty of peace was finally concluded, the girls agreeing never to do so again. The making up proved very pleasant, and the boys found that the girls being suffragists was no reason why they would not listen to a tale of love.

Romance of Red Cross Duchess an Outcome of the European War.

MILLICENT, DOWAGER DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND.

An interesting incident of the war in Europe is the announcement of the second marriage of Millicent, dowager Duchess of Sutherland. The bridegroom is Major Percy Desmond Fitzgerald of the Eleventh British hussars, and the romance is said to be a direct development of the work of the duchess at the front.

She was connected with the Red Cross, and when Brussels was taken by the Germans she was one of those who remained to care for the wounded. She expects shortly to publish a book of her war experiences for the benefit of the Red Cross fund.

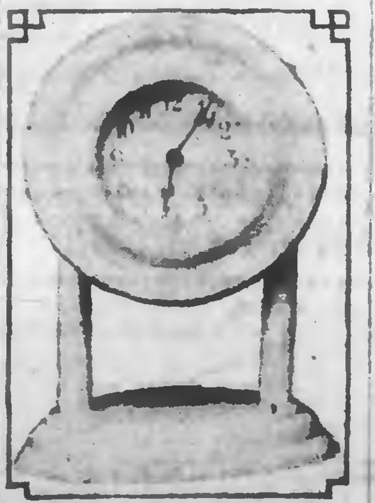
The wedding took place recently while the duchess and Major Fitzgerald were on leave in England.

The Duchess of Sutherland is the daughter of the fourth Earl of Rosslyn and the widow of the fourth Duke of Sutherland. Her sisters, the Countess of Westmorland, the Countess of Warwick and Lady Angela Forbes, are noted for their beauty. As Duchess of Sutherland she did much to develop the success of the Potteries district in England and has been a leader in many other philanthropic movements. She is the author of several books. During her late husband's life she entertained splendidly and was a leader of the smart set. Her son, the present Duke of Sutherland, is serving at the front. He married a famous English beauty, Lady Eileen Butler, in 1912.

Charming Gift For Invalid.

If you have an invalid friend over whose prospective Christmas gift you are puzzling make a note of the clock illustrated here.

These clocks come in white and a tinted composition resembling marble to match the furnishings of the bed room. The figures on the face of the clock can be seen across the room even in a dim light. Illuminated clocks may be bought. If the invalid has medicine to take at night often he or she may take it without calling upon the nurse for a glance at the clock will tell them the time. Then, too, wakeful people like to know how the time is passing, and the illuminated clock face enables them to do so.



ILLUMINATED CLOCK.

Economy In Furs.

A note in fur fashions which is sure to bring joy to the heart of the woman who has only a small dress allowance is that, while a good deal of fur is used as a trimming, no large pieces are in vogue. For instance, from a last year's muff it will be quite possible this season to make a muff and a "choker," the name given to the small round piece of fur which encircles the throat, ties tightly in a smart ribbon bow or ends in a big velvet flower. Muffs are smaller—in fact, many are so small that they hardly cover the hands. A small, round muff and a tiny "choker" are considered the acme of smartness.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE.
Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures".

THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT BABY

A celebrated baby specialist says that a child at birth should be 20 inches; at six months 25 inches; at one year, 28½ inches, or a growth of 3½ inches in the year. At 2 years 32 inches, a growth of 3½ inches in the year. At 3 years, 35 inches; at 4 years, 38 inches; at 5 years, 41 inches, and at 6 years, 44 inches; in the last four years given the increase should, therefore, be a growth of three inches in the year. From seven years on to the tenth year there is a yearly growth of two inches, namely

7 years, 46 inches.
8 years, 48 inches.
9 years, 50 inches.
10 years, 52 inches.

Of muscular development, he says that at three or four months a child can hold his head up, and at six or seven months can sit erect. At nine or ten months a child tries to get on his feet; at twelve or thirteen months he can walk alone, and at fourteen or fifteen months he can run about.

Cut this out and paste it in your nursery scrapbook.

At one year a child can use single words, and at two years a child can use short sentences.

A child has twenty milk teeth, which make their appearance as follows:

At 5 to 8 months 2 lower central incisors; at 8 to 12 months, 4 upper incisors; at 12 to 18 months, 2 lower lateral incisors and 4 anterior molars; at 18 to 24 months, 4 canines; at 24 to 30 months, 4 posterior molars. Retarded development, he says, is often caused by neglect, improper feeding, sickness, and other causes such as heredity.

Bowl and Spoon Shower.

An inexpensive yet very acceptable shower was given by twenty girls who lived in the same neighborhood with the bride to be. They wanted something different from the usual shower, as all were going to give rather costly wedding gifts. Each girl brought a bowl and a spoon, and such a variety! They delegated two of the girls to do the buying so as to have as few duplicates as possible. It was an afternoon thimble party, and each brought one dish towel to hem, also for the bride to be. Then one by one the bowls and spoons were brought in by a small brother of the hostess. When each was served the cups were small bowls of blue and white Chinese ware, to be used as individual custard or gelatin molds, and there were several lovely nests of Chinese or Japanese ware. Every one said it was a most attractive party. The spoons were of aluminium, porcelain enameled ware, wooden and tin. One was a glass one for salad dressing. A large wooden chopping bowl held flowers and fruit in the center of the table and was also presented to the delighted guest of honor.

New England Breakfast.

Recently a clever girl gave an entertainment which she called a New England breakfast. The hour was 12 o'clock, and the spread was indeed a decided change from the ordinary "society" menu. With the exception of a few frills, the hostess declared it was what was served for breakfast every Sunday morning by one of the best housekeepers in a New England village.

The table had a plain linen cover, a bowl of flowers shaded from pink to crimson was in the center, and on either end of the table there was an old fashioned latticework china fruit dish filled with fruit. This was served. Then there was white cornmeal mush in blue Canton bowls, with cream and hot rolls. Next came codfish balls and individual plates with scrambled eggs. Genuine Boston baked beans in brown earthen ramekins, Boston brown bread (the real article), then coffee with doughnuts and cookies. No artificial lights were used, and the hostess poured the coffee at the table.

Most girls are easily entertained; all one has to do is feed them taffy.

WOMAN IN BAD CONDITION

Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Montpelier, Vt. — "We have great faith in your remedies. I was very irregular and was tired and sleepy all the time, would have cold chills, and my hands and feet would bloat. My stomach bothered me, I had pain in my side and a bad headache most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me lots of good and I now feel fine. I am regular, my stomach is better and my pains have all left me. You can use my name if you like. I am proud of what your remedies have done for me." — Mrs. MARY GAUTHIER, 21 Ridge St., Montpelier, Vt.

An Honest Dependable Medicine

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for nearly forty years, and to-day hold a record for thousands upon thousands of actual cures, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The Sailor's Prayer

Copies of "A Sailor's Prayer," printed on small cards which can be slipped inside the cap, were issued by the Chaplain of the Fleet for the men on active service. The prayer is as follows:

"Heavenly Father, forgive my sins, and strengthen me in all that is right. Grant me help to carry out my duties faithfully and bravely. Bless and protect the officers and men of this ship. Shield all I love from harm in my absence. For Jesus Christ's sake. Amen."

Be generous to others, but don't let your generosity get too busy with your bank account.

Bottled Soda Water
A Cold Weather Delight

You drink Cold Water in winter. Why not Cold Soda Water?

Every member of your family needs soda water in winter even more than in summer, because the blood grows sluggish and the system becomes clogged with impurities because of lack of out-door exercise.

Liberal draughts of our delightful bottled beverages flush out the system, tone up the nerves, and digestion, and gives both health and happiness—especially to the children. Try a case. You will repeat the experiment. Be sure you get Knox's.

Law is a thing made by people who have money, and used as an instrument by means of which they can get more money.

Don't Throw Away Goodwill !

A well-known expert and advertising man, and one who is the head of a large mercantile business, recently made the following statement in regard to the temptation to discontinue advertising:

¶ "Probably more money is wasted in advertising by running consistently in a publication for a long time, and then suddenly dropping it, than in any other way.

¶ "It amounts to deliberately throwing away the goodwill which the readers of that publication have built up for the advertisers' name and product.

¶ "It is better to advertise moderately, but regularly, than to use large copy spasmodically."

The Voice of Successful Experience

Another well-known expert declares that persistent advertising pays, because:

¶ "Advertising is friendly. It persuades.

¶ "Slowly, but inevitably, it creates the attitude of goodwill and confidence.

¶ "It brings customers—who stay.

¶ "A business built up in this way is built on a firm foundation. It's the kind of success that lasts.

¶ "But it cannot be done in a day—or a month. Nothing but persistent advertising will accomplish this sort of success."

A Bit of Advice

It might be well for you, Mr. Merchant—Manufacturer—or whatever your calling—to take the advice of these experts—the experience of every successful business man, and use the columns of The Review moderately and consistently.

INTENTIONS OF FOE AT SOISSONS STILL IN DOUBT

Invaders by Advantage Gained a Few Days Ago Are Nearer the French Capital, But They Have a Terrible Road to Traverse—British Have Made Notable Gains Around Lille.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The enemy, so far has been unable to pursue the temporary advantage obtained during the heavy fighting around Soissons last week. The Germans are busy with their dead and wounded, for they paid a dreadful price in human life for the few villages which lay between them and the Aisne. It is reported, however, that they are bringing up fresh reinforcements, and public opinion in Paris in spite of its supreme confidence in the French troops, is not altogether easy at this profound calm which seems to herald another attempt to storm a way to Paris by the passage of the Aisne and the capture of Soissons. It is possible that the heavy losses experienced by the enemy, and the knowledge that the French are now in the strongest position possible on the south side of the Aisne and to the east of the German position and on the northern bank, may have discouraged the German Headquarters' Staff from making another offensive movement for some time. But, on the other hand it is considered probable that the enemy will resume the offensive in a desperate desire to break a way through before their position becomes more intolerable.

Owing to certain facts with which they are perfectly familiar, but over which discreet silence must still be maintained, they are two miles nearer Paris than they were after their first retreat to the Aisne, but further away than ever from a military point of view.

French censors have permitted the publication of certain information regarding the defences between Soissons and the capital, which are at least full enough to show that the way would be a via dolorosa to any German army which endeavors to force even a mile or two of the road. Paris had no more need to feel nervous now than before the affair at Crouy, and, apart from inevitable croakers and neurasthenics, Paris is resolutely cheerful.

The Daily Chronicle's correspondent in Northern France telegraphs:

"In the last week considerable success has been scored by troops following up repeated artillery successes in the neighborhood of Lille.

"The British have in the last few days taken from the Germans the little town of Frelinghen, on the Franco-Belgian frontier, three and a half miles from Armentieres.

"The British had set up an observation post about three-quarters of a mile from Frelinghen when the Germans started to mass a considerable force in Frelinghen, with the object of making an assault upon the British trenches. The British officers at once communicated with the batteries at Armentieres, which a moment later was engaged in demolishing Frelinghen and sowing death and confusion among the German troops, who beat a hasty retreat.

"The British turned a perfect rain of shells upon the German trenches, and the enemy's first line was rapidly evacuated. In a few moments not a German soldier remained in Frelinghen, and the little town could no longer be said to exist."

The afternoon statement said:

"From the sea to the Somme, in the region of Nieuport, there was yesterday a fairly spirited artillery engagement in the course of which the enemy endeavored in vain to destroy our bridge at the mouth of the Yser. In the meantime we were successful in demolishing a portion of his defences at this point; also we were successful at the Union farm, near St. Georges, where the enemy had strongly organized his position.

"In the sector of Ypres and near Lens there were yesterday artillery exchanges of varying intensity. There was also a very violent bombardment of Blangy, near Arras, but it was not followed by an infantry attack.

"From the Somme to the Argonne there has been nothing to report, nor has there been any activity in the sector of Soissons, or in the vicinity of Craonne or near Rheims.

"In the region of Camp de Chalone, as well as to the north of Perthes and of Massiges, our artillery directed a very effective fire on the field works of the enemy.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of La Gruie, the enemy delivered a violent attack upon one of our trenches. Our troops, who, for a moment, gave way under the shock, later recaptured in two counter-attacks all their positions and maintained themselves therein. The first of these attacks gave us a greater part of these positions, and the second completed the work.

"At St. Hubert the Germans blew up by means of a mine the northeastern projection of our trenches. Our troops threw themselves into the excavations caused by these explosions and prevented the enemy from taking possession of them.

"To the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, in the forest of Le Pretre, we established ourselves at a distance of 100 yards in front of the German trenches captured by us the day before yesterday. At the end of the day Tuesday) the enemy here delivered a counter-attack, but without success.

"In the vicinity of Thann there have been artillery engagements in which the advantage rested with us."

Williams Heads Cavalry Brigade.

SALISBURY, Jan. 21.—Col. Victor Williams has decided to accept the command of the Cavalry Brigade, which shortly leaves Canada for England.

GERMANS IN POLAND ARE ALTERING THEIR POSITIONS

Von Hindenburg's Effort to Advance His Entire Line to the Middle Vistula and Entrench For the Winter Has Proven a Hopeless Failure and Now He Must Mend His Precarious Situation.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 21.—With the spread of the Russian advance through north Poland stretching across a line from Miawa to Sierpc and Drobim, Gen. von Hindenburg has had to interrupt and alter his new dispositions for the remainder of the winter campaign. The main purpose of the present invasion was to reach the middle Vistula and establish the principal German army there for the winter. This failed utterly.

The foremost German position north of the Bzura and west of the Rawka is now composed of compact masses of the Germans' best troops, with wide, empty spaces to the right and left. This exposed position becomes increasingly dangerous with the forced abandonment of the plan of bringing all the German armies in Poland forward to the Vistula.

Gen. von Hindenburg decided on a radical redistribution of forces. This began concurrently with a series of sharp attacks, mostly at night, on the Russian lines along the banks of the Rawka.

The Germans have been assembling a very large army on strong prepared positions resting on the middle curve of the Pilica.

Straggling remnants of Austrian detachments in the Carpathians are constantly being captured and brought into the Russian lines. Many frozen corpses are being found. The survivors say they lost themselves among the passes in the snow and wandered for days without food.

The victorious operations around Kara Urgan are now nearly completed. The Russians have cleared the Turkish raiding expeditions from the territory near the Black Sea.

SHIPS ARE NEEDED.

British and Canadian Interests Seek Release of Prizes.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Advices have been received by the Government to the effect that British and Canadian shipping interests have made representations to the British authorities for the release of a number of captured German ships. This action results from the taking over of so many ships of British register by the Admiralty and the consequent congestion of traffic. While the sea routes are practically safe from German raiders the rates rule high by reason of the great number of vessels removed from commerce for purposes of war.

The shipping interests deem it perfectly proper to release some of the German ships, man them by Britishers and let them engage in commerce. More than 400 ships have been seized, and a few of them sold by auction, but the latter course may not be followed generally.

The Admiralty has the request under advisement.

INVASION OF SERBIA.

Large Contingents of Bavarian Troops Reach Austria.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 21.—Four hundred thousand Austrian and German soldiers are being concentrated for a new invasion of Serbia.

Large contingents of Bavarian troops have already arrived in Austria.

Railroad communication between Roumania and Austria-Hungary has been interrupted for several days because all lines are being used for the troops.

Ballin Has Big Job.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Exchange Telegraph Co. publishes a despatch from Copenhagen, saying that Albert Ballin, director-general of the Hamburg-American Steamship Co., at the request of Emperor William, has taken over the management of the entire railroad system of Germany and the work of delivering food supplies for the German army.

NEWS NOTES FROM OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Jan. 21.—The old town is still on the map. If you want excitement, come to Omemee. You will find all kinds of it.

On Tuesday evening, January 12, the Omemee juniors defeated a Reaboro and Lindsay combination by a score of 3 to 0. The game was fast and fairly clean. Clemett and Merner starred for Omemee, while Hawe was the fastest of the visitors. Fred Cunningham refereed in a very capable manner. A return game will be played soon.

On Wednesday evening there was an entertainment held in the Coronation hall. It was advertised as the "British Navy in Action, in the Present War," and also real pictures of the fighting around the Aisne and Yser, but it was not all it was advertised to be. The "movies" were good enough, but they were pictures of a naval review held some years ago, and the soldiers in action were probably taken in the Franco-Prussian war. The entertainment was also featured with a fairly decent picture of the coronation of His Majesty King George V., and a series of comics. Quite a crowd attended and were evidently satisfied with everything but the price.

On Thursday afternoon and evening the union meeting of the Farmers' and Women's Institutes was held in the Coronation Hall. The ladies were addressed by Mrs. Gould of Fenelon Falls on special topics of interest to the housekeepers. The men were addressed by Mr. Knight and Mr. Hamilton, two authorities upon farming. In the evening an entertainment was given, and the hall was filled to the doors. Mr. Knight gave an interesting illustrated address on "Poultry Raising." Mr. Hamilton spoke on the topic of "Weeds."

Miss Laura Down is visting with friends in Toronto.

Miss Morden and Miss Davidson are giving a skating party to the pupils of the school some day this week.

On Monday evening the Epworth League of the Methodist church entertained the A. Y. P. A. of the Anglican church and the young people of the Presbyterian church. Several contests were prepared and created much amusement. Mr. Buchanan won a prize, as did Miss Nicholls. A very novel idea was introduced for a program. The entire crowd was divided up into families under some name, and each family was responsible for providing some portion of the program. Owing to the very impromptu nature of the selections, considerable amusement was created. Mr. Wilbur Clemett, as Mr. Murphy, with his family of Murphys, made a hit by his soulful rendering of that ballad, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." Refreshments were served. It is to be hoped that several more affairs of this sort will be held during the winter months, as it creates a friendliness between the different societies.

On Tuesday night, Jan. 19th, the Omemee juniors played Bethany seniors, heavyweight champions, a tie game. Omemee had the game 2-0 up to the third period, when weight began to tell, and Bethany got across for a couple of scores. Merner for Omemee did the scoring, and pulled off some clever rushes. Clemett was fast, and checked in his usual strong manner. He is certainly a classy little defence man. He looked like a midget beside the huge Bethany boys, or married men, as we would call them. They persisted in calling them kids. With a little more weight Omemee would have held them the whole game, but they were literally swept aside in the last twenty minutes by their heavier opponents, who rained shot after shot against Cecil Mills, our new goal-tender. He turned many aside, but no man can get them all, so two dribbled by, and brought the score to 2-2. A return game will be played in Bethany on Saturday.

The Women's Red Cross Society met on Tuesday afternoon. The women are taking great interest in this splendid work, and cannot be praised too highly. They have just sent a consignment of goods to the needy soldiers in the Lindsay companies.

Mr. Jack Murray of Peterborough spent Sunday with his parents in Omemee.

ORANGE CORNERS

(Special Correspondence.)

Orange Corners, Emily, Jan. 21.—Skating is the favorite pastime among the young people of the corner.

Miss Hopwood and Miss Lee of Peterborough have been visiting at Mr. D. Jackson's.

Mrs. Finley and Miss S. Hanuley of Mount Pleasant were visitors at Mr. Henry's last week.

The Ladies' Guild of St. John's Church entertained the congregation to an oyster supper at the home of Mr. Henry last Thursday evening. Over forty people partook of the good things prepared by the ladies. The evening was spent in games, singing and several selections on the Victrola phonograph. A hearty vote of thanks was moved to Mr. and Mrs. Henry for their hospitality after which the National Anthem was sung and all dispersed to their homes having spent a very pleasant evening.

Mrs. Hopwood spent the week end with Manvers friends.

CAVAN NEWS

(Special Correspondence.)

Cavan, Jan. 21. — Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison entertained about fifty of their friends on Thursday evening, a very enjoyable evening was spent in dancing. Mr. Howden furnished the music ably assisted by a lady violinist from Peterborough.

A large number from here attended ball practice at Bethany Friday night.

Mr. Lou Grady of St. Thomas, N.D., is visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Mulligan spent Sunday and Monday with Mr. and Mrs. H. Seaton.

Mr. David White and Miss Clara Outwater attended the dance in Peterborough on Thursday night.

Mr. Robert Grandy purchased a handsome new driver in Toronto last week.

Mr. Herron has bought out Mr. A. Reynold's store and takes possession on Tuesday.

Mr. Oscar McGill and Mr. Lloyd Sutton attended the basket social in Omemee Friday.

Mr. L. Green and Mr. Harry Finney shipped a car load of horses to Toronto on Friday and Mr. H. Keegan a car of cattle on Monday.

Mr. McDowell our general merchant has had four car loads of baled hay shipped in.

Miss Addie Howden spent the week end in Peterborough.

Bad Advice.

MEMBERSHIP AT ST. PAUL'S

the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Much of the enthusiasm and interest which the members show in their work has been due to the president, Miss Charlotte Dickson, who has been untiring in her efforts to make this society a great power for good. The Session would urge every woman in the congregation to become a member of the Women's Missionary Society. The Fraser Mission Band continues its good work under the respected and efficient leadership of Mrs. Adam Hall. Mrs. Allan has taken charge of the junior Mission Band. With a leader so well informed, so interested and capable, we can prophesy for this year a more extended usefulness than ever before.

Sunday School.

The work of our Sunday school continues to show evidences of God's favour. The classes have been well attended, new methods have been introduced, the teachers have put forth much painstaking and consecrated effort, and a valuable work has been accomplished. We would especially commend the labors of the superintendent, Mr. Wm. Madill, whose faithfulness in the performance of his arduous duties, notwithstanding the exacting nature of his business responsibilities, affords an object lesson for us all. One of the best testimonies that can be given to the excellent and thorough character of the work done by the Sabbath school teachers is the fact that thirty-two of those who united with the church during the year by profession of faith were members of the Sunday school. There is no finer band of workers in the church, and none whose work counts for more than our Sabbath school teachers. The pressing character of his professional duties has made it impossible for Dr. Moir to continue his leadership of the Young Women's Bible Class. The work carried on by him with such marked success has been taken up by our pastor, who has thus assumed this responsibility in addition to his other heavy duties. This class is gaining in numbers and influence. The Mitto Adult Bible Class is being efficiently led by Mr. Robert Harrison. Space forbids us giving the extended reference that the work conducted in the kindergarten and primary departments by Miss Cameron and Miss Munro and their assistants merits. The most scientific methods in child teaching and training are being followed with marked beneficial results in both departments. The services of Mr. Fisk as secretary and Mr. Connal and Mr. Johnson as librarians are invaluable. The Session desires to express its appreciation of the work done by Mrs. Sharpe and her helpers in behalf of the Chinese in our city.

The Ladies' Aid.

The Ladies' Aid Society has done good work throughout the year. Owing to the amount of distress in our city due to the war, demands were made on its members for time, work and money, far in advance of other years. The ladies of the congregation ought to be connected with this society, as it offers a splendid field for that kind of social service which the Master has laid on His followers, and which will be rewarded by His "Well done, good and faithful servant."

The Choir.

We would make special mention of the services so freely and joyfully rendered by the choir, under the able and competent leadership of Mr. John Allan. The high standard of music which St. Paul's has for so long upheld has been maintained throughout the year. The service of praise is worshipful, dignified, and helpful. The Session gladly commends the members of the choir for the time and effort which they so freely give to this important department of the church's life and work.

The Session would commend the Young People's Guild to all the young people of the congregation, and urge their attendance at its meetings. This should be one of the great training services of the young of the congregation. It is from the ranks of such organizations as these that leaders and workers are to be found for the work of the church in the future.

The membership of the congregation, notwithstanding the loss sustained by death and removals to other places, shows a considerable increase over a year ago. We began the year with a Communion Roll of 1,010 members, and there was added during the year on profession of faith 45; on certificate, 51, making a total of 1,106. There were removed during the year, by death 10, by certificate 28, and by being dropped from the roll 36. Our net membership is now 1,032. The sympathy and prayers of the congregation are extended to all who have been bereaved throughout the year. The congregation lost two faithful members and liberal supporters of its work in the death of Mr. A. G. Dickson, and Mr. R. E. Wood. Both were men of high Christian character, and an honor to religion and to the Church of Christ.

Services Well Attended.

The Sabbath services have been well attended during the year. The messages and worship at the morning service continue to fulfill the purpose of deepening the spiritual life, and the building up of God's people in Christian character. In the evening service our pastor aims to bring the claims of Christ home to the hearts and consciences of the unsaved. This is a responsibility which is laid upon us all. We should co-operate earnestly with him in strengthening this service, and as individuals we should watch daily for opportunities to speak a word in season to those who have not yet responded to the call of the Master.

AIR RAID WELCOMED WITH WILD DELIGHT BY GERMANS

Activity of Spies in Following Movements of Royal Family Causes Excitement in Great Britain.

LONDON, Jan. 21. — The accurate knowledge of the movements of the British royal family possessed by the Germans, as shown by the bombs dropped about Sandringham Palace Tuesday night, only a few hours after King George and Queen Mary had left there, is the outstanding feature of comments in London on the air raid.

The fact that the raid apparently was directed at the country place of Queen Alexandra is significant that the Germans intended to deliver a blow of moral effect rather than of strategic advantage.

Despatches from Holland indicate that Zeppelins, either two or three in number, crossed the North Sea from Wilhelmshaven, passing over islands off the north coast of Holland, and it is considered in the highest degree probable that the Government will make formal protest to the Netherlands Government.

The extent of the damage caused by the raid is as follows:

Four dead, and property worth several thousand pounds lost.

A boy, an elderly woman, and a middle-aged shoemaker and a soldier's widow slain, and several persons, including a baby, more or less seriously injured.

The dead at Yarmouth are: Samuel Smith, a shoemaker, aged fifty years; Mrs. Taylor, an old lady.

At King's Lynn, Mrs. Dazely, a widow, and Percy Goat, aged seventeen, were killed.

And to achieve this result Germany spent millions of dollars in preparation and thousands in execution, risking the lives of scores of her bravest fighters.

The following German official statement has been received by wireless from Berlin:

"On the night of the 19th-20th German airships bombarded the fortified towns of Yarmouth and other places on the English east coast. The attack was successful and considerable damage was done. The airships were shelled, but regained their home port unhurt."

A despatch from Berlin via Amsterdam, says:

The Zeppelin raid on English towns has caused the wildest delight and satisfaction throughout Germany. The raid had been planned for months past and only awaited an opportunity for its accomplishment."

The despatch adds:

"This is only the beginning."

BIG EVENTS ARE COMING

Germans can do Nothing Against us Says French General

PARIS, Jan. 21.—L'Intransigeant prints extracts of an interview by a representative of "Lectures Pour Tous" with Generals Foch and Durbal. The former, who commands the French army in northern France, shows the greatest optimism. "The situation is wholly satisfactory," he says. "The Germans can do nothing against us. My generals, Durbal and Maudhuy, are heroes. Grossetti is commanding the Ypres army, and is invulnerable, though he exposes himself recklessly. You may expect great events soon. We are determined to win, and will never abandon the task unless victorious."

Gen. Durbal is equally confident. "When I first arrived at the post in the north I was forced to attack the Germans daily, owing to the necessity of making them think my weak force strong. Now that reinforcements have arrived, I tell you the Germans will never pass. I do not believe the bluff about their wonderful fortifications. I know about that. Why, we could break their line at any point any minute we want. Already they are trying peace negotiations through the Belgian King. How childish! They are beaten, I tell you, whenever, wherever we attack."

THE NAMING OF A BATTLE

Many of the world's most famous battles have two names. Thus the battle of Waterloo is known by that name only among English speaking peoples. The French call it the battle of La Belle Alliance. The battle that decided the war between Prussia and Austria in 1866 is known among the Germans as the battle of Sadowa, but the Austrians call it the battle of Koeniggraetz. In the war of 1870, between Germany and France, the great engagement that the Germans call the battle of Gravelotte is spoken of by the French as the battle of St. Privat.

The same thing was common in our civil war. The battle that is known in the north as the battle of Bull Run would not be recognized by most southerners under that name. In the south it is invariably called the battle of Manassas. So the battle that the Federal generals called the battle of Pittsburg Landing was by the Confederates called the battle of Shiloh. Antietam is called in the south the battle of Sharpsburg. The writer, a southerner, whose father was a Confederate officer, was twenty years old before he ever heard of the battle of Antietam, although he was familiar with all the details of the battle of Sharpsburg.

The reason for this is that the opposing armies always name the battle from some prominent geographical landmark, and as they look at the field from different points of view they naturally settle on different names. Thus, at Waterloo, the battle took its English name from the little village where Wellington made his final headquarters and whence he sent to England the first dispatch that announced his victory. So in 1866 the headquarters of the Prussian army was near the village of Sadowa, whereas that of the Austrians was near the village of Koeniggraetz. At Gravelotte the little village of that name was an important point in the German lines. On the side of the French the hamlet of St. Privet was the key to their battle formation. As long as they held that they were invincible, but when the Germans assailed it in the rear and drove them out the day was lost.

FRANZ JOSEF WILL RESIGN

Archduke Charles Makes Hurried Expedition to Germany

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Amsterdam, says a despatch received there from Vienna asserts that Archduke Charles Francis, the heir apparent to the Austro-Hungarian throne, left Vienna last night to visit the German Emperor at the German headquarters.

A despatch from Rome to The Daily News says that Emperor Franz Josef, while fully realizing the danger of the secession of the sovereignty of Hungary, at the present time, has decided to abdicate. It is for the purpose of bearing this news to the Kaiser that Archduke Charles Francis, the heir apparent to the Austrian throne, is believed to have left Vienna for the German headquarters, where the Kaiser now is.

'Quake In Grecian Islands.

ATHENS, Jan. 21. — Sixty-three persons were killed in an earthquake that caused heavy damage on the islands of Zante and Cephalonia Monday night, according to unofficial reports received here to-day. The Greek Government has sent a relief commission to the islands where more than 2,000 are reported to be homeless.

Rifles Are Ordered.

MADRID, Jan. 21. — The Government of Roumania has placed orders in Spain for a large number of Mauser rifles. It is said that Roumania will enter the war as soon as she is provided with arms and equipment for an army of not less than 200,000, and that France will meet all the expenses.

Dutch Patrol Sunk.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 21.—The Dutch naval patrol boat Toitan, while searching for mines off Nieuw Sluis, struck a mine and disappeared under the waves. One officer and four men were lost and only fragments of their corpses were recovered.

A large number of fresh floating mines are reported from all coast places.

Important Considerations.

"Why did you insist on delivering a lecture in the evening instead of the afternoon?"

"I've got evening clothes," replied young Mr. Hibrow. "And I haven't any frock coat."—Washington Star.

WOULD SEEK STEFANSSON

Burt M. McConnell Wants the Government to Give Hydro Aeroplanes

OTTAWA, Jan. 21. — The Naval Service Department has been asked by Burt M. McConnell, who was secretary to Stefansson and meteorologist of the Canadian Arctic Expedition, to buy two hydro-aeroplanes for the use of a search party to go after Stefansson and his two companions. He says the whole cost would be about $110,000.

The other eight men, separated from the main party after the sinking of the Karluk a year ago, might also be found by means of the hydro-aeroplanes, McConnell thought. He said that if the Canadian Government did not send a search party he would appeal to the United States Government to do so.

The reply of the Naval Service Department is that there is no doubt that the party of eight men are lost. As for Stefansson and his two companions full arrangements have been made for an expedition to search for them if they are not heard from next spring.

UNION LIFE TRIAL

Report of Examination of Symons is Read

TORONTO, Jan. 21. — Only one witness was called by the crown yesterday in the case of Dr. F. G. Hughes and Harry K. Symons, K.C., who are charged with conspiring to defraud the public in connection with the Union Life Assurance Co. and National Agency.

Practically the whole day was spent by the crown reading the report of the examination of Mr. Symons, taken in 1913 before George Kappelle, K.C., official referee under the Winding-Up Act, at the time of the liquidation of the company.

Two agreements were produced and read by counsel. These are dated July 1, 1902, and March 12, 1910 the first being a declaration to the effect that the National Agency Co. and the Union Life Co. mutually agreed to discharge each other from all debts.

Under the second agreement, that of 1902, was mutually surrendered and the Union Life Co. consented to pay the agency an annual amount of $40,000 in half-yearly instalments, and agreed to cover all expenses without the agency's assistance.

Orders All Lands Cropped.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 21.—The Telegraaf publishes a despatch from Berlin saying the Prussian Government has ordered all administrators of forests to turn over free of cost all such lands under their jurisdiction that are suitable for the growing of crops. The government of the Grand Duchy of Weimar has taken similar action.

Among the regulations concerning this transfer is the stipulation that the first crop from these lands must be harvested this year.

Herman Ridder

One of the Kaiser's Agents.

Herman Ridder, editor of the New York Staatszeitung, one of the men who is working very hard to create American sympathy for Germany. He is also much in the public eye because of his editorials urging the Germans in the United States to organize for some undefined object.

ALL NEUTRALS CALLED ON

To Express Condemnation of Slaughter of Innocents

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The News, in an editorial, calls on neutral countries to protest against the barbarous German action. It says: "A serious question is raised by the methods to which Germany is resorting, and it concerns the whole world just as much as this country. It is perhaps impossible to bring home to the German conscience in its present state the full monstrousness of this course of conduct, and all that it eventually entails but neutral powers owe it to themselves and to the world to make it clear that they, for their part, utterly reprehend the senseless cruelty which regards as a glorious military exploit the murder of helpless old women and shoemakers."

Madness of Despair?

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Under the caption of "More Slaughter of Innocents," The Herald this morning comments editorially on the German aerial raid of Tuesday night on the east coast of England as follows:

"Is it the madness of despair or just plain every-day madness that has prompted the Germans to select for attack the peaceful and undefended resorts of England's east coast?

"What can Germany hope to gain by these wanton attacks upon undefended places and this slaughter of innocents? Certainly not the good will of the neutral nations, for these know that the rules of civilized warfare call for notice of bombardment even of places fortified and defended."

"PATS" LAY LOW

Got Into Their Places in Trenches Without Losing a Man

LONDON, Jan. 21. — Writing his parents under date of Jan. 15, William Miller, a big drummer with the Princess Patricias, son of ex-Provost Miller, says: "On the evening of the sixth we marched over 18 miles. Tired and hungry we were nearing the battlefield, going closer to the guns, and had to be very careful going into trenches, as that is when most casualties occur. It must be done in the dark and every precaution taken to get in as quickly as possible. I am glad to say we got in without losing a man.

"The Germans have what we call light bombs, which they throw into the air by hand, lighting up a radius of 500 yards. When we were going into the trenches we had to lie flat on the ground, when one of these bombs was thrown into the air. If we moved, the enemy would spot us and open fire.

"The Princess Pats remained in the trenches two days and two nights, getting relieved on the evening of the eighth for two days. We had three men killed and about twenty-five wounded."

Publicity Wanted For Societies.

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Friendly societies of Ontario desire to have their organizations placed on the same basis as that prevailing in New York. They want to ensure the fact that every society must be on a sound financial footing, and seek the co-operation of the Government in embodying means of publicity and valuation towards the attainment of these ends. To lay these suggestions before the Cabinet prior to the assembly of the Legislature, when a general insurance bill will be brought in, a large deputation waited upon Hon. I. B. Lucas yesterday and received a favorable hearing. It is likely that their requests will be seen embodied in legislation to some extent.

TO WORK FOR PEACE.

New Party In Mexico Would Eliminate Carranza and Villa.

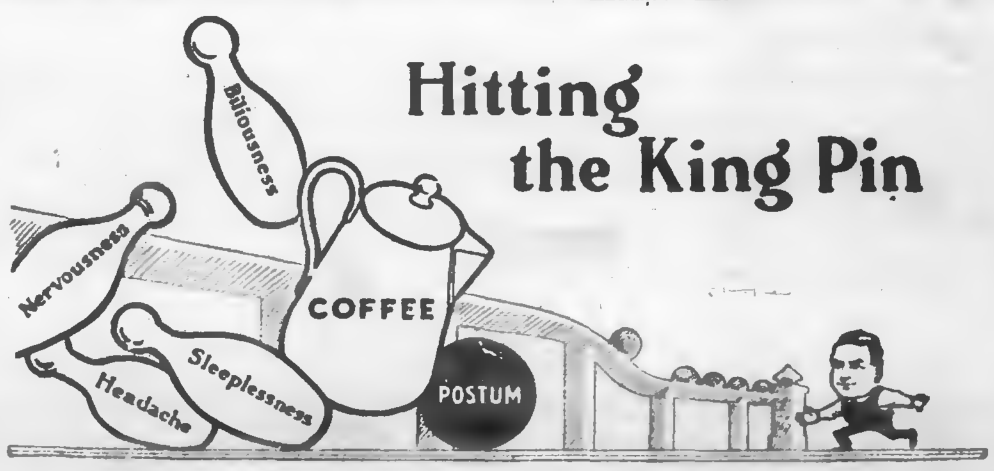
EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 21. — The elimination of both Venustiano Carranza and Francisco Villa is proposed by a new movement in Mexico. This was learned last night in most authentic reports from the interior. The movement is headed by Gen. Alvaro Obregon, Carranza's military chief, and Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez, the national convention's provisional President who recently fled from the capital.

They have agreed together, and with several of the Carranza and Villa leaders, it is reported, to organize an independent movement to establish a lasting peace.

A statement attributed to Gen. Gutierrez while in power at the Mexican capital, was quoted here last night as follows:

"I will use all my power in a last effort to restore peace in Mexico, and to that end I will insist upon the elimination of both Carranza and Villa. If my life is spared I believe that the effort will be successful."

You never can tell. Putting up a good front depends largely on the backing.



Hitting the King Pin

Thousands, finding coffee a hindrance, have struck it from their daily diet, and now use

POSTUM

Coffee contains a powerful irritant—caffeine (also in tea)—which first races the body functions to unnatural speed, and then leaves them in a state of exhaustion. Result weak heart, nervousness, biliousness, headache, sleeplessness, and many other ills and discomforts.

Postum—made only of prime wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses—is a pure food-drink, absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug or harmful substance.

Postum has delightful flavour, and comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be boiled, 15c and 25c packages; Instant Postum—soluble, made in the cup instantly, 30c and 35c tins. The cost per cup is about the same for both kinds.

Suppose you leave off both coffee and tea ten days and try Postum—and better health.

DACIA MAY TRY TO RUN BLOCKADE

GALVESTON, Texas, Jan. 21.—Officers of the steamer Dacia yesterday still awaited sailing orders, though the Dacia's cargo of cotton will be completed to-day. Belief is growing that the Dacia will attempt to reach Norfolk without interference by keeping within running distance of the three-mile limit. It is rumored that British warships are waiting in the gulf and watching the Florida Straits for the former German steamer which is now under American registry.

Germany Has Plenty of Meat.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 21. — A despatch to The Telegraaf from Beverwyk, in the north of Holland, states that the export of fresh butchered meat to Germany, which has been heavy for several months, bas ceased, owing to the lack of demand. Presumably Germany is butchering its own cattle freely, the despatch declares, owing to the high price of fodder.

The newest warships of the Agamemnon type cost £1,500,000. Nelson's Victory, armament and all, cost no more than £100,000.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 20.—Winnipeg wheat market opened ⅝c lower on both months, oats were unchanged, and flax 1⅛c lower. Sales were effected at 2 cents lower than Tuesday's close. Previous to noon a sharp advance took place, caused by a strong demand, Americans buying heavily in Winnipeg. The loss of 2c from yesterday was fully regained, and while there was practically no export business on the local market, fair sales were being reported in the south.

Wheat futures closed 1⅛c to 1⅜c higher, cash closed ⅞c to 1⅛c higher for contract grades, oats ⅜c to 1c higher, and flax [illegible] lower to [illegible] higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 20.—The export trade in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable today was again very quiet, for there was practically no demand from outside buyers for supplies. A feature of the local market for coarse grains was the stronger feeling in oats, and prices advanced one-half cent per bushel with a fair demand for car lots. Flour firm and in good demand. Mill feed firm. Butter and cheese quiet but firm. Eggs in good demand.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 20.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.40⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.34⅝ to $1.40⅝; No. 2 do., $1.34⅝ to $1.38⅝; May, $1.36⅝ to $1.36⅞.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice butchers, $7.50 to $7.75; good butchers, $7 to $7.25, medium at $6.60 to $6.90; choice cows at $6.25 to $6.50; good cows at $5.75 to $6, medium at $5.25 to $5.50, canners at $3.75 to $4, bulls at $5.25 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders, 700 to 800 lbs., sold at $6.40 to $6.60, medium steers, $6 to $6.25; stockers, $5 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a shortage in the supply of milkers and springers, especially for the better classes. Prices ranged from [illegible] to $90 each. Common, backward springers sold at from $40 to $50 each.

Veal Calves.

The calf market was stronger, choice veals selling at $10 to $11 per cwt.; good, $8.50 to $9, medium calves, $7 to $7.50; common, $6 to $7; eastern grass calves, $4.75 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Light lambs of choice quality were in demand at prices ranging from $9 to $9.25, but common, rough, heavy lambs sold at from $7 to $8.25; light ewes, $5.75 to $6, heavy sheep, $4.50 to $5.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $7.50, $7.75 weighed off cars, and $7.15 f.o.b. cars at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 20.—At the C.P.R. live stock market, prices were about steady at the recent decline noted owing to an improved demand from local buyers. Best steers on the market sold at $7 and the lower grades from that down to $5.75, while butchers' cows brought $5 and $6.50 and common bulls from $4.50 to $5.50 per cwt.

Owing to the limited supply of sheep and lambs on the market a stronger feeling prevailed and prices advanced 25c to 50c per cwt. Demand for lambs was at good prices, ranging from $7.50 to $8.25 and sheep $5 to $5.50 per cwt. Calves sold at from $3 to $12 each. Hogs steady with a fair demand from packers for selected lots, and sales were made at $8.30 per cwt., weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Cattle—Receipts, 5,000; market slow; beeves, $5.60 to $9.25; cows and heifers, $3.20 to $8; calves, $7.25 to $10.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 55,000; market, lower; light, $6.60 to $6.95, mixed, $6.65 to $6.90; heavy, $6.35 to $6.85; rough, $6.35 to $6.50; pigs, $5.45 to $6.95, bulk of sales, $6.65 to $6.85.

Sheep—Receipts, 8000; market, strong; native, $5.85 to $6.90; yearlings, $6.70 to $7.75, lambs, native, $6.75 to $8.65.

Taken at Her Word.

A Bloomfield woman looked across her lawn to where passersby were breaking off the blossoming twigs of her favorite quince tree.

"We might as well cut the tree down as let it stand for people to destroy," said she.

Half an hour later the tree lay on the ground beside a little hatchet, while around behind the house the small boy of the family was getting a switching with one of the branches.

This teaches us that we should be sure of our audience before we employ hyperbole in our speech. — Newark News.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

PLAYED JUNIOR UNDER NAME OF DEAD BROTHER

As a Result the Markdale Club is Expelled From O.H.A. Owen Sound Also Suspended for Playing a "Ringer

Toronto, Jan. 21.—Markdale and Owen Sound were the only teams playing in group No. 12 of the Ontario Hockey Association junior series, but the group will not be represented in the second round, as both teams were yesterday suspended by the O.H.A. sub-committee. The charges and counter-charges were responsible for this result, but the case of Markdale was a flagrant one of misrepresentation, and the suspension of the club was made indefinite, while Owen Sound's club and players are only out for the remainder of the hockey season.

Owen Sound's protest charged that James Clarence Staples, the Markdale goalkeeper, was over the age limit, but the protest was not supported against the reply that the Markdale goaler was Charles Staples, whose age qualification was not disputed.

The charge that Harold Mercer, who is past the junior age limit of the Association, played in two games, under the certificate issued on the birth certificate of a dead brother, was admitted by Markdale's representative, Mr. Wallace. The responsibility for the transaction was placed on the Markdale Secretary, J. E. Mercer, who is another brother.

The counter-charge by Markdale, questioning the age of Fred Foot, was not sustained, but the residence qualification of Truman Bell of Owen Sound was successfully attacked. He had been in Owen Sound from Arthur for a day or two in July to secure employment, and did not return to take it up until about the seventh of September. This is a long way from "A bona-fide and continuous residence from the first of August," but nothing was offered to show that the club had not played him in good faith.

However, it is the policy of the O. H. A. to hold the clubs responsible for the correct status of their players, and Owen Sound was suspended, as stated.

For supplying misleading information in his capacity as an officer of the Markdale club, J. E. Mercer was expelled from the association, in addition to the club discipline inflicted.

BOWLING

The Beginners' stock in trade went up a couple of notches last night when they took three from Waram's Brighten-Ups. The Beginners now lead by two games, but owing to the handicaps which the leaders have to give their less fortunate (or unfortunate) competitors, a lot of the dope may be upset even yet.

Last night's score:—

The Detroit News publishes the following very illuminating paragraph in its hockey column: "Wiarton, two-time champion of the Northern Hockey League in Canada, will be the Detroit arena team's opponents this week in a two-game series, scheduled for Thursday and Friday nights at the Arena. Like the majority of hockey teams from the Quebec region, Wiarton announces a list of stars and also a record which speaks loudly in advance for the calibre of the visitors." We didn't know that the war had changed the map of Ontario—at least not as yet. —Toronto Star.

SPEEDY KNOX CHURCH TEAM WON EASILY

In a Junior Church League game at the rink last evening between 6 and 7 o'clock the speedy aggregation representing Knox Church easily defeated St. John's by a score of 9-1. The winners displayed good team play and found little difficulty in running up the score. At half time it was 5-1 in favor of the Presbyterinsa. For Knox Church, Montgomery, Doughty, Wright and Bartley were the most prominent while Park and Cavanah played good hockey for St. Johns.

The teams:—

Knox—goal, Daynard; defence, Cunningham and Montgomery; rover, Doughty; centre, Wright; wings, Clarke and Bartley.

St. Johns—Goal, Pidgeon; defence, Soward and Frost; rover, Heard; centre, Park; wings, Cavannah and Echibichon.

COMMENT As You Like it

WE COULDN'T SAY whether it is Lou Marsh or not but some of the Star scribes have been hearing things. Here is one from last evening's edition:—

"Picton hockey fans still think that on hard ice their team can beat Peterborough (and hope they will have the chance to demonstrate that fact). Picton claims that the real store at Peterborough was 6 to 3, not 6 to 2. They insist that they scored a goal that the goal umpire, a Picton man, A. Hubbs, did not see. This group is not settled yet."

PAT JONES of the Hamilton Herald was likely peeved at the Ottawa scribe giving a baseball blast in January and he started talking about the summer pastime too. It was the same old dope. Artie Lage might be traded to Hamilton for Red Fisher.

THE O. H. A. "handed it" to Markdale and Owen Sound. The rules the two clubs were guilty of breaking are very important ones and must be obeyed if the association expects to live.

BRUCE RIDPATH, the old Lakefield boy, who performed with success in the N.H.A. for a while is coaching Preston. The "war" has driven a number of prominent ones to obscurity.

WALTER KNOX who is coaching Picton Intermediates is considering an offer from Colorado University. They want him to train all their athletes.

GLAD MURPHY has again decided to play hockey. He has turned out with St. Michael's and if he sticks will help the Irish defence a great deal.

THE PETERBOROUGH Hockey Club is endeavoring to secure games with St. Michael's, Toronto Rowing Club and Victorias.

THE JUNIORS play in Port Hope tonight. The same team will play as performed in Lindsay.

LINDSAY MAY HAVE SIX RINKS AT THE LOCAL SPIEL

Skip Flavelle, the Veteran is Coming — Skip Beall to Bring a Rink of Young Players

Lindsay Warder: Peterborough bonspiel will be held the first week in February, and it is high time that Lindsay curlers were talking the matter over seriously. The Lindsay club should be represented by at least six or seven rinks, and the Warder would like to see ten entered. All cannot win, and it is probable that some of them would be bowled out in the first round, but they would be thoroughly repaid with the fraternal visit. It should be borne in mind by Lindsay curlers that during the big 'spiel here last winter, Peterborough turned out loyally and entered several rinks.

As yet only one rink has been selected, namely, Skip Flavelle, the veteran, who states that he will go, no matter what happens. He has secured the consent of Curlers Sisson, Butler and Frank Williams to balance up his rink.

In a casual conversation in the "chamber of horrors" the other night the names of the following skips were mentioned as likely to take rinks to the Electric City 'spiel: J. D. Flavelle, E. Gregory, F. R. Wilford, R. H. Cuthbert, T. J. Tilly, L. V. O'Conner, J. W. Anderson, W. Carley, W. E. Reesor, W. R. Widdess, F. J. Carew and E. Wetherup.

It is also stated that Skip G. G. Beall has a notion of taking along a rink of young players comprising the following curlers: N. Gregory, H. M. Moynes, A. McAskill, Geo. Beall.

OSHAWA WON IN OVERTIME

Defeated Bowmanville by 9-6 Last Night

Oshawa, Jan. 21.—Oshawa O.H.A. intermediates came from behind and nosed out a 9 to 6 victory over Bowmanville last night, after playing ten minutes' overtime. The full time score was 6 to 6. Victory was again due to combination. The teams:

Oshawa—Goal, Smith; defence, Jacobi and Freeman; rover, Fair; centre, Hall; wings, Canning and Weller.

Bowmanville — Goal, Spry; defence, Jones and F. Williams; rover, R. Williams; centre, Roney; wings, Hooper and Higginbottom.

Referee—Whitehead of Toronto.

TANKARD GAMES NEXT TUESDAY

R. M. Waddell is Umpire for Competition Here

With the present fine brand of weather curling is in for a fresh start and it has been definitely arranged that the Tankard games will take place next Tuesday. Messrs. Flavelle and Little of Lindsay will bring two rinks to Peterborough to play in the series. The tankard games were to have been played on Friday but were postponed to ensure good ice.

The District Cup games will take place in Lindsay. Mr. Flavelle is umpire of the District Cup series in Lindsay, and Mr. R. M. Waddell of the tankard games in Peterborough. There were six good schedule games last night as follows:

J. Comstock	R. Stewart
R. Denne	H. McCannon

PICTON ALSO BEAT WHITBY

Pirates Secured a 2-0 Victory — Play Was Fast

Whitby, Jan. 21. — Picton made their appearance here last night in an O. H. A. intermediate game and roused great excitement. The teams battled up and down the ice without scoring during the first two periods. The play was exceedingly fast, and in the last period the visitors forged ahead, the final score being 2 to 0 in favor of Picton. The teams:

Whitby — Goal, Brown; defence, Smith and McIntyre; rover, Lavery; centre, A. Blanchard; wings, Watson and C. Blanchard.

Picton — Goal, Scott; defence, Hubbs and Hefferman; rover, R. Burns; centre, Taft; wings, Hudgins and B. Burns.

Referee—Moxon.

SENIOR CHURCH LEAGUE GAMES

Three real speedy Senior Church League games will be staged at the rink this evening between eight and eleven o'clock. Between 8 and 9 St. Johns and St. Pauls clash, the hour following brings St. Lukes and Murray Street together while the final struggle of the evening will be betwen St Andrews and George St. Interest in the Senior Church League is getting keener so a large attendance is expected tonight.

ST. JOHN'S TEAM.

The following St. John's senior players will be on hand tonight at 7.30 at Brock street rink for their game with St. Paul's: Clarke, LeBar, Pammett, Heard, Frost, Stevenson, Pammett, Flowers.

PETES CANNOT AFFORD TO LOSE

Must Win From Oshawa Tomorrow Night

The Picton Pirates seem to be in the game for all that is in it. They won last night from Whitby and now the Petes are forced to win tomorrow night from Oshawa or else be satisfied with second honors. Oshawa won from Bowmanville last evening and according to reports have team play and combination galore. Tomorrow night's battle should be an exciting one. The ice is perfect and with Lou Marsh handling the bell the fans are assured that it will be hockey from 8.30 till the game is over.

The team will be selected from the following: goal, Janes, Dwyer; defence, Pethick and Hunter; forwards, Spratt, Halpin, Moinse, Kelly and Park.

Social and Personal

Friends of Miss Margaret Paul, sister of Mrs. G. J. Jopling of Bridgenorth, will regret to learn that she slipped on ice near her home on Monday and fractured her arm. Dr. Morgan was called and reduced the fracture.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Ackerman, Moira street, Belleville, yesterday celebrated the fifty-seventh anniversary of their married life. They have six sons and five daughters, ten of whom are married; twenty-five grand-children alive, and two great-grand-children, making a family of fifty.

The Canadian Kitchener League are doing good work in providing warm clothing for our soldiers, and no doubt a large number will patronize the Tipperary Tea to be held by them in the Y. M. C. A. parlors this evening. Ladies are requested to bring gentlemen friends. Silver collection.

A miscellaneous shower and military euchre party was given by Mrs. McKinney in honor of Miss Linton, on Saturday evening. Mrs. Jewett gave a bridge party and handkerchief shower on Tuesday evening in Miss Linton's honor, whose wedding is to take place on Monday evening, January 25th, at "Stoneleigh," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Linton. —Campbellford News.

NORWOOD PERSONALS.

(Special Correspondence.)

Norwood, Jan. 19. — Miss Annie Dryden of Campbellford spent the week-end in Norwood the guest of Miss Elsie Laing.

Mr. G. B. Richardson spent a few days of this week at his home in Stirling.

Mr. George Buck, of High River, Sask., has been visiting friends here.

Rev. Mr. Glover of South Dummer occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church here Sunday morning and evening.

We are pleased to note that Mr. R. G. Lawlor has been removed from Nicholls Hospital, where he has been undergoing treatment for bloodpoisoning in his hand, to his home here.

Mr. H. B. Morrison, formerly of Norwood, and lately of Stirling, has secured a position with the Patterson Biscuit Co., and is travelling in this vicinity.

Miss Vida Hendren of Broadview, Sask., formerly of Norwood, is visiting friends here.

BRIDE MUST GIVE HER PERMISSION

Marriages Must not Interfere With War

Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown has written a letter to the Christian Guardian calling the attention of the Methodist ministers to a pertinent point on the question of marrying soldiers of the Canadian contingent. The letter says:

"My attention has been drawn to the question of the marriage of men already enlisted in the present contingent of the Canadian expeditionary force. It is highly desirable that such marriages shall not interfere with the relation of the bridegroom to the army. You are aware that, according to present military regulations, the wife has the privilege of withdrawing her husband from the forces. It would, therefore, be clear that a man through his marriage may be prevented from proceeding overseas. On this account I desire to urge that any of our ministers, before celebrating the marriage of any such soldiers, will see that the written permission be obtained from the bride for the bridegroom to fulfil the terms of his enlistment, and that the permission of the commanding officer is presented, in order to make the marriage altogether regular.

ST. PAUL'S LINEUP.

There will be war all right when St. Paul's and St. John's meet in the opening Church League fixture from 8 to 9 o'clock. Both teams will be strongly armed for the attack. General Manager F. Turner of St. Paul's will have his forces drawn up as follows: Goal, H. Hall; right defence, M. Turner; left defence, J. Davidson; rover, D. Loucks (Capt.); centre, M. Brackenridge; right wing, E. Raynor; left wing, J. Kerr.

FUND COMMITTEE

The Finance Committee of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Peterborough Relief Association met yesterday afternoon, there being present Messrs. T. F. Matthews, chairman; D. O'Connell, R. A. Peck, J. A. Aylmer, J. Crane, W. H. Dunsford and Mayor Buller.

Mr. Aylmer reported on the cash received up to December 31st, 1914.

It was decided to forward $16,733.04 to the Patriotic Fund Association at Ottawa and to deposit the amount for the local relief fund in the Dominion Bank.

DR. J. L. GORDON WAS POPULAR AT BELLEVILLE

Says the Belleville Intelligencer: With the announcement that last evening would end the Christian citizen services, Bridge street Methodist church was crowded to the doors, the choir seats fully occupied, and the stairs leading from the pulpit platform to the gallery packed with people, apparently anxious to hear the last words uttered by the famous orator. Preceding the sermon, which was a simple, heart-to-heart talk, the usual spirited song service was conducted under the leadership of Mr. G. W. Mulligan, when the various pastors of the city and a number of laymen were called on, all giving warm testimonies to the beneficial work wrought during the past two weeks. Compliment following compliment was showered upon Dr. Gordon for his fearlessness in dealing with the ordinary every-day features of life, speaking very plainly as he did of the causes of failures in the homes, the churches, the social and business circles.

Dr. Gordon opens a campaign in Napanee today.

VOLUNTEERS FROM GUARDS HONORED

No. 5. Company Gives Two Members For Third Contingent

On Wednesday evening the officers and men of No. 5 Company of the Home Guard met for social intercourse in Coleman's parlors to do honor to two of their number who have enlisted with the Third Overseas Contingent, namely, Mr. Griffith and Mr. Sturgeon.

After a sumptuous repast, daintily served by Coleman Bros., the chairman, Capt. Ackerman, in a few neat remarks explained the object of the gathering, after which a very enjoyable program was gone through.

Special mention should be made of the toast to the Army and Navy proposed by J. J. Turner, Jr., which was indeed a fine effort and appealed to everyone present.

The toast of the evening was Our Guests presented by J. H. Knapman in brief, well chosen remarks complimenting the officers and men of No. 5 Company Home Guards in having such stalwart men accepted for service in the Third Overseas Contingent.

Mr. Hendry in his character song fairly brought down the house and had to respond again.

Mr. Nicholls performed in his usual way at the piano.

The program was as follows:—

Toast—The King—Lieut. R. H. Turner.

Song—Soldiers of the King — F. Edwards.

Toast—Army and Navy — J. J. Turner, Jr.

Song—Sergt. Sewell.

Song—Any Old Way to Cook Chicken—Lieut. R. H. Turner.

Toast—Our Guests — Mr. Knapman.

Song—We Parted on the Shore—R. Hendry.

Toast—The City—Lieut. Worth.

Song—Red, White and Blue—F. Edwards.

Song—Which Was a Joke—Sergt. Chris. Graham.

Toast—Our Allies—Lieut. R. H. Turner.

Song—Mr. Howland.

Song—It's a Long Way to Tipperary—R. Hendry.

Before closing Capt. Ackerman mentioned that one other member of No. 5 Company had enlisted this week, namely, Mr. Taylor, so it will be noticed that No. 5 Company, though none too strong, in numbers, is made up of good men and true.

Great credit is due Coleman Bros. for the dainty way in which the tables were laid. Flags of the Allies were very prominent all over the tables.

DEFENDANT WAS ADVISED TO PAY HIS BOARD BILL

Lindsay Gasken, who solicits fancy photograph work in the city was arraigned in police court today on a charge laid by R. Munro, proprietor of the Munro House, who accused him of unlawfully obtaining food and lodging at his hotel. Gasken was acquitted of any attempt to defraud and was defended by Mr. Widdifield.

Mr. Munro informed the court that Gasken boarded at his hotel from Nov. 12th to Dec. 8th, that he missed him suddenly and had difficulty locating him. He owed $17.50 when he left, but later had reduced the bill by $2.00. He left his baggage at the hotel, but was permitted to remove it by Mr. Munro, on the understanding that he would discharge his obligation inside of a month. He failed to keep his word and Mr. Munro laid an information.

However Mr. Widdifield contended that his client was not guilty of any fraudulent intent, as was shown by his actions. He had tried to pay the account; had not removed his baggage from the hotel without permission or tried to leave the city. It was a case of his client not having the money. His Worship acquitted the defendant on the understanding that he would strive to wipe out the obligation as quickly as he could.

"If he would try and pay his honest debts instead of paying lawyer's fees, he would be better off," was the friendly jab that Chief of Police Thompson uttered before Gasken departed.

PLANTS IN A NORTH WINDOW

It is generally supposed that a north window is unsuitable for plants, particularly if plants are to be started from seeds and cuttings. But I was forced to utilize such a window and was successful, owing, I think, to furnace heat and the depth of loam that is used in the bed.

I first had a box made to fill the entire space of the window. It was nine inches deep and lined with zinc, the flooring was inclined, and in one corner was a vent to let out superfluous water. I ran a pipe from the furnace to a register that opened under the box and close to the window. This gave me what was practically a propagating bed, and by regulating the heat I grow about anything. I save a number of my plants from year to year, and early in the spring I plunge them into this bed. They are of good size when transplanting time comes along. — D. F O'Connell.

Officer—How did he get into that condition?

Private—He captured a bottle of whiskey, sir.

Officer—Yes, yes; but how did he manage to do that?

Private—I think he must 'ave surrounded it, sir.—London Sketch.

SAYS HE WILL ESCAPE AGAIN

Lasure's First Attempt Was Made at Great Risk

Edward Lasure is a daring criminal, according to Constable Mills, of the village of Tara, who arrived in the city today to take him back. Lasure jumped from a passenger train when it was going forty miles an hour, and escaped across fields, finally landing up in Peterborough, where his people reside. It was nearly a month ago when this occurred, and the police of Peterborough were notified to watch out for him, as it was known that he had relatives here.

Constable Mills stated to a Review reporter that he permitted his prisoner to enter the lavatory on the train, but immediately he became suspicious. Lasure had bolted the door, and the constable watched from an adjacent window to see if his prisoner was trying to get out. He asked the conductor to also keep a lookout. The latter stood on the train step and saw the open window. The train was running forty miles an hour, but Lasure displayed great nerve and daring, landing in soft gravel, leaving imprints eight inches deep. Afterwards his footsteps were traced to an open field.

Lasure, it is alleged, stole a team of horses and a set of harness from a farm three miles out of Tara. He was arrested and committed for trial by the magistrate at Tara, and it was while being escorted to Watertown gaol that he escaped. It is said he broke his parole in Buffalo several years ago, where he was sentenced to two years for theft.

He has openly boasted while confined in the local cells that he would escape again. Constable Mills is taking no chances this time in returning with him to Watertown. He leaves this afternoon at 4.24.

An Optical Enigma

Just why we are able to see things right side up is a mystery which science has not yet been able to explain.

We know that the human eye involves the same optical principles as a camera. Owing to the fact that light always travels in a straight line and never in a curve, the rays which emanate from any object within our range of vision have to descend and ascend in order to travel into the narrow opening in the eye which corresponds to the camera's lens.

These rays finally reach a point where they intersect. Continuing on in straight lines, their relative position becomes just the reverse of what they were when they left the object seen.

Thus the image register on the retina of your eye is topsy turvy, just as it is on the photographic plate in a camera. If you are looking at a house, for instance, the image your eye gets will show the chimneys down below, the foundation walls up above, and so on.

But the impression your brain gets reveals the house right side up unless you happen to be afflicted with a rare disorder, which results in everything always appearing topsy turvy.

During the infinitesimally short period required to flash the image seen from the eye's retina to the brain all the light rays which created the image are reassembled and put back in their proper places, so that the brain sees the object as it really is and not in the topsy turvy form it was registered on the retina. Just how this miracle is performed is what science would like to find out.—New York American.

Something Entirely New in Eyeglass Mountings

No more poor lenses and very few weak eyes, if you use the NEW TAIT NO-SCREW MOUNT. These mounts are attached to the lenses without the use of screws or rivets and thereby do away with the need of drilling a hole in the lenses which of course weakens the lenses.

Also the mounts never work loose like the old style. These mounts are manufactured at the Tait Optical Co.'s Hamilton factory and are sold here exclusively by Tait Optical Co. See sample in window.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

It is a great pleasure for the Association to place a part of its building at the disposal of the Kitchener League today for the Tipperary Tea, in aid of our soldier boys at the front. We trust that this tea will be well patronized.

On Wednesday our building would have been an ice house but for a few grate fires which were kept up, for the heating plant was out of commission as new flues were being put in the boiler. Repairs were finished about midnight and the fires were rebuilt.

Percy Fitzgerald is making some necessary carpenter repairs at the building this week.

Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. P. M. McCarrel entertained Mr. McCarrel's Sunday School class of George St. Church at our building and a pleasant time was enjoyed by about fifteen boys.

We again have good ice on the skating rink which is now well lighted by a street lamp and it is at the disposal of the boys afternoon and evening.

A letter was received today by boys' secretary Galley from H. Parkinson who is with the 1st contingent in England. Among other things Bert says, "One hears a lot over here in regard to how well Canada has come forward with men and money. It makes one feel a little proud to be one of Canada's representatives over here. I hear trade is rather bad in Canada at present. Things are bad here but some of the trades are extraordinary busy, such as ship building trade. Most of the engineering works are busy making shells. I am looking forward to coming home and rejoining you in the gymnasium work."

We have on fyle many interesting letters such as the above from our boys who are serving their country in the present war.

MOVE ON TO OTTAWA

All Picked Men.

At Toronto there were 300 men from which to pick 82 for that squadron, so they will also be a fine lot. A total of 141 men have been sworn in here so far, but there are any number available as soon as they are wanted. Many young men are coming in from the country to enlist, and are throwing in their lot with the city corps, and as a result the rural regiments are not showing up as well on paper. The Ottawa squadron will recruit 10 per cent. over strength to provide for the men discarded during the training.

When the Montreal Rifles cease recruiting it is expected that there will be a big rush to get into the infantry regiment being raised. There is believed to be a fascination about the mounted regiments which apeals to would-be recruits as no other branch of the service, and they attempt to get into these first of all.

Lt.-Col. R. G. Stewart, former commander of the 43rd and 38th regiments, is still in Ottawa, but is now under orders from Col. Denison, commander of the Ontario brigade of the second contingent.

DEVIL'S FOOD

Many a housewife has wanted a really good and economical recipe for this delicious cake with the alarming title. The following is a well-tried recipe. See if you don't think it is a good one: Cream 1 cup sugar and a scant ½ cup of butter with 1 cup sour milk. Beat one egg into the mixture. Then add the following ingredients which have been well sifted together; 1¼ cups flour, ½ teaspoonful salt, 1 scant teaspoonful soda and 3 desertspoons Fry's Cocoa. Bake in a moderate oven for 35 or 40 minutes.

The people who are satisfied to take things as they come never get much.

FEEDING FOR GAIN.

Many feeders are given to the practice of feeding their animals just whatever feed happens to be cheapest. Rather, the feeder ought to work on the principle of getting the greatest gains for the cost of feeds. It might be that a ration, though more expensive in point of cost of feeds, would give such a greater return in gain of flesh than a ration made up of cheap feeds that it would be more profitable in the outcome.

A trial at the Kansas Station confirms the above assertion. Corn meal and soy bean meal in the proportion of four parts to one, was fed to a lot of twelve pigs averaging 173 pounds at the beginning of the trial; another lot, of the same number, averaging 168 pounds at the beginning was fed on corn meal only. The test covered a period of thirty-seven days. At the end of the trial the former lot averaged 296.75 pounds, the latter 194 pounds.

Lot 1 gained 29 per cent. more than lot 2 and consumed 150 pounds less feed, and the feed consumed for 100 pounds gain in lot 1 was 526.5 pounds, and for lot 2 726.5 pounds. In this case, the cost of soy beans by bulk was twice the cost of corn meal, yet by adding it, a better balance was made than when corn meal was fed alone, and enough greater gain to overbalance the higher cost of feed consumed.—Prairie Farm and Home.

STEAMER IS SUNK

Nine of Crew Reached Lightship and Then Safety

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 22. — The steamer Durward, says a Rotterdam despatch to Reuter, has ben torpedoed by a German submarine. The crew was saved. The Durward was bound from Leith to Rotterdam and was struck by a torpedo while 22 miles off the Maas lightship. The crew took to the boats and reached the lightship from which a Dutch pilot boat conveyed them to Rotterdam.

CALL TO REV. CHAS. H. COOK IS SUSTAINED

Minister From Hamilton Presbytery Comes to Millbrook

At a meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough, held yesterday, a call from the Millbrook congregation to Rev., Chas. H. Cook of Hamilton Presbytery was sustained and the clerk was instructed to forward it with other documents to the Hamilton Presbytery.

Provisional arrangements were made for the induction at Millbrook, the Moderator to induct, Rev. Mr. Craw, of Springville, to narrate the steps taken to fill the vacancy and to address the minister and Rev. Mr. McConnachie of Centreville to address the people.

Another call dealt with at a recent meeting of Presbytery, was that to Rev. Dr. McKenzie, of Westport, Brockville Presbytery, from Colborne. Dr. McKenzie will be inducted Wednesday, January 27.

FORCES ALONG THE WESTERN FRONT IN BITTER CONFLICT

No Change in Situation Around Soissons --- Trenches Won aad Lost at Other Points

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 22. — The official report this afternoon says: "The situation around Soissons shows no change. The severity of the German bombardment made some trenches in the forest of Apremont, captured yesterday, no longer tenable, and in the forest of La Pretre the Germans recaptured a portion of the trenches captured by the French on Wednesday.

"The enemy's attacks near Perthes were repulsed and the French recaptured trenches near Berry-au-Bac.

"In Alsace infantry fighting in the region of Hartmann and Weilerkopen is going on with great ferocity. The struggle is actually hand to hand.

"At other points on the line, except for violent cannonading, there is nothing to report."

SAY RAID WAS MADE BY ZEPPELINS.

ODDFELLOWS MAY AMEND BY-LAWS

Lower Funeral Benefits and Give Grant to Widows

There was a fairly large gathering of Oddfellows last night who met to discuss financial matters connected with the association and proposed changes to the by-laws. Nothing definite was done and the meeting was adjourned till next Thursday.

Chief among the financial matters that are confronting the society is a proposition to lower the amount of funeral benefits and give a grant to widows of deceased members. The by-laws governing the fraternity have been in existence ten years or more and several changes have been rendered necessary since that time due to different conditions. As all the members of the I.O.O.F. will naturally want to be consulted before action of any kind is taken, it is expected that a large number will be present next Thursday.

IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN WORK OF HOME GUARD

Good Turnout for Instruction Church Parade Sunday January 31

ANOTHER VOLUNTEER

Cold weather does not congeal the ardor, or cool the enthusiasm of the members of the home guard, a fact strikingly demonstrated last night when four hundred of the regiment turned out for the regular weekly drill. Those good folk who enjoy fireside life most these nights would be surprised if they saw the progress which the guard is making. They are rapidly developing into an alert soldierly body of men capable of executing the ordinary movements in military drill. Looking over the regiment as it is being drilled one is impressed with the air of earnestness and interest shown on the faces of all. The men are not there just for pastime but realise that they are preparing themselves for a time when emergency may arise. Tis true there are some amusing things noticed but overshadowing it all there is a well defined and intense air of sincerity. Another fact worthy of note is that the health of many members is improved since they joined the guard and altogether they have a smarter and more military bearing. There were no special features in connection with the drill last night. Another member, in the person of M. McConomy of No. 1 Company has joined the mounted rifles for overseas service.

The following orders for the week were read:—

Orders by Lieut. Col. J. E. L. Goodwill, officer commanding Home Guards, Peterborough Civilian Rifle Association.

Battalion will parade with bands at ten o'clock Sunday, January 31st, to attend divine service at St. Peter's Cathedral and All Saints' Church.

A class of instruction will be organized and the first class will be held Monday, Feb. 1st, at 7.30 a.m. Every officer and non-commissioned officer is expected to attend these classes.

Officers of companies will arrange that all members of their respective companies who have not yet started target practice shall start at once. Sergeant Dugan of No. 10 Co., is transferred to No. 9 Co. to act as Col. Sergeant. Sergeant Pratt is appointed quartermaster sergeant.

OFFICERS FOR CLEARING HOUSE ARE RE-ELECTED

Very Favorable Indications Are Made by Returns Since Opening

At the anual meeting of the Peterborough Clearing House held on Thursday afternoon the following officers were unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year.

Chairman—P. Campbell, manager Bank of Toronto.

Vice-Chairman—Jno. Crane, Dominion Bank.

Sec.-Treas.—D. D. Brown, accountant, Bank of Toronto.

The clearings since the opening in June would seem to indicate that the city, generally, is not adversely effected by the war, the clearings showing a decrease of $100,00 in August only.

The following are the clearings for each month since the clearing house opened:

June, ½ month	$ 880,363
July	1,768,868
August	1,601,808
September	1,804,079
October	1,787,488
November	1,689,176
December	1,807,114
Total	$11,338,896

HE WON'T HAVE TO PAY BOARD

John Donoghue Goes to Castle Nesbitt for Three Months

Free board and lodging for three months was granted to John Donoghue today, or in other words he was sent to gaol for that period. Vigorous protestations that such treatment was unwarranted were without effect upon Police Magistrate Dumble.

John deviated from the paths of sobriety yesterday. He was arrested and spent the night in a cell. Having no work or visible means of support, a charge of vagrancy was laid against him this morning. Balmy spring will have rolled around before John breaths the air of freedom.

INDUCTED AT KNOX CHURCH

Cordial Welcome Extended to Rev. J A. McKenzie the New Minister

The congregation of Knox Presbyterian Church was made happy last night, when Rev. J. A. McKenzie, late of Lachute, Que., was inducted as their minister. The service was carried out with evidences of joyousness and enthusiasm on the part of the large gathering, and every effort was made to give the new minister a cordial welcome. Promises of co-operation and support were given by Mr. Shurter, representing the Session; Dr. McCulloch, Board of Managament; Mr. Laing, Sunday School; Mr. Williamson, Young People's Society; Mrs. Clifford, Ladies' Aid Society.

REV. J. A. McKENZIE, B.A.

To all these happy expressions of welcome and goodwill, Rev. Mr. McKenzie briefly replied.

Rev. W. D. McDonald of Warkworth presided over the service and inducted the minister. An appropriate sermon was delivered by Rev. J. P. McInnis, of Omemee. Rev. D. Thomson, of Hastings, the Moderator, addressed Rev. Mr. McKenzie, and Rev. R. Pogue, the people.

Letters were received by Rev. Mr. Pogue from Rev. H. J. Keith, of Edmonton, and from Rev. J. L. George, of Lachute, to whom Mr. McKenzie had been an assistant. Their contents was made known to the congregation.

Rev. R. Pogue, in speaking to the people, urged them to prize their new minister, to praise him, to pay him, to pray for him, and to practise what he preached.

Rev. R. B. Grobb, Rev. J. R. Webb, and Rev. Jas. Rollins gave addresses of congratulation and greetings.

The choir sang an anthem in good voice, the solo part being taken by Miss Kenyon, and at the close of the service the minister was introduced to the individual members of his new congregation.

Next Tuesday evening the Young People's Society will hold a social evening, at which Rev. J. A. McKenzie will meet all the young people of the church.

Mr. J. A. McKenzie, B.A., is a young minister of great promise. He won the gold medal in the honor class, also the Hugh McKay scholarship of $60 at McGill University. He was born at Kirk Hill, Glengarry, and is the son of the Rev. D. McKenzie, now retired and living at Vankleek Hill. He received his school training at the high school, Alexandria, and entered McGill University in 1905, taking the B. A. degree in 1908. Mr. McKenzie entered the Presbyterian College as a student in 1909, and took his B. A. degree in the spring of 1912, and was ordained in Lachute on Dec. 3rd. Before he left Lachute, several presentations were made by the congregation.

Says the Water Supply is O.K.

Dr. McPherson takes exception to reported statements of the sanitary inspector, regarding the water supply. The M.H.O. says the water is good, and as reported to the commission, is free from infection. He says Mr. Spence has nothing whatever to do with the water.

A filtration plant would mean an outlay of $100,000, so The Review is informed by a member of the commission.

The inspector's statement today was "he would stand by his guns."

DECREASE IN DEATHS FROM TUBERCULOSIS

Guardian of City's Health Makes His Annual Report and Announces Provincial Officers Will Meet Here For Four Days in May

A decrease of 35 per cent. in the mortality from tuberculosis was reported to the Board of Health yesterday by Dr. McPherson. It was also announced that the medical officers of health of Ontario would meet in Peterborough on May 25, 26, 27 and 28. The reports was as follows:—

It gives me great pleasure to state that the general health of the citizens has been good. This is no doubt due to a number of conditions such as climate, food and water, absence of dangerous and injurious occupations, proper sanitary facilities and perhaps in a small degree to the wise provisions for caring for the sick and to the supervision over health matters as exercised by the health department. Some of these are beyond our control and as such have only a passing interest; those that can be influenced by us must be carefully studied and supervised, so that the health of citizens may be protected. When we compare the health conditions of the different towns and cities in the province as shown by the annual reports from the provincial authorities we have good reason for gratification. The following table shows the number of communicable diseases reported in with the number of deaths:

	Cases.	Deaths.
Diphtheria	80	7
Scarlet fever	12	0
Typhoid	12	5

From the table is looks as if we had a small epidemic of diphtheria and on account of some interesting features in connection with it, I would like to make a few remarks. This city has been comparatively free from diphtheria for the past twelve years. During December of 1913, a number of cases appeared, mostly in the western part of the city. In January and February, 1914, more were reported in from the northern part. From this time until the middle of summer an odd case was reported from different parts. In August and early September a number of cases were discovered in the south part beyond the city limits. Whether this outbreak originated within or without the city it would be hard to say. Be this as it may, it was not long after school opened that three children attending the Sacred Heart School were taken down with the disease and one died. I went to the school and gave antitoxin to the two rooms from which the cases had come. The children were then examined and all having any discharge from the nose were swabbed and sent home until a microscopic examination was made. Two of the cases were found to be positive. To confirm this and to strengthen my hand in the matter, I sent swabs of the positive cases to Toronto. The provincial laboratory confirmed my findings and the houses were duly placarded although very strenuous objections were made. A few more cases were reported in from among those attending the school. This had the tendency to alarm the parents and the school attendance fell away seventy-five per cent. At our request the Separate School Board appointed a nurse to assist in controlling the outbreak. This was accomplished, first, by taking swabs from all suspicious cases and placing in quarantine any that were found to be positive, second, by following up absentees, and finally by giving antitoxin to every child in the school. After the antitoxin was given, we had no more cases. At the same time that this work was being done in the Separate School a similar work was being done in two of the public schools, where a large number of positive cases were found.

By this means we located many children that were showing no symptoms of any diseased condition except a discharging nose, but who notwithstanding would be able to communicate the disease in a severe form to others. In following up absentees and by insisting upon a swab of the nose and throat being taken for examination before a pupil was re-admitted to school, we located a number of cases of clinical diphtheria, that from one cause or another had not been reported in.

During the year eighty cases were reported in but forty of these were showing no signs of illness and were found through the work of the several nurses. As a result we are again free from diphtheria. I just wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the good work done by the two school nurses and the ample support received from

KAISER'S NEW ATTEMPT TO REACH PARIS.

This map shows the present formation of the German line of battle in France, with the most advanced portion of Soissons, which is only 55 miles from Paris. The Kaiser is said to be personally directing the attempt to push straight through to Paris, but the British and French armies opposing him have been strongly reinforced.

REPORTS ARE PRESENTED AT FIRST MEETING OF ST. ANDREW'S PEOPLE

A large proportion of the congregation of St. Andrews Presbyterian Church assembled in the Sunday school room last night to hear reports from several of the societies and organizations connected with the church. The most important meeting, however, will be held on Thursday night next, when the reports from the board of management and the session will be presented, officers elected, and the financial statement submitted. St. Andrews Church have adopted the plan of holding their annual meeting in two sections, to avoid detaining the congregation till too late an hour.

Next Thursday night they expect to be through at a comparatively early hour, after which a social time will be spent.

NESBITT DEFENDS

Canadian Soldiers Who Are Charged With Manslaughter

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Jan. 22.—On the application of the militia department, the Dominion Government has assigned Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., to defend Corporal Kayo and privates McIntosh and Kinsman charged with manslaughter, in shooting two duck-hunters Smith and Dorsch of Buffalo. The trial will therefore witness the unique experience of the Dominion Government defending and the Provincial Government prosecuting a criminal case.

MUST MAKE NEW CHOICE

Bishop Thornloe's Resignation is not Confirmed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Kingston, Jan. 22.—The House of Anglican bishops for the province of Ontario, in a vote taken today refused to confirm the resignation of Bishop Thornloe of Algoma recently elected to succeed Bishop Hamilton at Ottawa.

The Ottawa diocese will therefore have to elect another Bishop.

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 22.—A meeting of bishops of the Anglican Church was held here yesterday afternoon. Bishop Sweeny of Toronto, Bishop Clark of Niagara, Bishop Williams of Huron, with Bishop Mills and Bishop Bidwell of Kingston formed the conference held in references to the bishopric of Ottawa, but at the close of the conference it was stated that no information would be given out until today.

FIREMEN CALLED TO CHIMNEY FIRE

A chimney fire which broke out at 10.45 this morning in the Moule photograph studio, caused a little excitement and gave the department a run. Considerable smoke was noticed emanating from the chimney which is just over the studio, and an alarm was sent in from Box 22. Soot was the cause and a little chemical treatment soon had the blaze under control with no damage worth speaking of, having been caused. The building was owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915

IS IT SPENDING TOO MUCH?

THE REPORT of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto to the Provincial Legislature has just been issued. It is a lengthy, detailed, and fairly complete report, showing the financial position of the university, and giving details of work done and of receipts and expenditures. Had an index been included, the report would be much more convenient than it is.

The gross revenue for the year was $856,727. The deduction of interest on special trust funds, $8,418, and interest paid for bank accommodation, $2,969, leaves the net revenue $845,340, as against $828,788 in 1912-13, being an increase of $16,552. Of this increase, $12,597 is due to enhanced receipts under the University Act of 1906 which, while exceeding to this extent the return in the immediately preceding year, still fell $12,658 below that of 1911-12, and $23,836 below the revenue from this source in 1910-11.

The expenditure under the appropriations made by the board for salaries and maintenance amounted to $931,452, being an increase over that of 1912-13 of $18,457, and, on the whole, economy has been exercised with regard to appropriations for the different services.

The deficit upon 1913-14 revenue account was $86,112, to which was added the sum of $1,086, being excess cost of construction and equipment of the Pathological building over the $180,000 available from capital account. This $87,198 was met by a special grant of the Legislature of $80,000, together with the sum of $36,804, being a balance from the reserve fund created from the surplus income of former years. Thus, the university has $29,606 available towards the estimated deficit of 1914-15.

It appears that the time has arrived when the University of Toronto should cease to be conducted as a losing concern. It starts out this year with nearly $30,000 on hand, yet looks cheerfully forward to an estimated deficit. The Legislature should insist that the university be run on a business basis and live within its income. If it is necessary to undertake additional expenditures, as on capital account or maintenance, the university should be restrained from going into debt for these until it or the Legislature had made provision for them. Take the one item of interest on the overdraft amounting to $2,968.70. This sum would nearly pay the salary of the head professor of a department, or would more than pay an associate professor's salary, or more than pay two lecturers. The Government of Ontario has been very generous to the University of Toronto, due particularly to the late Sir James P. Whitney, and it will no doubt treat with proper consideration any necessity of the University of Toronto. The Government and the people of the Province recognize the important place higher education has in the general welfare, and also that a growing population with expanding interests means increased investment in the universities. For that reason, the authorities of the University of Toronto should take the Government and the people into their confidence. The expenditure should be made to conform to the estimates, and the estimates to the revenue. If the estimates are greater than the revenue (estimated), they should be either cut down or means taken to secure the necessary increase in revenue. If the Provincial Government does not see the way clear for further investment, these expenditures, above the expected revenue, should be postponed.

In Dr. Falconer's report, he emphasizes the need for more room, or increased accommodation. There are many businesses operated at a profit that are so suffering, but are obliged to postpone improvements for good and sufficient reasons. It is natural that teachers in a university should desire to see it extend and develop along the lines of larger service, but, it is also true that they do not see the reasons why, at times, it should not embark on a policy of larger investment. Just as some concerns are overcapitalized and crippled by debenture charges, so it is possible for a university to be similarly placed. The fact that Toronto University carried an overdraft last year of nearly $90,000, and paid nearly $3,000 in interest for accommodation given by the banks, seems to show that it is in need of a changed financial policy that will conform to the revenue it receives. This yearly trooping to the Assembly for trifles like $90,000 to pay banks and bank interest will create a bad impression, a feeling hostile to public aid being granted the university in larger amounts, and that is precisely the policy that should be avoided. The problem is not one of Toronto University receiving more or less money. It is one of operating the university on its revenue, and increasing that revenue as time and circumstance demand.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the Farmers' Institutes for Ontario has arrived. We suppose it is all right, since Peterborough has its name in it.

MORE GERMAN ATROCITIES.

REPORTS are still coming out of German atrocities in France and Belgium. The Paris "Official Gazette" published recently the report addressed to the French Premier by the Commission appointed to investigate acts committed by the enemy in violation of international law in those portions of French territory occupied by him and since retaken.

Almost everywhere citizens were torn from their homes and carried into captivity. Many of them died or were killed en route. Our opponents constantly employ incendiarism either for intimidation or for systematic devastation. Their incendiary fury is directed chiefly against churches and buildings of historical interest.

Further information of the report by the Commission is now available. It states that German soldiers sought out people who were in their houses, and shot them. In many cases they broke into houses and fired at everyone they saw. A woman aged ninety-eight was bayoneted in bed and her body burned in her burning house. A boy of fourteen was disemboweled, and a lad of twelve accompanying his father to pick potatoes outside a town, was shot with his father. A harmless old man, aged seventy-eight, was brutally shot in the street on the pretext that he had shot some Germans, which was absolutely denied by his family. At Montmirail, an old man was shot for endeavoring to defend his daughter from a German soldier.

The Belgian Legation in London states that the Catholic clergy appear to have suffered in a most special measure from the German invasion of Belgium. Churches and religious houses have been destroyed or profaned in almost every village, and in many towns. In most cases these edifices have been utilized as stables or prisons. In many cases the sacred vessels were stolen.

On August 21st the priest of Buechen, the Rev. M. de Clerck, was arrested by German soldiers and accused of having fired at them. This was entirely false, for he was ill, and for some time had not been able to conduct divine service. This poor invalid was hoisted on a cannon, then pulled down, and cast into a ditch. Next, some soldiers took him by the arms and legs and dragged him along the pavement. The old man, tortured in this fashion, and absolutely exhausted, said that he would rather suffer death than the continuance of such cruel treatment. He was then shot; he was eighty-three years of age.

It should be remembered that these cases have official authority for their authenticity. We have not enumerated all of them, but have picked out the milder cases from a number of instances, some of them being almost too revolting to go into print. These are the works of the Kaiser's standard-bearers, who are to establish the beneficent and civilizing influence of German rule!

EDITORIAL NOTES.

REV. J. A. MACKENZIE, B.A., who was inducted last night as the new minister at Knox Presbyterian Church, comes to this city highly recommended. He is a young man, coming to a young congregation. He will find plenty of hard work in his new charge, but, with the co-operation of his people, a large measure of success should mark his occupancy of Knox Presbyterian Church.

The Navy's Real Work.

(Canadian Courier.)

The greatest mass of dynamic inertia in the world at the present time is the British fleet under Sir John Jellicoe, which is doing as much to win the war as all the troops of England yet fighting in France and Belgium. It has been from the month of August, 1914, in active co-operation with the army of the western allies. British warships have convoyed the British troops to France, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand troops from the seven seas, French troops from Algiers and Morocco, and Indian troops from India to the coast of France. They have beaten back the Germans from the Channel coast. They have cleared the high seas of German mercantile marine and of all German cruisers except two. They have cut Germany off as near as possible from all traffic communication with the productive world and prevented her from buying munitions of war abroad. They have stalled off any invasion of England and kept hostile raids down to a minimum. They have kept the German fleet from doing a tap to save the situation for Germany, except a few submarine and one or two small open-sea engagements.

Eyeglasses no Humiliation.

(London Chronicle.)

The large number of British Territorials with spectacles or eyeglasses has been noticed. On this point the late Mr. Eustace Balfour, brother of Mr. Arthur Balfour, wrote: "Some members who have passed the medical tests on the assumption that they will shoot in spectacles do not do so. May I point out that spectacles are no humiliation? The Germans wear them in war. They are in some respects even a protection against dust. I personally have been a deer-stalker, and have always had to wear glasses. I do not think I have ever lost a stag which I should otherwise have hit, by having spectacles on. The prejudice against them is childish and artificial, in my view."

Where Germany Failed.

(Boston Transcript.)

Where Germany appears to have failed, in the estimate of impartial American observers, is that its great military machine, instead of rolling triumphantly and swiftly over all opposition, has come up against machines so good that it has been compelled to make tremendous exertions to prevent the recession which was begun on the Marne being carried so far as to compromise the whole campaign. The German military machine certainly has not the prestige today that it had on the first of August, and that of itself is a loss to Germany, whose ultimate consequence it is premature at the present time to attempt to forecast.

No Magicians in the East.

(Westminster Gazette.)

The Russian Headquarters information has proved correct and moderate, but the Russian correspondents are perpetually encouraging us to expect the impossible, and preparing disappointment when it does not happen. We must be content to know that our allies are fighting stubbornly and gallantly in conditions that present inevitable difficulties, and to rely confidently, as we may, on their power in the long run to develop superior force. The idea that the war can be ended by any stroke of magic on the part of the Russians has no substance in it, and never had.

No Romance in the Trenches.

(London Sketch.)

"So Lady Gladys is back from the front?"

"Yes; she couldn't find anybody interesting or romantic to nurse."

NOT AN IRISHMAN.

Editor Review,

Sir,—If Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald was even enough of an Irishman ever to have been in Ireland at all he would not be ashamed of the good names, Kate Maloney and Bridget Condon and would not have advertised himself or tried to at the expense of the Kitchener Club and its little Tipperany tea. God bless it. There is not one word good or bad making fun of the Irish and it would be better for Mr. Fitzgerald to take a hie over there instead of pretending that he is thin-skinned. Don't let them change one word of that innocent little ad., sir, for I'm not ashamed of the names and of swate colleens as I have heard them called many a time in Ireland's soil. No rale Irishman wrote that letter.

Yours truly,

GRAND TRUNK HAS FINE EXHIBIT AT THE SAN FRANSISCO EXPOSITION

The Grand Trunk System has just shipped a special car containing a large proportion of its exhibit for installation in the company's building at the Panama Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, which opens on February 20th next.

The shipment consists of a number of splendid oil paintings of scenes in the Canadian Rockies, on the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific, from the brush of the well known Canadian artist, Mr. G. Horne Russell. Among the other material shipped is a model of one of the Grand Trunk Steamships, operating on the North Pacific. There is also a model representing Jasper Park—the 4400 square mile National Park Reserve in the Canadian Rockies, Alberta — and Mount Robson Park—in the Rockies of British Columbia. One of the finest collections of mouned fish and game, including a magnificent specimen of a Buffalo head from the Buffalo National Park, Wainwright, Alberta, will be on view. A collection of transparencies depicting scenes in the Dominion of Canada, will be installed in an attractive and interesting manner, with framed photographic views of the principal attractions in Canada, illustrating fishing and hunting, tourist resorts, agricultural pursuits, mining camps, etc.

The decorations of the interior of the Grand Trunk building are being carried out by experts, and will be made up of attractive features composed of grains and grasses from the agricultural fields of western Canada, including a fine collection of agricultural products from the Bulkley and Nechaco Valleys of Central British Columbia. Other features that will attract attention are a very fine fruit exhibit from British Columbia, and a collection of minerals. These have been carefully assembled and will be attractively displayed.

Perhaps one of the most interesting features of the Grand Trunk building will be the Motion Picture Theatre, which has been built as an annex to their Exhibit Hall, and in which will be conducted regular moving picture shows, at which subjects which have been secured during the past year will be projected, and will include scenes in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Agricultural scenes, in Western Canada, Rocky Mountain scenes, vistas of the Grand Trunk Pacific Steamships, Skene River pictures, mining scenes, etc. No charge will be made for admittance to this theatre, and the Dominion of Canada will receive a large amount of advertising from this feature alone.

BRITAIN MAKES REPLY

She Will Seize Dacia and Bring Ship Before Prize Court.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The official attitude of Great Britain in the case of the Dacia was declared last night in a formal statement issued by the British Embassy at Washington.

The statement follows:

"In connection with the transfer of the Dacia from the German to the American flag, the British Government, while anxious to avoid causing loss to the shippers of her cargo, have found it impossible to agree that the transfer in the circumstances in which it had been effected, is valid, in accordance with the accepted principles of international law. If, therefore, the Dacia should proceed to sea and should be captured, the British Government will find themselves obliged to bring the ship (apart from the cargo) before the prize court.

"It is stated that the cargo of the Dacia is to consist solely of cotton owned by American citizens. If this is so, and if the vessel should be captured, the British Government will guarantee either to purchase the cargo at the price which would have been realised by the shippers if the cargo had reached its foreign destination, or if preferred they will undertake to forward the cotton to Rotterdam without further expense to the shippers."

The State Department yesterday notified the owners of the Dacia that she must, of course, sail at her own risk. The Department has, after the receipt of the British Embassy statement, a very clear idea of the situation.

INDIANS EAGER TO JOIN FORCES

Intense Loyalty to British of Canadian Native Races

From British Columbia, Manitoba, Ontario and other parts of Canada has been heard the voice of the native asking a place in the ranks of those to be selected to serve under the colors, says Onondeyeh Loft in The Toronto Globe. Associated with those requests are substantial donations intended to be applied towards the various funds subscribed for the relief of those who have been made dependent as a result of this cruel war.

They have displayed a generous spirit, with motives inspired by no influence other than to show their deep interest and concern in the advent of this new seriousness, and to identify themselves with the cares and responsibilities imposed upon our Empire by their readiness to make sacrifices for her cause. When such patriotism dominates a people there is one regret to be offered—that they cannot be all gratified by participation in active service as of old, when every brave warrier was free to pledge his fidelity at the warpost with his hatchet prior to the march upon the warpath.

I entertain the hope that at no remote time the Government of Canada will devise means to enlarge materially the encouragement of military defence locally among them by establishing their own regiments. Instinctively the Indian is a good shot. To encourage this reasonable grants might be made by the Militia Department towards the establishment of local rifle ranges, which both young and old would be only too glad to utilize. Indeed, in this regard the time has come when serious consideration must be given to the matter of the establishment of ranges in every township throughout the country, so that an opportunity be given to civilians to learn to shoot.

Some day we hope to be able to gratify his ideals of an Indian regiment who may be able to compare favorably with the splendid achievements of those from India, who are giving such a fine account of themselves in France and Belgium.

The Indians throughout Canada have every reason to be appreciative, too, for the liberal disposition of Major-General Lessard and the Department of Militia in extending every opportunity to Indians to enlist in the contingents that are being prepared for the front. I am glad to see they are responding well to the call; and I further hope every young man who is capable and physically fit will come out and do his duty.

I know the spirit of war is rife on the reserves. While many of us will not be eligible, on account of old age, to enlist, we should go in and drill and form home guards, so as to be prepared for any emergency. I would also advise all Indians to be very reticent and uncommunicative to strangers, and keep a sharp eye on all suspects, and be ever ready to give information to the civil authorities. A recent visit to my native home on the Grand River found me soon in touch with the martial spirit of war, beating in the hearts and minds of even the unlearned. Those who could not read were making their daily treks to the homes of those who receive daily papers, eager to learn the latest news, which is always cheerfully given and fully explained.

Equally interested are the women, who were ready to discuss possibilities of doing something useful to assist in patriotic work of women. They were getting ready to ask the chiefs for a vote of money to purchase yarn to knit socks for the soldiers.

Some interesting episodes can be related as to the determination of men to go and enlist at the nearest regimental headquarters. Some have gone the length of letting their crops go ungarnered rather than forego the opportunity of proving their patiotism.

Votes for Women Endorsed.

EDMONTON, Alta., Jan. 22.—The United Farmers of Alberta yesterday afternoon endorsed the principle of suffrage for women, and asked the Government to submit a plebiscite on the question. They also favored granting women a legal share of husband's estates.

GIRGUMSTANTIAL

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

The lawsuit between the MacGregor and MacAlister estates had been decided in favor of Fergus MacAlister, cousin to Alexander MacGregor, who had been long in possession of the estate. Both were bachelors, and, neither having children, the property would have gone in any event to MacAlister had his cousin continued to live single. But Fergus had heard that Alex was about to be married, and, since there was a doubt as to whether he or his cousin was legally entitled to the estate, he had commenced suit to gain it.

MacGregor was too honorable to permit Helen Cameron to become his wife till it was decided whether he would be rich or poor, and when the case was decided against him he released her. He made preparations to leave the homestead to his cousin, and when all was ready and he was about to leave Fergus drove up to the homestead, alighted and went into the house.

Andrew Cummings, a cobbler, was passing that way at 6 o'clock in the evening. He noticed MacAlister's chaise before the gate, and at the moment Alex MacGregor came out evidently in a rage and passed down the road. MacAlister did not return to his home to dinner, and, since it was known that he had gone to the homestead during the evening, a servant was sent to find out if possible if he was there. He found his master lying on the floor of the library dead. His skull had been fractured, apparently with an iron poker that showed signs of having inflicted the blow.

Alexander MacGregor was suspected, but it was not till Andy Cummings told of what he had seen that Alex was arrested. His story was that just before leaving the homestead his cousin had come in. The meeting was a trying one to Alex, who had just been dispossessed. He had upbraided his cousin, saying that he had not a cent in the world and knew not where to go for a lodging. Fergus had taken out a handful of gold pieces and offered them to him. Alex had scornfully declined to take them and had left the house in an excited state of mind.

MacGregor's misfortune was too much for Helen Cameron, who, despite her father's commands, visited him in jail and sat beside him during the trial, declaring that she would marry him, whatever the verdict might be. Since no one saw the murder committed her lover was not convicted, but there were few but believed that he had killed his cousin. Indeed, there was a special motive for his putting Fergus out of the way, for at Fergus' death he came again into possession of the estate he had lost.

For a time Alex refused to permit Helen to make the sacrifice of marrying a man who had been convicted by opinion if not by the courts. But when it was found that if she were not permitted to bear her burden with him her life would still be wrecked his parents begged Alex to withdraw his opposition. The pair were married privately and lived, not where the murder had been committed, but at Helen's home.

Alex drooped under the stigma of being considered his cousin's murderer. He was cut by his old friends, and had it not been for his wife not a human being would have crossed his threshold. Life to him was an intolerable burden. He preferred death to such a life.

One day his wife went to the homestead to examine the room where her husband had told her he had had an interview with Fergus with a view to discovering a clew to the real murderer. She made a search of the room where the corpse had been found and under a baseboard caught a glimpse of something yellow. Withdrawing the object it proved to be a gold sovereign.

MacGregor had told of the offer of the gold pieces by his cousin, but had no proof of his story. Helen, without a word to her husband, took the sovereign to her lawyer. He carried it to the only bank in the vicinity, and after an investigation it was learned that they had received a considerable number of sovereigns of the same coinage (1848) just before the date of the murder and on the morning of the day MacAlister was killed had paid him fifty of them.

The piece Helen had found was the only one that was traced up to this time. Andy Cummings some time after the murder was remembered by one of his neighbors to have offered a gold sovereign to be changed into silver. The attorney got out a warrant to search Andy's premises, and five sovereigns, coinage of 1848, were found in a stocking hidden under the eaves of his cabin.

Andy was arrested. He at first explained having the sovereigns in his possession by the statement that MacAlister had owed him money, but when pressed for what the debt was for he broke down and made a confession.

On seeing MacGregor come out of the homestead curiosity had moved him to go in and investigate the cause of his wrath. In the library he had found on a table the gold Fergus had offered Alex. Cupidity seized him. He was gathering them in when Fergus appeared. A struggle followed. Andy seized the poker by the fireplace, struck his opponent on the head and killed him.

To divert suspicion from himself he had told what he had seen.

Pointers For Housewives

For the Tea Table.

A pretty novelty for the smart tea table is a set of hand painted Hungarian china, rimmed with wicker. There are the slender, long dish with tall handle of wicker for serving sandwiches; the little round and oblong dishes for bonbons and, prettier then these, the holder of wicker with rims for three small, round china saucers, one for olives, one for pickles or any relish desired and one for radishes or something of the sort.

Guest Room Stationery.

One of the newest ideas for the country place is that of having the stationery in the guest room harmonize with the coloring of that room. Papers in exquisite blues, yellows, tans and mauves are to be found. The name of the home, if it has a special name, is placed at the center top of the page, while at the right or left corner is the name of the railroad station and the telephone number.

TWO IN ONE.

Simple Frock Which Is Susceptible of Widely Different Treatments.

Mothers on the lookout for a simple, plain little school frock will like this dress made with kimono body portion and straight plaited skirt.

Those who are seeking a more dressy frock will appreciate the addition of the overblouse with tunic effect shown on the figure. In this picture this latter is made of flowered challis and plain batiste, but there are many materials that can be put together in the same way.

For the ten year size the dress will require four and one-eighth yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with two and seven-eighths yards twenty-seven inches wide for the tunic and trimming.

Prince Rupert and Princess May of Teck.

Happy looking little folks these here pictured, Prince Rupert and Princess May of Teck. They are members of the royal family of Great Britain. Young America has small knowledge and little regard for high sounding titles, but across the ocean they amount to a great deal. The boy and girl are son and daughter of Prince Alexander of Teck, who gets his title from Germany. Their mother is granddaughter of the Duke of Albany, who was one of the sons of the late Queen Victoria of England. And here we have a very lamentable situation. The little people have friends and relatives on both sides in the war now being waged. But they are too young to realize what a terrible calamity war is. Princess May is eight and her brother seven.

Cakewalk Party.

There could be no more enjoyable way of spending a winter evening than at a "cakewalk." When sending out your invitations ask your guests to come dressed to represent some kind of a cake. You will be surprised to learn how many there are.

Number your guests as they arrive, handing each one a card and pencil. The names of the cakes are to be guessed and written on the cards, and a fine cake may be presented to the person guessing the largest number, while a cake of soap may be used for the booby prize. For the "cakewalk" play the old game of "going to Jerusalem." Serve as many kinds of cake as you can for refreshments, with hot coffee or chocolate if it be a cold night, lemonade or grape juice if it be mild. You may add salted nuts if you care to.

"Jelly roll" has been represented by wearing a bolster case, with red zephyr to suggest the jelly. A jolly boy in Dutch costume suggests Dutch cake. An elaborate costume consisting of white muslin fastened around a barrel hoop and worn as a hoopskirt, the top drawn into a peak covering the head, was White mountain cake. A white apron had the bars of the musical staff printed across it, for a border the note C occurring at intervals. A fringe of peanuts was fastened along the lower edge. It took some time to guess this kind of cake—dough (do) nuts.

WINDOW DRESSING AS WOMAN'S WORK

The business of window dressing is advancing to the dignity of a profession. It is an occupation of the greatest interest, for it appeals to the artistic instincts as well as the commercial, and it demands a certain knowledge of psychology as well as taste, a sense of color and proportion, and a realization of timeliness.

Women are doing well in this work, and one woman has recently set up a school of window dressing and is making a success of the venture.

"It is more interesting than interior decoration to many girls," she told a friend who was asking questions. "There is the advertising element, you know, which gives the work a human interest. A good window dresser is a big asset to a store. It's putting your best foot foremost and appealing to each passerby in one or more of several ways. Beauty, usefulness, economy, suggestion, all play a part. Nothing should be left out that will assist any one into the store, yet there must be no sense of confusion, no overcrowding. There is a big chance for the woman with original ideas."

Window dressers who have climbed to the top, who have the required skill and the important faculty of being striking, get big salaries.

One girl got a position with a big firm by seizing an opportunity that presented itself when the firm was advertising a special article. She went to the head of the proper department with a carefully worked out scheme for the main window of the building. She had planned everything, could answer all the questions put to her, and she was given the chance to put her idea into practice. The window was the talk of the town, and the public had to be kept moving by the police as it passed slowly along. That girl is now drawing five times the salary she worked for then.

STRANGE USES OF BREAD

Eastern Peoples Use It For Awnings or Blankets

The inhabitants of Asia Minor, Arabia, Turkestan, and the Tigris-Euphrates valley have a unique use for bread. Instead of making it into loaves, they make it into sheets. These sheets are about 40 inches wide and twice as long. The natives make almost as much use of these as our Indians make of birch bark.

If an awning is needed as a protection against either sun or rain, a roll of this bread is unfurled and carried back and forth over a pole several times. If it has a coat of mutton tallow or almond oil, the bread is fairly waterproof.

The Arab uses his sheets of bread, which look much like chamois leather, for makeshift blankets.

Electricity and the Human Body.

A series of experiments on the variation of skin resistance to the passage of electric currents through the human body has been carried out by Professor von Pfungen of Vienna. The experiments proved that habits of strict sobriety appreciably lessened the danger of fatal injury from an electric shock. Nervous excitement of any kind lowered the protective power of the skin to a remarkable extent. The measurements were made by means of a sensitive galvanometer, the current passing through the body of the subject from one hand to the other.

Bottled Soda Water

A Cold Weather Delight

You drink Cold Water in winter. Why not Cold Soda Water?

Every member of your family needs soda water in winter even more than in summer, because the blood grows sluggish and the system becomes clogged with impurities because of lack of out-door exercise.

Liberal draughts of our delightful bottled beverages flush out the system, tone up the nerves, and digestion, and gives both health and happiness — especially to the children. Try a case. You will repeat the experiment. Be sure you get Knox's.

Law is a thing made by people who have money, and used as an instrument by means of which they can get more money.

Don't Throw Away Goodwill !

A well-known expert and advertising man, and one who is the head of a large mercantile business, recently made the following statement in regard to the temptation to discontinue advertising :

¶ "Probably more money is wasted in advertising by running consistently in a publication for a long time, and then suddenly dropping it, than in any other way.

¶ "It amounts to deliberately throwing away the goodwill which the readers of that publication have built up for the advertisers' name and product.

¶ "It is better to advertise moderately, but regularly, than to use large copy spasmodically."

The Voice of Successful Experience

Another well-known expert declares that persistent advertising pays, because :

¶ "Advertising is friendly. It persuades.

¶ "Slowly, but inevitably, it creates the attitude of goodwill and confidence.

¶ "It brings customers—who stay.

¶ "A business built up in this way is built on a firm foundation. It's the kind of success that lasts.

¶ "But it cannot be done in a day—or a month. Nothing but persistent advertising will accomplish this sort of success."

A Bit of Advice

It might be well for you, Mr. Merchant—Manufacturer—or whatever your calling—to take the advice of these experts—the experience of every successful business man, and use the columns of The Review moderately and consistently.

TO MOVE ON EGYPT.

Turks Are Now Concentrating In the Vicinity of Beersheba.

LONDON, Jan. 22. — A despatch from Cairo to The Evening News declares that the Turks are busily concentrating in the vicinity of Beersheba and it is believed that their advance upon Egypt is timed to begin on Jan. 27, the Kaiser's birthday.

Prompted by Berlin, Djemal Pasha, commander-in-chief of the army intended for an attack on the Suez Canal, appears to have undertaken the systematic destruction of the entire work of Jewish colonization built by the labor of thirty years and the expenditure of millions of dollars.

A proclamation has been issued ordering the destruction, under pain of death, of all Zionist documents and all papers relating to Jewish colonization. In many cases the land settled by the Jews has been handed over to the Arabs and wheat collected by the Relief Committee of Galilee has been confiscated in order to feed the army.

DECREASE IN DEATHS

those in authority in both the Separate and public schools.

Typhoid has been light again this year, only twelve cases being reported in. Four of these had been living out of town prior to developing the disease and doubtless obtained the infection there. The other eight were using either well water exclusively or well and city water. The cases were scatterred throughout the year. The number of deaths was five.

Measles and scarlet fever gave us no cause for worry and smallpox did not make an appearance. Before leaving this part of the report, I would like to call your attention to the number of deaths from tuberculosis. This year the number was twenty-one as compared with thirty last year, or a decrease of thirty per cent. No doubt this is in a large measure due to the good work of the Peterborough Health Association. It is only two and a half years since the work began but already the results are showing in the most practical and convincing form in the lowering of the death rate or in other words in the saving of lives.

Should Support Association.

How many will be saved from the ravages of the disease through a reduction in the number of cases and through education in prevention and spread of infection, among those suffering from the disease or among those who may be exposed, be it at home or elsewhere or by caring for the delicate or poorly nourished children only time will tell. In the meantime it is our duty to support the association in their good work in every way that may be necessary.

The sanitary work has been carried on as far as possible with the help available and is dealt with in the sanitary inspector's report. There is very little beyond the usual routine to report. I might say that during the year the bake shops and laundries were inspected and regulations controlling each drawn up. It was decided to recommend to the council that the laundries be licensed, the number of licenses being subject to the approval of the sanitary inspector.

License the Bakers.

A marked improvement in the laundries has resulted therefrom. In this connection I would suggest that the bakers also be licensed and that the license be issued only after the premises have been examined and found in accordance with the by-law. Licenses for butcher shops are issued by the police. It sema to me that they should be issued only after receiving a favorable report on the premises from the sanitary inspector. The milk by-law should be amended so as to compel the milkmen to keep the sanitary inspector informed as to the sources of their milk supply.

Slaughter Houses.

We have received from the provincial board of health, copies of the rules and regulations governing slaughter houses and manure heaps, and it will be our duty to see that they are enforced.

I have but few recommendations to make. Last year I suggested the advisability of an abbatoir and a smallpox hospital. In view of the hard times prevailing it may be advisable to postpone consideration of these.

Health Officers' Convention.

Before closing I would like to draw your attention to the fact that Peterborough is to be honored this year by being the first city outside of Toronto to have the annual convention of the health officers of the province. The dates set for the meetings are May 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th. When you consider that there are about seven hundred officers in Ontario you will see that we will have a large number of persons to look after and I ask your assistance in making it helpful and entertaining to them while in our city.

Maj. Labatt Is Better.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Maj. Labatt of Hamilton, Ont., who is ill in London has been under care of Sir William Osler. He is now progressing rapidly.

Lc.-Corpl. Tupper, son of Sir Hibbert Tupper, who was seized with pneumonia, is now convalescent.

Sir George Perley has gone to Salisbury for a few days.

CASUALTIES

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—The following casualties among members of the Canadian expeditionary force were announced last night by the Militia Department:

Reported (unofficially) killed—Princess Patricia's Canadian Light inafntry: Lc.-Corpl. Norman Fry; next of kin, John Norman, North street, Wilton, Wilts, Eng.

Deaths—Pte. A. H. Morris, 7th Battalion, from motor car accident at Shrewton; next of kin, Mrs. H. M. Morris, 3,524 Twenty-fifth street east, Vancouver, B.C.

Lc.-Corpl. Fry enlisted at Netherhill, Sask. He fought in the South African war and his wife and family are living in Bristol.

British Troops For Belfort?

GENEVA, Jan. 22.—The visit of the Prince of Wales to Belfort has led to reports here that British troops would shortly be sent to Belfort to participate in any possible advance on the Rhine. The French advanced trenches, according to reports received here are now only 16 miles from the Rhine.

Ice-Breaker Didn't Last.

ARCHANGEL, Russia, Jan. 22.—The ice-breaker Canada, sent by the Canadian Government for the purpose of keeping open as late in the winter as possible the port of Archangel, has been disabled.

Sixteen steamers already have been frozen in, and the prospects of releasing them are poor.

Archangel is the only port of European Russia which has been open for overseas commerce during the war.

Damage To Goeben Heavy.

ATHENS, Jan. 22. — It is learned here that the Turko-German cruiser Goeben, anchored at Beikoz, ten miles north of Constantinople, on the Bospborous, is surrounded by steamers to mask the damage which has been inflicted on her by encounters with Russians in the Black Sea. Damage to all other Turkish warships has been repaired at the temporary arsenal at Stenia, two miles nearer Constantinople.

ATROCITIES AUTHORIZED

German War Book Instructed Huns in Arts of Brutality.

LONDON, Jan. 22. — Prof. J. H. Morgan has translated into the English language "The German War Book," a manual of usages in war on land issued by the General Staff of the German army. This is the most authoritative work of its kind in Germany. There is a reference in the introduction to "humanitarian considerations which not infrequently degenerate into sentimentality and flabby emotion."

The revealing passage is the following: "A war conducted with energy cannot be directed merely against the combatants of the enemy, their state and the positions they occupy, but it will and must in like manner seek to destroy the total intellectual and material resources of the latter."

According to this German war book, assassination and incendiarism are, in given circumstances, justifiable, as will be seen by the following quotation:

"Bribery of the enemy's subjects with the object of obtaining military advantage, acceptance of offers of treachery, reception of deserters, utilization of discontented elements in the population, support of pretenders and the like are permissible; indeed, international law is in no way opposed to the exploitation of crimes of the third parties — assassination, incendiarism, robbery and the like—to the prejudice of the enemy. The ugly and inherently immoral aspect of such methods cannot affect the recognition of their lawfulness."

Among the questions and answers in this book are:

"Should peaceful inhabitants of an invaded country be exposed to the fire of their own troops?"

"Yes, it may be indispensable, but its main justification is that it is 'successful'."

"Should women and children and the old and feeble be allowed to depart before a bombardment begins?"

"On the contrary, their presence is greatly to be desired. It makes the bombardment all the more effective."

CHAIRMANSHIP OF BOARD OF HEALTH

Dr. C. H. Amys to Remain in the Chair

Dr. C. H. Amys is to preside over the Board of Health for the ensuing year, his appointment being unanimously made at the initial gathering of the board yesterday afternoon. The meeting passed off without anything unusual or unexpected cropping up save a visit from Dr. Clinton, district officer of health who chanced to be in the city on an inspection tour. Reports from Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., Sanitary Inspector Spence and the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital were presented and adopted.

The question of an account from Dr. C. H. Amys for $32 was given some discussion but finally passed. The account was incurred during the absence from the city of the M.H.O. last summer on his two weeks' vacation during which time the typhoid epidemic broke out. Dr. McPherson had arranged with Dr. Amys to look after his duties while absent. While the paying of the account was regarded as establishing a precedent it was eventually passed.

On motion it was decided to call for tenders for supplying ice to the Queen Mary Hospital the said ice to be obtained from the canal and above Auburn dam. The chairman was authorized to let the contract. It was also arranged that a visit should be made to the Queen Mary Hospital for the purpose of seeing what improvements or repairs were required. Monday afternoon at two o'clock was the time set.

Mortified.

"I haven't seen Hemmandshaw for a week."

"No; he hasn't been out of the house since his accident."

"Was he seriously injured?"

"No, but he feels the disgrace deeply."

"Disgrace?"

"Yes. After living in the heart of the city all his life, he went to the country one day last week and was run over by a milk wagon."

REPORT OF SANITARY

May 1st of this year, and as usual with legislative innovations met with some opposition at first. This, however, soon subsided, and at the present time the market square and building are quite inadequate to accommodate in comfort those who resort there on market days. I regret that my proposition to have fowl dressed with the heart and liver attached was turned down. The result has been that the buying public has suffered thereby, fowl, after being dressed a thome, often being found diseased. In connection with this, it is significant to note that the local cold storage plant will only purchase turkeys that have been dressed.

Yards

There are yards in the business section that are a disgrace to a city of this size and a positive menace to the health of those who unfortunately have to work near them. The difficulty of deciding the ownership of these places is an obstacle to their improvement. They should be paved and drained, and until this is done it will be impossible to keep them in a sanitary condition. I would suggest that this question be taken up by the Board of Health with the City Council, with a view to ascertaining whether they could not assume control and effect this under local improvement.

In conclusion, I may say that the results achieved in every department of sanitary work show distinct progress, and, though my duties are arduous and often unpleasant, there is a satisfaction in knowing that one is surely though slowly attaining the goal aimed at. The public are gradually awakening to the fact that the work of the Health Department for the prevention of disease is not simply a fad, but one that is deserving of consideration and respect.

All of which is respecfully submitted.

CLAUDE A. G. SPENCE.

The daughter of an East Indian prince insisted on choosing her own husband, an indication that feminine independence is spreading, even in a country which in the memory of the present generation burned widows alive on the biers of their husbands.

MAKING AN ATTEMPT TO ENVELOP GERMANS

Clearing of Mazurian Lake District Would Permit a Slav Invasion of West Prussia, Where Kaiser's Strategic Railways May be Seized—Attacks on Russians Are Now Intermittent.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Mlawa is the objective of Russian forces that have advanced in Poland, and indications point to the beginning of an enveloping movement on the German armies posted along the Mazurian Lakes in East Prussia, the clearing of which theatre from enemy troops would greatly facilitate a forward advance into West Prussia, with its tremendous political effects. The strategy of the Russians in the eastern theatre of war still remains a puzzle to Berlin war critics. First it was believed to be Silesia that was most ardently desired by the Czar, and huge masses of Germans and Austrians were collected to relieve Cracow. The utmost these could do was to cause the Russians to fall back a few miles. If the Russians in their new drive seize some of the Prussian strategic railways anywhere, it will frustrate the plans of the German General Staff, which has apparently shot its best bolt in the person of Vn Hindenburg, who has not done much so far of any great importance on the result of the war.

The presence of German troops in the rear of the Russian army which is moving along the road from Plousk, 40 miles northwest of Warsaw, is reported here yesterday. But these are probably reconnaissance parties and appear only in small bodies.

Austrians and Germans are apparently being tired out in their attacks on the Russians in Central Poland and Galicia, for they are delivering only intermittent attacks. These indicate an exhaustion of the supply of fresh troops, and either signifies that their forces are being used up or that considerable numbers have been withdrawn for another move, probably to attack the Russian advances in the north and into Hungary. The enemy, however, may be concentrating for an assault intended to be overwhelming.

Fighting goes on in the mountains between Bukowina and Hungary with steady progress by the Russians.

Armchair critics who believed that the Russians would be content with defeating the Turkish invasion of the Caucasus and would stand on the defensive or divert their strength to Persia are not borne out by the latest announcement that the Russians have occupied Ardanutoch, 60 miles northwest of Kars, the scene of the famous defence by Gen. Williams, the Nova Scotian soldier, in the Crimean war. As an Anglo-Indian force is moving somewhere up the Tigris, on the Euphrates river, against Bagdad, the Russians may decide to hurry on their advance, join hands with their allies, cut the Turks in Persia off from the Turks in Syria, and menace Syria. Turkish rearguards retreated precipitately when attacked by the Cossacks.

The Austrian force in Transylvania, across the border from southernmost Bukowina, has retired from Valle Petni and Petzekanish, before the Russians, says a despatch from Bucharest to The Evening News.

The Russians crossed the border four days ago from Funol Moldowi to Czokaneschtie, and confronted the Austrians, who fell back rather than give battle at that point.

The actual entrance of Russian armies on the soil of Transylvania leaves the way open for an advance by two routes in eastern Hungary.

A Daily News despatch from Petrograd yesterday said:

"The Germans in Poland are beginning to realize that they are under the tragic compulsion of having to lay their hopes on the Austrians, who are protecting their right flank. Their two months' struggle towards the middle of the Vistula has brought them only enormous losses and has not prevented the Russians from steadily developing their advance in the Carpathians and Bukowina. Von Hindenburg is seeking to make virtue of the necessity and professes in Germany that he has successfully accomplished the first stage of his campaign and established himself in positions suitable for preparing a renewed effort. The exact contrary is the truth. His armies are in positions useless for them; really accidental positions where they have been halted from sheer exhaustion

TWO BELLEVILLE MEN ARRESTED

Police Found Booty in Their Homes

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 22. — William A. McMichael and William Wallace, 27 and 25, both married, were arrested early yesterday morning by the police, after they had made a search of the men's homes and secured considerable booty alleged to have been stolen during the night of Oct. 27 last, when two C. P. R. box cars were broken into and 77 pairs of boots, four packages of cream cheese and many tins of coffee, valued at upwards of $300, stolen. A German silver purse which was snatched from a woman on Saturday was found in McMichael's house. The accused were remanded to jail.

IS RELIEVED OF HIGH POSITION

Von Falkenhayn is no Longer War Minister

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—(Via London.)—The official Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung yesterday announces that Lt.-Gen. Erich von Falkenhayn, who is now chief of the German General Staff, has resigned his office as Minister of War. Emperor William on accepting Von Falkenhayn's resignation, appointed him a general of infantry.

Maj.-Gen. Wild von Hohenborn, according to the announcement, has been appointed to succeed Gen. von Falkenhayn as Minister of War.

The Emperor in relieving Lt.-Gen. Falkenhayn, at his own request, of the office of Minister of War, sent him the following order:

"I agree with your reasons regarding the appointment of a new War Minister and relieve you, according to your wish, from the office of Minister of State and War.

GEN. VON FALKENHAYN.

"My hearty acknowledgment of your excellent services in this important post I will express by leaving you in your office of chief of General Staff of the field army, and appointing you a general of infantry."

Maj.-Gen. von Hohenborn, the new War Minister, will remain for the present at main headquarters.

The retirement of Lt.-Gen. von Falkenhayn from the office of Minister of War, one of the dual functions of the Minister of the chief of staff with which he was entrusted after the withdrawal of Lt.-Gen. Count von Moltke, was occasioned by the fact that the work of the two posts was far too arduous for any one man.

Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, the heir to the Austrian throne, arrived in Berlin yesterday morning and left at noon for the German general army headquarters in the field, where he is to make a day's visit to Emperor William.

According to inspired statements published in the capital the visit of the Austrian heir is merely one of courtesy.

BATTLE FOR TRENCHES

Some Trenches Won From the Germans During the Past Week Have Been Recovered by the Enemy But Heaviest German Assaults Have all Been Repulsed, According to Paris Bulletin.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The battle for the trenches in Flanders and France continues almost without cessation from the sea to the Swiss border. In the mud of Flanders, the floods of the Aisne Valley and the snows of the Argonne and the Vosges, the soldiers of Germany and the allied nations keep up a continual fight to hold what they possess and take something from that held by the enemy.

According to a long official report of the fighting during the past two months, issued by the French War Staff yesterday, this method of siege operations has largely favored the allies, who, while they have gained ground on almost every part of the front, have been forced to give way in only one region—that of Soissons. They are being put to a test, however, similar to that which obliged them to retire from north of the Aisne, near Soissons, because the Germans, realizing the danger of their communications with Metz as a result of the French advance near Pont-a-Mousson, have sent reinforcements there and have begun a battle or the positions which they lost during the past week. The Germans apparently have regained a portion of them, and fighting for the remainder is now in progress.

Destruction of a big ammunition depot from which German forces operating near Rheims drew their supplies, was reported yesterday afternoon in the official despatches. According to unofficial reports the explosion of huge supplies of powder resulted in many deaths.

French aviators located the ammunition depot and furnished the range to the allies' gunners. The guns had scarcely been trained in its direction when a shell burst through the roof. A tremendous explosion shook the earth for miles around.

Before the depot was blown up, French artillery destroyed German field works in the same vicinity. Immediately following the explosion an infantry charge was ordered, the French taking several of the enemy's trenches.

The following official communication was issued by the French War Office last night:

"The enemy violently bombarded our positions to the north of Notre Dame de Lorette; then at 5 o'clock in the morning, began a new attack which was soon repulsed.

"In the Champagne region two small woods north of a farm at Beausejour were occupied by us. The enemy delivered an unsuccessful counter-attack.

"In the Argonne the Germans made a strong attack on a salient of our line in the neighborhood of St. Hubert. After a violent bombardment of our trenches they began the attack, but were repulsed by the fire of our infantry combined with artillery fire.

"Fighting continues in the region of Hartmann-Wellerkopf."

AIRMEN REPORTED ACTIVE AT ESSEN

Said to Have Penetrated the Home of Krupp Works

LONDON, Jan. 22.—British airmen have been busy in Belgium, and, according to a report from Holland, have also ventured as far as Essen, Rhenish Prussia, where they destroyed some buildings.

Holland has asked Germany for an explanation of the report that the German airships passed on their way to England over Dutch territory.

Essen is the home of the famous Krupp works, where the big guns and munitions of war for the German army and navy are manufactured. Fifty thousand men are employed in the various works. Essen is in the Prussian Rhine province, situated between the Ruhr and the Emscher, 30 miles northeast of Dusseldorf. It is only 40 miles from the border.

Accused Soldiers on Bail.

WELLAND, Jan. 22.—Corpl. Archie Kayo and Privates Kinsman and MacIntosh of the 44th Canadian Infantry, charged with manslaughter in connection with the shooting of Walter Smith, the American duck hunter, at Fort Erie, Dec. 28, were released from Welland Jail on $60,000 bail yesterday. Eight Welland merchants provided the surety. The men at once joined their company at Bridgeburg.

Fresh Shocks Felt.

AVEZZANO, Jan. 22. — (Via London.)—Slight earthquake shocks continue to be felt here. The disturbances are causing the walls which were cracked in the earthquake of last week to fall and the populace is in a state of terror.

Three persons, two women and a boy, were taken from the ruins of a fallen building yesterday. They were uninjured.

ROBBED WHILE THEY PRAYED

Pickpockets Make Presence Felt at Roman Catholic Church

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—When devout Roman Catholics rose from their knees in different city churches during the past few days a few found that their purses and chatelaines had disappeared. Detectives Cronin and Mitchell, who have been working on the case, and who made three arrests in connection with the thefts last night, state that although only two women have reported the loss of money, several other cases had occurred in the Roman Catholic churches.

Frank Kelly, 125 Lakeview avenue; Frank Barrett, 25 Euclid avenue, and John Smith, 629 Euclid avenue, were arrested and charged with the theft of purses belonging to Mrs. O'Connor, 558 Ontario street, and Mrs. Kate Harrison, 88 Pembroke street.

The police say that the three men, purporting to be Roman Catholics and acquainted with the services of the church, had little trouble in working unmolested.

German Count Arrested.

GENEVA, Jan. 22. — The newspaper Stampa, of Turin, Italy, announces that a British warship has arrested on board the liner Duc d'Aosta, from Genoa for New York, Count von Keller, a German officer of high rank, who had been sent to the United States on a secret mission. The newspaper adds that the count has been landed at Gibraltar.

Failed To Register With Police.

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Jan. 22.—Adolf Dietzell, who claims to be an American citizen and who has an American passport issued at Washington in August last was sentenced at the police court here yesterday to two months' imprisonment for failing to register with the police. Dietzell says he was born in Chicago, and that he is a resident of New York.

No Sympathy.

"Sir, your daughter has promised to become my wife."

"Well, don't come to me for sympathy; you might know something would happen to you, hanging around here five nights a week."—Houston Post.

A "SCRAP OF PAPER"

At ten minutes past seven in the evening of the fourth of August, 1914, within the four grim walls of the Berlin Foreign Office, there transpired a twenty-minute interview, the most dramatic of which history holds record. * "Will Britain," queried the German Chancellor, "fight just for a scrap of paper?" The British Ambassodar made terse reply, "That solemn compact simply has to be kept." For that "scrap of paper" was the public law of Europe guaranteeing the independence and neutrality of the Belgian nation. * Eighty-three years ago Britain had signed. And, whatever the consequences, the mightiest of empires was tossed into the melting-pot of a world-war. Belgium also had subscribed. Would she, too, risk all for honor? Her reply was sealed in blood on the ramparts of Liege; and, forthwith, Devastation laid waste her smiling fields and piled her cities in smoking ruins. An empire in arms, a country in ashes, a nation homeless—and all for a "scrap of paper!" * Magna Charta, too was but a "scrap of paper," but it was the earliest monument of Anglo-Saxon freedom. The Declaration was only a bit of parchment—but it heralded the birth of the American nation. Just such scraps of paper have marked the milestones in mankind's upward climb to freedom. * Mortgages, bonds, debentures, promissory notes—all are but scraps of paper. But no self-respecting man and no honest corporation can wantonly repudiate such commitments. * As it lies in your drawer or your safe, your life assurance policy measures but four inches by nine. It, too, is only a "scrap of paper." But the scrap of paper bears on its face the corporal seal of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada. It is backed by over Sixty Millions of Assets and nearly five decades of honorable dealing. In times like these it may easily spell the salvation of your business. Should you die, of all your scraps of paper it alone may be worth one hundred cents on the dollar. In years to come it alone may be left to buy bread for your mother, your wife, or your children. * That "scrap of paper" represents the most sacred of your obligations. Respect for it is the measure of your honor. * Keep it inviolate, whatever the cost!

Maj. James Hiscott, of St. Catharines, ex-M.P.P. for Lincoln, received numerous congratulation of friends on attaining his ninetieth birthday.

W. J. Baker, of the College Inn Cigar Store, Kingston, received word yesterday that he has been left $28,500 through the death of a relative in Quebec.

Capt. Robt. Bartlett, commander of the steamer Karluk, which carried the Stefansson Expedition to the Arctic, expressed the belief yesterday that the eight missing explorers of the expedition perished long ago.

Sister Margaret Dorin, for 41 years a faithful religious worker at the Hotel Dieu, died yesterday morning, after a lingering illness. For many years she had been mother superior at that institution, but of late years was mistress of novices.

The coroner's jury at St. Catharines investigating the death of Pte. Charles Vanduser of the 77th Regiment, on guard on the Welland Canal, who was found on the G. T. R. track on the morning of Jan. 14 yesterday afternoon returned a verdict of accidental death.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvellous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

CANADIANS FOR DUTY IN EGYPT

Three Regiments of Cavalry to go

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—Canadian cavalry regiments are going to Egypt. On very high authority it was learned yesterday that three of the mounted regiments now being raised in the west will be assigned to duty there along with regiments from Great Britain and Australia.

Col. Victor Williams, formerly adjutant-general, who is now with the Canadians at Salisbury Plain, is to command the brigade, which will comprise 1,700 men.

The mounted troops will go to England for a course of preliminary training with the second contingent.

Berlin Report Was False.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—An official denial of the reported German success near Notre Dame de Lorette was issued here yesterday.

The War Office states that the German attack at this point, which is northwest of Arras, was repulsed completely and that a company of Germans was captured.

The German official statement of Wednesday said that a trench 200 yards long was taken, but yesterday admitted these trenches were re-captured by the allies.

Smallpox in Vienna.

ROME, Jan. 22.—A despatch from Vienna says black smallpox is spreading alarmingly there.

Within a week, it is asserted, 151 fatalities have been reported.

It is impossible to successfully combat the epidemic because most of the city's physicians are at the front.

Valuable Hair.

In Bokhara, where the finest and most costly camelshair shawls are made, the camels are watched while the fine hair on the underpart of their bodies is growing. It is so carefully cut that not a hair is lost, and it is stored until enough has been accumulated to spin. The yarn made from the hair is of surpassing softness and is dyed all sorts of lovely colors.—London Answers.

MR. BOWSER IS DRAMATIC

He is Also a Trifle Literary

By M. QUAD

When Mr. Bowser comes home smiling, look out!

When he has a fatherly look on his face, beware!

When he isn't looking around on the floor for a stray pin to pick up and lecture Mrs. Bowser about, hold hard!

He was balmy as he ascended the steps the other evening.

He was complacent through the dinner.

He had a smile of triumph as he lighted his cigar, and at the same time took a dozen pages of typewritten matter from his pocket and began to look them over. It was two or three minutes before Mrs. Bowser's womanly curiosity forced her to ask:

"Is that an article you have written for the newspaper?"

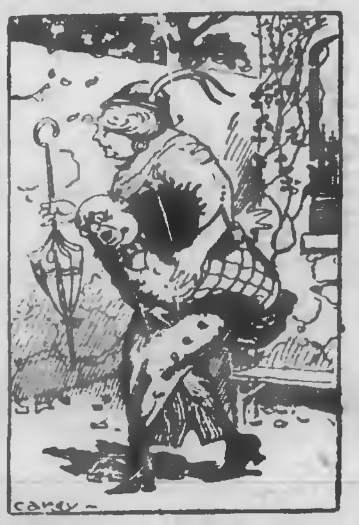
"Not exactly," he replied as his smile deepened.

"Perhaps it's a poem."

"Hardly."

"Is it a contract?"

"My dear woman," said Mr. Bowser in his most fatherly way as he turned to her, "I've got a little surprise for you. I wasn't going to spring it for several days yet, but as your curiosity has been aroused and as I may need your assistance I'll give the thing away now. You know, of course, that I belong to the Booth Dramatic and Literary club."



"CARRIES YOU OFF UNDER HER ARM."

"Yes."

"Well, we are to put on a play in about two weeks, and the proceeds are to go to the orphans."

"You don't say so!"

"Why don't I say so?" he demanded as the smile chased itself around to the back of his neck all of a sudden. "Is there anything strange in the Booth Dramatic and Literary club giving a play by amateurs?"

"But none of you are dramatic or literary," she protested. "You simply play billiards and poker and drink cocktails!"

Mr. Bowser rose up and looked down upon her with a look meant to squeeze the life out of her body under a pressure of 400 pounds to the square inch. He fully intended to annihilate her then and there, but he suddenly remembered that he wanted her assistance, and so he contented himself with saying:

"Perhaps you are not to blame for your ignorance, but please don't be malicious. We are to put on a play. The title is, 'Why Mr. Dobbins Didn't Get Married.' It may please you or displease you to know that I have been cast for the part of Dobbins."

"Is it really so?" queried Mrs. Bowser, with a puzzled look on her face.

"It is really so. Here is my part. I just got it this afternoon. I also have the part of the Widow Winkle, and I want you to read it and give me the cues. We shall have a rehearsal in four or five days. I haven't the slightest egotism about me, as you well know, but I am ready to declare that I expect to make a great hit as Dobbins. I have been told over and over again that I should have chosen the stage for a profession."

"But you never said anything to me about it."

"No? Well, several things have happened which I never said anything to you about, and this is one of them. Will you read the part of the widow?"

"Why, Mr. Bowser!" she exclaimed, after glancing over his part. "How can you ever play this character of Dobbins? Dobbins is down as a little sawed off man weighing about ninety pounds. That is to offset the widow, who is a large woman and weighs about 200."

"But I'm going to make up for the part, ain't I?" he queried, with a note of alarm in his voice.

"Can you saw your legs off to play this part? And, you see, Mr. Dobbins makes his entrance through a dumbwaiter. Just imagine you trying to squeeze yourself into a dumbwaiter! And after he makes his entrance the widow picks him up and dandles him on her knee. You'd look nice being dandled!"

Mr. Bowser grew as white as a bleached snowdrift, and there was a glint of pounded glass in his eyes, but he held on to himself and simply said:

"Go on, woman—go on!"

"Well, in the first act the widow demands that you sing a song. She stands you up on a table, and you sing. Mr. Bowser, even if you could turn yourself into a bandylegged little man, what about the singing? The house would either be convulsed with laughter or rise up and bombard you off the stage!"

"I understand. Anything else?"

"Let me see. In the second act you are brought onto the stage in a bandbox. You might possibly get one foot into a bandbox, but what about the rest of your body? The widow discovers you, and you are put into a cradle and rocked to sleep to the tune of 'Mary's Little Lamb.' I want to be there. I want to see you in the cradle!"

"Have you finished with your insults?" hoarsely inquired Mr. Bowser as every individual hair above his ears stood on end.

"Let me look. There seems to be another woman in the play, and she wants to marry you. While you are seated at the table in a high chair and the Widow Winkle has gone out to get you some bread and butter with sugar on it the villainess comes in through the woodshed and steals you and carries you off under her arm. Oh, Mr. Bowser, it would be too funny—too"—

For three minutes Mrs. Bowser laughed and cried by turns, but Mr. Bowser never made a gesture or opened his lips. He simply stared at her with a large and varied assortment of cold blooded murder in each eye. When she could control herself she took up the parts again and said:

"Haven't you noticed that after you have been stolen away the woman dresses you up as a girl to escape detection? You are supposed to be a dear, sweet little miss of twelve, who kneels down by her trundle bed every night and says, 'Now I lay me down to sleep.' I can see you in your nightdress, with your hands clasped and a heavenly look on your face. You'll make a great hit, Mr. Bowser, and you'll have hundreds of offers to play the part of Little Eva afterward. Well, let's go to work. I'll help you all I can."

"Woman!" gasped Mr. Bowser, after several efforts, during which his knees knocked together.

"Yes," gently replied Mrs. Bowser.

He wanted to go on, but he couldn't. There was a bone in his throat and sparks danced before his eyes. Apoplexy might have come in another minute but for Mrs. Bowser's action. She rose up and took him by the arm and led him to the lounge and aided him to stretch out. Then she put the camphor bottle to his nose and gently rubbed his forehead. In about ten minutes the threatened attack passed away, and he sat up with the intention of asserting his dignity and self respect and humbling her to the dust.

"You have ridiculed me! You have insulted me!" he thickly exclaimed, but she seized the arm with which he was gesturing and pressed it down, patted him on the head in a wifely way and as he sank back on the lounge and closed his eyes and groaned in despair she said:

"Poor Mr. Bowser! There is no doubt he was born for an actor, but the part of little Dobbins is not for him, not for him! Some other time, but not this time!"

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 21.—Wheat prices opened 1¼c to 1½c higher, oats ½c, and flax ½c higher. In the first half hour of business new records in wheat were established. May sold at $1.43¼ and July at $1.44. May oats were sold at 61½c and May flax was $1.71¼ bid. Later values eased off on considerable profit-taking, the sharp advance of the last two days being around 5c.

The early advance was caused by firmer Liverpool cables, spot wheat there being 1d higher, and by heavy export trade in the south. While local export houses are not actually doing business, the outlook was much improved today, a fair enquiry being reported. There was little interest in cash business, offerings were not heavy and buyers were hanging off and not inclined to trade at the moment. The total inspections Wednesday were 129 cars, as against 87 cars last year, and in sight today were 210 cars.

Wheat futures closed ½c lower to ⅝c higher; cash closed ½c to ½c higher for contract grades. Oats was ⅝c higher and flax 1½c to 1¾c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—There was no improvement in the demand for Manitoba spring wheat from overseas buyers today and the few bids that did come forward were 1s 6d per quarter below what exporters asked, consequently no new business was reported. In sympathy with the strength in the Winnipeg market for oats a stronger feeling prevailed here today and prices were advanced 1-2c to 1c per bushel with a fair local trade done. Demand for other lines of coarse grains is quiet. The local and country trade in flour is fair but the demand for export account is quiet. The tone of the market is firm and prices are unchanged. Demand for mill feed continues good. The butter market is unchanged, cheese quiet and eggs fairly active and firm.

CATTLE MARKETS

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

HORSE RACES MAY BE TABOOED BY MILLBROOK FAIR DIRECTORS

At the annual meeting of Millbrook Agricultural Society Mr. A. J. Henderson was elected President in place of Mr. A. T. Armstrong who retired. The statement of finances for the past year was very satisfactory. The feeling is to do away with the speeding in the ring features, as it has been abused by horsemen who frame up a contest too often to secure the stakes. The date of the fall fair was set for September 30th and Oct. 1st. Field Crop Competition in oats will again be set by the Society. Department judges in heavy and light horses, poultry and ladies' work were again authorized.

METHODISTS WON FROM ANGLICANS

Junior Church League Game Was Fast — Score 5-1

In a very fast and exciting Junior Church League game at the rink last evening, Charlotte Street defeated All Saints by 5-1. The score at half time was 3-0. Both teams played good hockey and combination was quite prevalent. Soden and English were the strongest men for Charlotte Street while "Phil" Taylor was best for All Saints. The little rover opened the eyes of the spectators last evening by his stick handling and back checking and if he keeps on improving he will surely be a wonder. Gollop at centre for the losing team also played good hockey. The teams:—

Charlotte Street—Goal, Austin; defence, English and McWilliams; rover, Sherret; centre, Soden; wings, Thompson and Williams.

All Saints—Goal, Ketchpole; defence, Lebar and Fanning; rover, Taylor; centre, Gallop; wings, Campbell and Field.

MEN OF THIS STAMP ARE HARD TO FIND IN HOCKEY CIRCLES

Calgary Herald:—A Calgary hockey player, a man who played senior hockey last year and was regarded as a strong factor in a strong team, is this year playing with an aggregation in the Intermediate League. He has not deserted his club, but has, on finding that he was not likely to make the senior team, thrown in his lot with just as much enthusiasm with the Intermediates and is doing great work. This spirit might well be copied by players of all organizations. Failing to make the senior team, after having been a regular last season, he did not back out of the game or seek to sign with some one else, but simply got down to work and played with the second team. This is the kind of thing which goes to make real teams.

TEAMS SHOULD GO AT FAST CLIP

The ice is very keen and with Lou Marsh on the job as referee the fans can rest assured that they will see sixty minutes of the best class of hockey when the Petes meet Oshawa tonight. The puck will be faced at 8.30 sharp.

TWENTY-SEVEN GOALS SCORED AT PORT HOPE

The local juniors were defeated in Port Hope last night in what is reported to have been a listless game. The crowd must have had a busy time counting the goals, as the Port Hopers beat the local netman for seventeen tallies, while the enemy's citadel was attacked successfully on ten occasions.

VICTORIAS WON, 7-5.

Victorias defeated Riversides in a senior O. H. A. game last night by 7-5. Denison and Crane played for the losers and Frank Heffernan for the winners.

WINNERS SCORED ALL THE COUNTERS

St. John's, Murray St. and St. Andrew's Failed to Register in the Senior Church League

Another Senior Church League night and three more real fast games. Those who withstood the cold and watched the six teams battle last evening at the ice box had very little to regret for the three conflicts were of the extra fast calibre. Since the opening of the league a few weeks ago, the attendance has been increasing regularly and it is rather pleasing to note that the standard of hockey is likewise becoming better. Referee "Ack" Hunter keeps the players giving the best they have, and so far there has been absolutely no signs of rough work. The officers of the league have made it clear to the various teams that anything like ungentlemanly conduct will not be tolerated. The warning has not fallen on heedless ears. Providing such clean and clever hockey the league cannot help but become even more popular.

All the games last evening were shut outs. In the eight to nine o'clock game St. John's won from St. Paul's by 4-0; the game following, St. Luke's carried away a 5-0 victory over Murray Street and in the final attraction St. Andrews fell before the charges of George Street Methodists by 6-0. It is rather a singular occurrence for three games to be played the same evening and the three scores to be 4-0, 5-0, and 6-0. Although one team in each game did not secure a counter the losing septettes put up strenuous arguments. The win for St. Luke's over Murray Street makes the total of three victories for the "Eastside Gang." Thus for Sid Gibbs' team has not met defeat.

No Score in First Half.

For the first half of the opening game the pace was away above average. All the players seemed determined to win in the first ten minutes. Both teams were back-checking well, and the defence men standing up to the onslaught of the opposing forwards with the courage of Horatius and his pals. Flowers and Hall, the two goalers, had their eyes on the rubber continually and both saved their team mates on more than one occasion. St. John's pressed hard toward the latter part of the half but were unable to tally. The gong for the close of the period found neither side with a goal.

After the rest, St. John's resumed their attack and their forwards began playing more combination. Kerr and Turner, the St. Paul defence, were unable to stop the combined rushes and in the course of twenty minutes St. John's had beat Hall four times. Stevenson, Heard, Frost and Pammett figured in the scoring. The advance men of St. Paul's tried hard to secure a counter but to no avail. Flowers connected with everything.

For the winners all the forwards and netman Walter Flowers were about the most prominent while "Donnie" Loucks, Turner and Kerr played best hockey for the Presbyterians.

The teams:—

St. Johns		St. Pauls
Fowler	goal	Hall
Lebar	r. def.	Turner
Clarke	l. def.	Kerr
Stevenson	rover	Loucks
Heard	centre	Breckenridge
Frost	r. wing	Raynor
Pammett	l. wing	Davidson

Third Victory.

St. Lukes annexed their third victory of the season when they took a 5-0 fall out of Murray Street. It was easily the best game of the evening and although the score was a trifle one-sided, the play was hard and fast. At half time the score was 3-0. The credit of the victory goes to every man on the East City Church roster—every man, from Manager Sid Gibbs to the kid with the sticks. They have that "get-together" spirit and that is what wins games. The spirit was visible on the ice and in the dressing rooms.

George Butcher in goal for the winning team had what the boys call a "big night." He stopped many of shots that were labelled "goals." Hagerman and Regan on defence were also much in the limelight, the former rushing very well. Alec Butcher at centre was the most prominent of the forwards with Carter, Phillips and Stewart all giving him a run for the honors. Butcher is a real centre man and his work resulted in most of the goals. For Murray Street, Brown, Eastwood, and Fitzgerald were the best but the remainder of the team was by no means weak.

The teams:—

St. Lukes.		Murray St
G. Butcher	goal	Lewis
Hagerman	r. def.	Eastwood
Regan	l. def.	Brown
Carter	rover	Fitzgerald
A. Butcher	centre	Routley
Phillips	r. wing	Lapp
Stewart	l. wing	Webb

All in First Half.

The latter part of the last game was better by far than the first half. George Street stepped on the ice and before St. Andrews could get started the Methodists had a total of six goals. After the rest the Scotch clan hit their stride and gave Darling's team a merry old run for the last twenty minutes. Despite their efforts the score at full time was the same as at half, 6-0.

For George Street the work of Palmer, Wade and Lowes was brilliant. All contributed nice rushes and checked well. Darling in goal also went well although the work of Hamilton the St. Andrew net guardian, in the last half was more spectacular. Sharpe, Brown and Henry on the forward line for the losers hit a fast clip during the last half and had they gone so strong the first twenty minutes the score would certainly have been different. Swanson on the defence also deserves mention.

The teams:—

George St.		St. Andrews.
Darling	goal	Hamilton
Wade	r. def.	McWilliams
Lowes	l. def.	Swanson
Palmer	rover	Sharpe
Stewart	centre	Brown
Darling	r. wing	Lang
Tully	l. wing	Henry

The New Cry.

"The king is dead, long live the king!"

But I have noticed recently
How fast time goes, my dear.

" 'Twas only yester-night that I
Sang here a melody
And some one in the neighborhood
Shied many things at me.

"A bootjack came, an overshoe,
A nickel clock at last.
I never realized before
That time could fly so fast!"
—Yonkers Statesman.

Amplified Personality.

"What is the idea of using the pronoun 'we' so often in your articles?"

"Well," replied the contributing editor, "it's a matter of self protection. In case anybody takes offense I want to sound as much as possible like a crowd."—Washington Star.

TEN ADVANCES MADE.

German Offensive Broken and Defensive Will Soon Be Broken.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—There was given out yesterday afternoon an official statement under the caption of "The War From Nov. 15 to Jan. 15."

After a detailed survey of operations, the report concludes:

"We got ten general advances on the part of our troops which were distinctly perceptible at certain places, as compared to 20 general withdrawals on the part of the enemy, always with the exception of the situation to the northeast of Soissons. This is a comparison of the last two months. To complete it, it should be added that: First, the German offensive in Poland has been restrained for a month past; second, the Russian offensive continues in Galicia and in the Carpathian Mountains; the Turkish army in the Caucasus has been in large measure annihilated; fourth, Germany has exhausted her resources in officers (an average of twelve officers to a regiment), and will not in the future be able to develop her resources in effective men except at the expense of the existing units; fifth, the armies of the allies, on the contrary, are finding it possible to strengthen themselves further to a measurable degree.

"It can consequently be affirmed that to obtain final victory it is sufficient that France and her allies know how to wait for it and at the same time prepare for it with inexhaustible patience.

"The German offensive has been broken; the German defensive will be broken in its turn."

Ex-Khedive Wounded.

GENEVA, Jan. 22. — Ex-Khedive Abbas Hilmi of Egypt, according to Vienna despatches, is going to Berne to consult a specialist regarding a bullet wound in the jaw received, it is stated, in a recent attempt on his life at Constantinople. The despatches say that the wound has not healed and that this makes it impossible for him to head the army with which it is planned to invade Egypt at the present time.

Peach Diseases Disappear.

Prof. Caesar, of the O. A. C., Guelph, has called attention to a steady decrease in little peach and yellows and such pests. Last year only three thousand trees were taken out, while in 1910 sixty thousand were destroyed.

Social and Personal

Mrs. C. B. McAllister of New Westminster, B. C., is in the city for a few days the guest of Mrs. J. J. McBain.

Mrs. F. Burdett and Miss Jean Malloch who have been visiting Mrs. F. B. Hutchinson, 334 Rubidge St., returned to their home in Hamilton this morning.

Presentation Made in Smith

A pleasant feature of the annual business meeting of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church, held on Wednesday evening, January 17th, was the presentation to Miss Mabel Paul of a very appreciative address accompanied by a handsome sunburst of pearls. Miss Paul has been for a number of years the efficient organist of the chruch, and the presentation was the expression of hearty appreciation of this service by the membership. After the reading of the address by Mrs. James A. Young, and the presentation by Miss Sadie Mann, the recipient expressed her pleasure in so serving the church, in a few well-chosen words, and thanked her friends for their kind words and beautiful gift.

Rev. R. J. McLaren spoke a few words of appreciation of the splendid services of Miss Paul.

The address was as follows:

Miss Mabel Paul:

There is an old and somewhat trite saying that we never know the worth of a thing until we lose it. Perhaps with the passing of years we are growing wiser. At any rate, we have realized the splendid worth of your services as organist of our church, for the past number of years, and it is this growing realization of your worth that has led us to wish to express our appreciation in some tangible way, however slight.

Luther has said: "Music is one of the most magnificent and delightful presents that God has given us." Yet it is a present and a gift that demands service and adoration from those who receive it. We realize that many times it has not been easy for you to be present at the many services and to fill the many demands made on your time, but your willingness to play for us and your regular attendance has been appreciated by every member of the church. May you long be spared to play for us the beautiful hymns of prayer and praise which are but an echo of the music which will come to us when we have passed beyond "unto the shining tablelands to which our God Himself is moon and sun."

We ask you to accept this brooch as a slight expression of our appreciation of your services as organist of Gilmour Memorial Church.

Signed on behalf of the church.

R. J. McLaren, pastor; J. A. McGregor, secretary-treasurer; T. H. Graham, F. Scott, T. R. Mann, Deacons.

LIEUT. SNEATH HAS RESIGNED

Millbrook Has Been Made Centre for Recruiting

Innoculation of recruits is still going on at the armouries but will probably be completed by tomorrow night. After this all who have never been vaccinated must submit to the operation.

Lieut. Col. Johnston said today that Millbrook had been made a recruiting centre for mounted rifles.

Lieut. Sneath one of the officers of the mounted rifles has sent in his resignation owing to a recent medical operation which will render him unfit for service for a considerable time.

The 8th Mounted Rifles as a regiment is nearing the complete number of men required.

Proceeds of $134.25.

The proceeds from the afternoon tea at the Oriental tea room in aid of the Red Cross Society amounted to $134.25.

The committee desire to thank the management of the Oriental Hotel for the use of the tea room, the ladies of Bridgenorth for 21 pounds of butter, Mr. Conway of Grafton's for loan of flags, and Jas. Bell, grocer, for sugar. Also to thank all others who in any way contributed to the success of the undertaking.

Never Again.

When your very last nickel is spent,
my lad,
And the very last present is bought,
And you've mortgaged your soul and your overcoat,
And your mind is overwrought,
It then is the time of the glad New Year
And the bill collector and other things drear,
And you promise yourself, with a smile and a grin:
"I'll never get caught this way again."

ENVOY BREWER BROWN

arrives in the city on Friday to commence a month's campaign of soul-saving effort. Arrangements are under way by which the Envoy will do special services at some of the places immediately adjoining the city, as well as at the Temple Corps. Being one of the greatest illustrations of the power of religion, first in the individual life, then the demonstration of it in the home and the condition now existing, as a result, he is able to speak of that that he knows is actual experience, which counts, of course. The Envoy will give special addresses on the Saturday evening, as well as all day Sunday. Further announcement with respect to the campaign will be made later.

Dr. Sutton will deliver a lecture to the men of the Ambulance Class at the Temple on Friday night. All the men are urgnetly requested to be on hand.

Local News in General

Funeral Held Today.

The funeral of the late Mrs. William Tucker of Douro was held this afternoon, interment at Warsaw cemetery.

Over five million cups of Salada tea are consumed every day. This is proof positive of the public appreciation of quality.

Bonds Were Accepted.

Edgar Grose was liberated yesterday afternoon from the county jail. The two sureties of $2500 from Dr. Johnston and C. R. Nixon for the $5000 bail were accepted by Crown Attorney Hatton.

The Outfall Sewer.

City Engineer Parsons stated today that the past week has been the most successful one since the work of constructing the outfall sewer was begun. In all sixty-four feet of pipe were laid. At present there are twenty-five men engaged on the work.

The annual general meeting of the Peterborough Auto Association will be held on Monday, Jan. 25, at 8 p.m. in the Bank of Montreal chambers, for election of officers and other general business.

S. J. KEYES,
Sec'y.

Tea Was Successful.

The Tipperary Tea given by the Canadian Kitchener League last evening at the Y.M.C.A. was a grand success. Every feature was carried out in real typical style. The league realized around thirty dollars which will be spent in yarn, etc., for clothing for the soldiers. The second contingent has received two different boxes already from this league as well as the overseas men.

Annual Concert.

The Annual Concert of the Conservatory Orchestra will be held in the Grand Opera House on Monday evening, February 8th, under the auspices of the Women's War Fund Committee. Proceeds in aid of the Belgian Relief Fund. Soloist, Frank Oldsfield, baritone; Leo Smith, cellist; Lena D. Adamson, violinist; Ada Richardson, soprano; Jeanette Killmaster, pianist, and the Conservatory Orchestra. Admission, 50 cents.

VOTE OF THANKS ACCORDED THE RETIRING OFFICERS

REPORT OF SANITARY INSPECTOR

Made 3850 Calls and Inspections During the Year

In his annual report to Dr. McPherson, Medical Officer of Health, C. A. G. Spence, sanitary inspector, says:

Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in submitting my third annual report for your consideration, containing a brief resume of the work accomplished during the past year. The following table will show at a glance how part of my time has been expended:

Calls and Inspections	3,850
Calls and inspections (by F. Miller)	300
Visits to dairy farms	105
Visits to slaughter houses	45
Notices issued	222
Complaints investigated	186
Samples of milk tested	184
Licenses granted after inspection since April 15th
Restaurants	27
Laundries	12
Milk vendors	42
Scavengers	9

In addition to the foregoing figures a great proportion of my time has been occupied in superintending the garbage collecting system, the working of the incinerator, and other details of sanitary work. I received valuable assistance in the spring from Mr. Miller, who inspected the yards in East City, but the increased labors attached to his other offices curtailed this assistance later and at the present time he has as much work in his own departments as he can cope with.

Milk Supply.

The following particulars relating to the milk supply of the city may be interesting. The daily average quantity of milk sold in Peterborough by the 55 licensed vendors is about 4,500 quarts. Thirty-nine of these vendors procure their milk from 60 farms in the surrounding country, the remainder being persons who keep one or two cows and sell milk to their neighbors.

The quality of the milk is good both as to fat percentage and cleanliness, the average test for the 184 samples being 3.59 per cent. fat, a slight increase over last year's record, and well above the standard required by the bylaw, namely 3 per cent.

The highest individual average is 4.3, and the lowest 3.05; highest individual test, 5.3; lowest, 2.8. Eleven vendors show an average test of between 3 and 3.5, twenty-four between 3.5 and 4, and four above 4 per cent.

A greater number of dairy farm visits than last year have been made and many improvements effected. Two new dairy barns and several milk houses have been erected as a direct result of these inspections. The water that the cows drink and which the cans and utensils are washed in has been tested, and every effort has been made to secure the citizens wholesome, clean milk from the time it leaves the cow's udder until it enters the consumer's door.

Slaughter House Regulations.

The slaughter houses have been periodically visited, and on the whole conditions are as satisfactory as could be expected under present circumstances. The regulations of the Provincial Board of Health, however, passed two months ago and now in force, will compel the city council in the near future to take up again the question of a public abbatoir for this reason—there is not a slaughter house in the district that can comply with the rules. The enforcement of these regulations simply means that the slaughter houses now in use will have to be closed.

The owners are, I believe, unanimous in their desire to see an abbatoir erected; in fact, they have frankly admitted to me their inability to meet the requirements from a financial standpoint alone.

Complaints

There have been 186 complaints received and investigated, as against 122 in 1913. Of this number, 25 had reference to outside closets, 18 to food products, 14 to noxious odors, 18 to stables, 15 to defective plumbing, 13 to premises being left in dirty condition, 11 to nuisances from fowls and 7 to water supply. Thirty of the total number were either exaggerated or unjustified.

Licensing of Laundries and Eating-Houses

As you are aware, bylaws were passed which came into effect on April 15, 1914, providing for the licensing of laundries and eating-houses. These licenses are not issued until the applications are favorably reported upon by me after inspection of the premises, and the result has been a radical change, especially in the Chinese laundries, all of which had to be remodelled or altered before the licenses were granted.

Market

New market regulations relating to the selling of fowl by weight and the displaying of the names and addresses of the vendors came into force on

Mrs. F. C. Neal, is the New President of Local Council of Women

Favorable reports by the various committees and affiliated societies marked the second annual meeting of the local Council of Women held yesterday afternoon in the assembly hall of the Public Library. The attendance was fairly large and great interest was manifested in all the branches of the work particularly that of the Red Cross Society, War Fund Committee and the Health Association. Mrs. J. C. Davidson, president of the Council occupied the chair and opened the meeting.

After the President's address the secretaries of the following organizations presented their reports:—Women's Missionary Society of Murray Street Baptist Church, Daughters of the Empire, St. John's Girls' Auxiliary, Protestant Home, Northend Reading Circle, Southend Reading Circle, St. John's Women's Auxiliary, Women Teachers' Guild, Ladies' Aid of Murray Street Baptist Church, W.C.T.U., Y.L.M.B. of Charlotte Street Methodist Church, Sanctuary Guild of St. John's Church, W. M. S. of George St. Methodist Church, Art Study Club, Women's Auxiliary of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, St. John's C.W.A., Y.M.C.A. Mother's Club, Peterborough Chapter of the Ontario Nurses' Association, Morning Musical Society, St. Luke's Women's Auxiliary, Lady Sunday School Teachers' Association. Reports were also received from the conveners of the committee on the Suppression of Objectionable Printed Matter, Citizenship Committee, Art Committee, Supervised Playgrounds Committee, Press Committee, Social and Moral Reform Committee and Health Committee.

After the adoption of the reports the following officers were elected for the coming year:—

Pres.—Mrs. (Dr.) F. C. Neal.

Vice-Pres. — Mrs. (Dr.) W. D. Scott, Mrs. Kendry and Miss A. Staples.

Corresponding Sec. — Mrs. (Dr.) Mann.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. W. R. Morris.

Treasurer—Mrs. (Dr.) Sutton.

Auditor—Mr. H. W. Morphet.

When the new president took her place in the chair the following resolution was carried unanimously by a standing vote:—

"That this council place on record its appreciation of the services rendered to the council since our organization by the retiring officers. The President, Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, and Treasurer in particular have given a great deal of time and thought and much of our success is owing to the faithful and efficient services of the President. And that a hearty vote of thanks be tendered to them."

Mrs. Neal then took occasion to thank the members of the council for the honors they bestowed upon her and hoped that with the hearty co-operation of the conveners the new officers would be able to continue the good work.

The representatives of the Peterborough Branch of the Ontario Nurses' Association exhibited lantern slides of their summer camp for the children and showed the changes on some of their patients due to proper care and treatment. The pictures and explanations were very thoroughly enjoyed and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speakers.

The report of the treasurer was as follows:—

Something Entirely New in Eyeglass Mountings

No more poor lenses and very few weak eyes, if you use the NEW TAIT NO-SCREW MOUNT. These mounts are attached to the lenses without the use of screws or rivets and thereby do away with the need of drilling a hole in the lenses which of course weakens the lenses.

Also the mounts never work loose like the old style. These mounts are manufactured at the Tait Optical Co.'s Hamilton factory and are sold here exclusively by Tait Optical Co. See sample in window.

A fine showing!

The reader will please remember, when considering matters of this kind, that the province of Quebec has to contend with a very rigorous climate, wild physical features, and a population scattered over an area twice the size of Ontario, whose environment is vastly superior to that of Quebec. Again, let me say: Do not forget that we are on the defensive, not offensive.

OBITUARY

FLORENCE MOULE.

Florence Moule, thirteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moule, corner of Lock and Lansdowne Streets, succumbed last night from a weak heart which it is thought followed an attack of diphtheria that she experienced about one month ago. She was a bright and likeable young girl and had many friends who regret very keenly her untimely death. She attended St. John's Anglican Church.

The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery.

View From Mount Rigi.

The mountain of the Rigi, in Switzerland, commands a panorama of 400 miles in circumference, which includes the lovely lake of Lucerne, and is unsurpassed for beauty. The Rigi was known to only a few travelers in the eighteenth century, but after the peace of 1815 it became a resort for the curious, the first dwelling having been erected in 1814. Now many hotels are in a flourishing condition, and it is popular even in winter. There is a little chapel, with its walls covered with votive tablets, for many have been the victims in the ice gorges of this lofty peak.

ALLIES HOLD ALL THEIR POSITIONS

Infantry Fighting in Alsace Continues Without Interruption

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 23. — The official statement this afternoon says the Allies hold all their positions so far as reported. Infantry fighting in Alsace continues without interruption. The German attack near St. Hubert has not yet reached a decision.

A German attack northwest of Beausejour was repulsed.

French artillery fire on the Meuse compelled the evacuation of an ammunition depot and damaged foot bridges near St. Mihiel.

Elsewhere artillery exchanges have occurred.

REMAIN IN PORT.

LONDON, Jan. 23 — The case of the British steamer Durward sunk by a submarine continues to occupy British public attention, and the feeling that this is the beginning of submarine activity directed against British commerce is reflected in orders sent to two British steamers at the Hook of Holland not to sail until further orders.

GERMAN SUPPLY SHIP IS SUNK

The Officers and Men are Prisoners of Australians

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 23. — A Melbourne despatch to Reuter says on January sixth Australian cruisers captured and sank a supply ship acting as an auxiliary to German cruisers. The officers and men are prisoners.

SOME IMPROVEMENTS NEEDED AT ISOLATION HOSPITAL

Matron Makes Annual Re- to Board of Health — Hospital Was Open 286 Days

From the report of the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital, which is appended, it will be seen that the management kept well within their appropriation during 1914, and will likely have a balance after all accounts have been paid, of approximately $300.

The appropriations for 1914 were $5200.00.

There is a balance of $1323.23 on hand, but out of this, $921.00 of accounts rendered have to be paid.

What estimates will be brought down for 1915 are unknown, as the Board of Health propose to visit the hospital on Monday at two o'clock for the purpose of seeing what repairs and improvements will have to be provided for this year.

The hospital was open and patients undergoing treatment during 286 days of the year. It was closed for lack of patients 79 days, as follows: March, 11 days; May, 10 days; June, 2 days; July, 31 days; August, 25 days.

1913 — Closed 31 days. (Entered for comparative purposes.)

The scarlet fever wards were open 142 days, and diphtheria wards 274 days. No scarlet fever patients were treated from May 5 to Nov. 24.

1913. — Scarlet fever wards open 239 days. Diphtheria, 229 (for comparison).

The residence of various patients was as follows:

1914

	From City	Other Municipalities	Total
Diph.	37	10	47
Scarlet	9	0	9

1913

	From City	Other Municipalities	Total
Diph.	7	4	11
Scarlet	13	2	15
Measles	42	1	44
Mumps	1	0	1

The number of adults and children treated was as follows:

1914—Adults, 15; children, 41. Total, 56.

1913—Adults, 24; children, 47. Total, 71.

Successful Cases.

Out of the 56 cases treated, 51 were discharged as cured. Two cases of diphtheria proved fatal.

Toronto, Jan. 23. — The Ontario Gazette gives notice that March first will be the last day for presenting petitions for private bills to the Legislature and Monday, March eighth, the last day for introducing private bills.

IN LA BASSEE ONCE AGAIN

Town Was Won After Furious Fighting, it is Reported

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Jan. 23.—The Matin's correspondent at St. Omer says that after furious fighting between La Bassee and Festhubert, Wednesday afternoon, there was an important advance of the Allies' forces, and it is now reported La Bassee is in possession of the allies.

SAY AIRSHIP WAS LOST IN THE SEA

One of the Kaiser's Zeppelins May Have Met Its Doom

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 23.—Fishermen arriving at Noordwijk today assert that according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Leyden, they saw an airship founder in the North Sea Friday night.. The fishermen who were unable to assist the air craft. The description of the vessel, given by the men indicates it was a Zeppelin.

The Great Lakes Protective Association, in annual session yesterday, decided not to increase its share of insurance risk upon vessels owned by members of the association, unless future developments made such action necessary.

NO CHANGE RECOMMENDED IN CITY SERVANTS' SALARIES

Ald. Green Opines Officials of Engineering Department are the Busiest in the Province --- Ald. McIntyre Says Outfall Sewer is Only "Drain Work" And That the Department is Costing Too Much

The meeting of the Finance Committee yesterday afternoon was called for the purpose of considering the possibility of cutting down the salaries of city officials, and the appointing of a committee to go through the list of officials and ascertain if some could not be dispensed with. After discussion, which lasted over two hours, the meeting commenced eulogising the present staff of city officials, and as the members went over the list they decided that no change be made. To be sure, no increases were recommended, yet it seemed the desire of some of the aldermen to add a little to some of the salaries, if the condition of the money market warranted such action.

Ald. Stratton, the new chairman of the Finance Committee, explained why the meeting was called, and remarked that a question of a similar nature was brought up last year. At that time, considerable discussion was given to the advisability of having a male assistant for City Clerk Armstrong. The chairman admonished the members of the committee to go into the matter carefully, and to assist them he had prepared a list of the officials, giving their present salaries, and their salaries previous to the last increase. The following was the list:

Date of Increase.	Present Salary.	Previous Salary.
S. R. Armstrong, Feb. 17, 1913, City Clerk and two Assistants	$2,550.00	$2,250.00

Ald. Green claimed that the firemen, members of the police department, or the assessor, could not have their salaries decreased without the city committing a breach of faith. Ald. Stratton remarked that the Finance Committee has not the power to cut salaries; it could only make recommendations to that effect.

Although none of the other aldermen had made mention of the men under the board of works, Ald. Green, chairman of that committee, voiced his opinions regarding the engineering department. He said the men in the city engineer's office were the busiest officials in the province. T. A. S. Hay, assistant city engineer, is very ill, while Engineer Hilliard has volunteered for active service.

It is only probable that some changes will be made before a great while, but at present he would not feel like making any recommendation along that line.

In Ald. Green's mind, very few realized the amount of work being done in the engineer's office. During the past few years the work has become three times as heavy, and if this work is to be done in a manner that can be handed down to coming officials, men of knowledge must execute it. The speaker stated that he knew that many persons were pointing to the engineering staff as a place where more economical methods could be used, but one who was on the inside and knew the work being done, was of a different opinion. The work, in his estimation, is worth far more than the cost.

Ald. McIntyre questioned Ald. Green's remarks about the work tripling itself. When he was in the Council a few years ago the same work was being done. The present outfall sewer was only drain work. The last remark did not take well with Ald. Green, who said: "Now, I know you think differently."

The north ward representative came back with the open assertion that he thought the engineering department was costing too much, and the matter of what should be done should be dealt with by persons more qualified than the aldermen. He referred again to the work on the outfall sewer, but the chairman reminded him that they had called the meeting to discuss salaries, not the construction of sewers.

Mayor Buller had taken absolutely no part in the discussion, but at this point he arose to speak. He seconded the feelings of Ald. Green in connection with the engineering department and briefly reviewed the changes made a few years ago. He stated that he has all confidence in City Engineer Parsons, and remarked how his reputation hinged on the outcome of the outfall sewer. If it was a success, he had achieved success. If it is a failure, his reputation would be ruined.

His Worship thought the gossip on the street was directed at the board of works, but he had been chairman of that body and he knew.

Ald. McIntyre stated that he understood City Engineer Parsons had no diploma. The mayor answered that he didn't care whether he had or not, so long as he could fill the bill.

When the praises for the engineering department had ceased, the matter of appointing a male assistant for City Clerk Armstrong was brought up. During the past year the city clerk attended 252 meetings, which the aldermen thought was too of the 17th Regiment, St. Joseph de Levis, Que. Captain Bilodeau was among the number of officers of the first contingent who returned to Canada to join the second contingent. He was born in St. Joseph de Levis in 1887, and has been married since 1911.

CAPTAIN THEODORE BILODEAU

PTE. KENNEDY IS WOUNDED

Is One of Eleven Men From Princess Patricias

OTTAWA, Jan. 23.—The third casualty list of Princess Patricias shows Lc.-Corpl. H. C. Bellinger, Ottawa, killed and Pte. E. Draycott, England, wounded.

A London despatch says:

It is reported that the Princess Patricia's Regiment has been in action four times since it was first under fire.

The following list of eleven wounded men of the regiment is furnished by an officer:

Sergt. Franks, Corpl. Abrams, Privates Jenkin, Elliott, Hammer, Kennedy, Downey, Draycott, White, Ross, Nelson.

Sergt. A. Franks, enlisted in Toronto, next of kin, Sadie Hayward, 208 Clinton street.

Corpl. Abrams, enlisted in Toronto. Next of kin is Edith Abrams, of Fairbank, Ont.

Pte. Downey, enlisted in Toronto. Mrs. Downey, his wife, lived at 205 Parliament street, but has recently moved.

Pte. Jenkins—The name given in the official list is Jenkin, who enlisted in Calgary. His nearest relative lives in England.

Pte. Elliott—Two Elliotts are given in the list, Andrew from Edmonton and John from Moose Jaw.

Pte. A. Hammer was from Detroit.

Pte. W. Draycott enlisted at Ottawa. His nearest of kin is in Liverpool.

Pte. White — There are three Whites in the official list: Thomas of Edmonton, George of Montreal, and Samuel of Moose Jaw.

Pte. Ross—There are two of this name, both of whom, Donald and Allister Cameron, enlisted in Toronto. The nearest of kin of both reside in Britain.

Pte. Adam Kennedy, enlisted in Toronto, next of kin given, Ida Howe, Havelock, Ont.

Pte. Nelson—There are two Nelsons in the regiment: Harry of Swansea and William Watson of Edmonton.

License Board Re-appointed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Jan. 23.—The following license commissioners have been appointed for Peterborough West: Matthew A. Morrison, Jas. Kendry, Richard Sheehy.

The Board meets tonight to deal with the application to transfer the license at the White House.

A carload of liquor was seized in a special raid of the provincial license authorities in Welland Thursday. Fifty-two charges were laid. The action followed suspicions that the soldiers guarding the canal were getting too much liquor.

British Air Raid on Bruges Will be Followed up

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 23. — The German aeroplane raid on Dunkirk resulted in considerable loss of life and damage to property. One account says that ten aeroplanes took part. British aeroplanes assumed the defensive and succeeded in bringing down one of the visitors.

This method of defence is regarded by English experts as more likely to prove effective than anti-aircraft guns with which the defences of Dunkirk bristle.

It is believed here that the British raid on Bruges will be followed up by other attacks, as the Bruges docks are at the head of the Zeebrugge ship canal system which the Germans are using for transportation of men, munitions and even heavy artillery.

Air raids are not the only indication of renewed activity. Germans are massing troops in the neighborhood of La Bassee, evidently in preparation for a new struggle between Ypres and Courtria, and the Allies are further strengthening their forces all along the lines in Northern France and in Flanders.

For the past 24 hours it has been give and take, each side admitting minor reverses, offset by minor successes.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 23. — A British airman today dropped bombs on important Bruges docks, according to news which has reached here. The result of the attack is not yet known. The aviator escaped unhurt, although he was attacked by the Germans.

RAILWAY SEEKS TIME EXTENSION

Would Have Branch Line to Peterborough

His Worship Mayor Buller received notice today from G. S. Wilson, assistant secretary of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, to the effect that application has been made by the Toronto Eastern Railway Co. to the Dominion Government for an extension on the time given for the construction of their road as stated in the charter received some time ago. The Toronto Eastern Railway Co., it will be remembered, proposed constructing an electric line from Toronto to Port Hope, and a branch line to Peterborough. The fact that application was made for an extension of time practically means that work will be begun as soon as the present depression is over.

Board of Arbitrators.

As Hon. Wallace Nesbitt of Toronto, the arbitrator for the Peterborough Light and Power Co. has a very important case in Toronto on Monday, the Board of Arbitrators which will decide the price the city is to pay for the expropriated property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. will not begin their session till Tuesday morning at ten o'clock.

A despatch from Berlin says that Prince Joachim, the youngest son of Emperor William, has sufficiently recovered from his recent attack of dysentry and influenza to permit his going to Baden-Baden for a rest.

King George's son is to "fag" for the seniors at Eton, boiling their eggs in the morning. Evidently the king business is becoming so uncertain that fond fathers wish to teach their sons useful occupations.

STURDEE'S STRATEGY.

THE DETAILS of the great naval battle off the Falkland Islands have at last been made public. The British arrived at these Islands first, and began coaling, having one ship, the Canopus, doing scout duty. This ship sighted the Germans, and reported to Admiral Sturdee, who sent only two ships out, the Glasgow and Kent. The Germans, seeing these, thought they constituted the whole British force, and at once engaged them furiously. The powerful dreadnoughts Inflexible, and Invincible, Sturdee's flagship, later came out, and the Germans tried to flee. Not having the necessary speed, they were forced to give battle, with the result that four first-class German battleships sank beneath the waves. Those sunk were the Scharnhorst, Leipzig, Nurnberg, and Gneisenau, only the Dresden escaping in a damaged condition. The victory is one of the most important in the war, and is due very largely to Sturdee's strategy. Had all the British ships appeared, the Germans would have made off, and possibly all would have escaped. They were very cleverly drawn into battle and completely defeated.

THE "RIGHTS" OF MINORITIES.

THAT THE FRENCH of Quebec are adopting a policy of brute force in an endeavour to force French into Ontario public schools and thereby supplant the English language, seems evident from the tactics adopted. Influential French-Canadian newspapers have been destructive in their criticism, not constructive. They harp on natural rights, rights of minorities, and refuse to go into the question of the legality of their claims. Commenting on the editorial declaration of La Patrie, which was considered a day or so ago in the Review, the Toronto News says:

> "Under the Ontario regulations, it is provided that for the first two years of school, children shall be taught in their mother tongue, but that the teaching of English shall begin in the first form and continue as a school subject for the two years. In that time, under ordinary circumstances, the children will know English as well as French, and the subsequent teaching will be conducted in English, so as to perfect the pupils' knowledge of that tongue. At the same time, one hour a day shall be devoted to teaching French as a subject, so that the child—already able to speak the language—will perfect his knowledge of grammar and composition.
> "Now, suppose that the proposal made by La Patrie were adopted, and that in any school district where French-speaking children were in the majority, the whole school work were conducted in the French tongue. What would become of the minority? Sir Lomer Gouin tells us roundly that respect for minorities is one of the bases of British liberty. How is the English boy in a French milieu to obtain an education? He would not be attending a bi-lingual school, but a uni-lingual one. He would be unable to make any progress and his parents would be compelled to send him away from home or else move to another district. That is exactly what happened in scores of instances in the eastern counties of Ontario. No attention was paid to the needs of the minority, of which Quebec is so fond, and the carelessness shown by French teachers, French trustees and French clergy for the interests of the English-speaking boys was notorious. It was the subject of constant complaints to the department and to the Government.
> "The Province cannot accept any proposal which would be so reactionary as to permit French to be the sole language of communication. The suggestion that a hardship is inflicted by sending an English-speaking inspector to a bi-lingual school is a mere pretence. The custom has ruled for many years without any objection whatsoever."

THE GLOBE GIVES LABOUR A BANG.

THE GLOBE is the typical "mad hatter." It sees no danger in the rapidly expanding Chinese commerce, which it describes. It says: "A consul has warned the American Republic that an underwear mill in Hong Kong sells one-half its entire product to New York City; that steel rails are being produced in a Chinese modern steel mill with labour that commands only thirty cents a day . . ."

The Globe thinks that this is fine. It congratulates China on showering blessings on the world. It does not deny, it does not refer to the effect it will have on American labour. What does it care for Labour, so long as goods are plentiful and cheap? That is the Globe's idea of administration.

A DESPATCH says the Khedive of Egypt has a bullet in his jaw. That's a funny place to have a bullet.

FUTILITY.

NEWSPAPERS in the United States condemn the German aerial raid on unfortified British towns. Among these journals are the New York Evening Post, New York Sun, Boston Transcript, and Pittsburg Sun. The Post says:

> "The world will wait with interest for an official justification from Berlin of the German air raid upon non-combatants in undefended English towns. In truth, it cannot be justified. It has no warrant in international law. It is against both the spirit and the letter of The Hague conventions. No military necessity can be pleaded for it. It is a bit of pure savagery in warfare. What shall it profit Germany to terrify a few sleeping villages in England, if thereby she gets the repute throughout all nations of being willing to violate the rules of war and of making a mockery of her own professions of humanity?"

GERMANY'S FOOD SUPPLY.

WHILE some authorities say that Germany has plenty of food, there is some contradictory evidence. Dr. Ballod, a week or two before the war broke out, published the following warning:

> "It is a terrible self-deception to make out that the German people can get along eleven months of the year with the grain they raise. The importation of breadstuffs has decreased, but the total importations of grain and other food products has increased enormously. In 1911-13 we imported in round figures ten million tons of grain and feed, and in addition 900 million marks' worth of cattle, meat, fat, herrings, butter, cheese, and eggs."

This authority says that Germany has been importing fully one-third of the breadstuffs which her people consume. These figures may be correct, and yet Germany may be able to live on the supplies she has, with what she herself produces. Under the stres of war, it is surprising what a nation can do. It should also be remembered that Germany has two large and important ports on the Baltic that have been doing a tremendous business since the war broke out, and large supplies are getting into Germany via the Baltic. Whether these are sufficient or not ought to be manifest after a few months more of war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE King George Hotel Company, Newmarket, says the Orillia Packet, which began business five years ago when local option was carried and the licensed hotels threatened to close up, has declared a dividend for the past year of 8 per cent., after leaving $300 in the treasury and paying $450 out of current revenue for furniture and equipment. The experience of Newmarket, Coldwater and Midland proves that hotelkeeping, without the adjunct of the licensed bar, can be made pay, and that without charging exorbitant or unreasonable prices.

ALTHOUGH the 1914-15 wheat crop of Australia is only about 25,000,000 bushels against the record harvest of 103,000,000 bushels last season that continent is looking forward to a large yield the coming year. The Victorian Minister of Agriculture believes that with State aid 4,000,000 acres of wheat will be grown next year in that State, and that the yield will be about 50,000,000 bushels, an excess of 17,000,000 bushels over the record.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that a British warship has arrested on board the liner Duc D'Aosta from Genoa for New York, Count Von Keller, German officer of high rank, who had been sent to the United States on a secret mission. Now, will the count be able to keep his secret?

THE ORILLIA PACKET complains of too many encores given at a concert there, and favours the rule, "no encores." The wail from Orillia should be heeded in Peterborough, as people can get too much of a good thing, Shakespeare to the contrary.

The Prussian Excuse.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

As was predicted, the German official statement would have the people of Germany and the world believe that their aerial raid upon the English coast Tuesday night was against "fortified" places. Yarmouth, King's Lynn, Cromer and the other places visited—like Scarborough and Whitby, the victims of the recent naval raid—were no more "fortified" places than are Ottawa and Brockville. Indeed, it would be more correct to call Ottawa a fortified place, because there are in Nepean Park a few cannon, though only for saluting purposes, and General Sam Hughes makes this his headquarters.

There are no forts or useful guns at Yarmouth or the other towns, and the only sign of war about them is, as in Ottawa, the presence of a few men in military uniforms. The mere fact that the German "airships" were not fired upon when hovering over the English terrain emphasizes this.

The German aerial attack was simply a mad effort to indulge in indiscriminate slaughter of innocent civilians to provide joyful food for home consumption; and the excuse is but a sample of the Prussian policy adopted and carefully carried out by German militarism ever since a war of conquest was decided upon some years ago.

Keep Up Business at Home.

(Brantford Expositor.)

Parliament is to be asked to vote $100,000,000 to enable Canada to continue to play her part in the great war for the balance of the year. That's all right; make it double the amount, if necessary. But why not a few millions to enable us to carry on "business as usual" at home? Why halt important and needed public works at a time when employment is so scarce that men are forced to bury their pride and cry for charity? Why not some assistance for the manufacturer and farmer who are hampered, by lack of capital, from carrying on "business as usual," much less expanding?

WHAT NATIVE OF TIPPERARY HAS TO SAY OF THE SONG

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—Your correspondent in last night's Review, signing himself "The Bells of Shandon," says I am not an Irishman. In reply, I beg to say that I do not claim to be an Irishman; I am a Canadian of Irish parentage, and am proud of the fact, but I am not one of those who caricature the land of my fathers as the person signing himself "The Bells of Shandon" is doing, and I think the less we have of these "Tipperary Teas" and the singing of that doggerel, "It's a long, long way to Tipperary," the better it will be for our soldier boys and the unity of our people; and at the risk of trespassing somewhat on your valuable space, I will quote the opinion of a true Irishman and a native of Tipperary, on this "new song."

"When first I read the account of of the soldiers in the trenches around Lille singing, 'It's a long, long way to Tipperary,' I must admit that a touch of pathos blurred the page. Since then the tune has become almost universal, as friend and foe, beyond seas, have caught the strain, and voice and instrument in parlor and on battlefield, here as well as there, pronounce the air that ears, now deaf forever, heard for the last time in the dreadful melee that makes red graves of one-time green Europe.

"Hailing from Tipperary, for as a child my lungs were filled with the clear winds that play around the brow of the lordly Benduff Mountain, I was interested in the 'new song.' Often has memory come laden with the pastoral scenes of my native place, exceptionally rich in views of beauty and grace, as it is interesting in legend, proud in its traditions, and glorious in its history, from the viewpoint of intellectuality as well as patriotism.'

"I am proudly conscious of the character of Tipperary in everything which makes life estimable, as it is marked with well-worn pathways through its sweeping meadows, telling the faith of the crowds that cut across the fields to mass, as its sacred shrines declare a devotion not of yesterday, but which makes sacred ancient days.

"With a throbbing heart, I sent to the publishers for 'It's a long, long way to Tipperary,' and on its reception, indignation could burn its silly page.

"It tells of the stupidity of the Irishman, and it flaunts the inconstancy of the Irish woman. Could anything recede closer to hell in its diabolism? It is a far cry and a long way to Tipperary that the legions of Sarsfield admired as they gazed on it from the heights of Slievenamon, from the land that gave and loved, and now laps the dust of Charles Kickham, from the home of William Smith O'Brien, the lion-hearted; from the Tipperary which fathered the hero, whose deathless name still thrills mentality and patriotism wherever existing — the uniquely glorious Emmett."

And now, since Ireland at last has reached the status of a nation within the Empire by the Royal signature of King George—God bless him—to her Home Rule Bill, we can sing of the man from Tipperary in the verse of the immortal Davis:

"Send him to fight for native land,
His is no courage, cold and wary;
The troops live not that could withstand
The headlong charge of Tipperary."

Respectfully yours,

J. W. FITZGERALD.

are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. To-day they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to

CUPID'S AUXILLARY

I do not mind the strangely timid maid
Who glances up, then quickly hurries by,
Nor yet the one who seems to look me through
With critical and disapproving eye.

I don't complain, although the summer girl
To whom I pledged my true love by the sea
At last departs with sighs or even tears,
But never sends a postcard back to me.

These I abide, yet always pray that fate
May spare me from that one most bitter pill—
The teasing girl who comes and fools around
Because she wants to show she's sore with Bill.

—Puck.

Warned.

It was an amateur performance of "The Pirates of Penzance." The policemen's chorus having been encored twice, a third encore was demanded. This was the cause of some misunderstanding behind the scenes, and after a delay one solitary man in blue faced the footlights. In vain he waited for his companions, even beckoning them in his despair, but his individual efforts were not to meet with appreciation, for a voice from the gods shouted, "Hi, man, you're off your beat!"—Argonaut.

A Woman's Plea.

Say I'm getting old and I'll
Try to keep from being tearful;
Bravely I will try to smile
And pretend that I am cheerful;
Say my hair is turning gray,
Say I'm old—it will not matter—
Say my youth is gone, but pray
Do not say I'm getting fatter.

AN ODD GROUP

By GRANT WHEELER

Alan Chandler just before the breaking out of the revolution in Russia some years ago went to St. Petersburg—now Petrograd—on business. He had studied before going the Russian language under a Russian instructor and could converse fairly well in that tongue. On the train between the border and St. Petersburg he fell in with a young Russian who on hearing that he was an American chatted with him agreeably, expressing much interest in the great American republic.

"Where are you going to stop in St. Petersburg?" asked the young Russian, who gave his name as Peter Alexandrovich.

"I suppose I shall go to a hotel until I can find apartments," Alan replied.

"I have rooms in the house of an old lady who is very motherly and is always attentive to her lodgers' wants. I dare she say she may have some vacant rooms."

Alan jumped at this chance of getting settled, for he disliked hotels and was glad to avoid them even temporarily. He went to the lodging house and waited in a reception room while Alexandrovich interviewed the landlady. Then he and the landlady rejoined him, and the latter said that there were no rooms vacant at the time, but an occupant was soon to go away. If meanwhile the American would accept a couple of rooms of Alexandrovich's suit that he did not need he would be welcome to them.

The landlady, Mme. Groutsky, was indeed a motherly woman. Her face was especially benevolent; her hair was white; her features bore the stamp of suffering. It seemed to Chandler when he looked at her that he was gazing upon one of the Christian martyrs who had lived nineteen centuries before. He had only a few hours' acquaintance with Alexandrovich, too short to warrant his trusting the man, but was so drawn to Mme. Groutsky that he resolved to accept the offer for the sake of effecting an entrance to the old lady's house.

There was but one other roomer in the house besides the American and Alexandrovich—Stanislaus, a Pole. He was seldom there, but when he was there he and Alexandrovich were several times observed by Alan to have their heads together. Stanislaus was the person who was expected to vacate his rooms. But day after day passed and he showed no sign of doing so.

Meanwhile Alan was taken ill. He was so carefully nursed by Mme. Groutsky that when he recovered he would not leave her on any account, although there was something mysterious about Alexandrovich that excited his distrust. Alan could not discover that he had any occupation. He would be absent sometimes for days, and when he returned instead of mentioning his absence or any incident connected with it he never referred to it.

One day when Alan returned from the transaction of certain business he had on hand he found Mme. Groutsky talking with a handsomely dressed young lady. The girl looked up at Alan with a pair of eyes which, as long as they were fixed upon him, held him spellbound. What it was in their dark depths to make him feel that for their possessor he would jump off the brink of a cliff he did not know, and yet he saw her only a few moments while passing through a room to the staircase leading to the second floor.

Not a person Chandler met under this roof but impressed him. They were all different, but were all linked together by some mystery. The landlady seemed to be the guiding spirit. At least, Alan could not but notice that they all seemed to look up to her with reverence. Though the gentlest among them, she appeared to be the strongest.

The girl who had fixed those wondrous eyes on Chandler never came to the house again. He was minded to ask the landlady who she was, but somehow he felt that there was a barrier between him and the others in the house that he was forbidden to pass.

One day when he was walking on the street a police officer tapped him on the shoulder and directed him to go with him. The policeman took him to a police station, where sat an officer at a desk. Pulling out a drawer, he took therefrom a little leathern case and, opening it, began to look from it to Chandler and vice versa. Presently he handed the article to Chandler, asking:

"Is that your passport?"

Chandler, thunderstruck, said he believed that it was.

"You Americans are very incautious," said the officer.

"What do you mean?"

"I will show you if you will come with me."

He led the way to a sleigh standing at the door and motioned Chandler to enter it. Then they were driven out of the city to a road along which in the distance a crowd were seen slowly approaching. When they reached the sleigh Chandler saw that they were prisoners marching to Siberia.

His eyes rested on Stanislaus, then on Alexandrovich, then on Mme. Groutsky. Lastly his gaze met that of the girl with the wondrous eyes.

"They have been plotting to assassinate the czar," said Alan's guide. "Luckily we had evidence that you were not one of them or you would now be with them. What they wanted of you was your passport."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

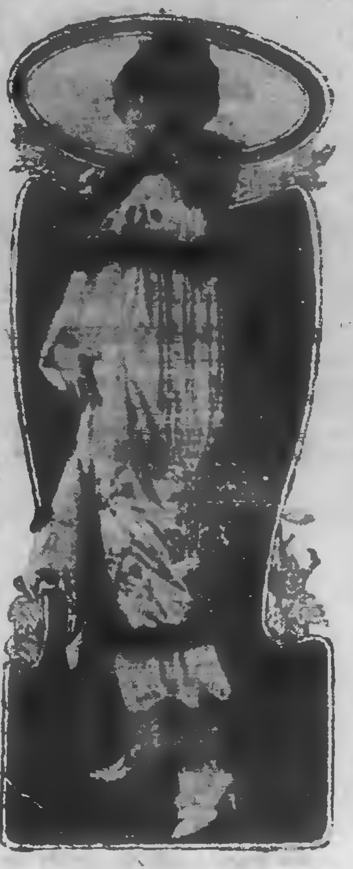
Colds.

The people who boast that they never pay any attention to a cold are foolish. Sometimes an apparently trifling cold develops into a serious disease. Guard as much as possible against taking cold, and if you get a cold do not neglect it. It may not be a serious matter, perhaps, yet on the other hand it may be the start of a serious disease. If you have a cold that does not yield promptly to home treatment give the doctor a chance to do you good.

A Frenchman has invented a cartridge with no flash, no [illegible], no recoil and no noise. Now all he has to do is to [illegible] of the bullet and pistols they go out of fashion.

EVENING WRAP.

Stately Garment to Slip on Over the Evening Costume.



BROCADE EVENING WRAP.

This stunning new evening wrap is of brocaded satin with deep gathered insert of gold lace from shoulder to hips. The standing collar is trimmed with bands of skunk.

Girl's Silk Hat.

There is a hat similar to a man's silk hat designed for little girls. It is trimmed with a tiny stickup and is chic for the morning or afternoon promenade. For small girls there is a fascinating hat something on the order of a garden bonnet. It is trimmed with roses and has streamers at the back. A small girl's winter coat has raglan sleeves. These coats will cover the frock and button tight to the throat.

New Black Lingerie.

Black lingerie is a new thing. It is made of chiffon and lace, like the daintiest of pink and white lingerie, and it is quite as elaborate as its colored predecessors. Sometimes, too, black lace is used in flesh pink chiffon.

All sorts of negligee garments are made in black chiffon and lace, usually chantilly. And they are not mourning garments either, but simply in line with the new black lingerie.

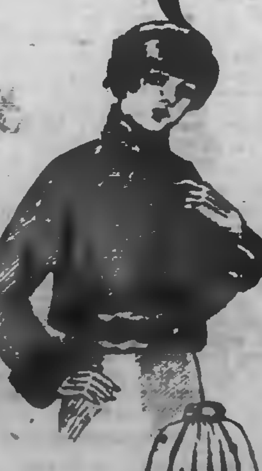
A MOTHER'S ANXIETY

Most mothers are anxious when their little ones are teething, for at this time the baby's stomach gets disordered and there is a grave danger of convulsions. This anxiety can be lessened, however, if the mother keeps a supply of Baby's Own Tablets in the house and gives an occasional dose to her teething baby. The Tablets are the very best medicine in the world during the teething time. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach, promote healthful sleep and make teething painless. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Smart Winter Wrap.

Tunics and draperies have brought the demand for short coats to be worn therewith. Here is one of the newest and prettiest. The extra back is loose to give a cape effect. The sleeves are in raglan style.

In the picture the material is hunter's green zibeline, with trimming of black fur. The model is a good one for lightweight chiffon velvet, however, and for almost all the fashionable suitings.



RAGLAN COAT.

For the medium size the coat will require three and three-quarter yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with two and three-eighth yards of fur banding.

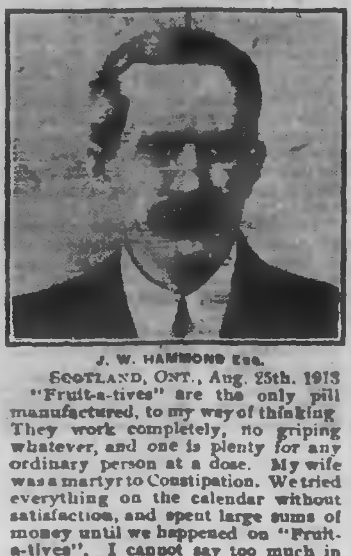
"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Young And Old In Splendid Health



J. W. HAMMOND Esq.

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th. 1913

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

J. W. HAMMOND.

Those who have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives" are proud and happy to tell a sick or ailing friend about these wonderful tablets made from fruit juices.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WHY POPCORN POPS.

Why popcorn pops is not fully understood. Formerly it was supposed that the popping resulted from the expansion of oil in the kernel on being heated, but more probably it is due to the expansion of moisture contained in the starch cells. The moisture expands when heated with sufficient force to cause an explosion of the cells, and the kernel turns completely inside out, enveloping the embryo and hull. Probably the expansion of the air within the seed coat also plays some part in the process.

GRAVESTONE LUNCHEONS.

One of the Curious Sights of New York's Financial District.

In old Trinity churchyard, where Robert Fulton and Alexander Hamilton lie buried, dozens of girls can be seen through the pickets of the bronze fences every day enjoying their noonday lunches amid the tombs of the old time New Yorkers. All about are high skyscraping office buildings. The elevated trains clatter and bang overhead, and on Broadway the trolley's gongs add tumult to the roar of the city. Within the old churchyard all is peace and quiet. It is here that the girls from these big office buildings come of a noontime to eat their lunch, "far from the madding crowd," yet within a hand's reach of the bustle of Broadway.

It was only a few years ago that some girl, a typewriter in a nearby office building, chanced to let her eyes fall over the gravestones of old Trinity. They did not bring thoughts of ghosts to her mind—they only made her think that it would be lovely if she could eat her lunch among such peaceful scenes. The next day she and a girl friend brought their lunches. They entered the churchyard and, seeking a secluded spot behind the old church, sat down on an old tomb and began to eat their sandwiches. Nobody objected. The next day they came again. Other girls, emerging from stuffy restaurants, saw them and resolved to imitate them. The next day there were half a dozen there, and nowadays, when the noon hour is bright and sunny, the number has increased to sometimes seventy-five.—New York Cor. Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Pointers For Housewives

Olive Oil In Cookery.

In the making of dark cakes, such as fruit, spice cake or gingerbread, and in puddings olive oil can be used instead of butter. In making cakes the olive oil and sugar are stirred to a cream as is the case when butter is used and the other ingredients added in the ordinary way.

For greasing baking tins or pudding dishes olive oil can be more economically used than butter, as the small amount needed can be poured from the bottle directly into the dish and then applied with a bit of tissue paper. Crust is not so liable to burn as when butter is used, and the flavor of the crust is much more delicious than when lard is adopted for this purpose.

Oiling the crust of bread or rolls just before taking from the oven gives an additional richness both of color and taste.

Substitute For Lard.

Pork trimmings will serve as a substitute for lard in frying. These can be obtained from your butcher. The economy lies not so much in the price paid, for, of course, there is more oil in lard than in the same quantity of meat, but the food fried in it does not absorb so much fat, and in that way waste is eliminated. Then, too, the flavor is greatly improved. The "trimmings" give the food the flavor of ham without the disagreeable, fatty taste which so often accompanies food cooked in lard. Potatoes fried in it can be eaten with pleasure, and breads and other fried foods usually avoided can be enjoyed when prepared with bacon or pork trimmings.

That Underdone Joint.

If a joint of meat should be too underdone to eat and several slices have been carved out it can be cooked again and served up as a fresh joint if the hole is filled up with mashed potatoes and cooked in a brisk oven for an hour. The browned potatoes will be much appreciated, and that it is the second time of sending it to table will not be noticed.

When Serving Baked Potatoes.

A baked potato, sweet or white, should be broken open as soon as it is done or it becomes a bit soggy. Both have more flavor when warmed over than boiled potatoes, but the steam should always be let out of them while they are hot.

Some people grumble because the road to success isn't paved.

Bottled Soda Water

A Cold Weather Delight

You drink Cold Water in winter. Why not Cold Soda Water?

Every member of your family needs soda water in winter even more than in summer, because the blood grows sluggish and the system becomes clogged with impurities because of lack of out-door exercise.

Liberal draughts of our delightful bottled beverages flush out the system, tone up the nerves, and digestion, and gives both health and happiness — especially to the children. Try a case. You will repeat the experiment. Be sure you get Knox's.

Don't Throw Away Goodwill!

A well-known expert and advertising man, and one who is the head of a large mercantile business, recently made the following statement in regard to the temptation to discontinue advertising:

¶ "Probably more money is wasted in advertising by running consistently in a publication for a long time, and then suddenly dropping it, than in any other way.

¶ "It amounts to deliberately throwing away the goodwill which the readers of that publication have built up for the advertisers' name and product.

¶ "It is better to advertise moderately, but regularly, than to use large copy spasmodically."

The Voice of Successful Experience

Another well-known expert declares that persistent advertising pays, because:

¶ "Advertising is friendly. It persuades.

¶ "Slowly, but inevitably, it creates the attitude of goodwill and confidence.

¶ "It brings customers—who stay.

¶ "A business built up in this way is built on a firm foundation. It's the kind of success that lasts.

¶ "But it cannot be done in a day—or a month. Nothing but persistent advertising will accomplish this sort of success."

A Bit of Advice

It might be well for you, Mr. Merchant—Manufacturer—or whatever your calling—to take the advice of these experts—the experience of every successful business man, and use the columns of The Review moderately and consistently.

Salisbury Dance Off.

LONDON, Jan. 23. — The dance which was to have been given last night by officers of the Canadian contingent to residents of the Salisbury neighborhood, has been cancelled at the request of the local health authorities, owing to fear of the meningitis outbreak spreading. This is purely a precautionary measure. The epidemic is now stated to be well in hand.

Austrian Minister at Front.

FOE GIVES UP HOPE OF ADVANCING ON WARSAW

Despatch Received at Rome Says the Offensive on the Bzura-Rawka Front Has Been Definitely Repulsed by the Russians.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Gen. von Hindenburg's army before Warsaw is erecting defensive works in its present position across the Bzura. It is believed that the Germans realize that the Austrians have failed in their attempt to advance in southern Poland, and that the Germans' right flank will be exposed to danger similar to that which threatens from the Russian army which has advanced past Plock, north of the Vistula.

A despatch from Rome says: The German offensive on Bzura-Rawka line, before Warsaw, has been definitely repulsed, says a despatch to Messagero. German armored automobiles which made an attack on the Russian left wing on the Rawka were destroyed after a sharp action.

The two Russian armies in the north, in the Mazurian Lake region, and in north Poland, are both operating on the offensive, and it is believed that they are aiming at the complete occupation of East Prussia. It is pointed out by the military critic of The Novo Russky that the occupation of this region to a line running through Soldau and Allenstein would considerably shorten the Russian line, which is now spread over a long front.

In the north the new Russian offensive apparently has carried them well toward the German frontier without meeting with any serious resistance.

The developments in this northern region are considered by military observers as likely to be faster than elsewhere, for the Russian advance into Transylvania is reported to have been checked by the appearance of a large Austrian force in the mountains, while the snow prevents the Muscovites from going any farther through the Carpathians, although they hold all the passes in readiness for the day when the weather will permit of a resumption of the forward movement.

Although the Carpathians are now snow and frost bound under the most rigorous period of winter and operations on both sides have consequently slackened the steady sealing up of Hungary from the north, south, and east, and it becomes daily a more urgent problem for Germany's ally.

No mention has been made during the last few days concerning the fate of the remnants of the Turkish armies which the Russian reports previously said had been defeated in the Caucasus, but it is considered by military men here that the Russians, having use for their men elsewhere, have decided not to push on to Erzerum.

The Russian fleet, according to reports, is still busy in the Black Sea sinking sailing ships. This is taken here as evidence that the reports that the Turkish cruiser Goeben had been put out of action were not exaggerated.

SUPERIOR IN NUMBER AND ALSO ARTILLERY

Allies Have an Advantage and German Attacks Are Repulsed.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The winter campaign continues, with both sides attempting to slay as many of each other as possible without being able to make an appreciable advance. In this business of slaughter the allies appear to excel, for earlier deficiencies in artillery have been supplied by the French and British, and this arm will be a growing factor in the war. The improvement of and increase in the number of big guns have had the effect of appreciably reducing the losses on the part of the allies to about a quarter of those experienced in the first campaign in respect to the numbers engaged, and the soldiers have also become inured to trench fighting and take care of themselves better.

Fighting yesterday was fiercest at four or five points. In some cases the attacks were rebuffed, while in others they were still proceeding.

Increased activity of the Germans is reported at several points. The French got the range of a German battery in the wood of St. Marde and put it out of action.

The Argonne was still in the area of heavy fighting. An assault on a field work called Marie Therese near Fontaine Madame. The enemy was repulsed in two vigorous counter attacks, but fighting went on throughout the day. It became extremely furious, but the French still held their positions at nightfall.

The Germans also made night attacks on the French lines at the Hartman-Weilerkopf hills, but these did not succeed. The contest did not cease with nightfall the next day.

The French still remain silent concerning their operations in Alsace, but unofficial communications report them as having drawn closer to the Rhine north of Muhlhausen. As is usually the case silence is maintained about the most important feature of the campaign.

Last night's report from the French War Office was:

"To the south of Apres (Ypres?) the enemy has been more active than previously. Last night there was some rifle and cannon firing.

"In the region of the wood of St. Marde we silenced a German battery.

"In the Argonne some very fierce attacks have taken place near Fontaine Madame at a field work called Marie Therese, and to the south of Containe Jamiette. At Fontaine Madame we repulsed the enemy after two vigorous counter-attacks. At the Marie Therese work the fighting went on throughout the day. It was conducted with extreme energy by both sides. When night came we were holding all our positions.

"Some night attacks attempted by the enemy in the region of the Hartmann-Weilerkopf hills did not succeed. According to the latest reports the fighting was still going on there."

The afternoon bulletin said:

"In Belgium the enemy yesterday bombarded Nieuport with a fair degree of violence. Our infantry made some slight progress to the east of the Lombaertzyde Highway. Between Ypres and the Oise successful operations on the part of our artillery against fieldworks, batteries and detachments of infantry of the enemy, took place yesterday.

"From the Oise to the Argonne: The situation in the vicinity of Soissons shows no change. Near Berry-au-Bac a trench which we were compelled to evacuate following a violent bombardment, was recaptured by us. In the region of Perthes the enemy delivered an attack during the night of Jan. 20-21, at a point northwest of Beausejour, but without success.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle: To the southeast of St. Mihiel, in the forest of Apremont, an exceedingly violent bombardment made it impossible for us to remain in the German trenches, occupied by us yesterday for a distance of 150 yards.

"To the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, in the forest of Le Pretre, the enemy yesterday recaptured a portion of the trenches taken by us Jan. 20, but we are maintaining ourselves at all other points of this position.

"In the Vosges the enemy hurled against St. Die six projectiles of great calibre, without, however, doing any serious damage.

"At a point between Mount Bonhomme and Mount Schlucht there has been an artillery engagement, in which the German batteries were reduced to silence.

"In Alsace the infantry fighting in the region of Hartmann and Weilerkopf is going on with great ferocity. The struggle is actually hand-to-hand.

"In front of Dannemarie our artillery dispersed gatherings of the enemy."

ZEPPELINS CAME NOT

No Confirmation for Reported Presence of Aircraft

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Inquiry in official quarters here has failed to elicit any further news concerning the reported passage over Cromer of Zeppelin airships Thursday night. The belief is beginning to prevail here that the noise heard at Cromer might have come from aeroplanes or seaplanes and not airships.

A telephone message from King's Lynn, Norfolk, says no aircraft was seen there Thursday night, but that there was much excitement when the report was received from Cromer that Zeppelins had flown over that town. Telephone inquiries in other towns in Norfolk County were equally unproductive of information verifying the Cromer report.

The London police received no warning to call out special constables or to take any other emergency measures as a result of the report.

Italy Makes Another Demand.

ROME, Jan. 23.—Italy has taken a fresh step in connection with the Hodieda incident which is more decisive and energetic than the former demand for an apology, says The Couriere d'Italia.

In consequence of the refusal of the Vali of Saana to obey, the orders of the Porte, Italy has demanded that Vali be dismissed.

Botha Has Stopped German Advance Over Orange River

LONDON, Jan. 23. — A statement by the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, issued last night by the official press bureau, reviews recent operations to repel the attempted German invasion. The statement concludes:

"The line of the Orange river is now entirely in our possession, and the enemy's advance into our territory near the eastern border of German Southwest Africa has been checked."

Roumania To Start Next Month.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 23—The newspaper Retch announced yesterday that it has authoritative information that Roumania will enter the war on the side of the allies in February. Roumanian troops will immediately invade Transylvania, the newspaper declared.

German Fleet Becoming Active.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—A Daily Mail Copenhagen despatch says:

"The German destroyers and submarines left Heligoland Roads Wednesday, and news from many sources in Germany points to the fleet becoming more active."

MUST TAKE OVER SHIPS

British Government Should Follow Railway Policy Say Workers

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The Workers' National Committee, under the presidency of J. A. Seddon, met to consider what ought to be done to reduce the present high price of food, especially bread. The committee is representative of every phase of the labor movement from Sidney Webb to Ben Tillett and the conclusion come to was that the Government must take over shipping as it has taken over railways.

Information which has been collected by the committee, shows that the chief cause in the rise in the price of bread is the excessive freight charges imposed by ship owners and it is believed that unless effective steps are taken immediately cargoes of wheat at present being shipped and due to arrive in this country will reach prices much in excess of those ruling at present. The Government, says the report, should take over as many ships as may be necessary and itself bring the wheat from the Argentine and Canada at bare cost price. The committee is skeptical of the contention of ship-owners that the war has reduced the available ships by something like 50 per cent.

SUCCESS IS ASTOUNDING

Anti-typhoid Inoculation Has Stopped Disease

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Sir Frederick Treves, the well-known surgeon, in speaking before the Royal Society of Arts last night, said that the results achieved by inoculation against typhoid fever in the British Expeditionary Force have "been positively astounding." He said that since the war began there had been only 212 cases, of which 173 were among persons who had not been inoculated. There had been only 22 deaths, and none of those who died had been inoculated. Not a single death from typhoid fever had occurred among those inoculated.

"There never has been a time in the history of any campaign where the wounded soldier has been better looked after," said Sir Frederick. "When the history of this war is written, one of its most astounding features will be the sanitary precautions taken to secure the health of our soldiers and their cure in disease."

King Gives £8,000.

LONDON, Jan. 23. — King George personally made up a deficiency of about £8,000 to cover the cost of the Christmas gift sent by Princess Mary to the British army and navy, consisting of pipes, tobaccos and cigarettes, contained in a handsome brass box. The idea originated with Princess Mary, in whose name the public fund for collecting the money for the purpose was opened in October last.

Surgeon Weds Princess.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 23.—Dr. Philip Newton, one of the American Red Cross surgeons in charge of the Kiev hospital, married the Princess Helene Shahofskaya in Petrograd yesterday. The princess is a Russian woman, who volunteered to serve as a nurse in the hospital operated by the Americans.

The ceremony was performed in the Russian Church, and was attended by Frank North Winship, the American consul, and Ray Baker, secretary to American Ambassador Marye.

They've raised the price of pork again. Hogs!

Said the housewife, "will I waste money on cake soap when, by cutting up a bar of N.P. SOAP, I get more and better soap than by buying other kinds in cakes. One bar of N.P. SOAP at 15¢ contains more by weight than four or five 5¢ cakes of any other kind— It's Made in Canada too."

ANOTHER TEST CARGO SENT OUT

American Vessel Sails to Germany With Foodstuffs

NEW YORK, Jan. 23. — Risking possible seizure by British warships lying off the Atlantic coast, the American-owned steamer Wilhelmina, flying the American flag and loaded with approximately $200,000 worth of foodstuffs, consigned by an American commission firm to an American citizen in Germany, passed out to sea last night, entering on the first voyage of its kind undertaken by any vessel from an American port since the war began nearly six months ago in Europe.

If the Wilhelmina is detained or seized, the W. L. Green Commission Co. of St. Louis, charterers of the vessel and shippers of the cargo, will, according to their counsel here, file a protest with the American State Department declaring that the cargo is conditional contraband, denying the right of a belligerent warship to confiscate it and requesting the United States to demand the immediate release of ship and cargo.

SOLDIER RUNS AMUCK WITH LOADED PISTOL

Young Private Shoots at Pursuers in Toronto Streets

TORONTO, Jan. 23.—Pte. Douglas McAndrew, aged 19, whose home town is Waterford, Ont., tried to run away from Varley's sporting goods store yesterday afternoon with two automatic pistols and when Mr. Varley gave chase fired at him, the bullet wounding four-year-old Louis Druford, 74 Ann street, who was standing at the corner of Ann and Yonge streets. McAndrew finally was caught by Constable Garrett near Yonge and Breadalbane streets. In the chase the soldier fired half a dozen times at his pursuers. McAndrew tendered a check in payment of one of the weapons, but when Mr. Varley went to the telephone to call up the bank on which the check was drawn, McAndrew suddenly ran out to the street with both guns in his hand. Varley ran after him, and it was just when the proprietor of the store got out on the street that the soldier fired the shot which wounded the youngster at the corner.

Opposite the Maitland apartments Pte. McAndrew jumped into a delivery rig, the driven, Wm. Love, being in the apartments, and drove the horse at a terrific gallop along Maitland to Yonge street again. Love came out of the apartments just in time to see his rig disappearing along the street, and followed at a run and enlisted the assistance of Constable Garrett, on duty on Yonge street. McAndrews drove across Yonge street and continued along Breadalbane, while the policeman commandeered the first motor car he caught sight of, and with the deliveryman beside him the motor car sped in pursuit. At the Queen's Park circle the motor car had closed up to within a few hundred yards, and McAndrew seeing capture inevitable, turned and fired several shots at his pursuers, neither of which took effect. Finally McAndrew submitted to arrest.

Brutal To Prisoners.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Charges of brutality on the part of German officers toward British prisoners under transportation from the battle-front to the detention camps, made by a major of the Scottish Rifles, who escaped from prison at Crefeld, were made public here last night by the British Embassy. The report of the officer also has been put into the hands of Ambassador Page in London by the Foreign Office.

The elevator of the Winnipeg Elevator at Indian Head, Sask., was burned to the ground yesterday morning. It is a total loss, together with 20,000 bushels of grain.

The Toronto Terminals allway Co. will apply to parliament for power to increase the limit of the bonding powers of the company, and to acquire lands in Toronto for freight and other facilities.

Theodore Spangler of Carlisle was arrested yesterday in Washington when he stoped a policeman and said, "I want to see President Wilson. A clique in Carlisle is trying to kill me because they have an idea that I am crazy."

INFLUENTIAL TURKS ARE AGAINST PRO-GERMANS

Mutiny in Enver Pasha's Army and Strong Peace Movement in Constantinople Are Indications of Waning Power of Young Turks—Enver's Forces in Caucasus Are in Bad Plight.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The news has reached Odessa that there has been a mutiny in the Turkish army. Enver Pasha has had many of his enemies shot, including seventeen officers who distinguished themselves in the Balkan war.

News from Constantinople says the movement in favor of a speedy conclusion of peace is gaining ground. The Ottoman Society party, formed for the purpose of propaganding this idea, has drawn to its ranks many influential personages, the chief of whom is the heir to the throne, Prince 'Yussuf Eddin.

The Germanophile groups at Court are opposing energetic resistance to the spread of this movement, and, at the instance of Marshal von der Goltz, all who speak openly in condemnation of the war are placed under arrest.

The Turks' position in the Caucasus is absolutely hopeless, according to Tiflis advices. Their 28th, 29th, 31st and 32nd divisions have been entirely wiped out, and in the course of four weeks they have lost 18 batteries of quick-firing guns and 10 machine-gun companies. One defeat follows another with unfailing regularity.

A despatch from Cairo says:

Turkish troops concentrating on the border of the Sinai Peninsula are beginning their advance on the Suez Canal.

Ottoman forces with a contingent of Bedouin tribesmen have reached the El Katie district, twenty-eight miles east of the canal, and large bodies of Turkish troops are reported at El Arish and El Audje, farther east.

STEAMER DACIA HAS SET SAIL

Will Make no Special Effort to Evade Capture

GALVESTON, Texas, Jan. 23.—The steamship Dacia departed for Rotterdam at daylight to-day. She was cleared yesterday afternoon, her announced destination being Rotterdam, via Norfolk. It is noted on the ship's manifest that the cargo would be reshipped to Bremen. The Dacia's hatches have been sealed by the collector of the port.

The Dacia is the vessel the British Government has stated will be captured if possible and taken to a prize court to test the validity of her transfer from German to United States registry.

The Dacia carried 11,000 square bales of cotton, a cargo valued by the shippers at $880,000. Sixteen cents per pound, or $80 per bale, is to be paid for the cotton laid down in Bremen. The Government Bureau took a part of the insurance of that valuation at four per cent. The freight rate charged is $3.50 per bale, the highest ever paid for cotton transportation.

Capt. George McDonald, who will command the vessel on her trip, has a crew of thirty-one men, declared to be all Americans. He said he did not expect to deviate from the usual course of steamships, and would make no particular efforts to avoid [illegible]

UP TO BREASTS IN THE WATER

Wounded Soldier Says Princess Pats. Did Good Work

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Pte. J. E. Oliver, a Toronto member of the Princess Pats, now lying wounded at Sheffield, says the Patricias were up to their breasts in mud and water during the forty-eight hours they were in the trenches. He reckons they accounted for over five hundred Germans, killed and wounded, and adds that the British artillery did some magnificent work.

Two Germans who surrendered said their men were without ammunition. This," says Pte. Oliver, "seems true, because when we searched the dead Germans we never found any ammunition on them."

Speaking of the present rate of progress, Oliver says there is nothing to grumble at, as a gain of fifty yards in this weather is equal to five miles in the summer. The Germans have the advantage over the British in so many being able to speak English. Their officers send them forward to overhear what is said in the trenches.

Audience Objected.

MONTREAL, Jan. 23.—Because the St. Cecelia Choral Society sang German music at a concert in Windsor Hall last night a large number of the audience rose and left. The piece objected to was Richard Strauss' Heimkehr, which was sung in German.

U. S. Army Vote Passes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — After two days' debate on the general state of the national defences the House yesterday passed without a roll call the army appropriation bill carrying $101,000,000.

Advocates of the immediate strengthening of the military establishment fought to the last for additional appropriations, but their efforts met with no encouragement from either Democratic or Republican leaders. The last roll call, on a motion by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, to re-commit the bill with instructions to report back an amendment carrying $1,000,000 for aviation was defeated, 25[illegible]

A PIMPLY FACE LOSES FRIENDS

Why Stand This Humiliation When Stuart's Calcium Wafers in a Week Make Your Face Clean and Radiant.

No need for anyone to go about any longer with a face covered with pimples, blotches, eruptions, blackheads and liver spots. These are all due to impurities in the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly and the blemishes will disappear.

"Everyone Looks at a Face Bearing a Lovely Complexion—It is Nature's Greatest Gift to Women."

That's what Stuart's Calcium Wafers are intended to accomplish and do accomplish. Their principal ingredient is Calcium Sulphide, the quickest and most thorough blood cleanser known.

These wonderful little wafers get right into the blood, and destroy eruptive substances present in it. In some cases a few days is sufficient to make a marked improvement. And when the blood is pure the whole system is a hundred per cent. better.

Don't fret any longer about those blackheads, pimples, boils, tetter, eczema, spots or skin eruptions; they all go and "go quick" if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Go to any druggist anywhere and buy a box. Price 50 cents. A small sample package mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe

Last Wednesday evening witnessed another good meeting of the Trades and Labor Council. The hall was filled with delegates from the various locals, and this coupled with a busy box stove, engrossing subjects and a smoke-laden atmosphere made an ideal winter meeting of laborites. President J. J. Hartley officiated as chairman.

Organizer Kennedy Speaks.

The floor was given to John W. Kennedy, organizer of the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers International Alliance. Mr. Kennedy who has large experience in the ranks of organised labor emphasised one or two points which are alway seen more prominently by those who, like himself, are always on the job. One point was that there never was a more opportune time than now for organised labor to make progress. Another point was the decrease of fraternal spirit among different organizations. This was to be deplored also to be fought against especially by trades that were dependent on one another. At the conclusion of his speech Jack was tendered a vote of thanks. Speakers of this stamp are always a means of education to the less experienced card holders.

Courteous Cabinet Ministers.

Secretary William Stevens, who was instructed last meeting to write the cabinet ministers regarding the Freee Labor Bureau Bill, received replies from eight of the eighteen cabinet ministers now in office. Sir R L. Borden was among those who took notice.

Election of Officers.

The following were elected for the ensuing term:

J. J. Hartley, President.
Charles Hammacott, Vice-President.
William Stevens, Recording Secretary.
Charles Seymour, Financial Secretary.
G. A. Hamon, Scribe.
Harry Gainey, Dan Wires, Hugh Robertson, Charles Hammacott and George A'Hearn, Hall Trustees.
Achilles Frost, Robert Mitchell, and Fred Brown, Auditors.

To Abolish the Property Qualification Hindrance.

Secretary William Stevens was the man chosen to fall in line with the Hamilton trades and labor group of representatives who will wait on the lawmakers at Toronto and urge them to remove this barricade of a property qualification from the path of the intelligent workingman who seeks municipal honors.

Annual Reports.

Secretary Harry Gainey of the hall trustees presented his report, which was accepted. This cannot be said of the resignation he tendered.

Treasurer Hugh Robertson of the hall trustees also presented his report. This report showed a substantial balance, there being at least enough to keep a roof over the council's head. Open meetings in the Central Park will not be necessary for a while.

Next Meeting, February 3.

The officers will be installed at the next meeting. Date: February 3rd. Place: Labor Hall. Time: 8 p.m.

Health Wrecked Through La Grippe

It Generally Leaves the Patient Debilitated and an Easy Victim to Other Diseases

Health wrecked through la grippe—

One of the foremost medical writers says: "It is astonishing the number of people who have been crippled in health for years after an attack of la grippe or influenza." The real danger from this disease, which sweeps over Canada every winter, is during convalescence, when the characteristic symptoms, the fever, the catarrh, the headache and the depression of spirits pass away. Grip leaves behind it weakened vital powers, thin blood, impaired digestion and over-sensitive nerves—a condition that makes the system an easy prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, rheumatism, nervous prostration and even consumption. It is a condition that calls most emphatically for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic especially adapted to meet this need as they purify and enrich the blood. They tone up the nerves and give vigor, strength and health to the dibiliated system. Mrs. Howard D. Chaffey, Indian Island, N.B., says: "For several winters in succession I was attacked by la grippe which left me weak and badly run down. In each case I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with the most beneficial results. Last winter when the trouble was again prevalent I took the precaution of fortifying my system with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and escaped the trouble, while many of my neighbors were down with it. In fact I enjoyed the best of health all spring and feel sure this medicine will so fortify the system as to prevent the trouble."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Cooper's Hawk.

The almost universal prejudice against birds of prey is due to the activities of a few members of the hawk family, chief among which is the Cooper's hawk. Cooper's hawk usually approaches under cover and drops on unsuspecting victims, making great inroads on poultry yards and game coverts. This bird, together with its two near relations, the sharp shinned hawk and the goshawk, should be destroyed by every possible means.

He Wanted to Know.

"Charles," said the teacher, "do you know the causes of the Revolutionary war?"

Charles looked interestedly at his instructor and replied, as if carrying on a social conversation, "No, do you?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Amber.

Amber is believed by the Turks to be an infallible guard against the injurious effects of nicotine; hence its extensive use for mouthpieces of pipes.

HUMAN SOLDER.

The Reason Blood From a Cut Clots and Plugs the Wound.

Why is it that the boy who cuts his finger with a jacknife making a willow whistle does not bleed to death! As a matter of fact, he may if he is what the medical profession call a "bleeder," a condition of things by no means rare and one which every surgeon who undertakes to do even the most minor operation must inform himself about. The bleeder or hemophiliac, as the doctor calls him, is always in immediate danger of just this kind of accident because his blood is lacking in the clotting principle known as fibrinogen.

This principle is a gift from good Mother Nature, or a kind Providence, if you choose, and exists for no other purpose than the saving of human life. When a wound deep enough to injure a vein or artery is made through the skin the blood pours out in considerable quantity, but in a few minutes the current lessens and a congealing mass begins to appear. This means that the fibrin is catching the blood corpuscles and holding them fast like fish caught in a net. The semisolid clot thus formed is the solder which a plumber fuses upon a leaking pipe.

To be sure, this is not a perfect mechanism, for if bleeding is coming from a fair sized artery the blood will spurt out into space, and no clot can form since it is too quickly washed away. Here, however, by another conservative process the blood pressure is reduced, as a result of which the artery begins to contract owing to the elasticity of its walls and to influence of the nervous system, and in this way the hemorrhage will finally cease.

The clot left in the wound soon begins to contract. Water (serum) is forced out, and the remaining substances hold the wound firmly as if in a splint. Then come the blood corpuscles, bringing the materials necessary for reconstruction of the "blood pipe," and in a few days new tissue, penetrated by fine hairlike blood vessels, which can be seen only by a high power microscope, begins to form. In a relatively short time only a thin "scar" remains.—New York World.

SOAPING A GEYSER

Food That Roused the Fury of the Sleeping Wairoa.

Some of the larger geysers in New Zealand will not play unless they are soaped—a process only occasionally allowed, as too much soaping weakens the geyser. Paul Gooding in "Picturesque New Zealand" describes the soaping of a geyser named Wairoa, he being present at the ceremony. The author states that the officiating priestess was a Maori known as Kathleen, who was clothed in a flax mat completely covered with raka, riwi and pigeon feathers:

"The caretaker approached Kathleen with a big white bag in hand. It was half full of yellow soap cut into small cubes.

"'Are you ready, Kathleen?' he asked.

"'Yes,' she promptly answered.

"Taking out two or three handfuls of soap, the caretaker threw them into Wairoa's deep throat and then handed the bag to Kathleen. Grasping the string handle at the bottom of the bag, she opened the mouth, and out poured a saponaceous stream.

"Ten minutes passed, but there was only a slight increase in the volume of steam at Wairoa's mouth, and there were no subterranean signs of an imminent eruption. Fifteen, twenty minutes passed with very little change.

"When thirty minutes had gone there was a rumble, then a splash of water. The people near the geyser backed away. Two or three more splashes followed, and each was higher than its predecessor; then came a hoarse roar, a rush of steam, and up past a low sulphur dyed sinter wall flashed a column of water carrying up clouds of steam. Soap, just common washing soap, had conquered Wairoa and forced it from its lair. Up it continued to go—fifty, sixty, eighty, 120 feet.

"'Wairoa would have gone higher if it hadn't been for the wind,' the caretaker told me. 'It has been known to go 180 feet.'

"While Wairoa played it played magnificently. In its shaft it rumbled, it flung its hot breath upon the venturesome, and for more than 100 feet around it shook the ground until the earth trembled. For ten minutes it rose and fell. Then down it went, like a thermometer on a frosty night, until it was a mere splasher."

FATE OF FOUR GREAT HEROES

History records that Alexander the Great, who was the pupil of Aristotle at fourteen, and who reigned over the Macedonians at sixteen, while his father was absent, and who succeeded Philip when he was nineteen, after climbing the heights of his ambition, fell from his lofty eminence. Alexander, with his temples bound in chaplets dipped in the blood of countless nations, looked down upon a conquered world and wept that there was not another one for him to conquer, then set a city on fire and died amid scenes of debauch!

Hannibal, one of the greatest soldiers who ever lived, after having passed the Alps, to the amazement of Rome, and having successfully fought and conquered the armies of the mistress of the world, stripping three bushels of gold rings from the fingers of her slaughtered warriors, fled from his country. He died by poison administered by his own hand, unlamented, in a foreign land.

Caesar, considered as a general, a statesman and a ruler, has had few equals and probably no superiors. After conquering 800 cities and dyeing his hands in the blood of millions of his enemies, after having pursued to death the only rival he had, was assassinated by those whom he considered to be his best friends.

Bonaparte, the greatest general of modern times, after having filled the earth with the terror of his name deluged it with tears and blood and clothed the world, as it were, in sackcloth, ended his days in banishment upon a lonely island in the South Atlantic.

Another Way to Get Even.

"I want to sue Dr. Blank for heavy damages!" said the angry citizen entering the lawyer's office.

"What has he done?" asked the attorney.

"When he operated on me he left a pair of surgical scissors in me. How much can I sue him for?"

"Oh, don't sue him at all," counseled the lawyer; "just send him a bill for storage."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Strange Works to Him.

The hostess asked the solid man of her guest list to take a talkative young woman in to dinner. The girl did her best to keep up the conversation, ranging from Wall street to the crops and back. Only once did the solid man desert the unfailing affirmative, and that was when she asked. "Do you like Beethoven's works?" "Never visited them," he replied. "What does he manufacture?"—Argonaut.

Why Not?

"Mother," asked Tommy, "is it correct to say that you 'water a horse' when he is thirsty?"

"Yes, my dear," said his mother.

"Well, then," said Tommy, picking up a saucer, "I'm going to milk the cat."—Ladies' Home Journal.

"Well, Father Can Play"

Yes, better than he ever thought possible! All the years that he has spent unable to play have been storing up a great fund of memories, and now that the with the wonderful Meister-Touch Action has set his musical heart free from his untrained fingers, he finds himself able to give wonderful expression to whatever he plays.

He can play "Rule Britannia" or the "Marseillaise" with so much vigor and go that one's feet start marching whether or no, and to every other kind of music he brings the same genuine understanding of latent talent.

This superb instrument is the very finest example of player-piano making. Its tone—its control of time and melody—its appearance—all are unexcelled.

A WARTIME BLUFF

Perhaps the most important order that Stonewall Jackson ever issued—certainly the most vital to himself—is not in the official war records. The order was given in person by Jackson to a northern artillery officer as he stood in full uniform ready for battle beside his gun, and, strangest of all, was at once executed by him, with the result that the battle was lost by the Federal arms.

Jackson's action on this occasion furnishes a striking illustration of the value of a cool head and presence of mind in an emergency—on an important occasion when the entirely unexpected happens—at a time when wavering or indecision would result in disaster. That he was able instantly to grasp the situation and daringly master it is a tribute to his quickness of judgment and his courage.

It was on a spring morning in 1862, just before the battle of Port Republic. Jackson in advance of his troops, with only a single escort, galloped across the bridge over the Shenandoah river into the town, which stood on the east bank. Learning that the army of General Shields was still a good many miles away and confident that his own troops would be in possession long before the enemy, he rode to a residence at the farther end of the village, where he spent nearly an hour.

But meantime the energetic Shields—whom Jackson declared to be his most formidable opponent—had thrust forward a small, swift column to occupy Port Republic, seize the bridge and halt Jackson's advance. So rapidly did it move that it gained both objects without firing a shot. More than that, Jackson was a prisoner—if any one had known it!

Jackson, in utter ignorance of the disastrous change, mounted his horse and ambled down the main street to the bridge. What was his astonishment to see groups of soldiers—in blue!—busily moving to and fro about the bridgehead and throwing up intrenchments and fortifications. Planted on a little knoll that commanded the bridge and its approaches was a formidable field gun.

Fortunately for Jackson, the recent campaigns up and down the valley had faded both blue and gray uniforms into a nondescript drab. As Jackson sat on his horse and watched the busy scene he formed his plan swiftly. He could not go back. He must cross that bridge. That was his only chance. It was the frowning field gun that he feared. He must put it out of commission long enough to get beyond its range. Throwing up his hand to attract attention, he shouted to the officer in command of the gun:

"What are you doing with that gun up there? I didn't order it there, and I don't want it there!" There were authority and petulance in his voice as he added, "Limber up and run it over on that knob over there!"

The officer at the gun, thinking that he had to deal with some superior officer recently arrived, hastened to obey without question, explaining in self defense that he had understood his orders otherwise.

Sitting on Little Sorrel while the Federal troops worked busily about him, Jackson calmly waited until the gun was lumbering off to its new position. Then he rode quietly across the bridge and up the other bank until he was well out of musket range. Then he turned, waved his hand to the astonished Federals, and, putting spurs to his horse, galloped away from the rain of bullets that pattered harmlessly in the rear.

Had he been captured the Confederate victory at Port Republic which he won a few hours later would not have happened. The able and energetic Shields would have defeated his troops, stunned by his loss.—Youth's Companion.

THE CHANGING TIDES.

Causes That Contribute to the Rise and Fall of the Ocean.

Many people regard the rise and fall of the ocean as a profound and baffling mystery.

The mystery really is not very hard to understand. As we all know, the surface of the ocean rises and falls twice in every lunar day, this rise appearing along a coast to be a horizontal motion—always ebbing or flowing.

Now, the lunar day consists of about twenty-five hours. Thus, of course, the "time" of the tides varies each day. The tides, moreover, do not always rise to the same height. Every fortnight, with the new and full moon, they rise very much higher than at other times.

These high tides are called "spring" tides, the alternating low tides being termed "neap." When the moon is nearest to the earth the rise and fall of the ocean are markedly increased. Thus the spring tides are greatest at the equinoxes—i. e., at the end of March and the end of September.

Yes, you say, but what has the moon to do with it at all? Surely it is the sun which attracts the earth.

That is so. But, although the sun's attraction on the earth is far greater than the moon's, the moon is so very much nearer to the earth that the difference between its attraction at the center and on the surface is three times as great as the sun's. And it is this difference which causes tides.—London Answers.

WIRELESS ON WHEELS

Wireless telegraph sets are now being devised for use on commercial trucks to enable the drivers to keep in touch with the business office of the firm—if drivers who understand wireless can be found. The idea is to enable the drivers to send in rush orders or to receive directions from the office about deliveries or calls that come to attention after the truck has left for a long trip.

Such a service has been put in actual operation in England, where the telephone service has its drawbacks. But the idea has also been worked out experimentally, with complete success, in the United States with a view to establishing the practice. Many other uses for wireless on vehicles have also been suggested, such as a wireless set on a fire chief's wagon, through which the driver of this wagon may keep in constant touch with the fire alarm office.

Good communication has been obtained between a wireless station and an automobile truck seven miles away in city streets. The framework of the truck acted as the earth, and the antennae consisted of twenty-five wires strung under the canvas top of the truck.—Saturday Evening Post.

Toronto Savings and Loan Company

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company was held at the Head Office of the Company, 437 George Street, Peterborough, on Friday, the 22nd day of January, 1915, at 2 o'clock p.m.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

The Directors submit herewith their THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT, showing the result of the business for the past year, accompanied by the Balance Sheet to the 31st December, 1914.

After payment of Interest on Deposits and Debentures and all expenses of management, there remained a Net Profit of $135,658.57. To this amount has been added $60,334.55, the balance carried forward from last year, which makes a total sum for distribution of $195,993.12.

This amount has been disposed of in the following manner:

(1)	By payment of Four quarterly Dividends at the rate of 10 per cent. for the year, amounting to	$100,000.00
(2)	By balance left in Profit and Loss Account	95,993.12

The balance in the account carried forward to next year is $95,993.12, as against $60,334.55 brought forward from last year.

The Directors deemed it advisable to carry forward this amount in Profit and Loss Account rather than increase the Reserve Fund at the present time.

The Reserve Fund stands at $850,000.00, equal to 85 per cent. of the Paid-Up Capital.

All payments maturing during the year on the Company's Investments have been satisfactorily met, and the rentals from the property owned by the Company have also been promptly paid. The books, accounts and securities of the Company have been carefully examined by the Auditors, and their report is attached to the Financial Statement.

Your Directors record with profound regret the death during the year of Mr. E. W. Cox, who was elected President of the Company just a year ago. Mr. Herbert C. Cox, President of the Canada Life Assurance Company, was elected President of the Company, and Mr. E. T. Malone, K. C., of the legal firm of Messrs. Malone, Malone, & Long, was elected a Director to fill the vacancy on the Board.

It is again a pleasure to refer to the valued services of Messrs. Finlayson, Auld & MacKechnie, who continue to represent the Company in Great Britain in a very satisfactory manner.

Your Directors desire to bear testimony to the faithful and efficient services rendered during the year by the Officers and Staff of the Company.

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE

We hereby certify that we have carefully audited the Books and Accounts of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company for the year ending 31st December, 1914. All disbursements have been properly vouched for, and the postings and balances of the Company's Ledgers have been checked and found correct. The above Statement of Assets and Liabilities shows the position of the Company on the 31st of December, 1914, and the Profit and Loss Account is a correct showing of the operations of the Company for the year ending on that date. We have also examined the securities and find everything in order.

THE RUSSIAN PEASANT'S CURIOUS WAY OF FIGURING

It is Simplicity Itself and Absolutely Accurate, but the Why and Wherefore of the Method and its Results Are a Puzzle to Mathematicians.

This is not a meaningless, freaky twister of a puzzle. But it is a puzzle. It is the method by which Russian peasants multiply, and as yet the boasted mental superiority of America cannot solve the simple riddle of the Slav.

Suppose you want to multiply two numbers together. Divide one of the numbers by 2, ignoring the fractions. Continue the process until the divided column reaches one. Then double the other number and continue the process until it equals in lines the first column. Then whenever a number is even in the first column strike it out, together with its corresponding number in the second column. Add the second column, and, lo, the answer! Now, why does it do it? There seems to be no reason for it, but what is it? Can you work it out?

It is infallible. It has never been known to fail. But what principle of mathematics is behind it all? Perhaps it is some queer freak of numbers, some one says, but such things are not to be turned aside with such generalities. Mathematics is not built upon so lax a system. There is some rule behind it all.

Take the simple multiple 12 by 10. Obviously the answer is 120. Try it the Russian way. Place 12 in the first column and 10 in the second. Divide 12 by 2 and multiply 10 by 2 and place the respective answers beneath the sums from which they were derived. It will stand 6 and 20. Dividing 6 by 2 equals 3, and multiplying 20 by 2 equals 40. Continuing, 3 divided by 2 and throwing away all fractions will be 1, while 40 multiplied by 2 will be 80. Now strike out all the numbers in the first column which are even and with it their parallels in the second column—12 and 6 will go out, leaving the last two parallel results. Ignoring the first column and adding the numbers in the second, the answer will be the result of 40 and 80, or 120.

The questions are: Who ever worked it out? How did he start?

Now try working the problem by putting 10 in the first column and subjecting it to the dividing and 12 to the multiplying. It will result like this: Ten and 12 will become 5 and 24, which will in turn be changed to 2 and 48 and finally into 1 and 96. Then, striking out the numbers 10 and 2 with their corresponding numbers 12 and 48, leaving the second column figures 24 and 96 to be added—this becomes 120.

There is no escaping it. No matter how large the score, it comes out right with distressing surety. Take the odd numbers. Perhaps there is some twist in the scheme that applies to even numbers. Take 25 and 15. Going right down the column they become 12 and 30; then 6 and 60; then 3 and 120; then 1 and 240; 12 and 6 go out, taking with them 30 and 60. Add 15, 120 and 240. Answer, 375. Multiply 25 by 15 according to our methods. Correct—375.

Now, why is it that the even numbers must be eliminated on the right side when they do not count at all in the addition?

It is plain to be seen that all the numbers in the second column will be even, but by what freak of calculation are those corresponding to the even numbers in the first column of no consequence when the correct sum is to be obtained?

Where no even number results in the first column, as in 15 x 13, there is no complication; 15 and 13 in the process become 7 and 26, then 3 and 52 and finally 1 and 104. Adding 13, 26, 52 and 104 equals 195, the correct sum. There can be no multiplication in figures which will divide down to a place where there are no odd numbers, for the final number must always of necessity be 1. In the sum 16 x 4, 16 divides itself into 8, 4, 2 and 1 successively, while 4 becomes 8, 16, 32 and 64. All of the pairs are crossed out, with the exception of 1 and 64. In that case the addition of the second column will be 64.

Despite the puzzling nature of this formula, there is some mathematical principle by which it can be explained. There is some rule awaiting the fertile minds of the workers by which this "stumper" can be demonstrated to be simplicity itself.

Another quizzer: Why must fractions be discarded? How is it that the result will be true when several units are cast aside? For example, consider the number 47. Dividing by 2 the result will be 23. One whole unit is thrown away. Twenty-three becomes by the same process 11, another unit discarded. Eleven resolves itself into 5, making the third unit passed by. The next step results in 2 and then 1, but why is it that these three units count for nothing?

The mere fact that the explanation is near, that the whole thing is simple if the key can be found, is one that cannot help but draw attention to this novel means of adding.—Philadelphia North American.

FALLING OFF EVIDENCED IN MARKET ATTENDANCE

Buying on the market today was not remarked for its briskness, but more for the sparse attendance and apparent economy observed by patrons in spending their money. One very noticeable feature was the poor looking beef that some farmers were endeavoring to unload, but their success was not particularly great. Some brought several quarters of beef to the market and carted home the same amount. Some fair-looking lamb was offered, but hindquarters sold higher than last Saturday, going at 20 cents.

For real good butter, thirty-three cents was the only key with which to obtain it, although some vendors had it for 32 cents. Eggs of the fresh kind went for 40 and 45 cents.

Fowl were rather neglected today, not many patrons investing, except in chickens. From appearances, it would look as though the average householder had been surfeited with fowl since Christmas and New Year's. Chickens sold for 90c to $1.50 per pair, ducks at 70c to 80c each, geese $1.50 to $1.75, turkeys $1.60 to $3.

The reigning meat prices were: pork, 12 and 13 cents; mutton, 9 and 10 cents; lamb, 20 cents for hind quarter and 12 and 13 cents for a front, beef 10 and 12 cents.

A bag of healthy big russet apples was offered for $1.25.

Following is the market price list:

Potatoes, per bag	$ .60	$ .75
Apples, per bag	1.25	1.50

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Disposition shown to question the accuracy of reported big sales to Europe cut a figure today in overcoming a fresh advance in the price of wheat. The market closed easy, 1-8c off to a shade up, compared with last night. Corn gained 1-8c to 1-4c net, and oats a sixteenth to 1-8c. Provisions finished from 3 1-2c decline to a rise of 5c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 22.—The wheat market opened strong; May was 3-8c and July 3-4c higher; oats, 3-8c to 5-8c advanced and flax 1 1-2c higher. While there was considerable excitement during the early hours, the trading was much lighter in volume than yesterday. It was noticed, however, that the buying was being taken up by responsible houses. Following the opening there were further fractional advances and both May and July halted at 1-8c under the record prices of yesterday. An active business in oats for export is also being carried thru, and prices were strong, in sympathy with American markets.

Export trading was quiet, bids being out of line. The total inspections on Thursday were 204 cars, as against 86 cars last year and in sight today were 150.

At the close there was a show of weakness, altho prices made a gain on the day. Wheat futures closed 1-8c to 1-2c higher. Cash closed 1-4c higher to unchanged on No. 2 northern. Oats closed 1-4c to 3-8c higher and flax 3-4c to 1 1-2c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 22.—Business in grain over the cable continues very quiet owing to the limited demand from overseas buyers, and the fact that the few bids that are coming forward are away out of line with exporters' views. The local trade in coarse grains was more active, there being an improved demand from outside sources for supplies of all lines and the sales made amounted to 100,000 bushels. The tone of the market for oats continues strong and prices scored a further advance of 1-2c to 1c per bushel. There is no change in flour, but the tone of the market is very firm. The trade in millfeed continues fair. A steady trade continues to be done in butter at firm prices, but cheese is quiet. Demand for eggs is good.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 22.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.42⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.36⅝ to $1.41⅞; No. 2 do., $1.33⅝ to $1.39⅞; May, $1.37⅜ to $1.37⅞.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 69¾c to 70½c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 52¾c to 53¼c.

Flour and bran—Unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 22.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.40; No. 1 northern, $1.39; No. 2 do., $1.37; May, $1.40.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decision must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of any-one else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

WHITBY HAS HAD ENOUGH

Remaining Games Have Been Defaulted

Whitby intermediates were defeated by Picton last night, and the club notified the O. H. A. today that they will default their remaining games. This denies Peterborough of their scheduled game with Whitby here on Wednesday next, so the local club is endeavoring to secure one of the senior O. H. A. teams from Toronto to play the intermediates on local ice that night. If posible, the Toronto Rowing Club, Victorias ar St. Michael's will be secured.

It is Indeed

In these days of the high cost of living the following story is not without a decided point.

The teacher of a primary class was trying to show the children the difference between natural and man made wonders and was finding it hard.

"What," she asked, "do you think is the most wonderful thing a man ever made?"

A little girl, whose parents were obviously harassed by the question of ways and means, replied as solemnly as the proverbial judge:

"A living for his family,"—Woman's Home Companion.

PETES WERE GOOD WHEN PINCH CAME

First and Second Periods Were Nip and Tuck Battle But Visitors Were Forced Back in Last Session --- The Final Score Was 11 to 6

Another at the expense of Oshawa. The victory was to the extent of 11-6 but was the hardest earned by the Petes, thus far this season. The seven from Billy Eaton's village surprised everybody and until the locals hit their stride in the last twenty minutes every fan in the rink was suffering from the nearest thing to heart failure. Keen ice and the good condition of the players had assured the followers of the team of a fast game but it is safe to state that very few expected the battle would be half as strehuous as it proved to be. At the close of the first period Peterborough led by 5-4, nineteen and a half minutes of the following session had elapsed before anyone registered and then it was an Oshawa man, leaving the score a tie. Four seconds later the Blue and White made it 6-5 and thus the period ended. The last third found the Hunterites "hitting their stride" and the result was no longer in question.

It is true that the 11-6 score sounds like a comfortable win but any of the spectators will agree that it was by times a little "uncomfortable." The fact that Oshawa fell before the Picton Pirates on home ice evidently was the reason why Peterborough dopesters underrated them. Just how the Picton team annexed that 6-2 victory on the evening of January the eighth is a mystery. The Oshawa septette are certainly a wonderful crew and to us appear stronger than any opponents the Petes have conflicted with since the curtain was lifted. They have speed, condition, and team play, in short they have all that goes to make up a real good hockey team. Some who witnessed last evening's engagement claimed Peterborough to be away off color in the first two periods. We grant that they were not playing the best of hockey but the reason seemed to be that the visitors were away above par.

Smith, the goal custodian, is, without a doubt, a "sure comer." He is cool as September Morn and clears and blocks very cleverly. Eleven beat him but none of them were easy. He connected with many that were easily earmarked goals. The defence consisted of Freeman, he with the Mary Pickford hair, and Jacobi who has donned the goaler's pads in previous local appearances. Both men played great hockey particularly Freeman who uncorked more speed than we thought was in the whole O.H.A. His rushes were fast and he came back faster.

The most prominent forward was Fair at rover. The boy is big and moves like lightning. Hall at centre was not what one would call brilliant but he was quite a bit like the old Peterborough centreman who bore the same name. His long shot was "combination." Time after time he started combined rushes which were very dangerous. An esteemed friend "Red" Weller was on right wing and it is sufficient to remark that he is the same old "Red." Canning, the man on left wing, is considered one of the "handsomest players in the O. H. A." He is more. He is one of the niftiest wing men in this district.

Bert Janes had a rather busy session for the first two periods but toward the end of the game he rested up. He blocked a couple of times when the Oshawa men had beaten the defence and goals looked inevitable. Hunter and Pethick found the fast ice to their liking and played good hockey. The former figured on the forward line occasionally but the pace was a little too fast for a man of his size.

Peter Spratt was out at rover and he also liked the glassy surface. His rushes up the boards were hair raising and his little scoop shots completely fooled the visitors. Maurice Park had a big night at centre and easily made up for the hard luck on soft ice. His work greatly assisted in keeping the speedy Oshawa forward line in check. Fred Kelly favored the fans with another good exhibition. His back-checking and "stick-to-it-ness" had his check working overtime. Grover Halpin was on right wing for most of the game. His most effective work was done around Goaler Smith's door.

Not Cowboys.

In the minds of many English people the Canadians of the first contingent are principally westerners of the cowboy type with just a slight sprinkling of urbanites, Englishmen who have returned to the Motherland after a short sojourn abroad, and a number of redskins. Some of these impressions are quite correct. For instance, there are a great many British-born in the contingent; there may be a dozen full-blooded Indians, but of course there are no "wild and woolly westerners." The majority of the Canadians come from such cities as Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and so forth. There are all sorts of types among the private rankers they call them in Britain.

Bluffing in a Duel

During his early diplomatic career while he was attached to the embassy in Stockholm Henry Labouchere fought a duel.

"There was a want of logic about the entire proceeding that went to my heart," he confessed later. "To be killed is bad enough, but to be killed paradoxically is worse. I never felt more dismal in my life."

Paradoxical the combat certainly was, since Labouchere had been the challenger, his ground of offense being that his antagonist, an Austrian officer, had presumed to criticize the British minister for having given social countenance to a fellow Briton who, disapproving of duels, had recently declined a challenge from conscientious scruples. The young diplomat, asserting with spirit that his chief had behaved properly and that Englishmen were not so silly as to fight duels, had left the rest to his seconds—and found himself pledged to fight the next morning with pistols at 7 o'clock. He had hoped for an apology, and admits he was dismayed; but he did not allow his feelings to be divined, and duly made his appearance upon the field of honor.

"The Austrian stood apart; I stood apart. The surgeon already eyed me as a 'subject.' The seconds consulted; then the Frenchman stepped out twelve paces. He had very short legs, and they seemed to be shorter than ever. After this came the loading of the pistols. Sometimes, I thought, seconds do not put in the bullets. That comforted me, but only for a moment, for the bullets were rammed down with cheerful energy. By this time we had been placed facing each other. A pistol was given to each of us. 'I am to give the signal,' said the Prussian. 'I shall count one, two, three, and then at the word fire you will both fire. Gentlemen, are you ready?' We both nodded. 'One, two, three, fire!' and both our pistols went off. No harm had been done."

He thought it was all over, when his opponent, stepping up, remarked that he supposed he ought to allow him a second shot, but, should nothing come of it, he would not consent to a third. Reluctantly on the part of both participants a second shot was fired, and they both missed—if indeed either had aimed—again. Then Labouchere boldly demanded a third shot.

"The seconds consulted together. For a moment I feared they were going to grant my request, and I was greatly relieved when they informed me they considered that two shots were amply sufficient. I was delighted, but I pretended to be most unhappy and kept up the farce of being an aggrieved person."

The whole affair was certainly farcical; but the fun depended upon the leading actors being both very bad marksmen.—Exchange.

"I don't know enough about it to argue the matter."

"Don't you?"

"No."

"Different here."

"How is that?"

Nice Point.

"It is always the unexpected that happens."

"Certainly."

"I wonder why?"

"Because if it were arranged for and expected it couldn't happen, you know."

DIAMOND WEDDING.

Mrs. E. Beavis of Peterborough returned this week from a visit to Cobourg and Plainville, during which she was a witness of an interesting event in the shape of a diamond wedding celebrating the 60th year of the married life of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Willis, of Cobourg. Both are healthy, happy and contented, and preserve their faculties to a remarkable degree.

They have seven children, eighteen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. The celebration of the event was heartily observed and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends.

Mr. Willis was married when 21 years of age, and he is now 81. His wife is 76. He was one of the first men to cross the old Cobourg line on Rice Lake. A grandfather of Mrs. Willis fought in the war of 1812 and at Waterloo, and Mrs. Beavis plainly remembers, when a young girl, of hearing him tell his experiences.

Mrs. S. Roddy, of Cavan, and Mrs. T. D. Cole, of Plainville, were among the guests at the celebration.

The annual dance of the Warsaw Football Club will be held in the Warsaw town hall on the evening of Wednesday, January 27.

Mis Helen L. Fowld of Hastings is among the Ontario nurses who will shortly leave for England to complete the establishment for the first contingent.

The marriage took place at Rosthern, Sask., of Miss Elsie Janzen, to Mr. Wm. Morley Sellens, manager of the Imperial Bank, Moose Jaw, Sask., and son of Mr. E. Sellens, formerly of Lakefield.

Do not fail to hear Miss Una Saunders, National Secretary of the Y.W. C.A. who will speak on "Women Who Dedicate their Nation," Sunday, at 4.15 in Murray Street Baptist Church. Miss Dorothy Allan will sing.

Fourteen years ago yesterday the British Empire was plunged into mourning by the death of Queen Victoria, closing the longest reign in the history of the British Crown; and the memory of the great Sovereign is still green wherever the Union Jack flies.

The many friends of Lieut. Walter Kirkconnell, who is at present with the boys of the 45th at Salisbury Plain, England, will be more than pleased to hear that he is quite well, and apparently well pleased with military life. The above is the gist of a letter received by Principal and Mrs. Kirkconnell from a friend in Scotland, with whom Lieut. Kirkconnell spent a few days' leave of absence.—Lindsay Warder.

Meetings at the Y.W.C.A.

During the week Miss Una Saunders, National Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., will speak at meetings in the local association to which all women are cordially invited.

Monday, 3.30, subject, "Women and the war."

Monday evening, 8 o'clock, to which all members of Young People's Societies are invited. Subject, "Is Christ Vital to Us?"

Tuesday afternoon, 3.30, Bible Reading, "Christ's Work Among Individuals."

Tuesday evening, 8 o'clock, "The Women's Movement," especially interesting to business girls.

Wednesday afternoon, 3.30, Bible Reading, subject, "The Power of the Holy Ghost."

Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock, "The Glory of the Christian Life."

Table Oilcloth Has Many Uses.

Table oilcloth can be utilized for other purposes than its name indicates. It can be placed on kitchen and bathroom walls when smooth by adding a little glue to the paste. It also makes good lining for a market basket, which can be used for laundry and other purposes, as it is easily kept clean. It can be substituted for artists' canvas, tacking it securely to a frame. If the wrong side is used it should first be primed with a coat of paint, and if the finished side is used treat first with turpentine.

Study It Out.

Here is a highly interesting paradox, which may amuse or bewilder, as the case may be. It is supposed to have been invented by Socrates: A. says that all Athenians are liars. A. is an Athenian and therefore a liar. Therefore his statement that all Athenians are liars is not true, and consequently all Athenians tell the truth. A. is an Athenian and hence tells the truth, wherefore his statement that all Athenians are liars is true. Therefore he is a liar and his statement false, and so on.

Few folks look in mirrors to see if their morals are on straight.

THE PLEASURES OF READING

"But what strange art, what magic can dispose
The troubled mind to change its native woes?
Or lead us willing from ourselves to see
Others more wretched, more undone than we?
This books can do;—nor this alone, they give
New views to life and teach us how to live;
They soothe the grieved, the stubborn they chastise;
Fools they admonish and confirm the wise;
Their aid they wield to all; they never shun
The man of sorrow nor the wretch undone;
Unlike the hard, the selfish and the proud,
They fly not sullen from the suppliant crowd;
Nor tell to various people various things,
But show to subjects what they show to kings."

These lines are by Crabbe, a writer who sixty or seventy years ago was regarded with an admiration little short of that bestowed on Cowper and on Gray. Crabbe was very far from being a great poet, but he is interesting as having been the friend of Moore, Rogers and Scott, and his verse is valuable as depicting in minutest detail the village life of England at the dawn of the nineteenth century. His poems, "The Borough," "The Parish Register," "The Village Squire," and some shorter pieces make a volume well worthy of being placed side by side with those two master-pieces in prose, "Our Village," by Miss Mitford, and "Cranford," by Mrs. Gaskell.

If it is not altogether to our credit that we have allowed the reading of Crabbe's works to fall into abeyance, we can at least take comfort from the belief that such neglect is only temporary. Nothing that is worth preserving is allowed to die. The alembic of the years never fails in its task. It does its work silently but efficaciously, preserving all that is good in literature and eliminating the worthless. How effectively it performs its work we can see by marking the trend of taste in ourselves and in our friends. We shall find that there is not one amongst us, no matter how voluminous his reading may have been, who if asked will name more than thirty or forty books as having had an abiding influence on his career, or to which he still turns with undiminished interest for recreation.

Hundreds of books are written yearly by authors imbued with the highest of motives, but in ninety-nine cases out a hundred they are utter failures and succeed in nothing but in tiring their readers by their heavy platitudes or rank insipidity.

Many works of fiction today are worse than useless owing to their disgusting realism. Writers seem to a large extent to have lost sight of the fact that what is wanted is healthy virility, not a succession of scenes that show to what depths humanity is capable of sinking.

What are needed are books that will show us to what heights of usefulness and goodness men and women are capable of attaining, and we know that these can be written without in any sense detracting from cleverness of dialogue or plot.

Looking back over a period of forty years I can call to mind no more than twenty books which have really had any marked effect on my mind. Of these eight are fiction, and three of them stand out pre-eminently as being the ones from which I have culled more enjoyment than from any other. These are "John Halifax, Gentleman," "John Inglesant," and "The Newcomes." All three of these books give one something to think about and to pattern one's life by, besides calling for the unqualified admiration of all who delight in excellence of style and diction.

The story of John Halifax is the story of a man who by his own exertions made a position for himself in the world, not by chicanery or trickery but by sheer honesty and perseverance. It presents us with one of Nature's gentlemen, a man who owed absolutely nothing to art, and whose nobility of soul shone out in every act of his life. It deals with the epoch when machinery was just beginning to alter the whole economy of England's industrial life, and is replete with interest from start to finish.

"John Inglesant" is a tale of the days of Charles I and is a most vivid word painting of the life and manners of the period. It has been affirmed that John Shorthouse, its author, took over twenty years to write it. He certainly succeeded in providing us with as splendid a portrait of a gentleman as English literature can furnish.

"The Newcomes," by Thackeray, is one of the best known books in English fiction. Those who have not read it will find in the figure of Colonel Newcome an English army officer of the very best sort. A preux chevalier, gentle, courtly and kind, a man absolutely aboveboard in all his dealings, whom even the loss of fortune could not draw from the path of rectitude. The pathos of his deathbed scene when he passed away with the word "Adsum" on his lips, the word which in his schoolboy days he had uttered at the daily roll-call, is one of the outstanding features of the novel. No one can read this book or either of the others mentioned without feeling the better for having done so.—F. M. D.

TORONTO SAVINGS AND LOAN COMPANY

Shareholders and depositors alike will note with satisfaction the encouraging character of the financial statement issued by the directors following the annual meeting of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company. After meeting all payments and expenses of management there remained a net profit at the end of the year of $135,658.57 and to this amount was added $60,334.55 representing the balance carried over from last year. The company investments have been carefully guarded and proven eminently successful. The reserve fund is now $850,000 or equal to 85 per cent. of paid up capital.

OBITUARY

MRS. BERT STEVENS.

Mrs. Bert Stevens, after a lingering illness, passed away yesterday afternoon in Nicholls Hospital, aged 26. To mourn her loss she leaves her sorrowing husband and four small children, Eva, Florence, Albert and Thomas.

The funeral will take place Monday at 3.30 p.m. from the late residence, Brown Street, to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. J. R. Webb will officiate.

MRS. JAMES FLAHERTY.

Catharine McAuliffe, wife of Mr. James Flaherty, lot 22, con. 9, Emily township, and one of its lifelong residents, passed away last night at the age of seventy-four, following six weeks of illness.

Surviving are her husband, five sons and two daughters, viz., Michael of Lindsay; Edward and Martin of Peterborough; Thomas of Seattle; John of Emily, and Mrs. M. Murphy, of this city, and Mrs. John Sullivan, Alberta.

The funeral has been arranged to take place at two o'clock Sunday afternoon to St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, and thence to St. Martin's cemetery.

Envoy Brown.

Envoy Brown, who takes the week-end services at the Temple, will speak on Monday, Wednesday and succeeding evenings of the week at the Orange Hall in Brownton.

Adjutant McElhiney will speak in Park street Church Sunday.

Utilities Commission.

A meeting of the Utilities Commission will be held this afternoon at four-thirty for the purpose of considering the proposed private bill. The report of William Kennedy, Jr. re the auxiliary steam plant will not be taken up till the latter part of next week when Mr. Kennedy will have presented more information to the Commissioners.

SOME IMPROVEMENTS

Nurses were temporarily employed as follows:

1914—119 days, at cost of $262.8
1913—229 days, at cost of $419.2

The expenditures for operating the hospital were as follows:

	1914	1913
Salaries	$1744.00	$2066.8
Groceries and supplies	1071.57	1088.2
Drugs	147.20	154.3
Fuel	592.60	543.0
Ice	56.03	54.5
Light	54.05	68.4
Water	60.00	60.0
Telephone	40.00	40.0
Improvements & repairs and incidentals	609.38	676.8
Totals	$4374.90	$4752.6

The total number of days for patients, staff and help for the year was as follows:—

	1914	1913
Patients	1177	145
Nurses	756	94
Help and children	1571	183
	3504	424

Total number of means supplied in 1914, 10,512, cost of provisions per meal 9.8 cents.

Total number of meals supplied in 1913, 12,733, cost of provisions per meal, 8½ cents.

In charge of the present caretaker the garden has proved a great success during the past season as well as providing a constant supply of fresh vegetables was also a source of profit. On the credit side we have the following:

All vegetables used since June and enough for all winter.

Given to relief officer, 36 bushels of vegetables. Vegetables sold at $42.18.

On the debit side:—

Ploughing and fertilizer	$26.0
Seed	19.7

With regard to the present condition of the building, I beg to submit the following: The walls in various rooms are in bad condition and require paint and repairs. With the exception of the scarlet fever wards the floors are badly in need of repair. The basement floor has only a rough cement finish which is impossible to keep clean and sanitary and is the cause of dust which permeates all parts of the building. This is most objectionable in the living rooms of the help.

As already stated sufficient vegetables are on hand to serve the hospital during the winter but there are no facilities for storage in the building. Part is pitted in garden where there is danger of frost, part is stored in a rented space in a private cellar. With regard to the grounds and surroundings, a more noticeable improvement has taken place and reflects credit on the present caretaker.

Appropriations for 1914.

Total appropriation	$5,200.0
Receipts	498.3
Expenditure	4,374.9
Balance of appropriations	1,323.2
Accounts rendered	$21.02

Panther and Bear

"When my grandfather was a young man he used to hunt a great deal," says a writer in the American Magazine. "He had a brother living in Montana, and in the fall of 1858 he decided to go and spend the winter with this brother and hunt. One day his brother was telling about a large cave in the mountains where some panthers lived. He thought it would be a good chance to try to get one. So one morning a few days later he started out to find the cave. When he came in sight of it he didn't see any stir, so kept creeping closer.

"He finally came to a path; there seemed to be a lot of different tracks. He began looking for a place to hide and finally discovered a ledge and climbed up and sat down to rest. Suddenly he heard a sound of cracking brush. He got his rifle up ready when down the path came an old bear and three cubs; the little cubs were playing like kittens. The old bear walked up to the cave, sniffed a few times and went in. In a few minutes she came out with a little panther, killed it and gave it to the cubs. She repeated this three times, and every one she killed would scream and the old panther would answer away off in the woods, and each time nearer.

"After she had killed them all she cuffed the cubs and sent them up a tree. Then she began digging a hole in the ground and sniffing the air. In a few minutes the old panther screamed and it seemed just a little distance away. The old bear lay down on her back in the hole she had dug. She was ready for fight. The panther came straight for the bear. She gave one leap and struck on the bear. There was a fierce struggle, with screaming and snarling, and in less than ten minutes the bear was torn to fragments. The panther walked into the cave and came right out again and gave a scream that was bloodcurdling. Just then she saw the cubs. She gave a leap and brought one down and killed it, and went after the rest and killed them.

"She sniffed the air again and began coming toward my grandfather, who had been watching from the ledge above. He raised his rifle, took good aim and fired.

"That was the last he knew until he became conscious again, for he fainted as soon as he shot, but the panther was dead—he had hit her between the eyes.

"He didn't wait to pick up his lunch box, but went fast for home.

"He often says that is the most game he ever got with one bullet, but he wouldn't want to see it all over again."

Falling Up Out of a Balloon.

If a man falls out of a rising aeroplane or balloon he will not go toward the earth, but will continue rising into the air for an appreciable time. If the air machine were stopped in its ascent at the time it could catch the man as he came down. If the airship were ascending at the rate of thirty-two feet a second the man would rise sixteen feet before beginning to fall toward the earth. Thus, by reducing the speed of its ascent, the vessel might keep by the side of the man and rescue him.

The reason why the man rises is the same as the reason for a bullet's rising when shot from a gun into the air—both the man and the bullet are given a velocity upward, and it takes some time for gravity to negative that velocity.—Glasgow News.

His Definition.

A Liverpool teacher asked her class to write an essay on London.

Later she was surprised to read the following in one attempt:

"The people of London are noted for their stupidity."

The young author was asked how he got that idea.

"Please, miss," was the reply, "it says in the textbook, 'The population of London is very dense!'"—London Answers.

London's Old Cathedral.

St. Paul's cathedral of London has had a strange association with fire. The first edifice on the present site was erected in 610 by Ethelbert, king of Kent, but in 1087 this was destroyed by fire. Finally in 1666, when the great fire devastated most of London, St. Paul's was wrecked, this being its fifth fire. In 1675 the present church was built by Charles II. at a cost of more than $7,500,000.

much. It was decided to have the clerk and Ald. Stratton think the matter over and report at a later meeting.

It was decided to leave City Treasurer Adams' salary of $510 per year unchanged. The remuneration of Street Commissioner Harry Evans was dealt with similarly. No change was made in the salaries of W. J. Green, tax collector; Assessor Henry; J. B. Jamieson, engineer at pumping station; Relief Officer Miller; Dr. McPherson, M. H. O.; Sanitary Inspector Spence; Peter Thompson, plumbing inspector; Robert Wilson, caretaker; City Solicitor Gordon; Judge Huycke, member of Police Commission; Police Matron Mrs. McElhiney, and C. McClelland, caretaker of city clock.

It was decided that the committee make a recommendation to the Police Commissioners urging that that body use as economical methods as possible during the coming year.

Mr. F. J. A. Hall was appointed auditor instead of Jas. A. Hall. The salary will remain the same.

On motion of Ald. Green and Duffus, the salaries of the firemen will remain unchanged.

Equality of Sex.

There is a little girl in Springfield, Mass., who, like many of her sex, resents the imputation that the feminine mind is not so strong as the masculine.

One day her mother remarked on the apparent lack of intelligence in a hen.

"You can't teach a hen anything," she said. "They have done more harm to the garden than a drove of cattle would. You can teach a cat, a dog or a pig something, but a hen—never!"

"H'm!" exclaimed the child indignantly. "I think they know just as much as the roosters!"

JUSTICE, THOUGH TARDY, COMES TO MR. R. B. ROGERS

Report of the Investigation Made by Henry Holgate, C. E. Commissioner, in 06, Into the Alleged Defects in Connection With the Construction of the Hydraulic Locks at Peterborough and Kirkfield, Declared Upon Examination to be Wrong

Mr. R. B. Rogers, ~~C. E.~~, late superintending engineer of the Trent Canal, has, after eight years of persistent endeavor, been successful in having been granted an opportunity to vindicate his professional reputation in connection with the work he did in building the Trent Canal, and especially in connection with the building of the Hydraulic Lift Locks at Peterborough and Kirkfield.

One can imagine the satisfaction it is for Mr. Rogers, even at this late date, to have his work vindicated in such a thoroughly satisfactory manner by such a high authority in the engineering profession as Mr. Charles H. Keefer, of Ottawa, ex-president of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers. Mr. Rogers may have felt that after doing such an important engineering work and gaining a world-wide reputation, that it was a cruel thing that his fellow-citizens, even though they differed from him politically, should combine for political gain to rob him of his just reward. He has, by his skill and labor, built a monument for himself and at the same time made the name of his native city known the world over.

It will be recollected that when, in 1886, the Department decided that the height of lift on the Trent canal system at Peterborough should be overcome by a hydraulic lift lock Mr. Rogers was appointed to go to Europe and inspect and report on the structure and build of two of the earliest locks that had been erected, one in France and another in Belgium. This mission he executed with great skill, and was able to suggest changes in the structural design that added very materially to the efficiency of the lock and for permanency in construction. The Peterborough lock was the first to be erected entirely of concrete. The details were worked out very skilfully under the direction of Mr. Rogers, as superintendent of construction.

The Trent canal is unique in this way, that it is the first canal on which th entire structures, both locks and dams, were built wholly of concrete. Indeed, for the first time in the world. No. 4 lock was the first mitre gate lock to be built of concrete entirely. The work was handled to design and in a surprisingly efficient way. No more permanent structures are to be found anywhere on this continent.

That insignificant developments, which are common to all works of magnitude, should have been seized upon for political purposes, to discredit such a great work done in our city, is much to be deprecated. Our city owes Mr. Rogers a debt of gratitude for the work of continental importance he had erected in our city, and congratulates him upon the most satisfactory outcome of his persistent endeavors to have this matter put right. No amount of advertising could make the name of the city of Peterborough so well known at home and abroad to scientific as well as to laymen, as being the Lift Lock City of Canada.

For the benefit of those who were not here at the time, and others who may not remember the commotion that was caused by the publication of the sensational articles that were written in the Liberal papers, we give below a synopsis of the case.

The cause of the investigation was that the Peterborough Examiner, the local Liberal newspaper, during the regime of the late Liberal Government, published in scathing terms and statements that the construction, design and work in conection with the building of the hydraulic locks at Peterborough and Kirkfield were defective, and would cost enormous sums of money to repair. This report caused a sensation, was copied in all the Liberal newspapers in Canada.

In consequence of these allegations, R. B. Rogers, chief engineer of the Trent canal (of which these locks form a part), knowing that these charges were made for political purposes and for home consumption, and were without foundation, at once asked the Government to appoint a commissioner to investigate the truth of these charges.

The Government appointed Henry Holgate, C. E., a commissioner, to go into the matter and prepare a report. In consequence of Commissioner Holgate's report, the then minister of railways and canals (Mr. Emmerson), asked Mr. Rogers to send in his resignation.

Mr. Rogers, who was an appointee of the former Conservative Government, at once demanded that an opportunity be given to him to reply to this report, stating at the same time that every statement in the Holgate report reflecting unfavorably on him (Mr. Rogers) was untrue and not according to fact, and that the whole matter was a scheme of certain local Liberal politicians to oust him from his position for political purposes, in order that they could get control of the expenditures on the Trent canal. That this scheme worked admirably was disclosed by the recent investigation (1914) by the Government into expenditures on the Trent canal.

The request of Mr. Rogers that he be given a chance to refute the charges made against him (a right that any British subject can claim), had been persistently refused until

SAY RUSSIAN ASSAULTS ON PRZEMYSL HAVE CEASED

Five Thousand Russian Prisoners in Fortress According to Reports From Vienna

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 25. — A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says Vienna reports that the Russian assaults on Przmysl have practically ceased, and there are five thousand Russian prisoners in the fortress.

A wireless despatch from Vienna early today says: "In Bukowina, quiet reigns, after our last successful battles in the Carpathians, when the Russians were driven out of several trenches which they had pushed forward, south of the passes."

BEFORE STOCK TAKING THE BARGAIN SEASON

This is the month in which the thrifty shopper scans the newspaper advertising closely.

It is the time just before stock taking when merchants are anxious to clean house.

It is better business to sell small lots of merchandise at a loss than to carry them over another year.

Cash can be used — dead stocks eat their heads off.

So it is the custom of the stores to make this month a clearance season.

Therefore, the advertising columns of The Review hold more than their usual interest.

FOUR HUNDRED CARS IN REPAIR SHOP DESTROYED

Building at Essen Was Wrecked by British Bombs

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Amsterdam, Jan. 25.—The British air raid last week on Essen resulted in the destruction of 400 war automobiles. According to the correspondent of the Handelsblad, these cars were in a repair shop which was wrecked by British bombs.

The loss of this large shop and its elaborate equipment, is a serious blow and Germans have been compelled to take over a private automobile factory at Aix-La-Chapelle, where hundreds of Dutch workmen have obtained employment.

CALLING OUT THE LANDSTURM VETS.

Amsterdam, Jan. 25.—A telegram received here from Berlin sets forth that in the province of Brandburg in which Berlin is located, there has been called up for medical examination, 50-year-old untrained men of the Landsturm of 1886, 1887, and 1888 classes.

The Foe's Big Gun

LONDON, 25. — A German military ert writing in a German artill magazine discusses an asson by the London Times tha German navy possesses a which carries three miles fur than the best British naval apon, and admits that Kru are manufacturing a gun ose projectile weighs a ton ahwhich develops a muzzle veloc of 3,700 feet per second.

The writer reons from these figures that the eapon has 58 per cent. great velocity than the British nav best weapon, and has a ranof 8 miles. It will permit Geans, he says, eventually, to omand the English coast fron alais for a distance of six mi inland.

ONE OF KAISER'S WARSHIPS IS SUNK AND TWO DAMAGED

Attempt to Repeat Hartlepool Bombardment is Nipped in the Bud by Rear-Admiral Beatty and Strong Patrolling Squadron and Ends in Inglorious Flight of Enemy.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 25. — News of the first battle between dreadnoughts has aroused much more enthusiasm on the part of the British public than either of the fights off Heligoland or the Falkland Islands. Although both of these engagements, perhaps, loom larger in actual results, to the English people the combat of yesterday means the triumph of their long-time confidence in their big gun fleet and puts a quietus on the fear of the east coast of frequent repetitions of the Hartlepool and Scarborough raid.

Sir David Beatty, the youngest admiral in the British navy, has become the most popular hero of the war.

The German official report on Sunday's fight admits the sinking of the cruiser Bluecher, but offsets this loss with the assertion: "According to information available, one British battle cruiser was sunk." This statement has been directly denied by the British Admiralty, which says clearly, "No British ships have been lost."

BERLIN VERSION OF NAVAL FIGHT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 25. — The following announcement on the naval engagement in the North Sea yesterday, given out in Berlin today, says:

"During an advance of our armored cruisers Seydlitz, Derfflinger, Moltke and Bluecher, which, accompanied by four smaller cruisers and two flotillas of torpedo boats, were steaming in the North Sea, these vessels became engaged with a British detachment composed of five battle cruisers, several smaller cruisers, and twenty-six torpedo boat destroyers. The enemy discontinued the engagement after three hours' fighting at a point sixty-seven miles northwest of Heligoland, and retreated. According to available information, one British battle cruiser and one of our armored cruisers, the Bluecher, were sunk. All other German ships returned to port. (Sgd.) Von Behncke."

LONDON, Jan. 25.—An attempt by a German cruiser squadron to repeat the attack recently made on Scarborough, the Hartlepools and other British coast towns was frustrated yesterday by the British patroling squadron, and in a running fight the German armored cruiser Blucher was sunk and two German battle cruisers were seriously damaged.

The British ships suffered only slight injury, and so far as known only 123 of the Blucher's crew of 885 were saved.

A battle also occurred between the light cruisers and destroyers accompanying the bigger ships, but the result of this engagement has not yet reached the Admiralty.

The British were superior in ships engaged, weight of armament and speed, and the flight of the German ships into the mine and submarine infested field possibly saved them from further losses.

The Blucher as a cruiser of 15,000 tons displacement, and although commissioned in 1908 was completely rerigged last year. She was not classed as a battle cruiser but was in the first class to those formidable fighters. With her were the Derflinger, Germany's latest battle cruiser, which had just left the builder's hands, and the battle cruisers Seydlitz and Moltke, the latter a sister ship of the Goeben, formerly of the German but now of the Turkish fleet, which was recently reported damaged by the Russians in the Black Sea.

The British squadron, commanded by Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, who also was in command at the battle off Heligoland last August, consisted of the battle cruisers, Tiger, Lion, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable. The first three of these cruisers mount eight 13.5-inch guns each, and even the New Zealand and Indomitable carry 12-inch guns, which are equal to those of the Derflinger, the only one of the German ships that had better than 11-inch guns.

The official report issued by the press bureau gives the following account of the engagment:

"Early this morning a British patrolling squadron of battle cruisers and light cruisers, under Admiral Sir David Beatty, with a destroyer flotilla under Commander Tyrwhitt, sighted four German battle cruisers and several light cruisers and a number of destroyers, steering westward and apparently making for the English coast.

"The enemy at once made for home at high speed. They were at once pursued, and at about 9.30 a.m. action was joined between the battle cruisers Tiger, Lion, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable on the one hand, and the Derflinger, Seydlitz, Moltke and Blucher on the other. A well-contested running fight ensued. Shortly after one o'clock the Blucher, which had previously fallen out of line, capsized and sank.

"Admiral Beatty reports that two other battle cruisers were seriously damaged. They were, however, able to continue their flight and reached an area where dangers from German submarines and mines prevented further pursuit.

"No British ships have been lost and our casualties in personnel as at present reported are slight, the Lion, which led the line, having only 11 wounded and no killed.

"One hundred and twenty-three survivors have been rescued from the Blucher's crew of 885, and it is possible that others have been saved by some of our destroyers. No reports of any destroyer or light cruiser fighting have yet been received at the Admiralty, though some has apparently taken place.

"Their lordships have expressed their satisfaction to Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty."

Commodore Reginald Y. Tyrwhitt, who also took part in the battle off Heligoland, commanded the light cruisers and destroyers which accompanied Vice-Admiral Beatty's battle cruisers.

The Germans were observed some time after dawn proceeding in the direction of the British coast. When they sighted the superior British fleet they turned and made at full speed for home waters, and it was only after a stern chase that the faster British ships got within range of them. For more than four hours the running battle lasted, the firing being plainly heard in North Holland, where it was judged the fight took

INTEREST IN THE DACIA.

THE DACIA is the name of a large German liner that has been tied up in an American port ever since the war started. She was recently purchased by an American having the significant name of Breitung, for a nominal sum, and transferred to American register. The owner has had her loaded in a Texas port with cotton that was consigned to Germany via Holland. The British Government has refused the Dacia a free passage, and the American Government has practically decided not to take action.

The British Government could not afford to allow the Dacia a free passage, as it would annul, to a large extent, the work of the British navy in blockading Germany. If German merchant ships could be transferred to American registry in this simple fashion, trade with Germany would not be at a standstill. It is noteworthy that leading American newspapers not only say that Great Britain is right in her contention, but that President Wilson's efforts to create a government-owned American merchant marine are not likely to be successful. Newspapers like the New York Sun take this position. Very likely, if the Dacia puts to sea, she will be seized, and her case put in the British prize court. ......

A MOVIE FEATURE IN TORONTO.

ALL the excitement of war is not confined to the European trenches. Toronto was not to be outdone by Montreal in furnishing a war episode, and so produced a good one. The escapade of the young soldier who engaged in a running revolver battle from Yonge street to Queen's Park is worthy of the most sensational movie feature. The young defender of Canada and the Empire first stole one automatic 32-calibre revolver and a good supply of ammunition. Then he went back and bought a second, tendering a check, and, while the clerk was verifying the check, walked out with the pistol. Then began the war in Toronto. Shots flew thick and fast, and all save one hit the place where a man wasn't. This single stray shot, by some hook or by crook, hit the left leg of a twelve-year-old boy just above the ankle. Wounded, he fell to the sidewalk. The battle continued. The retreating warrior commandeered one of Simpson's delivery waggons, while an auto was brought into commission to facilitate the pursuit. Soon a motley throng of people had volunteered for active service, and, utterly disregarding the crack of fire-arms and the whizzing of lead, joined in the chase. At Queen's Park a policeman was taken aboard the auto, and, the chambers of the revolver being emptied, the auto was driven into the rear of the waggon, upsetting the soldier in the act of re-loading. He was quickly handcuffed, and is now resting peacefully in the police station. He was not drunk, nor is he considered insane.

The story is exciting, interesting and humiliating. What is the use of sending men to fight the Germans, if they can't shoot any straighter than that? Possibly the young chap just wanted to shoot up the town and make people dance to the sound of his gun. If a stray shot wounded an innocent bystander, everybody ought to give thanks that he was only wounded, not killed, and that there were not more casualties. All the young hero has to do now is to shoot the Mayor and the Chief of Police, snap the bars off his cell, and make a clean get-away. If he isn't given a medal, perhaps he will receive a number. Some volunteers do not appear to have a proper regard for the use they are to make of fire-arms, and the development of this case will likely be watched with interest by more than merely those of Toronto.

WHY NOT GIVE ENGLISH MINORITIES THEIR RIGHTS?

MONTREAL is still in the throes of the tramways question. Not until the French-Canadians of Quebec accord their English-speaking fellow-citizens, who are a minority, their rights, will there be hope of efficient municipal government in Quebec. The French in Montreal had solemnly agreed to support an English-speaking candidate for mayor, in turn, after a French-Canadian had occupied that office. They wantonly broke this pact and defeated a man far superior to the present mayor of Montreal. This same ruthless racial favouritism is being supported in other cities and towns of Quebec. French-Canadians are boycotting English-speaking business men and driving them out of the province, and, in face of this conscious and settled policy of overriding the LEGAL and JUST rights of the English in Quebec, Sir Lomer Gouin complains of non-existent ill-treatment of French-Canadians in Ontario, and supports unfounded claims for special privileges. Let Sir Lomer Gouin grant to the English-speaking minorities in Quebec that which they have by right of law and conquest, and by right of agreement with their fellow French-Canadians, and then his request of Ontario could be made with better grace.

ECONOMIC WARFARE OF GERMANY AND ENGLAND.

England's first effort, says the New York Journal of Commerce, when war had fairly opened was to drive approximately $5,000,000,000 of German commerce from the ocean. In this she has fairly succeeded, for the German flag is now not to be seen. It may be estimated that about 3,000,000 net tons have disappeared, some of it forever, much to reappear only under foreign flags, and only a limited part, probably, in the old capacity.

England is now carrying this system of economic warfare still further. Not only are German firms in English possessions being driven to liquidate or put up their shutters, but through the withdrawal of all financial aid formerly obtained through London, the branches of world commerce of every description, contraband or not, formerly controlled by Germans with the aid of foreign resources, seem likely to slip into other hands. This is notably true of the coffee business in South America, where German concerns are selling out, reorganizing or otherwise altering their status in order to avoid the economic excommunication which England has pronounced against them. Only recently all German firms in Hong Kong have been ordered to liquidate. It is a world phenomenon in trade warfare, and if carried on its logical result will destroy in large measure the mechanism for foreign trade control which Germany has in past years established. Let it reach its limit, and Germany, when once the present war is ended, must start afresh to build up her foreign commerce.

In the long run, economic forces that have governed in the past will be likely to govern in the future. Germany will end the war, at the best, after enormous losses of men and immense sacrifices of capital. Her elaborate structure of commercial treaties has fallen, to be only slowly restored, in any event. Her gross export power will be much reduced, owing to the loss of her most skilled and enterprising workmen, and she has undoubtedly substituted commercial mistrust in many minds abroad that once were friendly.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MANY PEOPLE regard the bow and arrow as an antedeluvian weapon of war, but we see that arrows are "coming in" again. Aeroplanes and flying machines carry steel arrows, about six inches long, for dropping on the heads of soldiers or people below. One of these arrows, dropped from a great height, will pierce a man from head to foot, provided it hits him. Who knows when a modern scientific invention may revive the blunderbuss and iron mace?

SAYS the Manchester Guardian: "We quote the following passage from a soldier's letter as 'another evidence of the cheerful fatalism of a Britisher': 'We are going strong. At first we had a day or two of starvation. Then vaccination. Next innoculation. Some have isolation. We're going out soon, and some of us will meet annihilation. What, O!'"

PREMIER GOUIN of Quebec undertakes to advise the government of Ontario how to run the Ontario school system, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. There is plenty of room at home for his educational energies. In Montreal Catholic schools only one child in every 42 finishes the full eight years' course, while in Toronto one out of every three does.

A LARGE NUMBER of a Montreal audience refused to listen to German songs at a high-class musical concert. The despatch does not say whether this action was due to patriotic indignation or the result of an obsession of enlightenment.

KINGSTON is getting economical. The city council of the Limestone City has ordered half the lights of the great white way cut off. We wonder what deep and dark and secret scheme the aldermen there are contemplating.

THE ONTARIO Attorney-General, in an interview, says an effort will be made to secure J. W. Moyes, of the defunct Ontario and West Shore Railway. This is, indeed, an item of real news.

A KINGSTON tobacconist hast just fallen heir to a legacy of nearly $30,000. Now, if some one would just hand us a bouquet like that—!—!

HIS MISSION.

("A German will teach Irish at the University of Illinois, beginning in February, when Dr. Kuno E. Meyer, of the University of Berlin, will become visiting professor of the Celtic language and literature."—Press despatch.)

Go back, dear Kuno, to the Poles and Alsatians,
And teach them the language your nation has robbed;
Pierce out their dreams of new glory and freedom;
Bring joy to the hearts where the children have sobbed.
We love the old Celtic tongue, vibrant with music,
As it speaks to our hearts thro' the chords of long years,
But we don't want your lessons, though laden with "Kultur,"
From a land where Alsatians and Poles are in tears.

Go back, Herr Professor, your mission is ended,
For, though your gifts are many, you are "ausgespielt";
Go back, and receive your "Kreuz von Eisen,"
For we don't like the way that you've "ausgebildt."
The stars that burn with the true light of freedom,
In this giant new world, with its endless day,
Have nothing in common with your satellite planets,
And care not to shine on your Eagle's prey.
—Thomas O'Hagan.

Another German Lie.

(Punch.)

Lady (rather difficult to please) — "I like this one, but—I see it is printed in Germany."

Salesman—"Well, if you like it, madam, I wouldn't take too much notice of that statement. It is probably only another German lie."

Very Careless of Him.

(Washington Star.)

"Do you know the number of the automobile that hit you?" "No," answered the man who had just recovered consciousness. "Very careless of you." "I suppose so. But after it hit me I couldn't see well enough to read the number. And if I had taken the time to run around and read the number before it hit me, it wouldn't have had a chance to hit me."

THE BELLS OF SHANDON.

FOUR YEARS FOR THEFT OF HORSE

GALT, Ont., Jan. 25.—David Gives was Saturday sentenced by Magistrate Blake to four years in Kingston Penitentiary for the theft of a horse from Robert Armstrong, of Ayr, on June 16. Gives is a Galt man, but had been away from here for 14 years. After stealing the horse Gives sold it to a local dealer for $50 and then skipped it, but returned about two weeks ago and was arrested. The crown treated him as a dangerous man, traveling the country under four or five names. The purchaser of the horse proved to the satisfaction of the court that he did not know the animal was stolen.

Higher Duties Against Canada.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—The new Australian tariff increases the duty on Canadian farm implements in various degrees. Some from free to 5 or 6 per cent., some from 15 to 25 per cent., and some from 20 to 30 per cent., together with an increase in the specific duties.

On pianos and organs the fixed duties are raised one pound sterling and the ad valorem from 35 to 50 per cent.

The duty on the chassis of motor cars from Canada is increased from 5 to 10 per cent. There is also a five per cent. increase on many vehicle parts.

Men and Oaks.

Once as I was botanizing under an oak I found among a number of other plants of similar height one that was dark in color, with tightly closed leaves and a stalk that was very straight and stiff. When I touched it, it said to me in firm tones: "Let me alone. I am not for your collection, like other plants to which nature has given only a single year of life. I am a little oak."

So it is with a man whose influence is to last for hundreds of years. As a child, as a youth, often even as a full grown man—aye, his whole life long—he goes about among his fellows, looking like them and seemingly as unimportant. But let him alone. He will not die. Time will come and bring those who know how to value him.—Schopenhauer.

BANKUTU CANNIBALS.

A Belgian Kongo Savage Tribe That Cannot Be Subdued.

The cannibal Bankutus of Belgian Kongo make a practice of removing the upper incisors. Their dress consists of a plaited skirt, which does not quite meet on the right thigh. But the women of the south wear a hide girdle with a deep fringe of palm fiber string. Among this tribe the slaves are compelled to wear special dress, which is, in fact, the ordinary costume of the Akela, to which tribe most of them belong. The Bankutus are great cannibals as far as the male members of the tribe are concerned, and the victims are always slaves. In fact, all slaves are ultimately eaten, since it is believed that if a slave were buried his ghost would kill his master.

Their chief weapon is the bow, poison being used on the arrows. Shields are now obsolete. One of their most interesting points is their use of a conventional throwing knife as currency. The Bankutus are almost the only tribe of this region who have been successful in resisting the advance of the white man. This fact is due to their skill in forest warfare. The way leading to their village is defended by poisoned spikes hidden by leaves. They use bows and arrows set like traps in the form of primitive spring guns and are quite ready if a white man is expected to bait such traps with a live baby, being sure that the European will be unable to resist the temptation to pick up an apparently abandoned child. The poison they use is absolutely deadly.

Advertising Did It.

The British Admiralty recently asked the Naval Service Department at Ottawa to see if it could get supplies of hazel rod fenders, which are used to protect the sides of the warships when they are in dock or coaling from tenders. The Department made some enquiry and sent out circulars without much success. A notice was then given to the newspapers and for several days the Department has been flooded with responses from farmers and others all over the country. Willow rods will also likely be taken.

AIRMEN AT ZEEBRUGGE

British Aviators do Extensive Damage

LONDON, Jan. 25. — While German airmen on Friday morning were dropping bombs on Dunkirk, one of which damaged the American consulate, two British aviators paid a visit to Zeebrugge and succeeded in damaging a submarine and killing or wounding the crews of the guns mounted on the Mole to prevent attacks from the sea on that new German base.

The British official report, issued Saturday night, says that apart from the breaking of the windows and the smashing of furniture of the American consulate, no particular damage was done.

"French and British naval and military airmen engaged the German aeroplanes," the statement continues, "one of which was brought down by a British military machine just over the Belgian frontier, and the pilot and observer captured."

The report describes the dropping of bombs by British airmen at Zeebrugge.

"During the day," it says, "visits were paid to Zeebrugge by Flight Commander R. B. Davies and Flight Lieut. R. Pearse, and 27 bombs were dropped on two submarines and guns on the Mole. It is believed that one submarine was damaged considerably, and that many casualties were caused among the gun crews.

"In reconnoitering before this Commander Davies on one occasion was surrounded by seven German aeroplanes but managed to elude them. He was slightly wounded in the side on the way to Zeebrugge, but continued his flight, accomplished his mission, and is now progressing satisfactorily.

Squadron Commander R. B. Davies is the British airman who recently made a night flight over Bruges, dropping bombs on the railway station there.

Rev. Wm. Fleming, aged 87, Anglican clergyman, died in Belleville on Saturday, after being ill for some time. He was the oldest minister in the diocese of Ontario. He was engaged in the ministry for upwards of half a century.

Names of Nations.

The names of the great nations of Europe set many puzzles to the philologist. There is no doubt that France is the country of the Franks, the free men, or that Austria is the eastern empire. But one would not so easily guess that "Russians" means rowers or seafarers—a word of Swedish origin commemorating the Scandinavian vikings. The Britons have been supposed to take their name from a word signifying variegated, in allusion to their staining their skins with woad. Most puzzling of all is "Germans," which is not the Latin "germanus," own brother, but of Celtic origin, and has been variously interpreted as meaning "the people" or "the shouters."—London Chronicle.

"Corpse Coins."

"Corpse coins" are treasured in the north of England. They are the coins that have lain over the eyes of their dead. By this means infection has been spread, but superstition causes the custom to continue. A poor collier or peasant would never think of doing anything important unless he had on his person coins that have been upon the eyes of his dead relatives.—Westminster Gazette.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

For selling butter not properly put up and correctly branded.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than common tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

BOWSER GETS HIS

Mrs. Bowser Attends to His Case

By M. QUAD.

Mr. Bowser's grouch started at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when he found that a certain man had done him up for $10.

He carried that grouch to the car with him.

It rode with him and got off with him.

It was bubbling when he kicked the darned old gate open.

It rose to wrath when he found a darning needle on the lower step.

Mrs. Bowser was in the hall when he entered the house, but he got out of his overcoat and flung down his hat without noticing her. Like a diplomatic woman, she took no notice of his conduct, and, though he growled and grumbled over the dinner, she prevented his breaking loose. When the meal was finished, however, Mr. Bowser could hold in no longer. He stood in the middle of the sitting room and looked around for an excuse to begin the business of the evening. It took him three or four minutes to find one, but he finally noticed that a caster had dropped out of the leg of a chair, and he led off with:

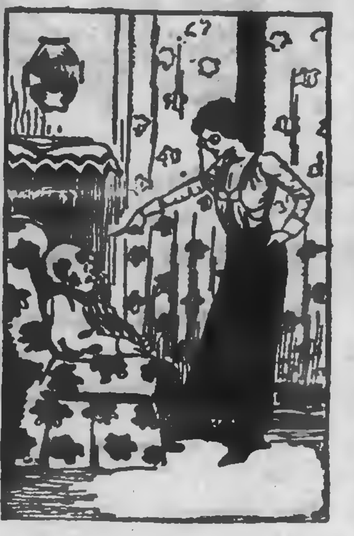
"So you have been at it again, have you?"

"At what?" she quietly asked.

"At smashing up the furniture with a crowbar! It isn't enough that the roof leaks, half the windows are broken, the doorknobs all off, but you must seek to destroy what's left! Look at that chair, will you!"

"I see the chair. One of the casters is out."

"And how did it come out?" he shouted. "You probably spent half the afternoon whacking away at the chair with a crowbar, club or sledgehammer. Why didn't you smash it to kindling wood? Why didn't you clear out the room and be done with it? If there's another house in America"—



"PUT ON YOUR HAT AND WALK."

"Mr. Bowser, don't speak to me that way!" she exclaimed as she rose up. "I know what you were going to say, but you let me tell you that this house is run all right—as right as any other in America. As to the chair, you flung yourself down upon it the other night and broke it, and it's your business to make repairs or send it away!"

"You—you are speaking to me?" he stammered as his eyes opened very wide.

"Speaking right to you, Mr. Bowser. I am not in the habit of talking to the walls or the furniture. Please sit down while I talk to you."

"Woman—do—do"—

"That's all right, Mr. Bowser—sit down. Now, then, there are no leaks in the roof of this house. If there are then you caused them by going up and cutting through the tin with an ax. Not a pane of glass is broken, not a doorknob off, not a piece of furniture out of repair except that chair. Something went wrong with you today, but you must either change your tune at once or put on your hat and take a walk!"

"Wh-what! You talk that way to me—to your husband!" howled Mr. Bowser as he leaped to his feet and his hair stood up.

"Be calm," she replied. "A wife has all the rights a husband has in this country, and one of her rights is to talk. You didn't seem to like the steak at dinner, and I noticed you making a face over your coffee. It was a fine steak, Mr. Bowser, and the coffee was excellent. However, if you can do better at a cafe I have no objections. Perhaps it would be as well for you to secure board elsewhere for a week or two!"

Mr. Bowser sat down. He sat down because his head whirled and he was wondering where he was at.

"You complain about things being broken," she continued. "Nothing is ever broken except by you. You go slashing around like a rhinoceros turned loose, and it's a wonder we have a whole piece of furniture in the house. If the doorknobs were not on to stay you'd have slammed them off long ago. You broke four glasses in trying to get one off the buffet the other night, and this morning you managed to pull two handles off your dresser and drag one of the window curtains down. Nice sort of man you are to talk about my using sledgehammers and crowbars!"

She heard a gurgling, gasping sound from the direction of Mr. Bowser and glanced that way to note his bulging eyes and red face and open mouth.

"The other night we had a little difference of opinion," she said as she turned away. "Because I differed with you, you got up and tramped around the room and said it was no wonder that husbands were driven to drink and to spend their evenings in saloons. When you see fit to take a drink, Mr. Bowser, don't stop to consult me. Just go off and get your ginger ale, and if I find you on the doorstep I'll throw a bed quilt over you to keep the frost out. I have heard that saloons are very attractive places. If you prefer them to your home go ahead, and you needn't be in a hurry about getting home."

That was Mrs. Bowser talking; but, though she was sitting in a chair, she seemed to Mr. Bowser to be whirling round and round. His eyes blurred, and there was a lump in his throat, and he hardly breathed as he waited for her to go on.

"I want some money for a new hat, gloves and hosiery, and I want it right away. I asked you last week, and you said you were hard up, though you brought home a ten dollar box of cigars that same night. Just remember that I am an equal partner with you in money matters, Mr. Bowser. Half you have belongs to me, morally and legally. If you can smoke fifteen cent cigars I can wear silk stockings at $8 per pair. As a rule, the more a husband squanders the more he expects his wife to save, but we'll change things about."

Mr. Bowser rose up and stood for a moment, and he also extended an arm and opened his mouth. The words wouldn't come, however, and he sank back and wondered if it was a case of heart failure or paralysis.

"Now and then," went on Mrs. Bowser as she rocked to and fro and looked at the wall, "you pity me because I was brought up in the country and patronizingly praise me because I am not a fool. Yes, I was brought up in the country, and so were you. You ate with a knife and drank tea out of a saucer the first time I saw you!"

"By the great horn spoon, woman!" shrieked Mr. Bowser as he bounded to his feet, but she stopped him right there with:

"As to intellect, I could have more, and the same thing ails you. As a matter of fact, however, if I can't give you pointers on almost every subject under the sun, from the best way to tan a coon skin to the last political movements in Europe, I'll go out of business. Hold on, Mr. Bowser. Don't get excited. You are constantly criticising my housekeeping. A wife should strive to please her husband in such things, but if he won't be pleased with her efforts then let him hire a housekeeper or take his meals out. You claim to be a good business man, but you have been beaten half a dozen times in the last year. I could have criticised you, but I didn't."

"And this—this to—me!" he managed to gasp out.

"All to you, Mr. Bowser, and just a word more. When I think I can do better I shall pack up my traps and get out. You'd better have the same line of policy. People are foolish to live together when they can't take comfort. I've got a few letters to write and will now leave you, and should any one call and ask for me you can say I'm very, very busy. Good night, Mr. Bowser—see you in the morning!"

Queen Anne's Gifts.

The old Mohawk church near Brantford, one of the oldest churches in Ontario, has many relics of historic interest still in its possession, among them a silver communion service presented by Queen Anne, which bears the royal arms and the inscription, "The Gift of Her Majesty Anne, by the Grace of God of Great Britain and Ireland and Her Plantations in North America, Queen, to her Indian Chappell of the Mohawks, 1712." A Bible, also the gift of Queen Anne, is inscribed with the names of royal visitors. Both Bible and communion service were deeply revered by the Indians and guarded most jealously. They were buried by the Indians during the war of 1812-14 and restored later to their present position.

The tablets, altar cloth and royal coat-of-arms of George III., above the entrance, were sent from England by the Government in 1876.

Not the least interesting of these valuable relics retained by the church is the oldest church bell in Ontario. Cracked and dust-laden, it still commands veneration, for its music first startled the stillness of the forest and summoned the Red Man to the house of prayer.

Beneath the shadow of the little church is the tomb of Thayendanagea, or Captain Joseph Brant, whose memory is revered by white men as well as red, and his epitaph testifies: "This Tomb is Erected to the Memory of Thayendanagea, or Captain Joseph Brant, Principal Chief and Warrior of the Six Nations Indians, by His Fellow Subjects and Admirers of His Fidelity and Attachment to the British Crown. Born on the Banks of the Ohio River, 1742. Died at Wellington Square, W.C., 1807."

The oldest church still stands in the midst of its quiet churchyard, a silent sentinel of Time's ceaseless

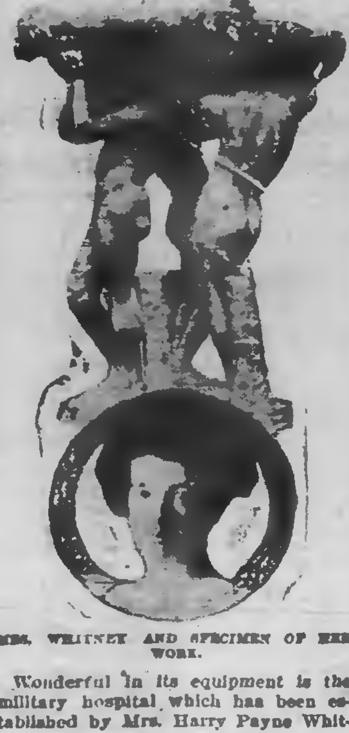
Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney Equips a Military Hospital For France.



MRS. WHITNEY AND SPECIMEN OF HER WORK.

Wonderful in its equipment is the military hospital which has been established by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney at the front of the fighting line of the allies' army. Part of its equipment consists of four skilled surgeons from New York, ten motor ambulances, a large supply of medical appurtenances and clothing for 3,000 persons. All the expense is being borne by Mrs. Whitney, who is personally supervising the work.

This field hospital is to be stationed as near as possible to the firing line, where the wounded may be rushed immediately for aid. At present hospitals in operation along the battle front are able to handle only the less serious cases. Those severely wounded often die while being transferred to the surgical hospitals at Paris or in the interior. Mrs. Whitney's hospital will care for the soldiers of all nationalities.

Mrs. Whitney, who was Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, is a sculptor of note. She has done much work of merit. The white marble fountain illustrated here is to adorn the patio of the California building at the Panama-Pacific exposition. It is a beautiful creation and was loaned to the exposition.

Mrs. Whitney's sister Gladys is the wife of the Hungarian Count Szechenyi. She is generously aiding the wounded in Austria. Their cousin, the Duchess of Marlborough, is at the head of one of the British organizations for aiding war sufferers.

QUILTED BATH ROBE.

Warm and Comfortable Garment Suitable For Either Small Boy or Girl.

Fashions for children are very largely imitative of those of adults. This is true in lines, colors and materials, the characteristics of adult styles being modified for the youthful ones. The bath robe pictured her might have been made for the little girl's mother. It is of padded and quilted pink silk and hand embroidered in flower designs. There is a little flat, round collar at the neck. Fancy silk frogs fasten the front, and the waist is encircled by a pink silk cord.

HINTS ON GOOD FORM

Geranium Luncheon.

The most stunning dinner or luncheon table imaginable is achieved when red geraniums are used exclusively as decoration. Nearly every one can obtain these brilliant flowers, and they are usually at their brightest when other blossoms in the window garden are on the wane.

Fill a large glass bowl with the scarlet posies, using their own rich leaves for the green. Red candles in holders of glass, scarlet paper bonbon and nut boxes, with ribbons of the same hue leading to the place cards, which should be white with a red geranium thrust through the corner should be adopted.

The hostess should be gowned in white, with red sash, flowers and slippers, or the dress may be of red muslin with white accessories.

First serve a cherry cocktail, then tomato bouillon, salmon croquettes with Julienne potatoes, beet salad and raspberry sherbet. The cakes may be iced in red, as there are harmless fruit colorings. A confectioner will make cream patties to match in coloring if the order is given a few days ahead.

Smart Stationery.

Pure white is the most elegant style of stationery, especially for an elderly woman. For the debutante a tinted paper is in very good taste. This comes in pale salmon, oyster blue and dresden. Well in from the edge of the sheet and envelope runs a fine hair line in a darker shade to harmonize with the lighter tint. For instance, the salmon paper has a dull rose line and the oyster blue a cadet blue hair line.

Formerly a monogram was engraved in a corresponding shade in the corner of the sheet, but fashion no longer decrees this.

The correspondence paper for an older woman is more than ever elaborate this year. One style in pale French gray, with a heavy monogram in silver and black, is decidedly distinctive. Likewise a natural colored oak with a dull brown and gold monogram, or perhaps the shaded tints of lavender and violet, with a two tone silver monogram, are in good taste for a woman who wishes something that will truly bespeak her personality.

Restaurant Etiquette.

There should be no conspicuous conduct in a dining room of a hotel or a public restaurant. Do not talk or laugh in a loud tone. Do not dispute with the waiter. Do not look around at other guests in an impertinent manner. Eat slowly, act with refinement and remember that you are in a public place. The restaurant is indeed a great test of the true lady and gentleman.

The end of the meal should be followed by your exit from the dining room. The lady precedes the gentleman on leaving the restaurant. At the door the gentleman will receive his hat, which has been taken from him on entering. Here there is a call for a tip of 10 cents if it be a restaurant of a large hotel and if the stay be just for one meal. There is much protest against this and the concerted action of men is doing much toward minimizing this "holdup."

Privacy For Guests.

When the guest room has an occupant the children of the household should consider it sacred and should never be allowed to enter or even to knock at its door without first consulting an older head.

Even a hostess sometimes spoils the pleasure of the loveliest of guest chambers by entering it too frequently with inquiries, etc.

Over entertainment is really worse than none at all. One may assume that a guest may perhaps want to be alone when she seeks her room.

When Women Call.

Ceremonious calls are not made between women in the morning, evening or on Sunday afternoons. A man, owing to the exactions of business, may call in the evening and on Sunday afternoon.

A woman should never call on a man socially. A business errand is the only occasion for a call from a woman to a man, and in such a case the lady calls during his business hours and sends in her name, not her visiting card.

Taking French Leave.

If you are unexpectedly obliged to leave a town where you have been entertained without returning any calls send back a card to those to whom you are indebted. Take your visiting card and write "P. P. C." on it, which is the French for "Pour prendre conge" and means "to take leave." Send these cards by post to all those to whom you owe calls. This will show that you are not unmindful of them and were prevented from calling.

Matching Partners.

A good way to match partners at any social affair is the following: Get two kinds of a variety of candies—say two caramels, two chocolate drops, two peppermint sticks, two gumdrops, two butter scotches, etc. Pass one plate to the men and one to the women, and when candies are matched partners will be found. Another good way is to match flowers or animal crackers.

Nice School Lunches.

When putting up school lunches for the children wrap each article of food separately, using oiled paper and little jars saved for the purpose. Cut whole wheat bread, varying with white bread, in long strips and place butter between. Stuff a stalk of celery with minced chicken or meat moistened with gravy. Add a cooky or two, a bottle of milk and an apple or banana to "top off" with, and you will have a lunch which any child of school age will like.

For variety cut the bread in triangles, place chopped nuts between and wrap in oiled paper.

Add a jar of custard and an orange.

Sandwiches made of white bread with a filling of chopped dates or figs are delicious and healthful.

Prunes cooked until tender, pitted and stuffed with chopped nuts are excellent.

The Home Atmosphere.

An unhappy home is an unhealthy nursery. The nervous, tired out mother keeps the atmosphere charged with disorder and discontent. Youth is so happy under congenial conditions that nothing should interfere with a normal, joyous childhood.

Children suffer more than adults know. They nurse their little griefs and cry themselves to sleep and become quite as miserable over aching nerves as do their parents. A home is of no importance unless the family finds happiness and laughter and comfort there.

One can eat and sleep anywhere. Too many women bank on the importance of removing dust from the piano and having the silver polished and forget that whether everybody is happy or not is the great, paramount question of human affairs.

Children's Picture Plates.

The heart of any child would be gladdened by a sight of the cunning little plates and cups and mugs of porcelain decorated with barnyard fowl. These would make nice Christmas gifts for them.

For especial use in the nursery are the dish sets decorated with blue birds. These, however, are not as new as the doll dishes.

A way of beguiling a convalescent child into taking its food is by serving it in little dishes which show him his favorite designs. There are various jolly patterns and one can fancy a sick child wondering which will be on his plate, as the time for each meal comes around.

The Dress Up Box.

"My little girl loves to dress up and to do her little playmates," says one wise mother. "To save my good clothes I have given her several waists and skirts, with ribbons and discarded hats. She watches and begs all such finery from other members of the family also. I have given her a large chest in the attic, which is known as the "dress up box," and the rule is that everything must be returned to it after play. My friends are interested and save german favors like hats, caps and boas, even muffs of tissue paper, and the collection gives many hours of pleasure to the neighborhood girls, and boys too."

Fruit Dessert For Children.

One of the best fruit desserts for children calls for a quart of fresh fruit stewed with three-quarters of a cupful of water and one cupful of sugar for fifteen minutes. Now butter slices of bread and place in a pudding dish. Pour the stewed fruit over the bread and butter and cool. When cool place on ice to chill and serve with milk or whipped cream.

Bottled Soda Water
A Cold Weather Delight

You drink Cold Water in winter. Why not Cold Soda Water?

Every member of your family needs soda water in winter even more than in summer, because the blood grows sluggish and the system becomes clogged with impurities because of lack of out-door exercise.

Liberal draughts of our delightful bottled beverages flush out the system, tone up the nerves, and digestion, and gives both health and happiness — especially to the children. Try a case. You will repeat the experiment. Be sure you get Knox's.

Tuberculosis Prevention Day.

By sermons, lectures, motion pictures, exhibits and many other methods the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis will enlist thousands of churches, schools and lodges of the country in a simultaneous educational movement against tuberculosis during the week beginning Nov. 29. The campaign is to be known as the fifth annual tuberculosis day movement and has been approved by President Wilson.

The Swiss Want a New National Hymn.

Switzerland is seeking a new national hymn in place of "Rufst du, Mein Vaterland," which is sung to the tune of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and "God Save the King." It is said that there is some intention of adopting a patriotic song, beginning "Heil dir, Mein Schweizerland," but whether this is to be sung to the same tune or a new one is to be evolved is not yet known.

Dogs of War.

Shakespeare's well known line in Julius Caesar, "Let slip the dogs of war," has now practical as well as figurative meaning, for both the French and German armies have war dogs, "les chiens militaires" and "die kriegshunde," as they are respectively called, which are trained to act as scouts, carry dispatches and help to succor the wounded.—London Chronicle.

Back Yards Need Clean-up

Difficult Job to Find Who are the Owners

That there are many back yards in the city which stand badly in need of being cleaned out and having piles of rubbish removed, has been reported to the Board of Health by the sanitary inspector. The latter stated that one of the greatest obstacles in his path in attempting to impress people with the necessity of removing such rubbish was his inability to discover the ownership of the yards. When the attention of people having such yards was drawn to the rubbish, they professed non-ownership, so the inspector was puzzled as to just what course to pursue.

The matter has been left with the inspector to find out, if possible, who are the owners, and inform such that they must take steps to remove rubbish, and ift hey refuse, to report such parties to the Board of Health.

British Casualties Heavy.

LONDON, Jan. 25. — There has been given out in London an officers' casualty list, covering the period between Dec. 30 and Jan. 12, which shows that the British army in France in these thirteen days lost a total of 257 men. Of these 92 were killed and 133 wounded. Thirty-two were reported missing. Added to the previous totals, the records of the last fortnight give officers killed 1,266, wounded 3,416 and missing 662, or a total casualty list in officers since the beginning of the war of 6,344 men.

Steamer Shortage Causes Delay.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—The Postoffice Department has investigated complaints about the delays in transmission of mails for the Canadians at Salisbury Plain, and it states that nothing has been left undone to expedite that forwarding of these mails. The delays in several cases investigated were due to the absence of midweek mail steamers from either Halifax or New York because the British Admiralty has requisitioned so many steamers.

BLUCHER WAS SACRIFICED

German Cruiser Bore Brunt of British Attack

LONDON, Jan. 25. — The Daily News naval experts says: "Yesterday's fight by far the biggest of the war, and its results, even if none of the enemy's light craft was accounted for, were certainly not the least important. Once again the battle cruiser as a type has distinguished itself and with it Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, who thus for the second time, has made a magnificent use of the splendid vessels under his command. The fight must have been a terrific one, owing to the enormous size, power and speed of the vessels engaged. No action between Dreadnoughts has even been fought before, and while we may regret that our success, measured by ships sunk, is not greater, it must be admitted that we came out of its exceedingly well. Although the full story is not yet available, what happened would seem to be fairly obvious. The Germans were coming over with the intention, presumably, of bombarding more undefended towns. As soon as they sighted a force capable of giving them battle they made off. The Blucher was three knots slower than her consorts, and, instead of staying to protect her, the bigger vessels made off and left her to her fate. Strictly speaking, it was the proper thing to do, for had the Derflinger, Seydlitz and Moltke remained to help her they would most assuredly have shared her fate.

As it was, the sacrifice of the Blucher probably saved them, allowing them to make off while the British ships were settling her account. but, even if this was left to the slower British ships, while the 28-knotters kept up the pursuit of others, the result would probably have been the same, since there was little to choose in between the speed of the first three ships on either of the lists. Nearly four hours elapsed before the Blucher was accounted for. It may at first seem an unduly long interval, but it represents a distance of less than thirteen miles.

BIG EVENTS

Britain Conducting War on Enormous Scale

LONDON, Jan. 25.—All the information reaching London daily, and even hourly, and which unhappily it is permissible neither to publish here nor to cable to the United States, goes to show that great events are at this moment impending.

All along the wide battle line in France Gen. Joffre is keeping the enemy's attention engaged by persistent attacks upon his lines at a number of points, the object clearly being and indeed known to be, to confuse the German General Staff and keep them in a state of uncertainty as to where the main blow will be struck.

Had Narrow Escape.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 25.—While Thomas Brett, George street, was taking a bath the house took fire from the furnace, spreading with great rapidity up the partition to the roof. He was obliged to escape for his life with barely any clothing, and his wife, who was critically ill, was carried from her bed to the house of a neighbor. Her condition is very serious. Firemen checked the flames after $1,000 damages had been caused.

Anxiety in East Prussia.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 25. — Fifteen hundred refugees from East Prussia have arrived at Bentheim, Hanover. The people of the interior of Germany are becoming increasingly uneasy regarding the situation in the east, says a private despatch from Bentheim, and the stories told by people from East Prussia add to the disquiet.

THREE REASONS

Each With Two Legs and Ten Fingers

An Eastern woman who is a fond mother writes an amusing article about her experince feeding her boys.

Among other things she says: "Three chubby, rosy-cheeked boys, Bob, Jack, and Dick, respectively, are three of our reasons for using and recommending the food, Grape-Nuts, for these youngsters have been fed on Grape-Nuts since infancy, and often between meals when other children would have been given candy.

"I gave a package of Grape-Nuts to a neighbor whose 3-year-old child was a weazened little thing, ill half the time. The little tot ate the Grape-Nuts and cream greedily and the mother continued the good work, and it was not long before a truly wonderful change manifested itself in the child's face and body. The results were remarkable, even for Grape-Nuts.

"Both husband and I use Grape-Nuts every day and keep strong and well and have three of the finest, healthiest boys you can find in a day's march."

Many mothers instead of destroying the children's stomachs with candy and cake give the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when they are begging for something in the way of sweets. The result is soon shown in greatly increased health, strength and mental activity.

DRIVEN BACK TO HIS BASE

FOE'S GAIN PROVES USELESS

Almost the Entire Western Battlefront is the Scene of Terrific Battles Without Marked Advantage.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Germans were checked after a temporary gain and pressed back until the fighting was carried up to their own base in upper Alsace yesterday, according to the French War Office statement received from Paris last night. Bitter fighting is progressing in front of Nieuport, in Belgium, the forest battle in the Argonnes rages with undiminished fury, and terrific artillery duels have been fought all along the line, according to reports from the western front.

The battle in Alsace has only begun. Severe fighting is likely to continue for some time. The Germans are still bringing up reinforcements in the hope of checking the almost interrupted series of small French successes.

Where the French established themselves on the eastside of Steinbach after the memorable victory in the fight for that town, the Germans Saturday advanced from their infantry base at Uffholz in an attack which was preceded by a violent bombardment. So strong were the invaders and so furious the character of their assault that they carried the advanced positions of the French. The dislodged Frenchmen rallied to the counter-attack, and fell upon the Germans with vigor, routing them from their newly-gained trench and forcing them back. Last night's communique states that the French now have carried the fighting into the region of Uffholz, which is about two miles to the east of Steinbach.

The German artillery is bombarding Thann, where the French have removed all traces of the 40-year German occupation. The devastating ruin of the German 8-inch shells has set the town partially on fire.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office Sunday night:

"There has been an intense bombardment by the Germans in the region to the north of Zillebeke (Flanders), and lively rifle firing near the Chateau d'Herenag, but no infantry attacks. Some shells have fallen on Arras and firing occurred to the north of the town.

"In the region of Albert the enemy has discharged a number of bombs against Laboisselle, but our artillery forced him to cease this attack.

"Active skirmishing has occurred near Carnoy.

"In the Argonne, fighting in the region of Four-de-Paris has come to an end. We have conserved all our positions except about 50 metres of a trench, which was destroyed by the heavy bombs of the enemy.

"In Alsace the struggle is in progress to-day in the region of Uffholz, and in that of Hartmanns-Wellerkopf, where we are in contact with the wire entanglements established by the Germans, but as yet there is no news of the operations of the day."

"In the Argonnes in the region of St. Hubert and Fontaine Madame an infantry engagement continued in a portion of an advance trench, which has been taken, lost and retaken several times during 48 hours.

"Between th Meuse and the Vosges a thick fog has prevented operations.

"In Alsace in the region of Hartmanns-Wellerkopf we have, in spite of the extreme difficulty of the ground made progress on our right. Near Steinbach an attack of the enemy directed from Uffholz and prepared for by a violent bombardment made him for a short time master of one of our advance trenches, which has been retaken by a vigorous counter-attack."

The following communication was issued by the War Office Saturday night:

"In the Argonne the fighting continued all night at Fontaine Madame and St. Hubert. All the attempts of the enemy were repulsed, but the engagement was resumed this morning."

GERMANY FORCED TO MAKE CONCESSIONS TO AUSTRIA

Visit of Archduke to Kaiser is the Prelude to a General Exchange of Troops and an Overhauling of the War Plan Against Russia.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 25. — All changes now proceeding in the distribution of the German and Austrian forces confirm the belief that the visit of the Austrian heir to the Kaiser will mark a radical overhauling of the entire war plan against Russia.

The Austrian complaints against the German General Staff have now reached formidable proportion. Austrian officers declare that in entrusting their army to Gen. von Hindenburg's absolute control they have been made the victims of a confidence trick.

Their best army under Gen. Dankl is still held in southern Poland as a prop to the German right wing. It is struggling aimlessly in the region of the lower Nida river, achieving nothing, facing nowhere.

Great masses of Austrian troops are also employed in Central Poland, performing drudgery for the Germans. All this time Hungary has been compelled to stand almost passive while her enemies have been disposing forces for her destruction.

Two hundred and seventy-eight peace meetings, authorized by the Hungarian Government, were held in different parts of Hungary yesterday. Indignation at the high prices of food was expressed, and separation from Austria was advocated.

The German staff now realizes that Von Hindenburg's powerful armies within the borders of Poland have been made temporarily useless through his yielding, at the Kaiser's bidding, to the fatal fascination of Warsaw. It is making hurried concessions to Austria. An army of 400,000, containing a substantial proportion of Bavarians, is being concentrated in Hungary.

It is most unlikely that the Germans will allow the use of this army in another attempt against Serbia, but there are urgent reasons for sending it forward to meet the Russians in Transylvania before Roumania enters the arena.

The following statement was given out yesterday at the Russian General Headquarters:

"On the right bank of the lower Vistula our troops, which are in touch with the enemy, had small skirmishes at certain points. In the other sections the day of Jan. 22, with the exception of the usual rifle shooting and cannonading at certain places was relatively quiet.

"The German attempts to assume a partial offensive were easily stopped by our fire.

"In Bukowina the concentration of considerable Austrian forces toward the passes has become stronger. On the 21st a hostile force, including an infantry division with artillery, attacked our front in the region of Kirlibaba, but was repulsed. Up to the morning of Jan. 21 our troops were holding their positions. We captured during this fighting 200 prisoners.

"In the passes of the Carpathian Mountains a violent snowstorm is raging."

One of the Zeppelin Raiders is Still Missing

PARIS, Jan. 25.—Telegrams from Berlin received in Switzerland admit that, while seven Zeppelins raided England on Tuesday, only six had returned — to Wilhelmshaven up to Thursday night. Each airship carried two tons of munitions and explosives, and each was armed with two light quick-firers, two mitrailleuses and a new device for hurling special torpedoes.

WOMAN IS SLAIN HUSBAND ARRESTED

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—Noe Piche, a laborer, residing with his wife in Ottawa East was arrested yesterday following the discovery of the womans dead body in their home.

It bore a number of severe wounds, and indications point to murder, probably in a fight. The woman had been dead several hours when physicians arrived in response to a call from Piche, who admits he was with her when she died, but refuses to make any further statement.

Von Der Goltz Attacked.

CAIRO, Jan. 25.—An attempt on the life of Field Marshal von der Goltz, at Constantinople, is reported from Jaffa, through the medium of the German consulate there. The field marshal was fired at, and is believed to have been hit. Several officers were attacked at the same time.

SHE WAS IMPREGNABLE THOUGHT SIMCOE WHEN HE LOCATED OLD FORT YORK

Present Situation of Toronto Made a Powerful Impression on Ontario's First Governor, and He Prepared Elaborate Fortifications Which Were Considered Strong at the Time—Old Gibraltar Point.

The city of Toronto has lived so long in peace and security that its citizens have probably long since forgotten that the site upon which it is built was originally selected by Governor Simcoe because of its strategical advantages, that every approach from north, south, east and west was for years guarded by recognized defences, and that for eighty years the city was protected by British troops.

When Constitutional Government was established in Upper Canada in 1791 the relations between the people of Canada and those of the United States, while not exactly strained, were at all events scarcely more than amiable. But fifteen years had elapsed since an unsuccessful effort had been made by American forces to seize the city of Quebec, emissaries had subsequently tried industriously to stir up the French-Canadians against British authority, and final terms of peace between the two nations had only recently been settled. Moreover, between 1783 and 1790 many thousands of loyalists had left their homes in the United States and come to Canada in order to be under the British flag. During the recent wars, also, some of the Indian tribes had been allies of the British, and others of the Americans.

On the other hand, the new Provincial Government was in the hands of military men, and the early settlement was largely of a military character. The Governor, Lieut.-Col. Simcoe, had himself served through the Revolution, and the new capital at Niagara was the old military fort and trading post.

It was not long before the Governor realized the hazardous position of the Government headquarters. Situated directly under the guns of an American fort, it could hardly have been worse. He, therefore, soon set out to locate a new capital that would at all events be reasonably safe in case of attack.

The site of the present city of Toronto was selected early in 1793, because, as the Governor wrote to the Colonial Secretary, it is the "most important and defensible situation in Upper Canada, or that I have seen in North America." "It is with great pleasure," he also wrote to General Clarke at Quebec, "that I offer to you some observations upon the military strength and naval convenience of Toronto, now York, which I propose immediately to occupy. I lately examined the harbor, accompanied by such officers, naval and military, as I thought most competent to give me assistance therein, and upon minute investigation I found it to be without comparison, the most proper situation for an arsenal, in every extent of that word, that could be met with in this province."

It is difficult at this distance to discover the wonderful virtues seen by the Governor in the situation of Toronto. Even the Island, flat and barren as it was and is, was a source of potential strength. "I went to my favorite sands," wrote Mrs. Simcoe in her diary at the time, referring to the long sandy peninsula encircling the bay and forming the harbor. "The Governor thinks, from the manner in which the sandbanks are formed, that they are capable of being fortified so as to be impregnable; he, therefore, calls it 'Gibraltar Point,' though the land is low."

The spot selected for the city and capital was at the extreme eastern end of the bay, in a grove of oaks not far from the water, and that chosen for the fort for the protection of the city and the accommodation of the "Queen's Rangers" was a knoll of land commanding the entrance to the harbor, washed by the waters of the lake on the south and by a stream known as the Garrison Creek to the east and north. Buildings were promptly erected for the garrison, consisting of a large blockhouse barracks with loop-holed sides and projecting upper story, a log hut for the stores and provisions, and a powder magazine. The spaces between the houses were stockaded, gates were erected with locks and bars, and canals, wharves, and a bridge constructed on the creek.

From time to time the fort and its equipment were enlarged and strengthened. A new magazine was built by General Brock, in 1811, and several old guns found among the ruins of the old fort Rouille, abandoned by the French in 1759, were erected on wooden trucks and put into use.

At Gibraltar Point, that point of the island which approaches the mainland, a blockhouse was built in order to provide double defences for the harbor. The land formation of the island was somewhat different in those days from what it is now, and this blockhouse stood near the site of the present waterworks crib, now in open water immediately north of the ferry docks at Hanlan's Point. It was but one story in height, and some twenty-five feet square, constructed of pine logs, dovetailed at the corners, with the interstices filled in with mortar. The only special defences provided for this fort consisted of a twenty-four pound gun operated on a swivel track which was mounted on the roof.

Another blockhouse was erected at the eastern end of the bay immediately south of the first Parliament buildings, for the purpose of keeping guard over the "carrying place," as the portage over the peninsula from the lake into the bay, was called. There was no eastern gap in the early days, and it was not until 1864 that the waters first forced their way through the sand bar, forming a channel that at a later date was dredged and made permanent.

Government Wants to Know How Many of Them Drink

Local hotelkeepers have received a copy of the statement, issued by the chief license inspector and sent to all the hotels in the province. It says:

"Owing to the statements which have been made more or less publicly that a considerable number of men wearing the King's uniform may be seen drinking in bars, the Provincial Secretary thinks it desirable to secure a report showing to what extent this is true, and you are requested to supply the department with the most accurate information you can, as to the number of men in uniform, if any, who enter your bar daily. This report should extend over a week at least.

"This request is not intended as a reflection upon the sobriety of the troops, but it is important to show to what extent the statemen is true.

"I need scarcely be said that the department is fully alive to the importance of the subject, and is prepared to take any action which may be necessary to aid in securing the utmost sobriety of the troops, and it is, of course, expected that every license-holder in the province will co-operate with the department to this end."

The circular carries the signature of Eudo Saunders, chief license inspector.

FIRST DETAILED STORY OF FALKLAND ISLANDS BATTLE

Below is the first connected narrative of the naval battle off the Falkland Islands in which the British Fleet commanded by Rear-Admiral Sturdee sank the German cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneiseneau, Leipsic and Nurnberg. Admiral Sturdee, who was born in Canada, was sent from England with the swift modern cruisers Invincible, Inflexible and Kent, to tackle the German fleet which had sunk three British warships off the coast of Chili.

Montevideo, Dec. 23.—The British armored cruisers Invincible, the flagship of Rear Admiral Sturdee, who directed the naval battle against a division of the German squadron in the waters near the Falkland Islands cast anchor in the outer harbor of Montevideo this morning. As soon as she came to anchor at a great distance from the port the cruiser fired the regulation salute and Fort General Artigas replied in the same way.

A large crowd had collected along the south shore. In a tug of the Lussich Company, which I had chartered, I was conveyed alongside the powerful armored cruiser and was able, after great effort, to get on board, where I obtained complete information and exact details of the naval battle in which the Invincible played so important a part.

The entire vessel is painted grey. It is a formidable dreadnought with its grand proportions and powerful armament. The officers and sailors, dressed in winter uniform, were overhauling the decks The general aspect and all the details of the ship called forth admiration and impressed one strongly. After the customary presentations, a lieutenant gave me the details of the battle.

The lieutenant told me that on the day of the encounter with the German squadron, the British division was in port coaling The Canopus alone was performing scout service. One of the lookouts on the ship at 7.20 a.m. made out the form of a vessel on the horizon and communicated the news to his chief, who immediately sent the word on to his admiral. He ordered out the cruisers Glasgow and Kent at once and these put out to sea.

Germans Begin Retreat.

The German admiral, believing without doubt that these two were the only ships of the enemy, advanced at full speed with his ships and opened a furious fire. It was 8 a.m. when the entire British squadron appeared, with the Invincible and Inflexible leading. Realizing the superiority of the adversary, the German rear admiral, Von Spee, ordered a rapid retreat, but the British squadron began the chase at once, putting full steam on and soon bringing the cruiser Glasgow within range of the Leipzig.

The Glasgow began a furious cannonading with the Leipzig, which fought as she retreated, receiving the broadcasts which her adversary discharged with wonderful precision. At the same time the cruiser Kent attacked the Nurnberg, firing with good aim and doing considerable damage. In her turn the cruiser Cornwall rushed up behind the Dresden, which by that time had reached a position far in advance.

The Cornwall received a broadside from the German admiral's ship which struck her below the water line. The Dresden made the most of this opportunity to get away and was able to escape, as did also one of the auxiliary German cruisers.

During all this time the German cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisanau continued in retreat and fighting, followed by the British vessels. These latter at 1 p.m. arrived within firing distance, obliging the Germans to engage in combat. The German fire was being concentrated upon the Invincible. One howitzer shell struck one of their 4-inch guns and cut it in half. I saw this gun today. It looked as if it had been struck with a hatchet.

Another ball struck aft. It did not explode, but penetrated the two decks and dropped into the provisions storeroom and the administration room of vice-admiral Sturdee. Other howitzer shells burst on the deck, causing slight damage and wounding several soldiers in the arms and head and the commander of the Invincible very slightly. During the fight the midshipmen, many of whom were boys of 14 and 15 years, were sent to the part of the vessel least exposed to the shots of the nemy.

Scharnhorst Sinks.

An hour of fighting had elapsed; it could be noticed that the Scharnhorst was lessening her fire and was settling forward. The vice-admiral asked if they would surrender and received an answer in the negative. A minute afterward a shell from the Invincible hastened the sinking of the German ship, which disappeared from sight, keeping up a fire until the last minute. In the moment of sinking the Scharnhorst was seen to have her crew formed above the deck rail.

The Gneisenau continued defending herself desperately, but the shells from the Inflexible struck her again and again, filling her as full of holes as a sieve. An hour later she went down, refusing to the last to surrender.

When the two German cruisers had disappeared from sight, the British hastened to launch boats to save the sailors who were struggling in the water and were able to rescue one hundred, among whom were several officers.

Meanwhile the fight continued between the cruisers Glasgow and Leipzig. The latter defended herself valiantly She gave her pursuer several slight injuries and caused a number of casualties in the crew.

Cheers From British.

In fifty minutes the Glasgow had sunk her adversary amid wild cheers from the crew of the British cruiser. At the same time the cruiser Kent, after six hours of pursuit, came up with the Nurnberg and sank her. The Glasgow was able to save some sailors of the Leipzig.

At 6 p.m. the battle ended. Of the five German vessels only one remained. All the vessels of the British squadron, except the Bristol, which was chasing the Dresden at great speed, returned to assemble at Port Stanley.

Vice-Admiral Von Spee had two sons in the German fleet, one of them his adjutant on the Scharnhorst, the other an officer on the Leipzig. Both died with their father.

The officer who gave me the foregoing information said too that when Vice-Admiral Sturdee received word that the German squadron had been sighted while the British cruisers were coaling he very calmly ordered the work stopped. While the ships were getting under way the crews washed, changed their clothing and ate breakfast. During the pursuit lunch was served at the usual hour and the normal routine continued up to the moment of going into action.

The German coal ships which refused to surrender were sunk by the cruiser Carnarvon. On the cruiser Invincible there are twenty midshipmen, one of whom took part in the fight off Heligoland on the British cruiser Cressy and was saved after the ship had been sunk by a German submarine. The Germans who were taken prisoners in the fight off the Falklands are now on their way to England in the Macedonia, one of the coal ships which accompanied the British squadron.

Admiral Sturdee, speaking before the British committee that waited upon him, said: "I am proud to see how splendidly our men, with those of France and Russia, are holding their own against superior odds. But it is not only guns and men that win fights nowadays. Great mistakes have been made by business men in England for the sake of economy. They have employed Germans to do the work they should have entrusted to their own countrymen. Germans are cheaper, but among them are paid spies. We have learned a lesson. Where are the great German steamship companies now? When in future a German applies to you for work, tell him to go next door."

Then the speaker referred to the sea fight. "We are a small squadron," he said, "sent out from the home fleet. In what took place we can see the work of Providence, for within twenty-four hours of our arrival at the Falkland Islands, the German ships thought they would like to have a look at the island too. Providentially we had arrived in time. The weather was fine; all was in our favor.

"In olden days we did better than at present, for we were able to capture ships. Now we have to sink them and all of their crews of hundreds of souls. In this fight we had only eight men killed and fourteen wounded. The enemy's ships fought gallantly and went down with their colors flying.

"At the start our squadron divided in a certain way and the pursuit began, for the enemy had discovered what they were up against and made off. We steamed at twenty knots and in six hours had them within range. When they saw there was to be no escape they turned and accepted the inevitable. The first ship, the flagship, was sunk at 1 o'clock after five hours' fighting. The Glasgow sank the Leipzig. The Nurnberg and Dresden got away, but the former was followed by a swift cruiser and sunk. We saved some of the men.

"And so," said Sir Frederick, "we have done our little bit and are ready to do more when required."

NEVER AGAIN SAYS NOYES

British Poet Says Allies Have Made Up Their Minds To That

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. — Alfred Noyes, British poet and peace advocate, and visiting Professor of English at Princeton, reached here Saturday aboard the Lusitania.

"The watchword of even the most pronounced militarist among the allies," said Mr. Noyes, "is 'never again.' When the settlement finally comes there will certainly be a grim attempt to establish some sort of collective responsibility among nations so that treaties cannot be again torn up with impunity. The whole thing reduces itself to whether we are going to have international wars in the future. A system of international police is rather a distant ideal, but I don't see why the principle of international allegiance cannot be worked out."

Hydro-Aeroplanes for Rescue.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. — The aero club of America has announced its intention of co-operating in the plan of Burt M. McConnell, Canadian meteorologist and survivor of the Arctic expedition of Vilhjalmar Stefansson to send a relief expedition equipped with hydro-aeroplanes in search of Stefansson and ten others of his party who have been missing for about a year. It is stated that Rear-Admiral Robert E. Peary, United States navy, retired, chairman of the committee on the aeronautic map of the world approved of this use of the machines.

STOLEN HORSE RETURNED TO IT'S OWNER

Animal and Sleigh Were Taken by John Lasure

John Lasure who was arrested in Peterborough and taken to Watertown gaol pending trial for horse stealing seems to have a mania for that particular class of law breaking. Since his arrest another case of horse thieving has been revealed which he admits to be his work, the circumstances of which have been revealed by the arrival in the city of David Matthews, a resident of Chetsworth, Ont.

On December 17th a horse attached to a sleigh, drifted dejectedly into the yard of Wm. Bradshaw's farm, one mile and a half out of Bailieboro. It was worn out and in bad shape. It dropped in its tracks and remained there throughout the cold night before being discovered by Mr. Bradshaw next morning. He looked after it and then telephoned to Chief of Police Thompson here notifying him of the circumstances.

Chief Thompson did not know who owned the horse until Constable Mills of Tara arrived in the city to take charge of John Lasure who was wanted for escaping from him while awaiting a trial on a charge of horse stealing. The constable remarked to the chief that Matthews of Chetsworth had lost a horse and from its description the animal was identified as his property. Chief Thompson then wired Matthews to come to Peterborough and identify it. Mr. Matthews was glad to learn that the animal was recovered, although it is in bad shape and has apparently been ill-treated. It will be shipped back to Chetsworth by Mr. Matthews. Before being taken back to Watertown by Constable Mills, Lasure confessed to Chief Thompson that he was guilty of stealing the animal. He had driven it hard and then left it by the roadside from where it wandered to Mr. Bradshaw's farm.

place north of the Islands of Ameland and Schiermonnik-Oog.

The Blucher which was slower than the other German cruisers, fell behind and succumbed to the heavier guns of the Lion, which was leading the British squadron. The other German ships got within the mine and submarine area, two of them in a badly damaged condition and it was dangerous for the big British battle cruisers to follow.

The fact that only 11 men were wounded aboard the Lion, which led the line, indicates that the British casualties were light. It is possible that more of the Blucher's crew were picked up by the British destroyers.

The Blucher, the largest and the newest of all armored vessels yet lost in the war, was built in the Kiel dockyard.

She is the fifth German armored cruiser to be sent to the bottom, and of this type the enemy has now left only four out of nine armored cruisers with which she began the war. Four out of the five that have been been sunk were the newest of the lot, having been launched between 1904 and 1908.

When Will You Join?

The Belgians have shown us their courage and grit, the Frenchmen have fought with a will
Our own British soldiers have stepp'd to the front to help with their weapons of skill
But fighting claims victims and many are gone, for none can Death's summons resist.
There's somebody wanted to fill up a gap, so when are you going to enlist?

The voice of your country is calling today, and urgent indeed her demand.
As Bulldogs of Britain your characters earn and show us the strength of your hand
Do not for a moment think numbers so great that your service will not be miss'd,
Remember, there's always a gap to be fill'd, so when are you going to enlist?

You're needed—God knows it, from farmstead or pit, from factory, office or shop,
The Germans are fighting, their numbers are great — Heav'n only knows when they will stop:
And, if you are English strong, healthy and fit, with courage and power in your fist,
You'll surely be willing to fill up the gap, so when are you going to enlist?

Perhaps Homeland calls you, your sweethearts and wives, perhaps your old mother's arm cling,
But just for the present they'll have to stand back—you're needed by country and King;
And proudly they'll know that you've chosen the best, and though smiles may come through a mist,
They'll bless you for going to fill up a gap, so when are you going to enlist?

"Be British," and help England's honor today—the struggle is just at its birth.
And many are needed to swiftly restore the glory of peace to our earth.
Oh! let not the brand of the coward be yours, and when you your dear ones have kissed,
Go; prove you are willing to fill up a gap; now, when are you going to enlist?

CASUALTIES

OTTAWA, Jan. 25. — The following casualties among the Canadian force in France and at Salisbury Plain are announced by the Militia Department:

(Previously reported unofficialy as killed in action, now confirmed):

Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry:

Jan. 8.—Lc.-Corpl. Norman Fry. Next of kin, John Norman, North street, Wilton, Wilts, Eng.

Jan. 8.—Lc.-Corpl. H. G. Bellinger. Next of kin, Mrs. Bellinger, 60 Nelson street, Ottawa.

Died:

Jan. 23.—Pte. J. K. Chandler, 14th battalion, at Bulford Cottage Hospital, of meningitis. Next of kin, Mrs. L. Chandler, Villafrance, Hastings, Christchurch, Barbados, W.I.

Wounded slightly:

Bugler Harry Bayliss, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Mrs. E. Bayliss, 24 Victoria street, Lythen, Lanc., Eng.

GIVES WARNING TO ROUMANIA

Germany Says Her Military Movements Are Hostile Acts

PARIS, Jan. 25—The Temps prints the following from Petrograd:

"Germany, in a note to Roumania, declares that the measures undertaken by the lattle country, which are tantamount to mobilization orders, and its encouragement of a revolutionary propaganda in Transylvania are hostile acts."

No official confirmation is obtainable here of the report. It is said in official circles here, moreover, that such a protest ordinarily would be made by Austria under the circumstances, rather than by Germany.

Roumania Preparing.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A loan on behalf of the Roumanian Government is being completed either in London or New York. Bankers here are bound to secrecy as to details, but the recent visit of Roumanian bankers to London and their departure to America to buy war material is no secret. It is confidently believed that a loan for $25,000,000 at about 95, bearing 5 per cent. interest, will soon be placed for Roumanian war purchases.

COL. WILLIAMS ILL.

Canadian Adjutant-General Reported Down With Meningitis.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—It is reported from Salisbury Plain that Col. Victor Williams, who was to have gone to Egypt in command of the Canadian mounted troops, is ill of meningitis.

Col. Williams is adjutant-general of the Canadian militia and was in command of the Valcartier camp. He commanded the Canadian troops until Gen. Alderson took charge and he is at present on the staff of that officer. He is a highly accomplished officer and there is the keenest regret that in all probability his illness will prevent him from going to Egypt.

It s again affirmed that the meningitis amongst the troops was taken to England from the Valcartier camp.

Austrian Premier Resigns.

ROME, Jan. 25.—Count Steurgkh, the Premier of Austria, has resigned. This information is contained in a despatch from Vienna to The Messagero. It is stated that it is probable that he will be succeeded by Dr. Bilinski, the present Minister of Finance in the Austro-Hungarian Cabinet.

Well Off Belgians Begging.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 25—A Belgian refugee from Antwerp who has made his way across the frontier into Holland declares that the situation in Antwerp is rapidly growing worse. The supply of provisions is inadequate and many inhabitants of the city who were formerly well-to-do are daily begging in the streets.

They Saw Zeppelin Sink.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Fishermen arriving at Noordwijk yesterday assert, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Leyden, that they saw an airship founder in the North Sea on Friday night. The fishermen, the message adds, were unable to assist the air craft. The description of the vessel given by the men indicates that it was a Zeppelin. Noordwijk is a watering place of the Netherlands, seven miles northwest of Leyden.

SUNDAY NIGHT FIRE

A pile of waste paper that was left in the corridor outside of George Ball's tailoring shop over Madill's drug store caught fire Sunday night at 8.25 and brought the fire department to the scene. How it started is a mystery, but the supposition is that a match or lighted cigarette was dropped upon it accidentally. The burning rubbish was carried down to the street, where a spray of chemicals soon had it extinguished. No damage resulted to the building.

Chimney Fire.

While the wind was blowing up a small blizzard Saturday night at 10.30, a chimney caught fire at Mr. James Dunlop's house, 315 Murray street. It was chock full of soot and the wind helped matters, once it became ignited. The department, however, soon conquered the outbreak.

WILL OF BISHOP THE ONLY LAW

Mgr. Whalen Enunciates Important Principle at St. Michael's

(Toronto Globe.)

Mgr. Whalen, who for eleven years has fulfilled the pastoral duties at St. Michael's Cathedral, was last night presented by his flock with an appreciative address and a purse of gold, on the occasion of his departure to take up the responsible duties of Chancellor and VicarGeneral of the Archdiocese. Mr. B. J. Doyle presided, and the address, which paid a high tribute to Mgr. Whalen's work and worth, was read by Mr. Frank Russell. Father Bonner and Father O'Brien alluded in laudatory terms to the pastor's association with the parish, saying what would be the loss of the parish of St. Michael's would be the gain of the diocese.

Mgr. Whalen, in tendering thanks for what the congregation had given, avowed he was what was known as a Bishop's man. "That is," he explained, "anything the Bishop says is law. I have a mind of my own, but when it clashes with the Bishop there is nothing for me but to give way. That is the line of action I have always followed. Notwithstanding how much I might growl and grumble and find fault. I had got to learn I would finally have to do what was directed I have always been a Bishop's man, and I am proud to say it. I am proud of the parishioner who is the parish priest's man. I am proud of the lady who is the parish priest's lady, for, after all, what do we care about the individual? We are here to advance the cause of Catholicity."

OBITUARY

HOWARD P. COWAN.

Howard P. Cowan, manager of the produce department of the Harris Abattoir Company, Toronto, died last Friday in the General Hospital, having been ill for over two weeks. He was 26 years of age.

Born in the township of Clarke, county of Durham, Mr. Cowan received his education in the Port Hope high school, going to Toronto about eight years ago. He was a Methodist in religion.

He is survived by his parents and one sister, Louise of Clarke.

C. Q. MORROW.

After having shovelled the snow from his sidewalk before breakfast this morning, Mr. Cornelius Quinlin Morrow, aged 56 years, went into his home, 86 Pricefield road, where he died very suddenly within three minutes, as a result of heart failure. He had been ill for six weeks, but death was unexpected.

Born at Peterborough, Mr. Morrow moved to London, Ont., residing there for 25 years, before coming to Toronto five years ago. He travelled for H. P. Kellert and Sons, of Montreal, and was Past Master of St. John's Masonic Lodge, 209A of London. He attended the St. Paul's Methodist Church.

Besides the widow, he leaves three sons, Charles and Frank, Toronto, and Harry, London, and two daughters, Misses Maude and Elsie Morrow.—Toronto Telegram.

HENRY HALL.

At the age of eighty-three, Mr. Henry Hall, died last night at the home of his son George Hall, 314 Dalhousie Street.

The deceased about one year ago suffered a stroke of paralysis which left him considerably weaker. This added to his advanced age gradually brought about death. The late Mr. Hall had lived in Peterborough about six or seven years, formerly residing in Lindsay. The body has been prepared for shipment to Lindsay tonight and the funeral will take place tomorrow.

The sons are Andrew and Harvey, of Lindsay, David and Joseph, Saginaw, Mich., William, Sudbury, and G. W., of this city. Mrs. Mary McGill of Lindsay is a daughter.

ORANGE LODGE NORWOOD DISTRICT

The annual district meeting of the district of Norwood L. O. L. No. 1 was held at Hall's Glen on January 19th, at 2 p.m., and after the general business of the year was transacted the following officers were elected for 1915, and duly installed by P. C. M. Joseph Moore:

D. M., J. M. Hewie, L. O. L. No. 2062.

D. D. M., Thos. Hull, L. O. L. No. 281.

D. Chap., Thos. Wilson, L. O. L. No. 284.

D. R. Sec., G. A. L. Humphries, L. O. L. No. 2062.

D. F. Sec., Chas. Tighe, L. O. L. No. 284.

D. Treas., T. B. McMaster, L. O. L. No. 522.

D. D. C., A. Batten, L. O. L. No. 281.

D. Lec., A. Webster, L. O. L. No. 522; A. Batten, L. O. L. No. 281.

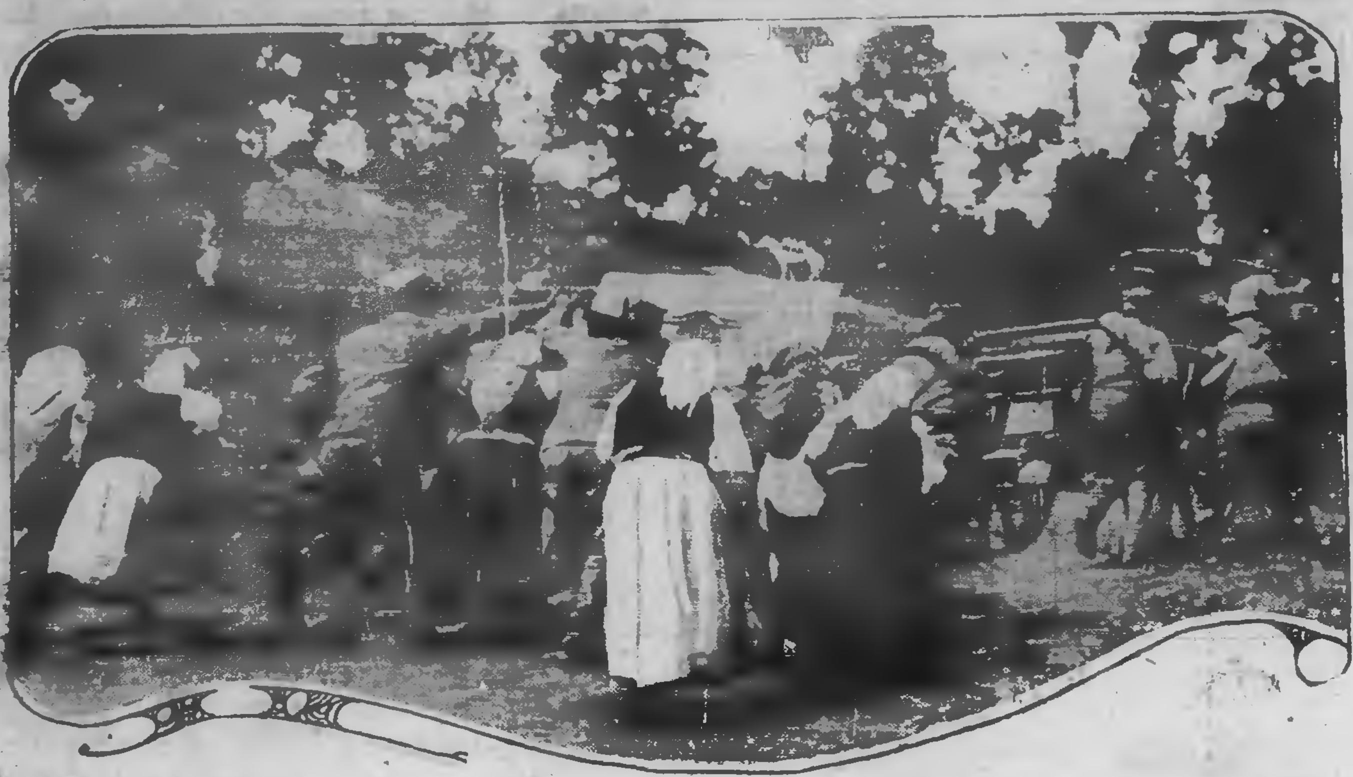
W. C. in C. of Scarlet Chapter of District., Bro. Albert Webster, Norwood R. R. 1,

The next district meeting will be held in Westwood, January, 1916.

Will Stay in Berlin.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 25. — A private despatch from Berlin declares Gen. von Hohenborn, who succeeded Von Falkenhayn as German minister of war, will not go to [illegible], but will remain in Berlin. [illegible] Gen. von Wandell will be in command in the western theatre.

SERVIAN WOMEN "MANNING" THE GUNS --- A STRIKING WAR PHOTOGRAPH



Where the Women Help—An interesting war photograph taken in the field by a Servian officer, showing peasant women giving a hand at hauling up the guns to the battle front.

BUILDING UP HERD COWS

"Old Brindle" may have been a useful cow in her time, but judged by present-day standards she was a losing proposition, despite the fact that she existed without much protection but her own hide and by the products of her own hunting. However, there was a man down in Hastings county even thirty years ago who wakened to the fact that "Old Brindle and her sisters, Old Spot and a few more so-called cows around his farm, were not quite good enough to be eating his valuable hay and grain. He had had cows for years previous to that. Nobody asked what kind they were, and if they had the answer would have been "just cows." But that day of awakening made the Hastings county farmer ambitious for better cows and the elimination of "Old Brindle" from his herd.

Now, thirty years after the day of wakening, that herd, owned and managed by F. R. Mallory, Frankford, grandson of the man who sowed the seed of improvement, is one of the greatest Holstein herds in Canada. Mr. Mallory told the story of the building up of that herd at the Dairymen's Convention in Peterborough. There was no oratory about Mr. Mallory's telling of the story. It was a simple, straightforward history of a great herd told by a modest man who takes a pride in his cows, in his farm and his calling. It was the speech of a real farmer who has something more than theory to uphold, and the facts told in the figures quoted show that the theory in the Mallory herd has been accomplished in practice.

There was discouragement—much of it—during the thirty years in which three generations have handled the herd. But the three men persevered and won. Mr. Mallory still fights to make his herd better, but he has got it to such a state that he can now tell his fellow-farmers in the Province: "Do thou likewise." The early history of the herd is better told in Mr. Mallory's words.

Starts to Improve Herd.

"In 1885 my grandfather became dissatisfied with his herd," said Mr. Mallory, in telling the story. "He wasn't getting any more than 2,000 pounds of milk per cow a factory season. He decided to purchase a pure-bred, and did buy a bull for $750. It was a good purchase, but the cow he bought at the same time was not. However, from this cow there are 300 cows descendant in the Province and there have been 100 in our herd from this cow, which was worthless 30 years ago. The best she could do was 1,200 pounds of milk in a factory season, according to the old records. My grandfather was in control of the herd for six weeks. During that time all the calves were raised. At the end of six years he had a herd of different color, but there was no improvement in the milking capacity.

Wasn't Feeder or Weeder.

"The reason is simple: the old gentleman wasn't a feeder, a breeder or a weeder. There are lots of farmers in the same position today. My father succeeded, and for fourteen years handled the herd. Dozens of females, pure-breds with pedigrees, went to the butcher. At the end of fourteen years he had the herd averaging 7,000 pounds of milk per year. It was caused by weeding out. The feeding wasn't much better than it had been in my grandfather's time. There was a scientific craze in farming then, and thanks to the foresight of my parents, I was given a course at the Ontario Agricultural College. I was schooled in feeding, and found that by proper feeding I could double the production and in some cases treble it. I got 12,000 pounds of milk per year by milking twice, and next year 24,000 pounds, by milking more often. I have had cows that gave 118 pounds of milk per day."

Short-cuts to Success.

That was the simple story told by Mr. Mallory, who then naturally asked the question. "Should we all spend twenty-five or thirty years reaching something useful?" He pointed out that there were short-cuts today. Back thirty years ago there was little or no government aid. There were no official records kept that serve today as a guide to the best herds that are open to inspection. The shortness of the short cut depended on the pocket book, the size of the farm, natural tastes and the ideals the farmer had in view, said Mr. Mallory. If it were a case of production, he needed only a good sire. If he becomes a breeder he must go to the pure breeds.

More Than Pedigree Required.

Mr. Mallory's statement that the day of the scrub sire was gone was received with applause by the dairymen, who knew that the scrub sire has been a bad influence on the dairy business. Mr. Mallory was quick, however, to warn against an animal whose main stock in trade was a lengthy pedigree. There are some scrubs amongst the pure-breds, he declared emphatically. He also put in a word of warning about the freak creations in cows. The freak cow is one of those animals whose ancestors never showed anything exceptional in the line of milking, who creates a record for herself. In the language of Prof. Dean, as quoted by Mr. Mallory, "this cow comes from nowhere, and is going nowhere." In other words, her "children" are not likely to be anything like their mother, but rather like the previous generations, which were very ordinary cattle.

The farmers of Ontario, he continued, do not really grasp the great significance of the records of productions as secured by the government. He explained that it helped in buying stock, as the purchaser could tell if he were getting an animal from a good milking family and not a freak creature. Mr. Mallory is quite an enthusiast on picking out good families where milk production has been good, and stated that if two animals somewhere near alike were placed before him that he would not know which was the better milker.

Get a Milking Family.

"I would rather have an animal with three generations of fair records than one with one good record. Look out for freaks. Go to a breeder to buy, rather than a dealer. The pure-bred business has been good in late years, and the dealers have been working hard to supply a big demand. Consequently, many inferior animals have been put on the market. Get a sire from a cow with a big udder, and which is an easy milker."

Make money by having cows that are easy to milk. Mr. Mallory showed a few things about the easy milker that should make Ontario farmers "sit up and take notice." Even if a cow is a heavy milker, if it takes a long time to get, there is a lot of time gone to waste that might have been used in milking another cow. Mr. Mallory emphasized the necessity of having easy milkers.

Sit Down and Milk Her.

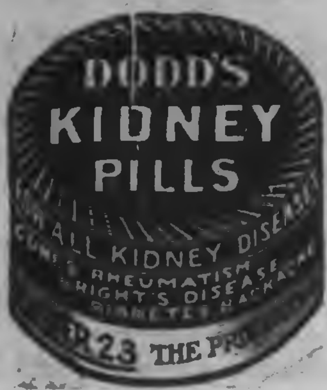
His advice in the case of buying a cow was about as practical a thing as ever was spoken, although Prof. Dean has given the same advice on many occasions. "Sit down and milk her," when you buy a cow, says Mr. Mallory. "We must go to the milk-pail to see what a cow is. Get a good pedigree, only see that the cow will be able to back it up at milking time. If the previous generations are shown to be good milkers, the chances are that the present generation of that line will be good, and so on down through time."

Mr. Mallory also had a few words of rebuke for the farmer who sold his best cows simply because he got a big price for them or thought he was getting a big price. "Farmers are too much tempted to sell their best cows," said Mr. Mallory. "Eastern Ontario has sold too much stock to Western Ontario."

"Lead to It."

"Lead to it, don't jump," was the final advice of Mr. Mallory, who has had the benefit of the experience of three generations in the dairy cattle business in the matter of grading up a herd. Mr. Mallory has a splendid herd on his farm at present. In the immediate vicinity his brother is also in the same business, and both have made success out of it. In his "lead to it" advice, he means that harsh crosses in cattle, expecting improvement with the first cross, are wrong. It takes a little time.

However, from that herd of brindles of thirty years ago three generations have built a paying lot of cattle in which the present owner and those who helped to make it can take pride and at the same time make money. Mr. Mallory has been in some demand as a speaker, and has been asked by the government to speak at their "Patriotism and Production" meetings. He is a young man and will probably do some more "big turns" in the dairy farming business.



Palace and Hovel.

Probably in Constantinople, which has been described as the "city of hovels," there is a greater contrast between the public and private buildings than in any other city in the world. The streets are narrow, tortuous and dirty, and even the better class of private houses are mean in comparison with those of a similar class in other countries. On the other hand, the mosques and palaces are magnificent in size, design and materials of construction, most of them being of marble, white or gray. The seraglio is one of the finest buildings in Europe.

Often Happens So.

"I wonder," says old Pop Crabbe, "why it is that when you've stood around in a store for twenty minutes and finally given your order half a dozen clerks immediately rush up and ask if you've been waited on."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan 24.—Persistent rumors floated around the market Saturday that the government had bought 500,000 bushels of oats, and lending color to the rumors was a substantial advance in oats. Barley was also particularly strong. Previous to noon the price offered was 80 5-8c for May futures. Oats prices also made new records for the season; May was sold at 62 3-8c and July at 63 3-8c, and the undertone strong. There was less interest shown in wheat than for some days. Fluctuations in May were fully 1c lower, while with light trading July ranged only 1-4c.

In the cash line there was a keen demand for oats and barley, while wheat was quiet. One broker sold during the hours 150,000 bushels of oats, and at high figures.

Wheat futures closed ½c to 3-4c, cash 1-2c higher in all contract grades, oats 1-4c to ½c higher, cash oats 1 1-4c to 1 1-2c higher and flax 1-2c to 1c higher.

Gallows Work.

A curious note in "Pepys' Diary" refers to the unpopularity of hangmen in those days. Commissioner Pett, who had traveled, told Pepys "how despicable a a thing it is to be hangman in Poland, although it is a place of credit, and that in his time there were some repairs to be made of the gallows there, which was very fine, of stone, but nobody could be got to mend it till the burgomaster or mayor of the town, with all the companies of those trades which are necessary to be used about those repairs, did go in their habits with flags in solemn procession to the place, and there the burgomaster did give the first blow with the hammer upon the wooden work and the rest of the masters of the companies upon the works belonging to their trades that so workmen might not be ashamed to be employed upon doing of the gallows work."

Where He Drew the Line.

Suburban Resident—It's simply fine to wake up in the morning and hear the leaves whispering outside your window. City Man—It's all right to hear the leaves whisper, but I never could stand hearing the grass mown.—London Tit-Bits.

Chemical Prints.

Here is a way to take a picture in the dark: Draw a picture on a piece of paper, using sulphate of quinine in making the outlines. Expose the paper to the sun for a few minutes, then place the paper face down on a piece of sensitive paper, like that used by photographers, and place the two sheets between the leaves of a book. If the sheets are removed from the book a few hours later you will find that an exact reproduction of the drawing will have been impressed on the sensitive paper. Designs of any sort can be copied in this way, or you may trace over a printed picture or design with sulphate of quinine and by the same process produce a faithful copy of the print.

Clever Pigeons.

A close observer writes that he has noticed a smart trick again and again on the part of pigeons in Palace yard, London. A dozen or more of them will gather under the nosebag of a horse. Suddenly, and evidently by prearrangement, all the birds fly up. The horse, being startled, tosses his head, out comes some of the grain, and the pigeons settle down to eat. It is probable that pigeons elsewhere have learned the same trick.

PACKING GOODS FOR EXPORT

The methods of packing goods for the export market in Latin America and the far east need serious consideration. In the United States with every forwarding facility, the largest, best and most complete transportation systems on earth, we are prone to think of the rest of the world as being similarly provided with modern methods for handling goods. The fact is that the burro, the llama, the camel, the elephant, the coolie and the Indian are yet the greatest common carriers.

The foreign merchant knows exactly how he wants his goods packed and will generally give specifications. Follow these instructions to the letter. If, as is common in export orders, his advice reads, "All goods to be wrapped in waterproof paper, then covered with burlap and bound with metal box strips, and no case to weigh more than forty kilos," do just this and no more.

Much good business has been irrevocably lost by shipping clerks ignoring such instructions. These goods may be on the road for weeks or even months, may be put on the backs of the pack train animals in the morning and thrown off at nightfall, pass through torrid heat and tropical rains, across wind swept plateaus above the clouds and be covered with snow.

The burro and llama are life members of a union which prohibits its members from carrying more than 100 pounds—fifty on each side; burlap and metal strips are in a measure insurance against theft, and waterproof paper and burlap can be profitably sold by the importer.—Leslie's.

Reformed.

It All Depends.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

CURLING

The following matches are scheduled for tonight at the curling rink:

	Ice.
Taylor vs. Stevenson	1
Neill vs. Sturgeon	3
Greer vs. Waddell	7
Hicks vs. Medd	2
Denham vs. Morrow	4
Campbell vs. Lang	6

The curling in this, Group 3, of the Tankard will commence tomorrow afternoon at the local rink at 1 o'clock.

Two local rinks will go to Lindsay to compete for the District Cup, the matches for which will begin in the Lindsay rink tomorrow afternoon.

HARD GAME WITH OSHAWA TO-NIGHT

If the Petes succeed in winning tonight's game in Oshawa they will stand an excellent chance of securing the group honors without a play-off for the Oshawa seven are very confident and determined to beat the Pirates right in their own den. The crew from Oshawa gave the Peterborough team quite a scare on Friday evening and that the game this evening will be a struggle from going to gong goes without saying.

The Peterborough team will line up as follows:

Goal, Janes; defence, Pethick, and Hunter; rover, Spratt or Halpin; centre, Park; wings, Kelly and Moiase. Lou Marsh of Toronto will referee.

STOP SPYING IN CANADA

Regulations for the prevention of espionage in Canada have been passed by the Government.

The publication of information as to the movements of troops or ships is forbidden, and also information with regard to defence measures of a kind to be useful to the enemy. No person is allowed to make sketches or photographs of defended harbors, to interfere with telegraphic or telephonic transmission of information to give intoxicating liquor to a soldier with a view of eliciting information from him for the enemy, or if a sentry, to seduce him from his post, to be in possession of explosives in the vicinity of any railway, dock, or harbor, or to spread reports likely to create disaffection or alarm among his Majesty's forces or the civilian population.

Regulations are made for the extinguishing of lights near defended harbors, and for inhabitants to remain indoors within certain periods to be fixed by some competent military or naval authority.

The forger of any pass or other document will be prosecuted. A maximum fine of $5,000 or five years' imprisonment, or both, are provided.

Got Past the Censor.

An American citizen, resident at Winnipeg, and well known in the business world there, recently received a letter from a life-long friend, now in Germany. The letter had been censored, but on the whole it was moderately optimistic.

The concluding paragraph had, to the recipient, a strange statement. "I remember how enthusiastic a stamp collector you are, this is the new issue and as one of the first out it is worth keeping."

The recipient never had the "stamp fever," but tore off the stamp.

Underneath he found lightly written in pencil: "We are starving."

This was from a wealthy man.

LINDSAY WILL BE HERE FRIDAY

Fast Junior Game Should be Witnessed

There is absolutely no truth in the rumor that the Peterborough Juniors have defaulted their game with Lindsay. The Petes have always made it a practice to "stick" the season out whether winning or losing and this year is no exception. Lindsay is coming strong Friday night and nothing would please the local kids better than to send them back with a loss to their credit. The Scugog outfit presented them with an 8-4 defeat in Lindsay and according to reports expect to win here on Friday night. With hard ice the game should be a fast one.

COMMENT

As You Like it

DUNNVILLE'S new rink will be formally opened tomorrow evening when the postponed game between the home team and Niagara Falls will be staged. President Charles Farquharson as well as other members of the O.H.A. executive will be present. Lou Marsh will referee.

LOU MARSH, in his write-up of Friday's game stated that all the Peterborough team played well with the exception of Halpin. The youngster was lost at right wing but there was absolutely no fault to find with his work at rover.

ST. LUKE'S team is going strong in the Senior Church League. Three wins and no losses is the record thus far. It would not be surprising to see See Gibb's aggregation go through without a defeat.

THE JUNIORS will practise this evening at seven o'clock and will also be out again on Wednesday evening at the same hour.

PADDY SULLIVAN, the Brockville boy who has been playing for Cleveland this season has signed with Ottawa of the N.H.A.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is easy enough to convince a man that he can make a sudden fortune, but you have mighty hard work sometimes to persuade a man he isn't hungry.

When things go easily with us conscience takes just that time to go to sleep and when the sledding gets hard refuses to stay asleep.

Dead men's shoes are apt to make corns on the disposition of those who inherit them.

Music hath charms; but, like all other charming things, it takes cold cash to get next to it.

In extending kindnesses too many of us are inclined to serve ourselves very liberally first.

It is always desirable to reason with difficult people, but the trouble is that most of the sort never have their reason with them.

JARRING THE THEORY

In theory money I despise;
 In practice, though, I chase it
For every cent that I can get
 I know where I can place it—
Yes, be the coin the dollar fickle
Or only the elusive nickel.

For what is money anyway
 That any one should prize it?
As I observed in stanza one,
 In theory I despise it.
But circumstances make me heedful
Of any chance to grab the needful.

I wish that I could figure out
 Some scheme to do without it.
Then I would throw the stuff away
 Quite promptly, do not doubt it.
But I'd be careful where I threw it,
So when in need I could go to it.

Why can't men live on heights sublime
 And cease to chase the sordid
And filthy lucre that they now
 Are having baled and corded?
Unless to tell the truth is treason.
We have to own up there's a reason.

Man wants but little here below—
 That saying's now exploded.
He wants the earth, and to secure
 A part he must go loaded.
For all the theories he may utter
Won't serve to pass the bread and butter.

Taken Literally.

"Are you saving up something for a rainy day?"

"No," replied Farmer Corntossel. "What we're troubled with out this way is an annual drought. If we had more rainy days everybody would save money."—Washington Star.

A "SCRAP OF PAPER"

At ten minutes past seven in the evening of the fourth of August, 1914, within the four grim walls of the Berlin Foreign Office, there transpired a twenty-minute interview, the most dramatic of which history holds record. * "Will Britain," queried the German Chancellor, "fight just for a scrap of paper?" The British Ambassodar made terse reply, "That solemn compact simply has to be kept." For that "scrap of paper" was the public law of Europe guaranteeing the independence and neutrality of the Belgian nation. * Eighty-three years ago Britain had signed. And, whatever the consequences, the mightiest of empires was tossed into the melting-pot of a world-war. Belgium also had subscribed. Would she, too, risk all for honor? Her reply was sealed in blood on the ramparts of Liege; and, forthwith, Devastation laid waste her smiling fields and piled her cities in smoking ruins. An empire in arms, a country in ashes, a nation homeless—and all for a "scrap of paper!" * Magna Charta, too was but a "scrap of paper," but it was the earliest monument of Anglo-Saxon freedom. The Declaration was only a bit of parchment—but it heralded the birth of the American nation. Just such scraps of paper have marked the milestones in mankind's upward climb to freedom. * Mortgages, bonds, debentures, promissory notes—all are but scraps of paper. But no self-respecting man and no honest corporation can wantonly repudiate such commitments. * As it lies in your drawer or your safe, your life assurance policy measures but four inches by nine. It, too, is only a "scrap of paper." But the scrap of paper bears on its face the corporal seal of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada. It is backed by over Sixty Millions of Assets and nearly five decades of honorable dealing. In times like these it may easily spell the salvation of your business. Should you die, of all your scraps of paper it alone may be worth one hundred cents on the dollar. In years to come it alone may be left to buy bread for your mother, your wife, or your children. * That "scrap of paper" represents the most sacred of your obligations. Respect for it is the measure of your honor. * Keep it inviolate, whatever the cost!

CANON O'MEARA AT ALL SAINTS'

Secret of the Upward Look Should be Learned and Cultivated

HUMAN SHIPS

Two large congregations heard with pleasure and profit, the Rev. Canon O'Meara, principal of Wycliffe College, Toronto, who took the services in All Saints' Church on Sunday. Canon O'Meara also addressed the Sunday school, the members marching from the parish hall to the church. Holy Baptism followed this service, nine infants being baptized.

It was announced that Rev. Archdeacon Perry of St. Catharines, would take the services next Sunday.

The text for the morning sermon was the first verse of Psalm 121: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my strength."

The preacher first took up two classes of people to be found in business life. There were those who ever hold their eyes downward, nad those who were optimistic and cheerful, they having learned the secret of the upward look. The same thing was to be found in the church. Some people went about moaning and groaning and yet they asked why the young people remained outside the church.

The preacher pointed out that all the great messages had come from the mountain top. These were from Mount Sanai, Calvary and Mount Olivet, and his appeal was that all learn and cultivate the upward look which would bring spiritual help for life's journey.

The text for the evening sermon was part of the 26th verse of Psalm 104: There go the ships.

The discourse was particularly for young people. Their life was likened to the ships of the ocean. Every ship showed by its flags, who the owner was. So it should be with every individual life. Also, every ship displayed its nationality by showing its colors. Young people should be true to their colors and be not afraid to tell the world. Every ship had a certain distination and likewise young people should have a definite aim in life. Lastly, the important question arose, would she ship ever return? Would the young life return to its Giver or be wrecked on the rocks and shoals, to be encountered in the voyage of life?

SPECIAL MEETINGS OPENED BY NATIONAL SECRETARY OF Y.W.C.A.

Many men and women heard Miss Una Saunders, national secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, when she gave an address in Murray Street Baptist Church. The subject was "Women Who Dedicate a Nation." Rev. J. R. Webb was chairman.

Miss Dorothy Allan sang "Beyond the Dawn."

Special meetings will be conducted by Miss Saunders at the Y. W. C. A. this week.

IMPROVE LINE TO QUEEN MARY SCHOOL USE TUNGSTEN LAMPS

As the present transmission line to Queen Mary School is far too light to supply the needs of that institution, the Utilities Commission has decided to re-build that division of the system. According to manager Fisk's estimates the cost will be about $217.

The Commission has also decided to replace the incandescent lamps on the street with tungstens. The latter lights will use less energy yet give better light.

BREWER BROWN AT ARMY TEMPLE

Envoy Brewer Brown was heard by a large audience at the Army Temple Saturday evening, and the services on Sunday also were well attended.

Envoy Brown's story of his life in the gutter, and of his reclamation, is graphically told, and his appeal to live the better life is very effective.

He will speak at the Orange Hall in Brownton every night this week with the exception of Tuesday.

Adjutant McElhiney gave addresses in Park street church yesterday.

LEGISLATION TO BE ASKED FOR BY COMMISSION

At the meeting of the Utilities Commission on Saturday afternoon, Solicitor E. H. D. Hall submitted a draft of proposed legislation to be asked for. It was resolved to ask for legislation to authorise the issuing of debentures to pay for the cost of improvement that had been made in the waterworks system over the amount of debentures that had been issued, but not for any work yet to be done, and also to authorise the borrowing of money for work undertaken under the Public Utilities Act, pending the completion of the work and the issuing of debentures.

Choral Society.

A special meeting of the executive of the Choral Society was held last week to decide operations for this half year. Present, Messrs. Stocker, C. E. Coleman, R. J. Devey, Mather, G. Chandler, McKee, Boddy, East. Gray.

Much regret is felt at the illness of Mr. Bert Read, and it was decided for the present to appoint Mr. Mather to combine the offices of secretary and treasurer. It was also decided to give a concert on Tuesday, February 16th.

Important business will be brought up at the rehearsal on Tuesday next in the collegiate hall.

The sympathy of the members was extended for Mr. and Mrs. Moule in the sad loss of their daughter last Thursday.

AUTO CORPS FOR THE HOME GUARD

Association Will Discuss the Suggestion

Several matters are on the slate for discussion when the general meeting of the Automobile Association takes place tonight at 8 o'clock. One of them is a proposition which Ald. A. H. Stratton will present advocating the formation of an automobile corps to act in conjunction if necessary with the home guard. Mr. Stratton has attended a general meeting connected with this matter which was held in Toronto and his information is expectd to be valuable to all autoists. Other questions that will be taken up are, government aid on the Peterborough-Port Hope road, connection with the Ontario Motor League and new plans for the coming season.

ABOLITION OF THE BAR

Rev. Ben Spence Says Liquor Traffic is Always in the Way

When Rev. Ben H. Spence, speaking to the congregation of St. Andrew's Church last night said that one hundred and ninety-three persons were counted in the bar room of a Toronto hotel Saturday night and that forty-five of the number wore a soldier's uniform, he used a powerful argument in favor of the abolition of the bar from Ontario.

Rev. Mr. Spence is an enthusiastic temperance man from the ground up. He spoke with customary vigor and sincerity and furnished his hearers with some solid food for thought upon the liquor question. His great quarrel with the liquor traffic was that it did not give God a chance to fight other evils. It was always hampering, always in the way. But the churches' hands were tied up against an evil of man's own creation. A real solution of the great problems of humanity was impossible so long as the liquor traffic remained.

The church was fighting the problem today however in a clear-cut, definite way, because it realized the greatness of the issue. All the churches had recognized it, all denominations and were united in their stand that it must be suppressed.

Rev. Mr. Spence was able to show by means of diagrams how local option territory was on the increase in Ontario and how chances looked the brightest for the province eventually going dry. In the fight co-operation was absolutely necessary for the extermination of the blighting curse and temperance should form one of the thickest and most prominent planks in the political platforms of legislators of today.

At the close of his discourse an opportunity was given by Mr. Spence for every one to assist the campaign for temperance in a financial way, the speaker putting the matter up to his hearers in his own inimitable manner to show them how clear was their duty and how plain was the path set before them in the great question of the abolition of the bar.

INSTRUMENTS ARE REQUIRED FOR THE HYDRO OPERATIONS

When the city took over the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company the property expropriated included practically no instruments. To carry on the work with any degree of success, the manager reported to the meeting of the Utilities Commission on Saturday that it is necessary to purchase a number of instruments, the total cost of which could not be stated accurately. The Commission authorized the manager to make such purchases as he found necessary.

BOARD ASKS FOR EVIDENCE

Commission at Kingston Say They Will Take Action

Kingston, Jan. 25.—Ald. H. C. Nickle, who last Monday laid charges before the City Council with regard to infractions of the law in Kingston, in the failure of the Police Department to bring the offenders to time, has been asked by the Board of Police Commissioners to lay his evidence before it. The board, on receipt of the evidence, pledges itself to at once take such action as may be warranted by the facts therein disclosed. Ald. Nickle, it is understood, it not inclined to present the evidence he secured through private detectives.

REV. J. A. MACKENZIE WAS HEARD BY TWO LARGE CONGREGATIONS

The link, missing from the chain of activities, at Knox Presbyterian Church is back in its place and Rev. J. A. MacKenzie preached to large congregations at the services on Sunday. The congregations were not disappointed as their new minister delivered two splendid sermons. The choir made a special effort and the music added to the brightness of the services.

RECOMMEND THAT MINIMUM RATE BE DOUBLED

Hydro Electric Commission Would Increase Rate to $1

The minimum commercial rate according to the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario has been .50 per K.W. per month. This means that if a merchant shuts up his store during the summer months and used no light he has to pay .50 per month per K.W. for the privilege of being connected with the system. The Ontario Commission has found that 50 cents was not enough and as a result have recommended to the Peterborough Commission that the rate be $1.00. The matter came up at Saturday's meeting and was referred to the manager for a report.

A letter was read from the John McDougall Co. re expenses for the visit of an expert to this city in connection with the installation of the McDougall pump. The letter was forwarded to William Kennedy, Jr., for his opinion.

JUSTICE COMES

recently, when the present minister of railways and canals (Mr. Cochrane) consented to apoint a commissioner to consider Mr. Rogers' reply to the Holgate report. The commissioner apointed by the minister of railways and canals (Mr. Cochrane) was the well-known engineer, Mr. Charles H. Keefer, M.A.S.C.E., of Ottawa, ex-president of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers. The extent to which Commissioner Holgate gave credence to current political gossip, rather than to the well-established usages and ethics of his profession, can now be judged by the result of Mr. Keefer's report, which is summarized below.

The finding of Mr. Keefer, after going thoroughly into all the evidence taken before Commissioner Holgate in the original investigation, and Mr. Rogers' reply thereto, together with a minute examination of the works as they exist at present, and with all other facts connected with the matter, is, in short, that every engineering question that Mr. Holgate charged was wrongly applied by Mr. Rogers in connection with his work in building and designing the hydraulic locks at Peterborough and Kirkfield, was, on the contrary, the proper solution of the problem presented, as has always been the contention of Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Keefer closes his report with the following words:

"In view of this, I think that the Deputy Minister and Chief Engineer of the Department acted hastily in not giving Mr. Rogers an opportunity to reply to the finding of the investigation before requesting his resignation.

"After the consideration of all the facts in this case, I am of the opinion that justice has not been done. There is no engineering work that I know of that would be exempt from criticism. All canal works have their difficulties and troubles from water during construction. The best test of work is the final result in the completed work. The work of the Trent canal, done under the direction of Mr. Rogers, is the best evidence that it has been properly designed and constructed, and is a work that any engineer might be proud to have been connected with."

BRANTFORD WANTS TO HEAR DR. J. L. GORDON

Brantford, Jan. 25. — At a meeting of a number of interested laymen and members of the ministerial alliance, it was decided, after a somewhat lengthy discussion, to invite Dr. J. L. Gordon, formerly of Winnipeg, to visit Brantford and conduct one of his "Christian Citizenship" campaigns. Dr. Gordon is at the present time in the eastern part of Ontario on similar work, and an effort will be made to have a campaign commenced under his leadership in Brantford on February 5th, to continue about ten days. The campaign will in all probability be headquartered at the Zion Presbyterian Church, and will be of an interdenominational character.

TEMPERANCE FORCES ARE IN ANNUAL RALLY HERE

Temperance forces are rallying today to discuss plans for another year and hear reports of the work of last year. The members of the County Temperance Association convened this afternoon at two-thirty in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. A general report of the season's work was presented by A. E. Kennedy, of Lakefield. A discussion took place afterwards on the Scott Act, and several suggestions were advanced by members advocating amendments to the act, whereby the temperance forces would be in a more advantageous situation to carry on their campaign. The matter of law enforcement also came in for considerable discussion.

The session got down to business about three o'clock with the following members of the county association present: H. C. Stabler, J. C. Shook, Andrew Fairbairn, and A. E. Kennedy, Lakefield; Rev. Mr. McLaren, of Smith; Joseph Mann, of Smith; Rev. J. N. Clarry, Mr. A. B. A. Cunningham, William Galbraith, Richard Lees, Dr. McTavish and Rev. Mr. Kettlewell, field secretaries of the Dominion Alliance, Toronto.

Valuable Information for the Travelling Public

The Canadian Pacific Train Service Between Toronto-Montreal and Ottawa

Attention is called to excellent night service from Toronto to Montreal and Ottawa via Canadian Pacific. Train No. 22 leaving Toronto Union Station at 11.40 p.m. daily, carries electric lighted sleepers, compartment observation car from Toronto to Montreal, and Toronto to Ottawa. This train runs via Lake Ontario Shore Line, due Montreal 8.55 a.m. daily, the Ottawa sleeper arriving in Ottawa 7.25 a.m. daily. Smoking is permitted in the lounge or observation room of the Buffet Library Observation Compartment Car Toronto to Montreal, and arrangements have been made whereby porters on this car will press clothes for passengers at very reasonable charges.

Being the last night train from Toronto for Montreal and Ottawa, it gives the travelling public the opportunity of spending the entire evening with their families, or enables them to attend the theatre and other places of amusement, and still have plenty of time to take the train. Sleepers are placed for occupancy at 10.00 p.m. at Toronto Union Station, enabling passengers who so desire to retire at that time.

Dining Car is attached at Smith's Falls every morning serving breakfast into Montreal, so that business men may proceed direct to their offices or appointments immediately on arrival.

The Canadian Pacific operates a high-class passenger train from North Toronto Station at 10.00 p.m. daily, carrying standard electric lighted sleepers and compartment car for Montreal, and sleeper Toronto to Ottawa. Train is due Montreal 7.35 a.m. daily, and Ottawa car reaches that point at 7.25 a.m. daily.

A solid night train is also operated from Toronto Union Station to Ottawa leaving Toronto 10.50 p.m. daily, this train carrying standard electric lighted sleepers and compartment car, due Ottawa 7.25 a.m. daily. Carries from Smith's Falls to Ottawa the standard sleepers for that point, leaving North Toronto at 10.00 p.m. and the standard sleepers leaving Toronto Union Station at 11.40 p.m. daily, so that Ottawa passengers may take their choice of either one of these three trains, and reach Ottawa at exactly the same time.

The Canadian limited No. 20 via Lake Ontario Shore Line route leaves Toronto daily 9.00 a.m. for Montreal, connection at Smith's Falls for Ottawa, stopping at important places, carrying Observation Parlor Car, Dining Room, and first and second class coaches.

Particulars from any Canadian Pacific Ticket Agent, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

EXAMINATION OF AUTO DRIVERS

According to instructions from the Provincial Secretary's office there has been no change in the system of licensing and examining chauffeurs from that in force during the past year.

In cases of chauffeurs who have already passed the examination, it will not be necessary that they be examined again.

A form of application for renewal of their license has already been forwarded to them, and it will simply be necessary that they fill in this and take an affidavit as to the correctness of the statements therein contained, and forward it with the fee of $1 to the Provincial Secretary's office, Toronto.

THE MAN ON THE BOX AT EMPIRE THEATRE

The feature film at the Empire Theatre this week is none other than Jesse Lasky's famous presentation entitled "The Man on the Box." This story has been revealed to Peterborough theatre-goers before but has never been thrown on the canvas in this city. The adventures of Lieut. Warburton "The Man on the Box" can be shown to a much greater advantage by means of the movies than by the stage. The film will be at the Empire today, tomorrow and Wednesday, and will feature a bill that will provide a first-class entertainment.

BRING PRIVATE DETECTIVES HERE TO SEE WHAT'S DOING

Suggestion is Made by Rev. R. G. Peever, When Speaking to County Temperance Association --- People Might be Surprised

SOME RESOLUTIONS ARE PASSED

That an investigation be made in the city by private detectives to see what is going on and whether the liquor license laws are being properly enforced was suggested yesterday by Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of George Street Methodist Church. He was speaking to the members of the County Temperance Association endeavoring to point out ways and means for stimulating and strengthening the temperance sentiment.

"I would like to see private detectives brought in here," he said, having in mind Kingston's investigation, "to see what is going on in our city. We might be surprised, and find out whether the liquor laws are being carried out here, and to what extent license holders are free to give quantities of liquor to drunk and reeling men."

Much useful information and marked enthusiasm in the cause of temperance throughout the city and county municipalities featured the annual meeting of the association which was in session from two-thirty to five-thirty in the parlors of the Y.M.C.A. building which the association kindly placed at the disposal of the association for the occasion. Some resolutions of considerable import to the liquor men were passed while the Oriental temperance hotel came in for a eulogistic resolution on the good work it was doing and the stand that had been taken in constituting it a temperance institution.

After opening devotional erexcises Mr. H. B. Cowan presented his report for the year which was regarded as highly gratifying. Mr. A. B. Cunningham gave the treasurer's report in the absence of the treasurer showing that there was a deficit of 50. He proposed that is be raised by subscription from the members, a suggestion which was acted upon later and which helped materially to reduce the deficit.

About the Canada Temperance Act.

It fell to Mr. Cunningham who is secretary of the City Temperance Association to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the Canada Temperance Act which is now on the statute books. Chiefly they consisted of the fact that no property qualification was required on the voters' list on the question of the abolition of the bar which made possible heavy opposition on the part of the liquor people by allowing them to secure the votes of the loose element of the city. Another objection was sham litigation in the courts which enables local option to be held back. Under the Act a seisure of liquor could not be made except by warrant and the penalties for violating the act were to properly enforce it nearly every charge being regarded as a first offence no matter how frequent it had been. There were many little loopholes in it and comparatively no good points.

Rev. Mr. Kettlewell, field secretary declared that he wanted to see some legislation brought in whereby county local option would be made possible. Regarding the matter of sham litigation he said that the government he thought were prepared to remedy that trouble from now on.

Get Another Council Support.

Another veteran temperance worker in the person of Dr. McTavish handed a little bouquet to Magistrate George Clarke of Orillia by remarking that if all magistrates were like him there would be no difficulty in enforcing the Scott Act. He said that a county council could appoint a special officer if they desired to enforce the law. The primary thing therefore was to obtain the wholehearted support of county councils. Get the reeves and deputy reeves lined up in favor of the matter and capture the municipal machinery by all means.

At this juncture H. B. Cowan called attention to the splendid work of the Oriental Hotel and said it should be patronised and supported. He also testified to the splendid work of Dr. McTavish who has been field secretary for Peterborough county and congratulated him upon his appointment to a pulpit in Madoc although regretting his loss from the county association. He would be succeeded however by an able secretary in the person of Rev. Mr. Kettlewell. Following a foregoing resolution regarding the Oriental hotel Mr. J. C. Shook who has an interest in the building spoke briefly on the stand that was being taken by the hotel. As Mr. Shook rose looking the picture of geniality and dignity his pastor, Rev. Mr. Pogue, shot the following joke at his expense, "He looks every inch an hotel man doesn't he?" Mr. Shook accepted the joke in the spirit in which it was extended.

Keep Bars Separated.

Mr. Shook came out strong for having the bars distinct from hotels. He asked why a liquor license should be attached to an hotel any more than it should be to a grocery store or a boarding house. The laws should be altered so that the bar will not be associated invariably with a house of accommodation. Later on he moved a resolution to that effect which was unanimously carried.

Law Enforcement.

Dr. McTavish was slated to talk on Law Enforcement. He thought the world was moving on when one saw an hotel keeper at a temperance convention referring to Mr. Shook. Regarding law enforcement it was inadvisable for one man to try and force the liquor law. He earned for himself the name of busy body and invariably brought odium upon himself. It should be performed by a committee. The voters' list should be watched every year. Good men should be elected to the councils and parliament, men with temperance principles. Develop a temperance sentiment in the day schools, Sunday schools and churches.

This latter should be developed gradually by bringing pressure to bear on the teachers and school trustees.

Conspicuous violation of the liquor license laws was sure to reach the ear of some member of the temperance committee. Give the license in-

WAS ABOARD THE PRINCESS ROYAL.

Mr. R. W. Grubbe's cousin, Lieut. Dominick Burke, was in the great naval victory in the North Sea on Sunday last. He was on the Princess Royal and was in the Heligoland victory as well, under Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty. Lieut. Burke comes of a fighting stock, their battle cry and present motto of their house being "Ung roy, ung foy, ung loy" — (one King, one Faith, one Law). He is the fourth son of Colonel St. George Burke, Lord of the Manor of Auberies, Sudbury, Suffolk. His five brothers are officers in the British army and have been at the front since the first of September.

MILLINERS MADE THEIR ESCAPE

Store and Rooms Overhead Were Destroyed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Alvinston, Jan. 26.—A millinery store with residence overhead, occupied by the Misses Wheatley, was destroyed by fire at two o'clock this morning, the Misses Wheatley being compelled to escape from the upper windows by means of a rope improvised from edclothes and clad only in night dresses.

A popular minstrel man claims that all his best stories are stolen. Old minstrel patrons are pretty sure some of them were stolen before the war.

PTE. WHATLEY TELLS OF BATTLES WITH GERMANS

Many a Noble Deed Done and Many a Self Sacrifice Made --- He Fought at Ypres and La Bassee

Mr. Harry Noyes of Sherbrooke St. has just received a letter from Pte. S. Whatley, a former resident of the city, who was a reservist of the Wiltshire Regiment. Mr. Whatley is at present at the home of his father in Manchester, Eng., having been recently released from the hospital. His letter, in part, is as follows:—

"I will give you a short history of events as I saw it, and I can assure you, I trust to God I shall never see the like again. One cannot imagine the horrors of it all, it passes all description, but I will endeavor to give you some idea of war as I saw it.

It is now just on four months since I left for the seat of hostilities and during that time, thousands of incidents have crowded into my life and many an old comrade has gone to join the vast majority. Many a widow, sorrowing for a husband who will never return, children crying aloud for vengeance against him who has plunged Europe into an abyss of destruction.

The Mark of the Foe.

I do not think I have been in a place in France or Belgium, that has been occupied by the enemy but what has had its beautiful churches demolished, in fact, the only indication of a once prosperous town, is a mass of bricks and mortar. Such is the result of modern guns, throwing projectiles a distance of twelve or fourteen miles.

Well, now, I will come to later events. My regiment was under Sir H. Smith Dorrien, who commanded the 2nd Army Corps. I joined them soon after the retirement of Mons, when we started to drive back the Germans, and since that time things have been pretty hot.

Hot Times at La Bassee.

At La Bassee we had some hot times. We were in the trenches there and could not get out for fourteen days and nights. To give you some idea of what that battle was like, when we went into action, our regiment was 1,100 strong, but when we came out, after fourteen days of it, we couldn't muster 200. It was hell itself, day and night, being continually shelled, and bayonet charges galore. Many a noble deed was done in that period. Many a self sacrifice made. I do not think the memory of those days can ever be effaced from man's memory. The glorious traditions of the British army in the past, has been more than maintained by the present generation.

I guess you have read a lot about the mighty efforts of the Germans to capture Ypres, which is the main road to Calais. Well, I was in that lively hole, too, which was even hotter than La Bassee. We got there on the 2nd of November and held them back until the French relieved us on the 20th of November, which means we were eighteen days and nights without a break fighting fast and furious the whole time and to make matters worse, it commenced to rain, and kept it up incessantly until the 15th of the month. The trenches were above our knees in water. On the 16th it turned to snow and began to freeze, and continued until we were relieved. The last 72 hours were spent in water to our knees and freezing hard, too. So you can imagine what it was like, not daring to move for fear of being shot and on the other hand, the option of freezing to death. However we got out of that I do not know. Men were utterly exhausted and death at that time would have been welcomed by many.

Prussian Guards Routed.

It was there where sixteen men charged two hundred and fifty of the noted Prussian Guards and routed the whole crowd, inflicting very heavy losses on them. Since I came home the officer has been presented with the D.S.O.

After coming from Ypres, we had four days' rest and then went to the trenches at Kemmal. I managed to get there, but the doctor stopped me and after examination, finding my feet were so badly frozen, ordered me carried back.

I left the trenches on the 4th of December and arrived in Manchester, Eng., on the 8th.

So you see, Harry, that is what brought me home, frozen feet. About 3,000 of us suffered from the same thing."

In conclusion, Mr. Whatley says his feet are getting better and he hopes to soon be around as usual.

DETERMINE THE VALUE OF SYSTEM

Herbert Fite the First Witness Called Before Board of Arbitrators

The final campaign in the battle of the city of Peterborough for municipal ownership of the light and power system was begun this morning in the County Court room, when the Board of Arbitrators met to decide the price the city is to pay for the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, recently expropriated. When the city took up the Hydro-Electric proposition two years ago, it was found necessary to expropriate the Peterborough Light and Power Company. The Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission submitted what they considered a fair price the city should pay for the property of the company, but the company did not agree to it, hence the arbitration. The company's first figures were some $600,000, while the city offered $100,000. The figures of the company were for the complete system, including the Auburn dam, which has since been struck off the list of property to be taken by the city. The Board of Arbitration is composed of His Honor Judge Huycke, chairman; R. A. Ross, C. E., of Montreal;, the city's representative, and Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K. C., of Toronto, the company's representative. Mr. Nesbitt was unavoidably absent this morning, but by mutual consent of the solicitors the arbitration was gone on with. Mr. Nesbitt, it is expected, will be present tomorrow.

M. K. Cowan, K. C., of Toronto, and G. N. Gordon, of this city, are present on behalf of the city; W. N. Tilley and A. B. Colville, of Toronto, are looking after the legal interests of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, while Strachan Johnston, K. C., of Toronto, represents

MINE LAYING IS SUSPECTED

All Shipping Ordered Stopped in Gulf of Bothnia

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 26.—The British Admiralty ignore the story coming from Berlin that a British cruiser and two destroyers were sunk in the naval action on Sunday. The German armored cruiser Friedrich Karl and a group of torpedo boats were seen today off the Aland Islands near the Gulf of Bothnia.

They had apparently come from a mine laying expedition. All shipping in the gulf has now been stopped. This seems to contradict the story sent out from Petrograd a month ago that the Friendrich Karl was sunk during a German naval sortie from Kiel.

Freight Steamer Goes to the Bottom

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 26.—The freight steamer Washingtonian has been rammed and sunk off Cape Henlopen, New Jersey, by the four masted schooner Elizabeth Palmer and one member of her crew was drowned.

AVIATOR MARKED POSITION ARTILLERY DID THE REST

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ST. OMER, France, Jan. 26. — British heavy artillery has destroyed an enormous gun which the Germans were placing on a hill about a mile behind their first line trenches with the object of silencing English howitzers and bombarding Bethune. The position of the big gun was marked by a British aviator, and the fourth shell from a British gun demolished it. They also drove off the crew attempting to place a similar gun a mile further back, and smashed three pumps brought up to empty trenches.

INSPECTOR STARK PASSES AWAY AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

UNGOVERNABLE FURY NOW FELT IN BERLIN

Beatty's Victory is More Disappointing to Germans Than Their Failure to Take Paris or Calais

CANNOT EXPECT TO WIN ON SEA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 26. — A Daily News despatch from Copenhagen says that, according to private reports, Berlin has been driven almost to ungovernable fury by the British success in the North Sea. There is a growing feeling that an open fight in the North Sea between the two navies would result only in a British victory. Beatty's victory means the biggest blow to the German arms since the war began — bigger disappointment than the failure to reach Paris or Calais. Germany still hopes to reach those objectives, but cannot expect a decisive sea victory. Feeling against England has increased beyond all bounds.

On the other hand, Berlin persists in a statement that the British lost a cruiser on Sunday. "According to a well-informed German source, this cruiser suffered heavily from fire of our cannon, and was then sunk by a German torpedo boat, by two well-directed shots. The sinking was observed by a German airship which followed the battle closely. Two English torpedo boats were also sunk, and the airship observed the serious damaging of other ships."

LEFT HUNDREDS DEAD ON FIELD

German Battalion of Infantry Attacked Allies Trenches Without Success

ALSO BEATEN NEAR LA BASSEE

One of Foe's Attacks West of Caronne Partly Successful ---Belgians Progress on Yser Front

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 26. — The afternoon official statement says:

"A German infantry battalion attacked the Allies' trenches east of Ypres, but left on the field three hundred dead, including the commandant. The attack was unsupported, the supports being wiped out by artillery fire or finding it impossible to face it. In an attack near La Bassee the Germans left on the field numerous dead and sixty prisoners. There has been violent infantry fighting west of Craonne, where one German attack was partly successful.

"Between the Bethune-La Bassee road and Aix Noulette our fire prevented the enemy developing an intended attack.

"Elsewhere fighting has been mainly in artillery.

"On the Yser front the Belgians have made some progress."

BERLIN REPORTS SUCCESSES FOR GERMANS.

LONDON, Jan. 26. — Berlin announces today that the town of Kielce, Russian Poland, has been occupied by Austro-German forces, and that two strong points in possession of the English near La Bassee were captured by Germans in a general assault yesterday.

At Petrograd, Sergius Sasanoff, Russian foreign minister, answering question by members of the Duma, said: "The Government stands for the scrupulous fulfillment of the Emperor's manifesto, issued the day the war began, that so long as a single soldier of the enemy remains on Russian soil, no peace will be concluded." The minister also intimated that Russia, with regards to Galicia, which she now occupies, would be bound by the agreement with her allies.

Sasanoff also said that Great Britain was bearing conscientiously the tremendous burden of her share of the war.

SURVIVORS LANDED AT LEITH.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Jan. 26. — Fifty survivors of the German armored cruiser Bluecher, sunk in the North Sea on Sunday, were landed from two British destroyers today at Leith.

PROTECTED CRUISER IS TORPEDOED.

MALMOE, Sweden, Jan. 26. — It is persistently asserted here that the German protected cruiser Gazelle was torpedoed yesterday by a submarine of unknown nationality at a point in the Baltic near the island of Ruegen, off the coast of Prussia.

Although the Gazelle was damaged, she was able to return to the port of Sassentiz.

MOVEMENT TO ORGANIZE AUTO CORPS ENDORSED

Automobile Association Discusses Important Questions at Annual Meeting

DR. AMYS PRESIDENT

At the third annual meeting of the Peterborough Automobile Association held last evening in the Bank of Montreal chambers, Ald. A. H. Stratton submitted a plan whereby an automobile corps could be formed in Peterborough and the meeting was unanimous in endorsing the idea and authorized Ald. Stratton to take the matter in hand. The proposed corps would work in conjunction with the Home Guard in event of emergency.

The meeting was rather slimly attended, the following being present: A. E. Coulthard, S. Keyes, Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Ald. Stratton, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Dr. Amys and Dr. Sutton.

President A. E. Coulthard in his preliminary remarks reported that at the beginning of the past year, it was decided to take many steps but, as the depression set in, only a few of those undertakings were completed. He reviewed various outings of the association and also reported that $100 had been granted to the Patriotic Fund. Mr. Coulthard thanked the members for their cooperation, particularly the chairmen of the various committees.

Secretary Keyes reported that while endeavoring to urge members to attend the meeting he found many who were rather opposed to being affiliated with the Ontario Motor League. Some went so far as to remark that all the Ontario organization is doing is fixing the roads in and out of Toronto all at the expense of the various associations throughout the province.

Dr. Sutton remarked that in his opinion the local association would not be acting wisely in severing connections with the Ontario League. He was rather pleased to see the roads in and out of Toronto being well looked after for the members of the Ontario Legislature, who met in Toronto, would be impressed by the work. Then again the work of the Ontario League in Muskoka district is being rapidly advanced and the country made more inviting for tourists. Having the local branch connected with the Ontario Motor League meant more power for this association.

Several references were made to the good work accomplished by the Ontario Motor League and it was decided to remain affiliated.

Road Improvement.

In an endeavor to bring about improvements on the roads between here and Port Hope and here and Lakefield a resolution will be drawn up along that line and a copy of it forwarded to the Ontario Motor League, City Council, Board of Trade

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1915

SUNDAY'S NORTH SEA BATTLE.

THE BATTLE in the North Sea on Sunday is hailed by some English newspapers as the greatest naval fight of the present war. Undoubtedly it is important, not only as a great British victory, but also as the first battle in which superdreadnoughts fought on both sides. The great British battle cruiser Tiger, with a speed of 28 knots and a horse-power capacity of 110,000, was one of Admiral Beatty's squadron. Nevertheless, we do not think the battle was as important as that fought off the Falkland Islands. In the latter fight, four powerful cruisers were sunk which had been preying on British commerce and thus causing very heavy insurance rates on ocean trade. No British vessel was safe so long as they remained unaccounted for, and their destruction has practically cleared the seas of hostile battleships. The Dresden, it is true, got away, but has not been heard from since, and is likely interned in some neutral port. The North Sea battle avenges in some degree the raid on Scarborough and Hartlepool, but the scalp of one German warship is hardly sufficient for the damage done to coast towns, and for the breach of international law and custom in attacking unfortified places. It is also thought that the German war vessels that escaped were heavily damaged and suffered considerable loss of life, but for this, further despatches will have to be awaited to confirm it.

The attack on Zeebrugge should not be overlooked, as the exploit was one of great daring and quite successful. To get through a number of German aircraft and smash a submarine, besides doing much other damage by means of dropping bombs, is a noteworthy feat. It is the proper policy to pursue. If Germany is to be defeated, the war must be carried into that country.

LIFE INSURANCE IN ONTARIO.

COMMENTING on the very sudden deaths of three business men in Ontario within three days, two of whom were only of middle age, the Monetary Times considers the question of individual life insurance. It affirms that the carrying of a life insurance policy and the non-possession of a policy is often the very difference between a wrecked and penniless family and one either well or fairly well provided for. The Monetary Times says:

> "At a meeting of the Toronto Underwriters' Association, Mr. Vale, Ontario's deputy superintendent of insurance, stated that the average amount of life insurance held per family in Ontario is only $762. Much of the total sum is actually held by the more wealthy. That figure proves conclusively that the average man has insufficient insurance and that many men are uninsured altogether. This is a serious matter for the average citizen and a matter of great importance to the life insurance canvasser."

Two pages from the above paragraph is an account of the proceedings in the Union Life case. What is the significance of these two facts? That insurance is something every man ought to carry, especially married men, is admitted, but, at the same time, the failure of insurance companies, and the methods of others, even of reliable companies, prevents many from carrying risks.

A man who takes out an insurance policy is adopting that peculiar method of saving money. He is also taking measures to protect dependents on him, and is thus relieving the state of the necessity of supporting them in some form, should death come suddenly upon him. For that reason, the state should take extra precautions that insurance companies are not floated for exploitation purposes. Every failure of an insurance company is a very strong argument against the workingman taking out insurance, and it is an argument that is almost unanswerable.

The second point against life insurance is the matter of methods. Many insurance companies or societies have made the serious error of selling insurance too cheaply. Policies were taken out, after a few years the rates had to be advanced, and this advance led to the dropping of many policies. To say that those who were obliged to drop their insurance for this cause received value for their premiums, in that they had the insurance while the policy was in force, is not to state the whole truth, because insurance companies do not sell insurance on the basis that it will be dropped, thus relieving them of the necessity of paying the amount of the risk. Another matter is that agents have persuaded many people to take out policies beyond their means, so that after one or two years the insurance was dropped. There are many men who can pay a premium of twenty-five dollars that cannot pay one of fifty dollars. There was a time when policies bearing premiums of this value were chiefly advocated by insurance agents. Mistakes like these take a long time to live down.

The average man and most insurance companies are beginning to understand the problem of insurance with a better idea of its value and service. The establishment of many companies in a strong financial position has lessened the vigor in the race for policies and new business, and given place to a more legitimate insurance. Insurance policies should be taken out with the intention of paying for them, and it appears that this is more the case now than it used to be some years ago. There is yet, however, much room for improvement.

FATHER OF ELECTRICAL DEVELOPMENT IN ONTARIO.

COL. FREDERIC NICHOLLS, who has just been elected a director of the Confederation Life Assurance Company, has had a remarkably successful career. He was born in England in 1856, but came to Canada as a lad of eighteen. In a very real sense he can be described as the "Father of Electrical Development in Ontario," as he organized the first electrical company in this country and has been prominently identified with electrical companies all his life. He was for several years secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, was for a time editor and proprietor of the Canadian Manufacturer, and is a former president of the National Electric Light Association of America, being the only Canadian to hold this position. He is now the active head of the Canadian General Electric Company, is a director of the Bank of Commerce, and of many financial and industrial concerns. For recreation, the versatile head of electrical development in Canada indulges in yachting.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture in the Dominion Government, who has just returned to Ottawa from the United States, where he was recovering from a somewhat serious illness, is an Englishman by birth, having been born at Farringdon, England, in 1858. He was formerly engaged in railroad work in England, eventually becoming general superintendent of the Great Western Railway. He came to Canada in 1886 and spent fourteen years fruit farming in the Niagara Peninsula. He later went to British Columbia, where he became a prominent fruit grower and farmer. He was first elected to the House of Commons in 1908, and on the defeat of the Laurier Government in 1911, was called to the Borden Cabinet as Minister of Agriculture.

WHETHER or not the war is changing the map of Europe, it certainly is changing the habits of Europe. Russia has abandoned the use of its vodka, France prohibited the use of absinthe, and Great Britain is taking measures to inaugurate more stringent regulations for public houses. Certainly out of this war some good must come.

THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT has completed its pension scheme for the Canadian army. It is very liberal, and can be made operative without additional legislation by means of an order-in-council. In the case of officers on active service, a separation allowance is also receiving consideration.

WE OBSERVE that our impartial (?) evening contemporary did not publish the full report in reference to Mr. R. B. Rogers. Doubtless the strained effort for consistency necessitated a garbled report.

THE GERMAN CHANCELLOR is now trying to explain his phrase, "A Scrap of Paper." No use. The damage has been done in America, and we expect to see more damage in Germany.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB says: "I believe the worst is over, and from now on business will improve."

Canada's Possibilities.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

The line of habitable country has been moving northward with great strides in recent years. The temperate zone is pushing nearer and nearer to the Arctic sea. Hudson Bay is going to bear a share of the western Canadian grain crop a part of the way toward Europe in a few years. Commerce is going to move by short cuts along the top of the earth. The height of land may one of these days look down upon fields of waving grain. This would not be any more marvellous than that the once desolate prairies of the western provinces should now be dotted with farmhouses, thriving towns and populous cities. It will be interesting to watch the interned people along the line of the Canadian Transcontinental. Civilization follows the plow.

Mutton and the Ghurkas.

(London Sphere.)

Much care is taken by the British Army to consult the feelings of their Indian soldiers in the matter of diet. Whether Brahmans or Mohammedans, or other of the various creeds in India, each class have religious rules which they strictly observe. At Bombay when a regiment was embarking, the question arose as to whether they would eat frozen meat. A conclave of officers decided that it would be better to put the case to the men. The Subadar was called, and, after a little wrinkling of the eyebrow, said: "I think, Sahib, the regiment will be willing to eat the iced sheep provided one of us is always present to see the animal frozen to death."

A Logical Example.

(Youth's Companion.)

The teacher was trying to explain to her class the effects of heat and cold. She told her little charges that an iron bridge would expand several inches in hot weather, and contract a like amount in cold weather.

She then asked a little girl for a like instance of the expansion and contraction caused by heat and cold. The child hesitated for a minute or so, and then replied:

"In hot weather the days are long; in cold weather they are much shorter."

Badly Dilnted.

(London Opinion.)

"D'ye ken Mac fell in the river on his way hame last night?"

"You don't mean to say he was drowned?"

"Not drowned, mon; but badly dilnted."

Full Value.

(Orillia Packet.)

Whiskey often causes a man to have a good opinion of himself, or, as the Toronto Telegram says: "to rate himself at his full value."

ANOTHER HISTORIC EVENT FOR THE BELL TELEPHONE

New York, Jan. 26.—At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, from the office of Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, 15 Dey street, this city, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, spoke over the newly completed trans-continental telephone line to Thomas A. Watson in San Francisco. Watson, it will be remembered, was the mechanical assistant who built Bell's first telephone and it was these two men who, 39 years ago next June, carried on the first conversation by telephone.

"From the White House at Washington, also, President Wilson, whose telephone has been connected, today spoke into the mouthpiece, and his voice was whirled across thirteen states to the shores of the Pacific: from Boston, Mayor Curley had a word to say to Mayor Rolph of San Francisco, and, most remarkable of all, from Jeckyl Island, 1,000 miles down the Atlantic seaboard off the Georgia coast, Theodore N. Vail spoke to San Francisco, 4,400 miles away."

The route of this new trans-continental line from San Francisco is via Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Chicago. At Chicago the line branches, one line going to Pittsburg thence to New York, and the other branch to Buffalo, and from there to New York. A continuation of the line also runs from Buffalo to Boston, and of the Pittsburg line to Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia.

In the line there are four wires making it possible to carry on three conversations simultaneously. Each wire is 3,400 miles long and of number 8 copper, .165 inches in diameter. The total weight of wire is 2,960 tons, supported by 130,000 poles.

The line is not yet open for commercial use. Arrangements are being perfected to that end, and announcement of its opening for commercial purposes will not be long delayed although much work yet remains to be done.

The solution of this great problem of trans-continental telephoning was found only in the cumulative effect of improvements, great and small, in telephone transmitter, line, cable switchboard and every other piece of apparatus or plant required in the transmission of speech.

To Canadians, this latest step in the advance of the telephone art is of especial interest, for, as Dr. Graham Bell has more than once affirmed, it was at Brantford, Ontario, that the telephone was born. Moreover both Paris, Ontario, and Toronto figure in these historic experiments which marked the beginning of this great utility.

This is the way Mr. Bell himself describes the birth of the telephone:

"When I went from Boston to Brantford, Ontario, in the summer of 1874," he says, "I had under way two distinct lines of investigation. On the one hand was my system of multiple telegraphy. I had reached the application of the undulatory current, the conception that if you could move an armature as the air is moved during the passage of a sound, you could transmit speech.

"On the other hand, I had with me an apparatus made out of a dead man's ear, for studying the movements of the air during the utterance of a sound. The membrane of the ear was like a piece of tissue paper, hardly the size of a finger nail, and the bones that were moved by that little membrane were really heavy and massive compared with it. It suddenly struck me that if such a small membrane as that would move bones so massive in comparison, why would not a larger membrane move my piece of iron? And at that moment the telephone was born complete as a theoretical proposition, and in Brantford."

But it was not until the following year that Dr. Bell's first telephone was made. Mr. Thomas A. Watson, who built it, and who yesterday talked to Dr. Bell across the continent, thus tells the story:

"On the afternoon of June 2nd, 1875, at Charles Williams' machine shop, 109 Court street, Boston, Bell and I were hard at work on the same old job of testing some modifications of Bell's harmonic telegraph. I had charge of the transmitters as usual, setting them squealing one after the other, while Bell was retuning the receiver springs one by one, pressing them against his ear, as he had done so many times before. One of the transmitter springs I was attending to stopped vibrating, and I plucked it to start it again. It didn't start, and I kept on plucking it, when suddenly I heard a shout from Bell in the next room, and then out he came with a rush, demanding, "What did you do then? Don't change anything! Let me see!" I showed him. It was very simple. The make-and-break points of the transmitter spring I was trying to start had become welded together, so that when I snapped the spring the circuit had remained unbroken, while that strip of magnified steel, by its vibration over the pole of its magnet, was generating that marvellous conception of Bell's — a current of electricity that varied in intensity precisely as the air was varying in density within hearing distance of that spring. Fortunately the right man had that mechanism at his ear during that fleeting moment, and instantly recognized the transcendent importance of that faint sound thus electrically transmitted. The shout I heard and his excited rush into my room were the result of that recognition. The speaking telephone was born at that moment. Bell knew perfectly well that the mechanism that could transmit all the complex vibrations of one sound could do the same for any sound, even that of speech. We spent a few hours verifying the discovery, repeating it with all the differently tuned springs we had, and before we parted that night Bell gave me directions for making the first electric speaking telephone. I was to mount a small drum head of gold beater's skin over one of the receivers, join the centre of the drum head to the free end of the receiver spring and arrange a mouthpiece over the drumhead to talk into. I followed these directions, and had the instrument ready for its trial the very next day. I rushed it, for Bell's excitement and enthusiasm over the discovery had aroused mine again, which had been sadly dampened during those last few weeks by the meagre results of the harmonic experiments. I made every part of that first telephone myself, but I didn't realize while I was working on it what a tremendously important piece of work I was doing.

The First Telephone Line.

"The two rooms in the attic were too near together for the test, as our voices would be heard through the air, so I ran a wire especially for the trial from one of the rooms in the attic and down two flights of stairs to the third floor, where Williams' main shop was, ending it near my work bench at the back of the building. That was the first telephone line. I got more satisfaction from the experiment than Mr. Bell did, for shout my best I could not make him hear me, but I could hear his voice and almost catch the words. I rushed upstairs and told him what I had heard. It was enough to show him that he was on the right track, and before he left that night he gave me directions for several improvements in the telephone I was to have ready for the next trial.

"My pride has been tempered to quite a bearable degree by my realization that the reason why I heard Bell in that first trial of the telephone and he did not hear me, was the vast superiority of his strong, vibratory tones over any sound my undeveloped voice was then able to utter."

It was in August, 1876, that the Dominion Telegraph Company loaned their wires to Bell for the experiments at Brantford which resulted in the first long distance transmission of speech by wire. The transmitting instrument was in Paris, Ontario, the receiving instrument in Brantford, eight miles away, and the battery on the circuit in Toronto, 60 miles distant.

"The transmission went only one way," Dr. Bell has explained, "but on this occasion speech was transmitted, and that was the first time it was ever transmitted at a distance of several miles. The person at the other end could not reply, but had to telegraph back by another wire. But by the end of August, 1876, quite a number of experiments that attracted attention were made on the wires of the Dominion Telegraph Co. There was one experiment between Brantford and Mount Pleasant, a distance of five miles, and then I gave an exhibition from my father's house at a country place four or five miles from Brantford, known as Tutela Heights. It was about a quarter mile from the house to the nearest telegraph wire. We cleaned the town out of stove-pipe wire and placed it on the fence from my father's house and then attached it to the telegraph wire leading into Brantford. Then I had some friends in Brantford who spoke, sang and recited into the membrane telephone, while a large number of guests at my father's house at Tutela Heights listened to the transmission.

"So these experiments at Brantford were the first experiments that were really successful in transmitting speech from one place to another at a distance, but they were all one-sided, not reciprocal.

"The first reciprocal communication occurred after my return to Boston in October, 1876. On October 9th occurred the first conversation by telephone between persons separated by miles of space. This was from Cambridgeport to Boston, a distance of two and a half miles, Mr. Thos. A. Watson being at Cambridgeport, and I at the Boston end of the wire. I noted what I said and what I thought I heard him say, and the parallel columns were reported in the Boston Advertiser of October 19 1876."

WHEAT IS COMMANDEERED.

Germany Will Husband Food Supplies Until Next Harvest.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—All stocks of wheat have been seized by the German Government, according to the official statement, in order to safeguard the bread supply until the next harvest. This measure, it is said, was made necessary by the fact that the people have failed to economise. The stocks will be distributed according to the population of the various communities.

In the Province of Brandenburg, in which Berlin is located, there have been called upon for medical examination the 50-year-old untrained men of the Landstrum of the 1886, 1887 and 1888 classes.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than ordinary tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

Found On The Battlefield

Why a Soldier Didn't Like to Talk About His Deed

By F. A. MITCHEL

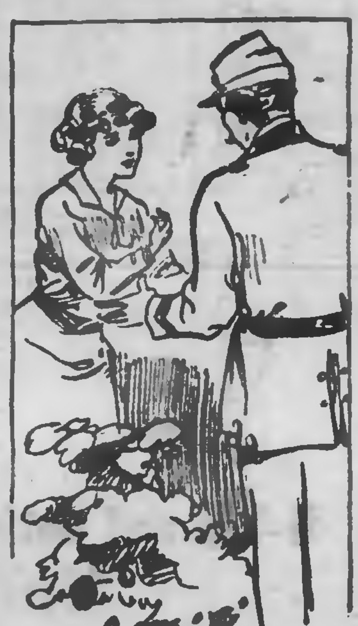
I was born at the time of the war between the states, but what year I have never known till recently. My earliest remembrance is being in a foundling institution in Harrisburg, Pa. How I came to be there I could never find out, for it was, judging from my age, toward the close of the war and when everybody and everything was in a state of commotion. I left the asylum when I must have been about sixteen years old. At any rate, the inmates were not kept there after sixteen, and since there was a record on the books in 1863 of "a female baby apparently about a year old" that was called Betty or Hetty or something like that—the first letter was blurred—and I was called Betty it was assumed that the record pertained to me.

At leaving, being old enough to understand the importance of learning as much as possible about my antecedents, I made every inquiry concerning them, but all I could learn was the above. The clothes in which I was brought to the institution had been preserved, but the only thing on them for identification was the letters "H. C." which were carefully embroidered.

On leaving the asylum I went to serve as nursemaid with a lady in Philadelphia. She and her husband were refined persons and on hearing my story took an interest in me, expressing themselves ready to help me to find my parents.

One day Mr. Sawyer, husband of the lady by whom I was employed, returned after an absence.

He told me that he had been in Harrisburg and while there, being interested in my case, had gone to the asylum where I had been brought up to make inquiries concerning me. Being a man of affairs, he was more successful than I had been. He had got from the records the names of persons who were connected with the asylum when I was sent there and had advertised for several of them. An elderly woman living in the country not far from Harrisburg answered the advertisement. Mr. Sawyer learned from her that she was at the asylum from 1862 to 1864; that during that time a girl baby was brought in by a Union soldier. That was all she could remember, for she had left the institution soon after the child was received.



"I AM THAT BABY!"

I think Mr. Sawyer took more interest in the matter than I. Perhaps it was a detective instinct in him that led him to busy himself about it. At any rate, his curiosity was aroused, and he kept thinking about it much of the time.

"You're a war baby, Bet," he would say to me. "I have an idea that you got lost somehow during the war. Maybe your father was a soldier and got killed and a comrade took his little girl and not being in a position to care for her left her at the asylum. This theory is supported by the fact that about the time you were taken there General Lee invaded Pennsylvania, and every citizen who could carry a gun turned out to oppose him. We will establish your identity and don't you forget it."

When the war ended, everybody, both north and south, had had enough of it. About fifteen years after its close those who were interested in it began to talk about it and write about it and discuss who should have the credit of this and who was to blame for that, and all the prominent Union and Confederate officers who were living found an opportunity to explain their records. As to those who had died in the struggle, they had nothing to say and were lucky if they didn't have to bear the brunt of blunders committed by those who had lived to tell their stories.

It was about this time, I believe, that people began to take an interest in the battlefields which now are made national parks. When I was nineteen years old there was a gathering of veterans on the field of Gettysburg, and Mr. Sawyer proposed to his wife that they make an excursion and visit the field themselves. Mrs. Sawyer would not go without taking their son, Tommy, now four years old, and that involved taking me along to have the care of him while his father and mother were visiting the scenes of the different fights on the battlefield.

So we all went down together on one of the anniversaries of the struggle, and, since Tommy manifested a desire to go about with his father and mother, I had an opportunity to go too. The veterans we saw moving about in groups locating different scenes of those exciting days of 1863 were not the old men they are today. Many of them had fought as mere boys, and they were fine looking middle aged men.

One Union veteran—he was between thirty-five and forty years old—a friend of Mr. Sawyer, took charge of our party and showed us over the field, telling us in a very interesting manner where this and that engagement had taken place, Little Round Top, Cemetery Ridge and other interesting points, pointing out where his own regiment had fought without claiming that it had won the fight or, indeed, saying anything about its or his achievements.

There was something in his appearance that attracted me, and this refraining from making claims for his regiment or himself added to my admiration for him. I had bemoaned my humble position, but now it was doubly hard to bear, for I could not but think that, though he was courteous to me as to the others, he must look down on me as a simple nursegirl.

After we had seen the scenes of heroism of others I asked our guide to be more exact in the matter of his own participation in the battle. Yielding to my solicitations, he told his story, which was interesting, though he refrained all through it from claiming to have done anything very brave.

After driving about the field we stopped at a farmhouse not far from it for dinner. A woman who served us seemed interested in our chat about what we had seen and, being asked whether she had lived there when the battle took place, said:

"Yes, I lived here, and I wish I hadn't, for there is a matter connected with the battlefield that has been a regret to me ever since and always will be. A lady had come from the city of Philadelphia to be in the country for her health. She boarded with my mother, who lived in a house where part of the fighting took place. We country people didn't know that there was to be a battle here and were not prepared for it. There were lots of soldiers gathering here, and we were all much excited over their coming. This lady from Philadelphia had a baby and had brought a nurse with her to take care of it. The nurse was taken sick and went home. Then the lady hired me to take care of her child.

"One morning I wanted to go to see my aunt, who lived across the field where the soldiers were to fight, and I thought it a good plan to take the baby with me in her little carriage. So I put the bottle in her mouth and started. I was passing along quietly when I heard a lot of firing all about me, and it seemed as if a dozen thunderstorms had broken out at once. I was scared to death."

The woman seemed to live again in the scene she was describing and trembled.

"Then I did what I have regretted all the rest of my life. I deserted the baby, leaving the little thing sucking at its bottle in its carriage, and ran away and hid in the first house I came to. The child was probably killed, for nobody has ever heard of it since."

"I can assure you," said our guide, "that it wasn't killed, for our regiment moved through the trees when you left it. My captain detailed me to take charge of it. I never have since liked to talk about my part in the battle of Gettysburg—at least, to mention this incident—for when I say I was wheeling a baby carriage everybody laughs."

"For land's sake!" exclaimed the woman. "What did you do with it?"

"Put it in a barn till the battle was over, then found it safe and sound, but bawling for more milk. Before the next day's fight came on I had provided for it temporarily, and, after the fighting was over and the Confederates had withdrawn, my captain sent me off to hunt for its mother. I couldn't find her, and I was sent to Harrisburg with it, where I chucked it in an orphan asylum."

"I am that baby!" I exclaimed, much excited and, not realizing what I was doing, threw myself into the arms of the man that had rescued me.

There was a commotion at this, and then the rest of the matter came out. The woman who had been my nurse remembered my mother's name—Chenowith—and I had been baptized Harriet. This corresponded with the initials "H. C." embroidered on my baby clothes.

What remains I will tell in a few words. My mother and father were both living, and I was reunited with them and several brothers and sisters. They were overjoyed at finding me and lavished every blessing on me that they could think of. One day the soldier who had rescued me asked me, "Where do I come in?" and when I inquired of him where he wished to come in he said, "Finders are keepers," which, being interpreted, meant that he wanted me for himself. He didn't have any trouble getting me.

After our marriage we went to the asylum where he had left me more than twenty years before and examined the record. There I saw that the first letter to the name I had been given was intended for a G. I had been called Getty, from the battle of Gettysburg, but the name was soon changed to Betty.

GOING MAD FROM THE TERRIFIC PAIN

Prominent Merchant Thinks His Life Was Saved By "Fruit-a-tives".

DRYSDALE, ONT., JUNE 15th, 1913.

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to Inflammation of the Brain, but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives", and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness".

WE BOW TO RUSSIA.

Slavic Influence on Fashions Is Quite Marked at Present.

SMART NEW COAT.

The Russian note is strong in fashions. The coat illustrated here exemplifies this. It is of black broadcloth, of marked length and with a well defined flare. Collar, cuffs and broad belt are of velvet. The latter is embroidered on the front, with a design showing interlaced acorns. Worn with it are one of the new high crowned velvet hats and smart walking boots.

Strange Symphony.

A certain clergyman was the guest of the Rev. Edward Everett Hale overnight. In the morning he came downstairs with a look of pleased surprise on his face.

"What a delightful custom you have here," he said, "of chiming the bells at midnight! I got up and leaned out of the window to listen. It was a pretty air they played, although I did not recognize it."

"This," said Dr. Hale, telling the story afterward, "was the first time I ever heard of a fire alarm being taken for a symphony."—St. Joseph News-Press.

CARE OF THE LOOKS.

Have a comfortable bed. Never sleep propped up with pillows. Lie as flat as possible, with a small pillow or none at all under the head. Never sleep with the mouth open.

Knitting the brows when reading or working is a habit certain to produce disfiguring lines on the face.

Heavy hats cause headaches and are very bad for the hair. A hat should be light and should not be worn so tightly on the head as to exclude all the air. Lack of ventilation for the hair is one of the causes of baldness.

Always file the nails from the corners toward the center of the nails. This tends to make the finger tips slender. It is well to file the nails on the same day every week.

Relax the muscles, cultivate a pleasant expression and remember that lips which curve upward and smile are much more attractive than the drooping sort.

Little squares of blotting paper hung in the dress closet, moistened once a week with perfume, will be found to be most efficient sachets, for the odor seems to permeate and remain in the garments longer than when the powdered product is used.

Pointers For Housewives

Using Leftovers For Supper.

Supper is the meal at which the capable housekeeper may show her ability in using up leftovers. If she is clever she may provide appetizing surprises, which generally do not require much material or time, says the United States department of agriculture. It is mistaken economy to add a good deal of expensive materials in order to use up things of little value or to attempt fussy dishes that require long preparation. As far as everyday supper is concerned, it is usually good policy to avoid elaborate dishes and let the most of the time and strength expended for such things go to the main meal of the day. This is especially true where the women of the family do all the work.

In many families supper includes one hot dish and a second course of preserves and cocoa. Here, as at breakfast, some kind of bread, with butter and a hot beverage, forms the basis of the meal, with an appetizing dish of eggs, meat, cheese or vegetables.

While noon dinner and supper are the rule in most rural districts and smaller communities, in other parts of the country, as every one knows, lunch and evening dinner take their place, as is inevitable where the wage earners must be away from home all day long. In such cases what has been said about supper applies to lunch. If some of the family carry their lunch away with them, bread and butter again form the usual basis of the meal, with cold meat, hard boiled eggs or some other appetizing as well as nutritious food and perhaps fruit and cake to complete and vary it.

Desserts Are an Economy.

When no dessert is provided a greater quantity of meat and vegetables must be eaten to satisfy the demands of nature. For some this is all right, but for the majority of people a certain amount of sugar and starch is necessary in the food. Children should not be deprived of this kind of food. It is economical to provide a dessert even if a simple one.

In arranging for a dinner, plan a light dessert when the rest of the meal is to be substantial. When the main part of the dinner is to be light let the dessert be hot and substantial.

For example, if the first part of the meal consists of cold meat and vegetables serve a hot apple pudding for dessert.

A good one can be made of a pint of flour, prepared as for cream of tartar biscuit, rolled thin and filled with pared and quartered apples, then steamed for two hours and served with molasses or sugar sauce.

Or the apples may be put into a stewpan for a few minutes, covered with the biscuit dough and cooked for about twenty minutes longer.

No sauce will be needed with this pudding.

NECKWEAR VAGARIES.

A directoire collar of handkerchief linen with long necktie has ends ornamented with drawn work.

A new high wing collar is finished with double featherstitched hem. It has narrow revers outlined with a band of blue moire ribbon terminating in a bow.

A vest made of hand embroidered pique with high collar has a piping of black moire.

New styled examples of neckwear exhibit high closing tucked fronts with two or three inch width side plaited frills attached.

The high style, conservative collar is made of sheer batiste or fine cobwebby linen pressed into plaits and trimmed with fine laces flatly attached and hung from the middle of the back of the collar.

The ascots, those long time, many years old styles, are returning. The novelty of these familiar looking neck fixings consists of the white foundation collar worn with colored ties and with a frilled rather than with a plain shirt.

Much of the new organdy neckwear is not all white. There are Roman striped corners on some of the collars and cuffs of bright, printed colors—stripes half an inch wide.

There is much striping of black on collars and vests of organdy. Some of the newest things are embroidered in oriental designs with red and green and other colors.

Instead of sewing the high standing ruche or collar into the neck of your dress sew snaps every two or three inches along the facing of the neckpiece and the corresponding parts at equal distances on the neck of the dress.

Heat of a Match Flame.

The flame of an ordinary match has a much higher temperature than is generally known and will melt cast iron or steel filings. Try it by striking a match and sprinkle the filings through the flame. Spluttering sparks will be the result of the melting metal.—Popular Mechanics.

Sarcasm.

"I'm sending this communication to an editor. Would you write him that if it is too long he might cut it down to suit himself?"

"Indeed, I should. If you didn't mention it such an idea would never occur to him."—Boston Transcript.

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Miss BERTHA A. PELOQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVINA MYRES, Box 74, Massena, N.Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THE KING OF ENGLAND.

No British Commoner Has the Legal Right to Talk to Him.

It is not generally known that there is no right of personal audience of the king of England, and yet it is a well recognized point of constitutional law.

No commoner in the land can claim any such privilege as of right under English law. The matter is one of special privilege even to the members of the house of commons who may have occasion to consult the king on state affairs. Even in such cases the audience is not personal to any member of the house.

"Freedom of access," as it is constitutionally called, is allowed to members of the house of commons through the personality of the speaker. The speaker claims the privilege from the crown through the lord chancellor at the opening of every parliament, the form of request being that the commons "may have access to his majesty's royal person whenever occasion shall require."

The title of speaker, as applied, somewhat to the bewilderment of the ordinary mortal, to the one member of the house of commons who never by any chance makes a speech, really marks his duty of representing his fellow members in this way in necessary interviews with the monarch. He is the speaker for them all.

In the case of members of the house of lords the privilege of audience is personal, as the peers are individually hereditary counselors of the crown. It need not be exercised through the lord chancellor, who, indeed, is not necessarily a member of the house of lords at all.—London Cor. New York Sun.

War of the Three Petticoats.

A slighting reference by Frederick the Great to Mme. Pompadour, who was the ruling power in France for a score of years in the days of Louis XV., was one of the chief causes of the Seven Years' war, called by a witty Frenchman the "war of the three petticoats" from the fact that Mme. Pompadour of France, Maria Theresa of Austria and Catherine II. of Russia were on the same side in it.

WILL NOT BUY INTERNED SHIPS

Wilson Will Have Transfers Recognized by Powers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The debate on the Administration ship purchase bill in the Senate yesterday disclosed the fact that it was not the intention of the President to buy the interned ships of any belligerent until he had received assurances through diplomatic channels from the enemies of the country from which such ships might be found that the transfers would be recognized.

Statements to this effect by Senator Simmons, who is one of the President's special representatives in the Senate, and Senator Williams of Mississippi demolished the foundations upon which Senator Root yesterday and Senator Lodge last week built their arguments that the enactment of the bill into law and the operation of these ships under sanction of the Government would involve this Government in grave international complications.

Senator Elihu Root, in the course of his speech in the afternoon, said:

"None of these great powers will permit citizens of an enemy to rob them of their trade by transferring ships they are entitled to capture on the high seas to a neutral flag," he insisted. "We cannot measure the number of our steps. One unneutral step will lead to further unneutral steps by others until we are in the thing.

"I am not arguing against buying a ship, but buying an international quarrel with every ship. If we are to maintain neutrality we must hold close to it. If you precipitate this country into an international controversy when Europe may feel that we have taken sides, we will rend ourselves. The only safe course is to keep out of such controversies."

Air Raid Was a Success.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 26.—The British air raid last week on the town of Essen resulted in the destruction of 400 war automobiles, according to a correspondent of The Handelsblad. These cars were in a machine shop which was wrecked by the British bombs.

The loss of this large shop and its elaborate equipment, the correspondent continues, has been a serious blow, and the Germans have been compelled to take over a private automobile factory at Aix-la-Chapelle, where hundreds of Dutch workmen have obtained employment.

NEW MOVE LIKELY

Germans Will Try to Divert Russians From Bukowina.

Von Hindenburg's Armies Are Presenting a Stubborn Resistance on Left Bank of the Vistula Before Warsaw, While on Right Bank of River Farther North Russians Are Gaining Ground.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 26. — On the left bank of the Vistula the Germans are presenting a stubborn resistance, while on the right bank, in northern Poland, the Russians are pushing the German lines back. In southern Poland the Austrians are showing renewed activity, with German reinforcements strengthening their lines. A new offensive movement is looked for in this region with the object of compelling the Russians to turn their attention from Bukowina and Transylvania.

In southern Galicia the Russians are holding the passes through the Carpathians, where cold and snow have virtually stopped all operations.

The Russians in Poland have the strictest orders not to endanger the grand strategy plan by a premature advance anywhere, however tempting an opportunity may offer itself. These orders have been operative ever since the Germans entered Poland for the second time. A predetermined point beyond which the Germans must on no account be allowed to penetrate was plainly laid down. To that predetermined line the Russian forces which were west of it with one exception, retired fighting. A certain gallant corps held its ground against three German corps, inflicting fearful losses, but also losing very heavily itself. The Germans could not with their utmost efforts dislodge this stubborn corps, and remnants still held their ground when the German attacks had been crushed.

The official Government organ yesterday takes exception to a statement by the London newspapers which places the losses during the second invasion of Poland at only 370,000 men, 220,000 being Germans. This is little more than half truth.

"I telegraphed you on Dec. 20, says The London Post correspondent, "that the losses of three weeks of fighting exceeded half a million men. In point of fact, they were semi-officially put at 600,000 over the whole front of 450 miles from the Baltic to the Roumanian frontier. The German lost over 200,000 on the Bzura alone in these three weeks. In one single spot on this small section of the front on a single night the Germans lost 7,000 killed. This section was not over a mile in length and though the losses here, perhaps, are given as the maximum, yet it must not be forgotten that we have to reckon the losses on 179 other days and nights over the whole 450 miles of front."

The sudden stiffening of the Austrian front in the eleventh hour, to check the Russian invasion of Hungary as a natural sequence of the occupation of Bukowina, seems for the present to be the event of chief military importance. The Russians seem to recognize this and all recent despatches from Petrograd have emphasized the Austro-German offensive in the southeastern theatre.

One of the principal figures in the Eastern area of war is seldom heard of, principally because his force is almost constantly under siege. He is General Kusmanek, commander of the Austrian forces in Praemysl, and forman though he is, he must be given credit for making a good fight of it.

U.S. AVOIDS BREAK

She Takes the View That Consular Credentials Are Merely Suspended.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. — Secretary Bryan last night made public the text of the note from Germany annulling the exequatura or certificates of authority of neutral consuls in Belgium and issued a paraphrase of the American Governemnt's reply.

While the German note considers the exequatura of neutral consuls to "have expired" the American Government takes the view that they merely have been suspended. In this way the Washington Government avoided committing itself to the question of whether or not the sovereignty of Belgium had expired with the German military occupation. At the same time the United States indicates a willingness to make arrangements for the continuance of consuls personally not objectionable to the German authorities.

American Consul General Diederich at Antwerp already has been recognized by the German Government, and the American note makes enquiry whether the consuls at Liege and Brussels, the only two other places where neutral consuls are now permitted by the German military authorities to do business, are personally satisfactory to the local authorities.

To Help Tobacco Growers.

The Ottawa Department of Agriculture has inaugurated a movement to increase the tobacco production of Canada. It is advertising the fact that a sample of choice seed, in quarter ounce packages, will be sent to any tobacco grower who applies for same to the tobacco division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. This quantity of seed is sufficient to sow 130 square feet of seed bed, and to plant one acre.

FRENCH DESTROY BRIDGES GARRISON IS ISOLATED

Germans Claim That They Have Inflicted Heavy Loss on the Alpine Chasseurs in Alsace—Kaiser's Birthday to be Celebrated by a Zeppelin Raid—Teutons Ordered to Take Thann.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Completion of the destruction of the German bridges crossing the Meuse at St. Mihiel, claimed by the French, and inflicting of heavy losses on the Alpine Chasseurs in the fighting in Alsace, claimed by Berlin, are outstanding features of the official reports received in London yesterday from the western front.

The French guns got the range of the German bridge positions last Friday and since then have been hammering them effectively with the result announced yesterday.

Unless the Meuse freezes or the Germans, in the face of a violent fire from the French batteries, which now have the range perfectly, are able to replace the pontoon structures, the garrison will be entirely cut off from the east bank.

Simultaneously British troops, who are now holding the destroyed village of St. Georges, debouched from their position and captured part of the German defensive line to the east and established themselves on ground of great strategic value. Meanwhile the Franco-Belgian forces to the east of Lombaertzyde are steadily pushing the Germans back, and with the support of the advanced position of the British to the south are in a position to press forward still more rapidly because the danger of being outflanked is removed.

Of surpassing interest is the reported plan of the Germans to make a spectacular raid by Zeppelins from Bruges on the Kaiser's birthday anniversary on Wednesday. Orders have been issued to the allies' air corps to be prepared to repel airship raiders on the Flanders' front, and particularly in Paris. Each of two new-type dirigibles, reported transported secretly from Friedrichshafen, is equipped with 60 bombs, and each carries a hydro-aeroplane as a scout craft, with a special platform on which aviators may alight.

Artillery duels of great violence are reported all along the western front by both the German and French staffs.

By order of the Kaiser, Thann has to be taken at any cost, and William II. has sent his second son there to see that it is done. That probably accounts for the extremely heavy fighting taking place as a result of the German advance from Uffholz on Steinbach and Hill No. 425, and the advance on Hartmanns-Weiler Hill, possession of which will enable them to approach Thann from the rear.

The French hold the crest and a portion of the wooded sides of the hill, and the fighting had been hand-to-hand in the battles in the forests. The positions have been elaborately prepared by the Germans, and the French effort to dislodge them from the sides of the mountain is progressing very slowly indeed.

Both the French and the German attach sentimental as well as strategical interest to the possession of Thann. It was here that the former set up the first administrative institutions in the new France, and now the Kaiser has set his heart on getting back the little provincial town.

Although not dominated as it would be if the enemy held Steinbach or Hill No. 425, Thann is within reach of the German guns posted in front of Cernay.

Despite the heavy floods, which have hampered the operations directed against Altkirch, the French have made a substantial advance this week by occupying the localities of Bachweiler and Uberkumen, on the Rhine Canal northwest of Altkirch.

First Death Claim Paid.

TORONTO, Jan. 26. — The first death claim under the new Workmen's Compensation Act was settled yesterday by the forwarding of the first check. The widow of Charles Potasso, of Cornwall, was paid $24.75, an amount estimated at 55 per cent. of the average monthly wage of her husband, who was killed recently in the course of employment.

There are now six children in the Potasso family, all under the age of 16 years. Compensation allowed them ceases automatically as they reach that age, and the allowance to the widow necessarily decreases.

British Soldiers Get Commissions.

LONDON, Jan. 26. — The latest supplement of The London Gazette shows that 77 officers have been appointed from the ranks to commissions in the British army, because of efficiency in the field. Most of them were advanced from the sergeant grade and the regimental non-commissioned staff, but some were mere corporals. These men had taken commands of companies in the field when the officers were lost and otherwise showed themselves worthy of second lieutenancies.

ARMOURED SHIP LOST WITH CREW

Converted British Merchantman Sunk off Irish Coast

LONDON, Jan. 26.—It was officially announced at the Admiralty yesterday that the British armored merchant vessel Viknor had been lost off Ireland with all hands. The vessel, it was stated, either struck a mine or foundered.

The Admiralty, in its statement, says:

"She has been missing for some days and must now be accepted as lost with all her officers and men. The cause of her loss is uncertain, but as some bodies and wreckage have been washed ashore on the north coast of Ireland, it is presumed that during the recent bad weather she either foundered, or, being carried out of her course, struck a mine in seas where the Germans are known to have laid them."

The Viknor was formerly the Viking and was commandeered by the Admiralty Dec. 12. She was in charge of Commander Ernest O. Ballantyne. The number of her crew cannot be ascertained.

Britain Will Stop Ship.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Unless a positive guarantee is given that the cargo of foodstuffs on the American steamer Wilhelmina, which sailed from New York Friday for Germany, will not reach the German army, it is likely the ship will be stopped by the allies. Because of the alleged general practice of the German authorities in seizing for military use any foodstuffs, it is stated that the British officials would not regard the consignment of the food ship to some individual or firm any proof that its ultimate destination is not the army.

Under the conditions that are alleged to exist in Germany, it is believed here that it is virtually impossible to guarantee that any foodstuffs destined for civilian use will reach the consignees.

AN ENDOWED FLAGSTAFF

What is thought to be the only endowed flagstaff in the world is that belonging to the Royal Asylum For the Deaf and Dumb at Margate, England. This staff was erected in the first year of the reign of King Edward VII. in commemoration of his accession to the throne. The cost was defrayed by the pupils and friends, and the collection taken was so large that it enabled the purchase of twenty flags.

Even when the staff and the flags had been paid for £40 remained in the treasury. This sum was invested for an endowment fund, and the interest is used every other year for painting and repairing the pole and tackle.

Some of the various flags bought are the royal standard, which is flown on the king's accession day, his birthday and his coronation day; the stars and stripes, run up on the president's birthday and election day; the French flag, used on the president's birthday; appropriate banners for St. David's, St. Patrick's and St. George's days; the union jack for the anniversaries of famous battles, and flags for the church's high festivals.—New York Tribune.

BENT UPON DESTRUCTION

German Raiders Were Bound for Hull

LONDON, Jan. 26.—From information received here it is believed that the German fleet defeated Sunday was headed for Hull, bent upon wholesale destruction.

Its smart and effective interception by the British squadrons doubtless saved Hull from immense destruction such as the big German vessels are capable of giving. The British navy has, indeed, saved England from a day of genuine mourning. Half an hour's freedom in firing on Hull would doubtless mean the loss of thousands of civilians' lives.

England is growing with pleasure to-day over the splendid victory. German claims of having sunk a British battleship are scoffed at. The British Admiralty apparently had a warning from somewhere as to the coming of the Germans and was ready.

That one of the British warships engaged in the North Sea battle with the German fleet on Sunday morning was damaged, though not seriously, by the German fire was reported by the master of the Dutch steam trawler Erica, which has just arrived at Ymuiden, according to a report received by the Central News from its correspondent at Amsterdam and passed without comment by the British censor.

The master of the Erica says that at 9.30 o'clock on Sunday morning, while the crew of the trawler was fishing 120 miles from Heligoland, they suddenly heard firing.

They saw a German squadron, consisting of six large ships and 22 torpedo-boats, being pursued by a British fleet, which opened fire.

Says the captain of the Erica:

"We soon saw a German battleship sink. The Germans retired, fighting as they ran. They were able to damage, though not seriously, one of the British ships.

"The German fleet was soon out of sight, the British pursuing them. The shelling was very heavy during the fight. Projectiles fell like rain and great columns of water were seen rising in the air."

Lord Fisher, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, yesterday received hundreds of congratulations on the anniversary of his birth. He is in perfect health.

The German Report.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—The following official announcement on the naval engagement in the North Sea Sunday was given out in Berlin yesterday:

"During the advance of our armored cruisers Seydlitz, Derfflinger, Moltke and Blucher, which, accompanied by four smaller cruisers and two flotillas of torpedo-boats, were steaming in the North Sea, these vessels became engaged with a British detachment composed of five battle cruisers, several smaller cruisers and 26 torpedo-boat destroyers.

"The enemy discontinued the engagement after three hours' time, at a point 70 miles west-northwest of Heligoland, and retreated.

"According to the information available, one British battle cruiser and one of our armored cruisers, the Blucher, were sunk. All the other German ships returned to port.

(Signed) "Von Benncke."

Rear-Admiral Hipper commanded the German squadron. Capt. Erdmann commanded the Blucher.

Navy Congratulated By Army.

LONDON, Jan. 26. — The official press bureau last night gave out the following message received by the Admiralty from Field Marshal Sir John French:

"I and the army in France hope that you and our naval comrades will accept our congratulations on the victory of the British fleet in the North Sea. Convey to Vice-Admiral Beatty and Commodore Tyrwhitt and their officers and men our admiration and good wishes."

FURNES IS BOMBARDED

Foe Has Brought up Longer Range Guns

NORTH OF FRANCE, Jan. 26.—Up to now, the inhabitants of Furnes have been congratulating themselves that German shells were incapable of being dropped beyond the station and the part around it. Unhappily, for several days past the enemy has managed either to bring his guns nearer to Furnes, which is hard to believe, or to bring up guns of longer range. Whatever the explanation the fact remains that bombs now are falling into Furnes itself. In all probability they have put a gun of the heaviest calibre on a truck which they run up and down the small local railway line. Yesterday morning a shell fell into the theatre and another crashed down into the civil hospital, which is situated next door to the British hospital. A Belgian military doctor was mortally wounded by a shell which fell by the side of a bed in which he slept. A little boy had his feet smashed. The civil hospital was immediately evacuated and the patients removed.

"Slices o' raw onions scattered about the floor will take away the odor of fresh varnish," says an exchange. One must hate the smell of varnish to do a thing like that.

JUST LIKE A GAME

Allies Have Range of German Guns and Can Stop Them at Will.

LONDON, Jan. 26. — There was given out in London yesterday a further recital of conditions at the front by an eye witness attached to the British General Staff. It is dated Tuesday, Jan. 19, at the British General Headquarters in France, and a synopsis of it follows:

"The continuous artillery combat almost takes the form of a game in some parts of the field. As soon as the German batteries start shelling us our guns are directed against certain places on the enemy's lines, the bombardment of which, we know by experience, will soon induce him to desist. Having obtained the range of most of the hostile batteries, we generally can reduce them to silence or render their fire comparatively harmless.

"An alleged German official report declares that a certain German prisoner in the British lines claims that on several different occasions he was forced to ascend in a British aeroplane in his shirt sleeves to point out the German positions and drop a bomb. This whole story is a pure fabrication, but it presumably would not have appeared unless it was likely to be accepted as true in Germany and in some neutral countries. The absurdity of taking up a private soldier who never before had made an ascent in order to ascertain the position of units of which he knew nothing is sufficient refutation. Moreover we would be hardly likely to render his task more difficult by inflicting the needless hardship of exposure.

"Immense efforts and a great amount of material are being expended to keep roads in repair under the motor traffic. Furthermore in many cases, the paved portion of the roads are so narrow that vehicles are unable to pass each other; consequently, it has been necessary to widen the paved surface. Although stone block is one of the most ancient and durable forms of road, it becomes broken up in time by heavy motor traffic."

VICTORY IN EAST

March on Bagdad Has Met With Success

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A Times' Petrograd despatch says:

"News reaches here of a British success in the movement from the Persian Gulf of Bagdad.

"It is believed in Petrograd that the German troops which have been moving through Hungary are intended to oppose the Russian advance in the southern Carpathians, and that the announcement that they were to move against Serbia was incorrect. It is not believed possible that the Germans could prepare an army strong enough to act against Serbia until spring."

German Magnate On Trial.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A despatch to The Post from Stockholm says: "A sensation has been caused in commercial circles here by the news that Senator Possehl, head of the great firm of L. Possehl & Co., has been arrested for high treason, the charge being trading with the enemy. He is being tried by court-martial at Leipzig. Possehl is one of Germany's richest magnates. He is a member of the Herrenhaus and a personal friend of the Emperor."

Dacia To Sail To-day?

GALVESTON, Jan. 26.—"A package of important papers" mailed from New York Friday afternoon is delaying the departure of the Dacia, the captain and the agent of the steamship said last night. The papers, it was said, should arrive in Galveston to-day, and the Dacia will then begin her voyage to Rotterdam, carrying 11,000 bales of cotton.

THE LITTLE REFUGEE.

Last year, her father's arms so strong.
Lifted her high to see,
The lights and all the precious toys
Upon the Christmas tree.

"But now there is no home," she said,
"Nor anywhere to go.—
The big guns battered down the church—
And every place I know.

"We came away so quick—and yet,
How plainly I can see,—
My little table set with cups—
Where I was playing 'tea.'"

"We came so far, I never hear,—
From papa any more,—
The bugles called—he said good-by—
And kissed me at the door.

"I dreamed last night he stood by me,—
His hand upon my head.
'God bless and keep my little girl,'
The words he softly said."

"His head was bowed, he looked so sad.—
The room grew strangely light—
And as I woke he said 'good-by'—
And faded from my sight!"

PATRICIAS ARE IN HOSPITAL

Several More Reported Among Casualties

LONDON, Jan. 26.—It is reported that the following members of the Princess Patricia's Regiment are sick in hospital at Boulogne: Sergt. Edwin Gordon Brock, Privates Bennett Proudfoot, Fred Warner, Geo. Brock, and Bernard Gallagher.

Stories that the regiment has been again under artillery and rifle fire within forty yards of the German trenches are current. They may refer to the actions previously recorded. Col. Farquhar is quoted as saying that the men behaved magnificently under fire. He himself has had a narrow escape, a German bullet grassing one of his ears. A story from the front is to the effect that one of the Canadian soldiers in the regiment, with a bad body wound, caused by a shot, sang "The Maple Leaf" while the doctors were dressing his injury.

Frank Gillen, of 192 Harvie avenue, Toronto, a member of the police force, sustained an internal injury while engaged in a close-range fight. It is said that the bullet that wounded Sergt.-Major Bradley of Toronto in the nose killed Lc-Corpl. Bellinger of Ottawa (whose death has already been recorded), and who was near him.

In addition to Captain Cuthbert Smith and Major McKinery, Edmonton, already mentioned as invalided to England, Lieut. Philip Cornish and Sergt.-Major Dames of the Patricias have also been invalided.

Lieuts. Stewart, Halifax, and Papineau, Quebec, who were injured when their tent was burned down while the Patricias were at Winchester, have fully recovered and have left England with fifty men to reinforce the regiment.

Denies Hungarians Tired of War.

VENICE, Jan. 26.—(Via London.)—Count Julius Andrassay, former Premier and Minister of the Interior of Hungary, according to a despatch from Budapest, characterizes as utterly mendacious, a report that Hungary is tired of the war and is desirous of seeking a separate peace, and declares that peace will be concluded only in union with Germany and with terms satisfactory to both countries.

Swedish People Should Be Neutral.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 26.—The influential Liberal newspaper Tidningen says that the main object of the Swedes should not be to seek profit by the difficulties of the great powers, but to strengthen their defences, thereby assuring respect for Sweden's neutrality by other Governments and securing peace with her own boundaries.

Insurance on Cars.

As to the matter of insurance the meeting resolved to recommend the promulgating of insurance to the Ontario League. The idea would be to have the cars of the members insured and the members would pay for their insurance along with their fees to the treasurer of the association.

Considerable discussion was given to ways and means of bringing in new members and it was finally decided to give a complimentary banquet in the spring to all the auto owners of this city and district.

Reference was made to the absence of the Secretary-Treasurer, G. K. Rackham, who has enlisted. A resolution was passed voicing the association's appreciation of the work done by Mr. Rackham.

Mr. S. J. Keyes, the assistant secretary-treasurer, submitted the following financial report:—

BRING PRIVATE DETECTIVES HERE

spector to understand that he may take action to prosecute violators inside of thirty days or else be liable himself for prosecution for neglect of duty. Hon. Mr. Hanna has stated in the House that if an inspector failed in his duty in this respect he would merit instant removal. Every policeman and officer was in duty bound to take action whenever violations came to his attention.

To Stimulate Sentiment.

The next portion of the program consisted of speeches by Rev. Mr. Peever and Rev. R. Pogue on how to strengthen and stimulate temperance sentiment. The former stated that he was anxiously waiting to see what attitude the present government would take. If the present premier was to hold the confidence of the people there must be a loosening up on his part. A blow should be struck for possible license reduction in the city and efforts exerted to have strict law enforcement. It was at this juncture that he said he would like to see private detectives brought in to investigate. Preachers who were forced to spend a great deal of time in their studies were often not conversant with down town problems.

Must Furnish Facts.

Rev. Mr. Pogue made an impromptu address in which he said that the people to be convinced of the liquor evils must be furnished with facts about its nefariousness. Occasional sermons from the pulpit were to be commended and availing oneself of occasional temperance lectures given every three months. The importance of temperance should be urged upon boys in their youth by the day school teachers and Sunday School teachers. Mr. Pogue felt that the present war would go far to teach temperance and advance the cause by showing up the harmfulness of drink among the soldiers. Special attention should be given to temperance in young people's societies.

In this connection Mr. Richard Lees stated that he felt that much of the present feeling in favor of temperance was inculcated by the teaching of temperance twenty and twenty-five years ago in the public school curriculum in conjunction with hygiene.

Taking up Rev. Mr. Peever's suggestion of an investigation Mr. H. B. Cowan said that some time ago detectives were brought in but succeeded in running up a big bill and nothing else. The liquor laws seemed to be pretty well enforced.

The last portion of the program was the election of officers which resulted as follows:—

Officers for 1915.

Hon. President — Andrew Fairbairn, Lakefield.

President—H. B. Cowan, Peterborough.

Secretary—Richard Lees, Peterborough.

Treasurer—A. E. Kennedy, Lakefield.

Vice-President — Samuel Armstrong, Indian River; G. A. Brethren, Norwood; Samuel Carver, Peterborough.

Township chairmen—
Lakefield—Percy Spence.

North Monaghan — Ken Denoon, Brownton.
Smith—T. T. Milburn, Peterborough.
Otonabee — David Armstrong, Keene.
Ennismore—W. Telford, Bridgenorth.
Peterborough—City organization.

Resolutions.

The resolutions passed were as follows:—

"That this convention express its gratification that there is a first-class hotel in Peterborough conducted without a bar attached. The convention is gratified to learn that the venture has met with a reasonable measure of success and expresses the hope that even greater success may crown the undertaking. We commend the hotel to the travelling public and trust that travelling men especially will give preference to this high-class hotel when seeking accommodation."

"That the executive approves of legislation whereby the liquor question can be submitted to the people by means of the initiative and referendum in order to give the people of the province an opportunity to voice their feeling on the question of the abolition of the bar."

"That whereas in the County of Peterborough and in several of the counties the great majority of the municipalities have placed themselves under prohibition but the beneficial results are limited by the proximity of a few municipalities in which licenses are still issued. And whereas the electors of the province have been led to expect advanced temperance legislation. This convention suggests the enactment of an amendment to the present local option provisions so that counties as such may prohibit the retail sale of liquor by local vote."

"Whereas the British and continental nations in the present crisis have placed several restrictions upon the liquor traffic and whereas public sentiment in Canada would approve of further restrictions for the economizing of our resources and the protection of our citizens' soldiers.

This convention urges that the hours of sale in shops and bar rooms be limited to one o'clock on Saturdays and seven o'clock on other evenings. Also that the sale of liquors be entirely prohibited in the proximity of training camps."

Deep Sea Mission

The many friends of the Deep Sea Mission will be glad of an opportunity to hear the lecture of Mrs. A. W. Wakefield, of Labrador, in St. Paul's Church on Thursday evening. Dr. Wakefield is at present serving in the army in France, but has had a long experience with Dr. Grenfell in his work on the bleak coast.

Those who have seen the views, which will be exhibited by Mrs. Wakefield, speak most highly of them.

There will be no admission fee, but an offering will be taken for the Grenfell Mission. Envelopes have been sent out to the subscribers by the treasurer, Mrs. James Wood, in the hope that all will be returned at the Thursday evening meeting.

Valuable Information for the Travelling Public

The Canadian Pacific Train Service Between Toronto-Montreal and Ottawa

Attention is called to excellent night service from Toronto to Montreal and Ottawa via Canadian Pacific. Train No. 22 leaving Toronto Union Station at 11.40 p.m. daily, carries electric lighted sleepers, compartment observation car from Toronto to Montreal, and Toronto to Ottawa. This train runs via Lake Ontario Shore Line, due Montreal 8.55 a.m. daily, the Ottawa sleeper arriving in Ottawa 7.25 a.m. daily. Smoking is permitted in the lounge or observation room of the Buffet Library Observation Compartment Car Toronto to Montreal, and arrangements have been made whereby porters on this car will press clothes for passengers at very reasonable charges.

Being the last night train from Toronto for Montreal and Ottawa, it gives the travelling public the opportunity of spending the entire evening with their families, or enables them to attend the theatre and other places of amusement, and still have plenty of time to take the train. Sleepers are placed for occupancy at 10.00 p.m. at Toronto Union Station, enabling passengers who so desire to retire at that time.

Dining Car is attached at Smith's Falls every morning serving breakfast into Montreal, so that business men may proceed direct to their offices or appointments immediately on arrival.

The Canadian Pacific operates a high-class passenger train from North Toronto Station at 10.00 p.m. daily, carrying standard electric lighted sleepers and compartment car for Montreal, and sleeper Toronto to Ottawa. Train is due Montreal 7.35 a.m. daily, and Ottawa car reaches that point at 7.25 a.m. daily.

A solid night train is also operated from Toronto Union Station to Ottawa leaving Toronto 10.50 p.m. daily, this train carrying standard electric lighted sleepers and compartment car, due Ottawa 7.25 a.m. daily. Carries from Smith's Falls to Ottawa the standard sleepers for that point, leaving North Toronto at 10.00 p.m. and the standard sleepers leaving Toronto Union Station at 11.40 p.m. daily, so that Ottawa passengers may take their choice of either one of these three trains, and reach Ottawa at exactly the same time.

The Canadian limited No. 20 via Lake Ontario Shore Line route leaves Toronto daily 9.00 a.m. for Montreal, connection at Smith's Falls for Ottawa, stopping at important places, carrying Observation Parlor Car, Dining Room, and first and second class coaches.

RADICALS WANT WAR.

Italy's Participation in Conflict Is Indispensable, They Say.

ROME, Jan. 26.—A London Post despatch says: "The central committee of the Radical party has unanimously adopted a motion declaring that Italy's participation in the European conflict is indispensable to the satisfaction of her aspirations and the protection of her interests. This vote emphatically disproves the rumor that several Radicals desire to support Signor Giolitti in a strictly neutral policy. Moreover, the Giolittian organ, La Stampa, denies Giolitti's reported intention of seeking to return to office on a platform of absolute neutrality.

"Reports are being circulated here that Prince von Buelow is trying to keep on good terms with Italy by sacrificing Austria. The Germans are annoyed that they share Austria's great unpopularity in Italy, but the Italians want more than "a scrap of paper" in proof of Germany's desire to give them Trentino.

Take a Trip In Canada

DO NOT worry about the danger in going to Egypt or the Riveria this year—take a trip in Canada. It will do you good and do Canada good.

Most of us have felt that there is something peculiarly creditable about a trip to Europe—rarely have we commended our friends when they have shown discrimination and patriotism enough to "see Canada first."

The Canadian who talks familiarly of London, Rome and Vienna has been looked upon with a certain awe by his neighbors who have not been abroad. European travel has brought distinction to the traveled.

The Canadian who talks familiarly of Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver has gained usually—not distinction, but,—a reputation as a "rolling stone."

But now that Europe is closed Canadians who habitually winter along the Mediterranean will visit our own great resorts—many of them for the first time. They are the people who, by traveling abroad, have made that the thing to do. They are the people who, by traveling in Canada, will make Canadian trips the fashion in travel.

Already the railroads feel the diversion of travel from Europe to this country. They are feeling it in the form of requests for resort literature, which they are giving out in far greater quantities than ever before.

Thus it is known that the people who have been expatriates—as far as travel is concerned, who have made their money here and spent it abroad—are planning to see their own country now.

Many of them will be amazed at what they will see here—and their amazement will help rid us, as a people, of our great delusion regarding the attractiveness of Europe and the commonness of Canada.

They will miss the ruins of Europe. They will miss some of the tidyness and finish of European prospects, but they will see vigor, freshness and magnificence such as never before has met their eyes.

They will see scores of mountains that dwarf all but a peak or two of Europe's. They will see glaciers broader and more magnificent than those of the Alps—geysers, gorges, canyons, rivers, forests and falls of such beauty and in such profusion that Europeans who have come here have wondered why we should go to Europe for scenery.

They will see cities that have sprung to immense size in a generation, stretches of wonderful farms, representing a wealth that is scarcely conceivable, factories that in a few years have grown to be the world's industrial giants. They will see these and many other things that shame Canadians for their ignorance of home scenes and affairs.

Traveling in Canada is in no sense a hardship. We have better trains and better hotels than the European average. It is hard to get out of reach of a push-button—no matter how far afield you go. And you can always get back—without seeking the consent of the gendarmes.

Damned by a war, the tide of travel has turned inward toward America. Now that it is started, the real charm and variety of the country will keep it flowing. We can all help in this by giving ourselves the opportunity to be enthusiastic about Canadian things and places—by taking trips in Canada.

The new tide will benefit all of us in a practical way for a great part of the thousands which our people have hitherto spent in Europe will now be spent at home. Whole cities and provinces of Europe have subsisted almost entirely on the gold of American pleasure-seekers and health-seekers. Our resorts now will get the money that has formerly gone to the various bads and badens.

LAKEFIELD NEWS ITEMS

Mr. Arthur Murduff of Warsaw was in the village.

Mr. William Morrison spent a few days at Young's Point last week.

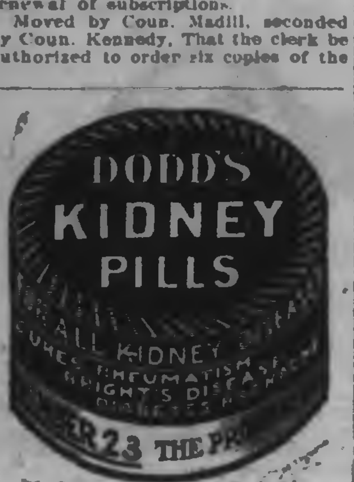
To Wait Until After War.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—It is learned here on high authority that the Imperial Conference which had been suggested by certain Australian politicians and in some quarters in Great Britain will not be held this year

Communications have passed between the Canadian and Imperial Governments on the subject and after a free exchange of views it is understood that it was decided that the conference should be postponed til after the war, or at least for the present year.

Gen. Joffre's Home.

In times of peace Gen. Joffre lives in a little house at Auteuil, 5 Rue Michel Ange. The blinds have been drawn for some weeks now, but passers-by always notice a modest, little bunch of flowers placed on the doorstep. These flowers are renewed each week. For some time it remained a mystry whence these bouquets came, but it was eventually discovered that the donor was "Pere" Jean Gayland, a veteran of '70, who was wounded three times. He works as a linkman at the Auteuil railway station.



STOVES FOR THE TRENCHES

Canadian Troops Will Have Electric Heaters to Keep Them Warm.

Modern warfare is by no means a parlor game, but the members of the Canadian Overseas' Contingent are going to enjoy one of the comforts of home when they enter the trenches for the winter campaign.

This home comfort will be an electric-heating device of a portable nature, three hundred of which have been manufactured in Toronto and have just been shipped to the war zone. Three big lorries were necessary to carry these heaters to the station.

It is supposed that it is the intention to wire all the trenches in which the Canadians repose and attach the heaters at regular intervals. This will provide a fine heating system without running the risk of disclosing the position of the dugouts by the reflection or smoke from bonfires. A further advantage is that rain or snow will not extinguish the electric glow, the heat from which can be used to the utmost advantage.

The supposition is that wires will be strung from the trenches to the rear of the battle line, where connections will be made with available permanent power plants or with the electric generating outfits which have been installed on several trucks attached to the Motor Transport Department of the First Contingent, when local electric plants cannot be employed. The installation of these electric heaters can be carried forward with little trouble.

It is not known whether the three hundred heaters are the gift of a public-spirited citizen or were purchased by the Department of Militia and Defence.

The heaters are of about 5,000-watt capacity each and would cost in the neighborhood of $12 each. They are heaters of the "air" type, no glass bulbs being employed in their function.

According to one writer, there are not enough husbands to go around in England. This may explain the attitude of the men over there. They're afraid they'd be outvoted.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Decided tension on the buying side and a falling off in the stock on hand at the principal domestic centres helped to key up the price of wheat today to the highest record yet during the European war—$1.46 1-2 a bushel, May. The market closed unsettled at 3-4c to 1 1-4c above Saturday night. Corn gained 1-4c to 1-2c and oats 1-8c to 3-4c. The outcome in provisions varied from 5c decline to a rise of 2 1-2c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25.—Wheat and oats opened at new record prices this morning. May was sold at $1.43¾, and July at $1.44¾, which showed an advance over Saturday's close of ⅝c to ⅞c. Oats were ½c to ⅝c up and flax was up 1c to 2c. Further advances took place on wheat and oats, while flax held steady.

Reports were current again today that the government were buying; further large contracts were said to be carried thru in addition to those of Saturday. Broomhall's estimate of only 36,000,000 bushels exportable surplus from the Argentine, as against official estimates on Jan. 2 of 72,000,000, had an influence. Spot wheat at Liverpool being 1½d higher for No. 2 Manitoba influenced wheat. Cash markets were quiet, exporters not being inclined to buy unless in fairly large offerings. Further export sales were claimed to be worked today."

Inspections 141 cars, as against 145 last year, and in sight 220. Futures closed ⅝c to 1c higher, cash ⅝c to 1¼c up for wheat, oats ⅝c higher and flax ⅜c to 2¼c up.

MONTREAD GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—The overseas demand for Manitoba spring wheat was fairly good, but owing to the strength in the Winnipeg market and the fact that the prices bid were practically the same as Saturday's exporters would not accept them and business was quiet. On the other hand there was an active trade done in coarse grains on spot including sales of 200,000 bushels oats and 30,000 American No. 3 mixed corn. The tone of the market for oats is strong and higher prices are expected in the near future. There was no change in flour, for which there continues to be a steady demand on domestic account, but the export trade is quiet.

Butter was active and firm. Cheese was quiet, but steady. Eggs were stronger and 1c to 2c higher.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 25.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.41½, No. 1 northern, $1 40½; No. 2 do., $1 38½, May, $1.41½.

Eggs and The Hen

"There is water a-plenty in a fresh laid egg, but no more air than there is in a hammer," said a dealer in eggs. "So long as you can keep air out of the egg it will remain sweet and fresh, but no one has ever succeeded in keeping it out by fair means more than six days. The oxygen is bound to find its way through an eggshell's pores, and the only way to save that egg then is to eat it. It sounds funny, but the moment you give an egg fresh air that moment you ruin its health.

"A good, healthy hen—not speaking of any particular star breed, but just hen—does not fulfill her destiny until she has accomplished 600 eggs—fifty dozen. That's what nature has fitted up the hen to do in the way of just uncoached and unstimulated egg production, and she gives the hen eight years to do it in.

"The hen divides the fifty dozen stunt up among those eight years. Some years she may not turn out more than a couple of dozen, but when the eight years are up she will have managed her annual output so that the total has come out all right. Then the hen has ended her career as an egg producer, and too often, if she is in the hands of a thrifty owner, begins another career, short and delusive—this time as the summer boarder spring chicken."—Pittsburgh Press.

WAGNER AND HIS DOG

Richard Wagner's fondness for his faithful dog Pepe is well known. At the time when almost all the musical world had turned against him he would sometimes in his walks with the dog declaim aloud against his foes. Then the dog would rush backward and forward, barking and snapping, as if helping his master to defeat his enemies. When Wagner returned home from an excursion to some other city Pepe would always receive a present as well as the other members of the family. "Pepe received them joyfully," he writes to a friend after one of these excursions. When the time came for the little life to be ended Wagner scarcely left the dying dog's side. He even put off two days an important journey because of Pepe' illness and death. He writes afterward to his friend Praeger: "He died in my arms on the night of the ninth, passing away without a sound, quietly and peacefully. On the morrow we buried him in the garden beside the house. I cried much, and since then I have felt bitter pain and sorrow for the dear friend of the past thirteen years."—Argonaut.

The Victoria Cross

The Victoria cross had its origin in the Crimean war and was primarily intended to be conferred upon junior commissioned officers and the rank and file. Neither rank, length of service, wounds nor any circumstance whatsoever can qualify for this noble badge save a personal act of signal bravery performed in the presence of the enemy. The decoration was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856, the prince consort being, it is said, its originator and the designer of the insignia of it. Each Victoria cross is made from bronze which once formed part of some Russian guns captured during the Crimean war, and, although the medal itself is intrinsically worth only about fourpence halfpenny, a number of them have been sold at sales for £100 and over. The winning of the Victoria cross carries an annuity of £10, which may be increased to £50, payable quarterly, to all except officers, but including those who have risen from the ranks.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

TANKARD GAMES ON

This is a red-letter day around the curling rink, for at one-thirty this afternoon two rinks of veteran curlers from Lindsay and more curlers from Millbrook invaded the domains of the local exponents of the game with minds set on winning the famous Tankard Cup games, an honor highly prized.

Skipped by Messrs. J. W. Flavelle and George Little, the Lindsay curlers brought to the city two of their best rinks and men who have been in the game for years. Long before the games were called the rink began to fill up, and when the Lindsay and the home rinks took the ice, a large audience of curling fans had their chairs drawn up and had settled down to witness something worth while. The honors of skipping the two local rinks fell to W. H. Taylor and Wm. Lang.

The personnel of the Lindsay rinks was as follows:

R. Butler	W. E. Reesor
F. Williams	E. J. Carew
L. V. O'Connor	Wm. McClellend
J. D. Flavelle, sk.	Geo. Little, sk.

The Peterborough rinks were:

A. L. F. Hall	Dr. Wightman
Geo. Hill	W. G. Hall
R. M. Waddell	D. Davidson
W. H. Taylor, sk.	Wm. Lang, sk.

Peterborough gradually took the lead and close finishes were soon seen to be destined. W. H. Taylor's rink, which is contesting Mr. Flavelle's squad, was two ends ahead after an hour of play, while Mr. Long's rink had the same lead over Skip Little.

The winners will play Millbrook.

EVANGELIST BILLY SUNDAY WAS GOOD BASE RUNNER

Critics Gave Him Credit for Being in Class by Himself

MACK WAS THE VICTIM

Stole Four Sacks Once on Manager of Present Athletics

Billy Sunday was a fast man in his day. As a professional ball player the newspapers and sporting writers of the 80's and 90's say he was one of the fastest. He was a wonder at stealing bases, they say, and in one game we hear of his stealing four bases on Connie Mack, now famous as the manager of the Athletics.

Connie Mack was the catcher of the Washington team in 1889 and Billy was the right fielder for the Pittsburg Pirates. The two teams were fighting a life and death battle for last place. The Pittsburg team was a sadly disorganized lot of ball players, but the Washington outfit was even worse.

The teams met in Pittsburg on August 9th. Billy has just been mentioned as manager of the Pittsburg team and he was playing his head off. It was a miserable game, the papers say. Pittsburg won by the score of 15 to 3, and Sunday's playing was the only brilliant feature. Ferson and Sullivan pitched for the Washington team and Connie Mack was behind the bat. Besides stealing the four bases on Connie, Billy drove out three hits, scored four runs, and made four catches in the outfield that did a lot to keep the Washington score down.

This feat called forth considerable praise from the press.

"Billy Sunday of the Pittsburgs is the fastest ball player living," said the Cincinnati Enquirer. "He can cover a hundred yards in a straightaway run in less than ten seconds. There is no other player in the country who can duplicate this performance or come anywhere near even time. The honor of being the second best man lies between Arlie Latham of the St. Louis Browns and Billy Hamilton of the Kansas Citys. It is a tossup for a choice between these two players. Both can, under favorable circumstances, on a good cinder path, probably do the hundred in something like 11 seconds."

All the sporting writers of the day, however, do not agree with the Enquirer's comment that Billy Sunday could do 100 yards in less than ten seconds, and we read in the editorial of the Sporting Life of August 14th, 1889, a comment by its editor, Francis C. Ritchter, probably one of the best informed men on athletic records of his time:

"Our Cincinnati contemporary" says Mr. Richter, "treats seconds too lightly. These are but small divisions of time, but of immense importance even in fractions, in sprinting. Ten seconds for one hundred yards is the best amateur record in the world, and if Mr. Sunday or any other all player could cover the distance in that time or less he could make more money at professional sprinting than at ball playing."

Mr. Richter thought a lot of Sunday's ability as a sprinter and frequently referred to him as the "Chicago sprinter," taking the name from Sunday's home town. Sunday was a great favorite with the fans. In fact, during the season of 1890 Sunday and Hecker were about the only players on the Pittsburg team that the fans cared to go to see.

"Sunday made the star play of the day," says a Philadelphia paper, on the morning after one of the games with Pittsburg in 1890. "It was a running catch which he made after a daring dive near the base lines. Sunday also led his side at the bat, and by his sprinting scored its only run.

"Sunday hit the first ball pitched for a base and stole second. The next two men were easily retired, but Laroque banged out a single, and Sunday scored on a very close decision."

But it was not all glory for Sunday in his baseball days. The bleachers and the papers went after him the same as the rest. The records charge Billy up with losing some games for his club. "In the tenth inning the Phillies scored three runs," the records say, "and the Pittsburgs — thanks to Sunday's stupid base-running—only two, and thus the locals won by the score of 5 to 4."

The stupid play that is referred to was a case of "going to sleep" while taking a lead off first base. Smith, of the Pittsburg team, was on third base and Sunday on first, with two men out, and Pittsburg's heavy artillery at the bat. Sunday took a big lead and then stood there. Under the circumstances, the papers said, it was up to Smith to get home, because Sunday was a sure out. But Smith was caught, and the game ended, and the defeat was charged against Billy Sunday.

As a base runner Sunday was in a class with Stovey of the Boston team, and Hamilton and Fogarty of the Phillies. His last year in the game 1890, the year that he finished the season with the Phillies, was his best year as a base runner. In that year he stole 96 bases, and was second only to Hamilton, the man that the Cincinnati Enquirer said could not run the 100 in less than 11 seconds.

It was an interesting race between Hamilton and Sunday for the base-stealing record, but Hamilton was a better hitter and got on the bases more, and won out with six clean "swipes" to spare.

MAIN FLOOR TEAM WON THE GAME

Annual Hockey Contest of Cressman Co. Teams

The Cressman Company's two teams and supporters had a great night at the Brock street rink last night. The main floor seven were too good for their opponents and more than revenged last year's one-goal defeat. After the game the members of the two teams, the referee and all the male members of the Cressman staff were banquetted by the firm at Hooper's.

The teams:

Third Floor and Clothing Section (2) — Goal, Manning; defence, Nichols and Wolfe; rover, F. Cressman, centre, Long; wings, Carlyle and O'Brien.

Main Floor (14) — Goal, Schuletter; defence, Vickers and Raynor; rover, Palmer; centre, H. Cressman; wings, Mullen and Emory.

Oshawa, Jan. 26.—Peterborough put Oshawa out of the running for the O.H.A. intermediate championship here last night by a score of 10 to 3. Oshawa scored the first two goals, but before the first period ended Peterborough had tied the score. In the second period Peterborough made it nine, and Oshawa failed to score. In the third period, Oshawa came stronger and added another. Peterborough came back again with another score; thus the game ended 10 to 3 in the visitors' favor. Though Oshawa showed up well at times, they were outclassed in combination work.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

HOCKEY SCORES AT GRAND HOTEL TONIGHT

Every incident of tonight's senior O. H. A. game between Riversides and Victorias will come over a special G. N. W. wire direct from the Arena to the Grand Hotel. Mr. Schmuck will endeavor to give the fans this season the same good service they enjoyed last season. From now on, all scores of important O. H. A. and N. H. A. games will be given out. Meet at the Grand Hotel tonight and watch the incidents flash in.

COMMENT

As You Like it

LAST NIGHT'S WIN at Oshawa practically assures the fans that the group will remain tied up with Peterborough and Picton on even footing. Both teams have a game in Bowmanville but it is hardly likely that either will lose. Oshawa have yet to meet Picton, in Picton, but judging from last evening's exhibition Oshawa will be defeated.

Owing to the first of February being so close to hand the O.H.A. will hardly permit home-and-home games to be played between Picton and Peterborough. They will likely meet on neutral ice. Belleville looks like the probable scene of battle although Peterborough fans would like to see the game staged in a better arena. The ice surface in the railroad city is fair but the accommodation for spectators wretched. Should the teams meet in Belleville a big crowd would be present at it. Picton is only 32 miles from there and could be depended upon to bring three or four hundred followers while the Petes should be followed by upwards of two hundred.

HAMILTON Rowing Club Juniors have won their group championship. Harold Parker, the former Peterborough boy, is captain of the Ambitious City seven.

THE BERLIN JUNIORS won group honors last night by defeating Stratford 10-5.

RINKS AT Guelph, Burlington and Port Colborne collapsed yesterday owing to the heavy snow fall.

BERLIN INTERMEDIATES defeated St. Michaels of Toronto last night in an exhibition game in Berlin. The score was 4-2.

THE EVENT

By every sign and token,
  By every working law,
By warm and friendly greetings
  From men you never saw,
By chaps who pour molasses
  And honey in your ear,
You know that an election
  Will very soon be here.

The true, the wise and noble,
  The grand, the pure and great
Are running after office.
  You get it from them straight.
You wouldn't have believed it
  Had it not come first hand
That there was so much merit
  In all the blooming land.

Some men you wouldn't fancy
  Or cling to as a fad
Are running for positions
  Just like a run of shad.
Had you the names been picking
  To grace the party slate
You'd let them know how noble
  And fine it was to wait.

But here they come in bunches,
  The lean, the fat, the tall,
For something paying money
  They thought they heard a call,
In legions and battalions
  They come from near and far
To offer you a friendly
  But very rank cigar.

WOMEN AND THE WAR

At last Canada is awakening to the sense of the terrible nearness of the peril—the sense that came so directly to those in England when war broke out—as Miss Saunders was at that time. With that nearness came also a new realization of the grandeur of the way in which men in army and navy stood between the enemy and the homes of the British Empire. We need continually to remind ourselves that it is a fight for the great British ideals of home, of freedomn, and of good faith to the nations that trust us. Already we can see certain good effects of the war—a reality among women, instead of artificiality; deeper thinking instead of drifting; a new ideal of volunteer service; women want now to offer something that costs them.

The Y. W. C. A. throughout the country suffers much from lack of workers, and the war stringency increases this difficulty, so there is great scope for volunteer service among girls in the Association. The evil effects of the war are felt seriously in such work as this—girls whose wages are cut down, or girls obliged to support male relatives,—so that the Association has found it well to help to form office women's co-operative clubs, and other things through which girls can help each other, and yet be in touch with a strong national organization.

The war, too, has made it very difficult to obtain funds for all the national work of the Y. W. C. A., and its staff has been cut down by one-third. Yet there never was a time when it was more necessary to be strengthening all the protective work for girls, seeing to employment bureaus, making sure that travellers' aid workers care for girls travelling to look for work.

Miss Saunders made a strong appeal to Peterborough men and women to contribute the twelve hundred dollars needed to keep on the national staff, the expert secretary for supervising emigration, and travellers' aid work. Through her efforts last season, twenty-five hundred girls were sent on from Quebec with letters of introduction to Y. W. C. A. secretaries in the towns to which they were going, so that they might be followed up. The travellers' aid workers met and helped thirty-one thousand people travelling in Canada last year.

Women are called today to sacrifice their men to go to the front, and meanwhile to carry on themselves this great work for the protection of girls.

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

A very pleasant event occurred on the evening of Monday, Jan. 18th, 1915, when the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harding was celebrated at the home of their son, Mr. Frank Harding, Warsaw, Ont.

An elaborate supper was served to a large number of guests, after which congratulations were poured upon the aged couple, and their pastor, Rev. M. L. Hinton read the following address, on behalf of relatives.

Dear parents, grandparents, brother and sister,

We have gathered this evening to celebrate your golden wedding.

Fifty years of married life, a long, long time to spend together. When we look back to the days of our childhood and remember the sacrifices, and self-denials, you have undergone, that we might have many things to make us happy, in those by-gone days. Since we have become parents, how much more can we understand what it means to be a true parent. We know of the aspirations, the hopes, that parents have for their children and we hope that you may not be disappointed in any of those beautiful dreams which surrounded the little occupant of the cradle. Now tonight we would like you to remember that we your relatives appreciate the love, patience and sympathy bestowed upon us and may the closing years of your lives, be as the golden sunset, rich with blessings of peace and plenty. As your life boat floats upon the silvery stream of time, may it just be nearing home, to the Father's house, on the invitation of His only Son who hath redeemed us by His blood.

We hope you will look back to this anniversary, with gladness, that the remembrance will brighten any lonely days that you may have, knowing that though far apart we think of you, with fond remembrance.

It is not every one that is privileged to celebrate their golden wedding, and we feel glad to realize that you have been spared so many years and hope you will have many more to spend with your many friends tried and true. Please accept this purse of gold as a token of the love and affection with which you are held by all of us.

After the address was read a number of speeches were given by many of the gentlemen and ladies present with reference to the by-gone days among them was one given by the bridegroom of fifty years ago. A solo "Don't forget the old folks" was sung especially for the bride and bridegroom by Mrs. (Rev.) Hinton.

Relatives present, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Batteu, Port Carling, Muskoka.

Mrs. Ed. Myers, Orillia; Mrs. John Quinlan, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. E. Schnieder, Detroit, Mich.; Mr. S. Hiscutt, Lakehurst; Mrs. B. Dunk, Mr. Sam. IMPRISONMENT FOR ONE YEAR

John Lasure is Sentenced at Walkerton

The criminal career of John Lasure, well known to the police of Peterborough, has been terminated for one year by his imprisonment in Walkerton jail for that length of time. Convicted of three offences, all of a serious character, Lasure is considered to have got off lightly by the local authorities, who had him locked up here, pending his removal to Walkerton. His crimes consisted of stealing a team of horses and a sleigh and harness from a farm near Tara, escaping from the police while under arrest, and stealing another horse and sleigh from David Matthews of Chatsworth.

Mr. Matthews' horse and sleigh were recovered at Baillieboro, whither Lasure had driven the animal, and then deserted the outfit. It has been shipped back to Chatsworth by the owner.

REV. MR. GOODWILL IS APPRECIATED

By People of Villiers Who Make Presentation

Villiers, Jan. 26.—A very pleasing event took place at the close of the Sunday evening services, at Villiers school house on Sunday evening last, when the pastor, Rev. Mr. Goodwill, was presented by his congregation with an address and a handsome pair of chairs. Although completely taken by surprise, Rev. Mr. Goodwill made a touching reply thanking the people for their kindness towards him and for the kindly feeling of sympathy that prevails in the meetings..

The address was as follows:—

Dear Mr. Goodwill,

This opportunity of evidencing our lasting esteem and friendship towards you, comes not only as a pleasure, but as a privilege. We are sincerely glad to leave with you, this trifling memorial of our deep and abiding gratitude for your unceasing efforts to benefit us. In the holding of Sunday evening services here we feel that we are the recipients of a spcial favor and kindness from you; and we fully realize and appreciate the fact that the meetings have not been arranged without considerable sacrifice on your part. When in future days you look upon this momento let it be a pleasant token of our respect and thankfulness.

Signed on behalf of Villiers' people

Splendid Debate at Epworth League

An Interesting Program Given at George Street Church

On Monday night, the meeting of the George St. Epworth League was in charge of the Christian Citizenship Department. The chief item on the program was a debate. The subject was, "Resolved that Christianity Sanctions Wealth rather than Poverty." Mr. Logan and Mr. Copp were the speakers on the affirmative side, while Miss Bennet and Miss Puck upheld the negative. Each group set forth a number of convincing points.

The affirmative held that it is one's duty to make the best use of his talents. This is bound to lead to wealth whether in learning or material possession. Wealth in the acquiring increases the usefulness of life and brings into play the virtues of Christianity. Wealth of opportunity and ambition is justifiable. As regards material wealth, missionaries need funds in order to promote their life work. Bible societies make good use of money at their disposal, in spreading the gospel. Many noted men, as Dr. Bernardo, who has founded orphanage institutions, have given their money for the carrying on of Christian work.

The negative side maintained that poverty is the mainspring of everything of permanent value. Great men as Columbus, Peel and Shakespeare sprang from the ranks of the poor. The work of these has benefitted Christianity. Earthly possessions, beyond those for actual needs, bespeak vanity. Wealth is a snare to the rich and a temptation to the poor. Jesus sanctioned poverty by both practising and teaching it.

The judges, after duly debating the matter, gave their decision in favor of the affirmative side.

During the evening several matters of business were transacted. A number of new members were received into the league.

CALL TENDERS FOR REPAIRS AT QUEEN MARY HOSPITAL

The Board of Health, consisting of Chairman Dr. Amys, Dr. McPherson, M. H. O., Mayor Buller, Ex-Ald. Duncan and James Murty, accompanied by Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Finance Committee, visited the Isolation Hospital yesterday afternoon. The committee found the institution being very well managed and the various officials performing their duties in a very creditable manner.

The matter of having the repairs, as recommended in the annual report of the hospital, performed was thoroughly discussed, and the chairman authorized to call for tenders for the work of flooring the north wing and decorating the second floor.

EVERYTHING BUT THE FLASK

One Article the Police Did not Return

"I had a flask in my pocket, where is it?"

An elderly man still shaky from the effects of the previous day's debauch asked the question as he was ready to leave the police station today. Dennis Flaherty was his name and he had just transferred a two spot to the hand of a constable, which represented the price of his liberty. His money had been restored to him, his watch and a few other trifles but suddenly he missed a flask and asked that it be given back.

Upon the constable informing him that the police don't make a practice of returning flasks of whiskey Dennis departed looking pretty much down in the mouth. He hailed from Emily township and was "a little the worse for liquor," to quote his own words.

Joseph McAuliffe would have taken no prize in a beauty show, when he faced the Magistrate. He carried a badly bruised face from the effects of a "jag" yesterday.

"Two dollars," was the decree.

"Will you give me a chance to get money?"

"No, you should think of these things before you get drunk," was His Worship's reply.

DETERMINE THE VALUE

the bond holders of the company. General Manager W. S. Robertson and local manager W. H. Munro, of the company, are also present, as are R. T. Jeffrey, engineer of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, H. O. Fisk, manager of the Peterborough Utilities, City Clerk Armstrong and E. H. D. Hall, solicitor for the local commission and formerly city solicitor.

Solicitor Tilley opened the proceedings by giving the various sections in three Ontario Statutes which deal with the case. They are: 1912, chapter 117; 1913, chapter 114, and 1914, chapter 87. He remarked that the city had expropriated all the distribution system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, both in the city and immediate vicinity. He desired to know if the $100,000 placed in court by the city was for all or just that section in the city. Mr. Cowan stated he was not prepared to make any statement along that line at present, and Mr. Tilley intimated that it would come out more definitely as the case proceeded. In his opinion it would be a fair way to consider the two sections of the system together.

Mr. Tilley informed the Board that pursuant with the act governing the expropriation of the company's property by the city, the company had furnished an inventory of all their property expropriated, and the first witness he wished to have called was not an expert, but rather one who could give a description of the system.

Herbert A. Fife, the first witness, stated that he is now in the employ of the Quaker Oats Company of this city. He left the Peterborough Light and Power Company about October 1, 1914, after being in their employ for some twenty years. He started in as an operator and worked up to superintendent. He was appointed superintendent in 1911, and held the position when the city took over the company. He compiled the inventory furnished the city, and did so by taking a complete list of everything in the distribution system. He took actual observation personally, and went over the system twice. The figures in the inventory furnished the city were the same as he made. To overcome any possible discrepancies, he added a certain per cent. to the figures. The percentage depended upon the size of the article. Instance, in the case of poles, one per cent was added.

Witness had maps of the system, and he testified that there were records kept to show that these maps were correct. By means of these maps Mr. Fife went over the history of the construction of the system, giving the amount of work done each year, also what sections of the city were provided with power. Reference was made to one of the lines which extended to Braidwood avenue. Mr. Cowan claimed they were not interested in the details of any section of the system outside the city, but Mr. Tilley remarked that Mr. Fife's evidence was surely descriptive, and he wanted to know the age of the system, whether the city wanted to buy it or steal it.

Questioned by Mr. Tilley, witness stated that it was in 1910 the company commenced keeping an accurate account of the poles used in construction. When he endeavored to make his records of the years previous to 1910 he went over the system and counted up all the poles. Previous to 1900 there were 403 poles used; from 1900 to 1903 there were 350; from 1904 till 1910, there were 1,230, and from 1910 to 1911 there were 337, making a total of 2,320 poles. To this was added the one per cent., making a total of 2,343.

Death of Mr. Paul Costello

A well-known figure in the township of Ennismore has been removed in the death of ex-Reeve Paul Costello, who passed away yesterday at his home, Lot 6, Concession 9. The late Mr. Costello had been seriously ill for the past two weeks, a sufferer from heart trouble. He was 78 years of age, and had spent all his life in the township, where he had always enjoyed the respect and high esteem of his wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Not only in Ennismore was he known, but also throughout the county. He was the first councillor representing the township, and for several terms he held the office of reeve. The late Mr. Costello was a prominent Conservative, serving for some time as township chairman for the party.

He is survived by a widow and grown-up family of six sons and four daughters. The sons are Frank, at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto; Joseph and Steven, at home, Paul, of St. Basil's Scholasticate, Toronto, Eugene, Toronto, and William, at home. The daughters are Catherine, of Michigan, Mrs. R. Nell, Cordova Mines, Annie, of Queensborough, and Marguerite, at home.

The funeral will be held from his late residence on Wednesday morning at 9.30 o'clock, proceeding to St. Martin's church and cemetery.

WARDENSHIP TO REEVE MULLIGAN

Four Other Candidates Were in the Contest for Victoria County

Lindsay, Jan. 27.—The vote for the office of Warden of Victoria County, which took place at the inaugural meeting of the 1915 body yesterday afternoon, was fought out in eight rounds, Reeve R. J. Mulligan, of Omemee, being declared elected, the other contestants being Isaac H. Fee, Jas. Robertson, Wm. McKee and R. Howkins. For three votes Reeve Fee headed the poll, the fourth Robertson and Mulligan tied and on the fifth and sixth Mulligan was in the lead, while in the seventh Fee again took the lead, Mulligan finally securing the majority of Council (10 votes).

IRISH ARE WELL REPRESENTED

In South African Force Commanded by Col. Brennan

Mr. M. H. Quinlan is in receipt of a communication from Dr. F. H. Brennan, formerly of Peterborough and now Lieutenant-Colonel F. H. Brennan, V.D., of South Africa, in command of a regiment of 750 men, in active service for three months.

Col. Brennan states that 22 of the 26 officers are Irish and 85 per cent. of the men, also are Irish.

About eighteen years ago Col. Brennan left Peterborough but he will be remembered as having been an active officer of the Peterborough battalion. He then held the rank of major.

DEPARTMENT MAY BE ENLARGING IT'S PLANS FOR MOBILIZATION

Mr. Burnham said in answer to a question by The Review as to the truth of rumors of mobilization here, that it was quite possible that the Department of Militia was enlarging its plans and consequently the scope of its mobilization but that all he had heard of it so far was from a gentlemen in the city who told him that a certain officer had written to him telling him that Mr. Burnham was to be communicated with by an officer of the department, concerning the matter. No doubt that whatever is needed will be done. All our facts and facilities are before the minister. It is however to be regretted that such a thoroughly military matter as mobilization should be spoken of in such an entirely irregular and unmilitary way as to be the subject of comment in private letters by military men in the course of casual correspondence. We must concede some better degree of efficincy at such a time to such a department and I do not wish therefore to discuss the matter further.

GERMANS ARE DRIVEN BACK

Are Dislodged From Many Positions by Russians

FRESH EFFORTS ARE FRUITLESS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 27. — The general staff of the Russian army today gave out a report on the progress of fighting, which reads: "In the Pilkaten region our troops took the offensive on January 25th, and drove all detachments of the enemy who opposed them back toward a line from Malvischken to Lasdenen. During this operation we dislodged them from many positions after fighting at the point of the bayonet.

"On the right bank of the River Vistula there have been advance guard engagements of minor importance. In the vicinity of Vyschprov, fire of our artillery has demolished a lookout post on the left bank of the river. To the left of the Vistula, the Germans made several fresh efforts to assume the offensive, and on the eve of January 24th and afternoon of January 25th, but each time they were driven back with serious losses.

"We reduced two German batteries to silence.

"In Galicia, activity of the enemy has increased on a part of the front, both with artillery fire and infantry attack. He was everywhere driven back. We took prisoners three officers and three hundred soldiers.

"There have been no important changes in Bukowina."

PROVIDE WORK AT THE GRAVEL PIT

Scheme is Placed Before Local Branch of Patriotic Fund

FINANCIAL REPORT

A rather large scheme whereby to assist the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Peterborough Relief Association was submitted to the meeting of the association last evening by Ald. F. H. Dobbin. The idea was to commence the work of removing some 15,000 cubic yards of gravel from th Hilliard property at Auburn, which is owned by the city, and sell the gravel to the city to repair roads and fill in such places as the Goose Pond. The work of excavating would be financed by the funds of the association and if a man came to the Executive fficer for charity and he was able to work he could thus be given employment. The removal of the gravel would make it possible for the city to sell building lots on the property.

Ald. Dobbin had discussed his scheme with the City Engineer who expressed himself in favor of the idea. It was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the Distribution Committee with power to act. In all probability the committee will wait upon the Board of Works and take up the matter more thoroughly.

Something for Nothing.

A letter was read from the Canadian Patriotic Fund Association to the effect that a Montreal firm had donated 500 pictures of the First Overseas Contingent to the fund and they could be retailed at $1.00 each. If the local branch desired they could secure some of these photos and the amount realised would be credited to it. It was decided to send for 25.

Additions to Committee.

WILL SOON BE ABLE TO EAT EGGS AGAIN

Prices in Stores Show a Downward Trend

Eggs are coming down in price, and there has been a decrease of ten cents per dozen at the very least since the first of the month. Retailers are able to obtain thirty-five cents a dozen for guaranteed fresh eggs, and the outlook is indicative of a still further drop. Around Christmas and New Year's, it will be remembered, eggs soared as high as 50 cents a dozen, and 45 cents was the prevailing figure, but now fresh eggs are available at most stores for 3[illegible] cents.

Following the establishment of an employment bureau among the students of the School of Science, in Toronto, efforts are being made to provide as large a percentage of students as possible with positions during the coming summer.

GERMAN SNIPERS PAID FOR KILLING BRITISH OFFICERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 27. — The Manchester Guardian reports that Sir Henry McKinnon, Lieutenant-General, in a speech at a dinner there on Monday night, said that snipers in the German army are being paid so much per head to dispose of British officers. One dead sniper was searched, and an order found, deputing him to snipe British officers. Memoranda were found on him showing that he had shot fifty British officers, but had received payment only for twenty-five, at fifty shillings each.

FOE LOST TWO BATTALIONS

Great Check Inflicted on Germans is Confirmed

FOUR NEW ATTACKS REPULSED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 27. — The French official statement this afternoon says: "In the sectors of Nieuport and Ypres, there wree artillery engagements yesterday. A German aeroplane was brought down within the lines of the Belgian army. A statement made by prisoners establishes the fact that it was not a battalion but a brigade which, on January 25th, attacked our trenches to the east of Ypres. The enemy lost in this affair what amounted to a battalion and a half of men.

"It has been confirmed today that near La Bassee, Givenchy and Guinchy, the Germans yesterday suffered a great check. On the road from La Bassee to Bethune the bodies of six officers and four hundred men were found. The losses of the Germans consequently must represent at least two full battalions.

"In the region of Craonne we maintained ourselves in the trenches recaptured by us during our counter-attacks of January 25th.

"In the region of Perthes, Hill No. 200, four violent attacks on the part of the enemy have been repulsed.

"In the Argonne, in the vicinity of St. Hubert, a German attack was repulsed with the bayonet.

"At St. Mihiel we destroyed new foot bridges over the Meuse."

SPAIN WOULD HELP ALLIES AT MOMENT FOR DECISIVE ACTION

NEW YORK, Jan. 27. — A Tribune cable from Madrid says that Senor Caballero, former ambassador at Paris, declared in an interview yesterday that Spain's present policy is strict neutrality, but the intention is to join the Allies at the most convenient moment.

"Germany cannot win, and as she will not listen to peace proposals, the only way to bring the war to an early conclusion is to help the Allies when the moment for decisive action arrives."

BRITISH AND TURKS FIGHTING IN EGYPT

Detachments of Turkish Troops Sighted at Several Points

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CAIRO, Jan. 27. — An engagement occurred yesterday to the eastward of El Kantara in Egypt, presumably with an advance guard of a Turkish army, although details are lacking. British losses were one officer and four men slightly wounded. Only a comparatively small number of men were engaged in the fighting, which was in the nature of a skirmish.

Detachments of Turkish troops have been sighted at three other points to the east of the Suez Canal, but no fighting has resulted except that in the vicinity of El Kantara. In this engagement the Turks opened fire at long range with mountain guns. The British replied with machine guns and rifles. A British seaplane dropped bombs upon Turkish forces near Birmurhadad, inflicting losses.

INCREASED SALARIES BRINGS BETTER TEACHERS

In the report of Inspector G. E. Broderick, presented to the County Council this morning, attention was drawn to the steadily increasing number of teachers who hold certificates of a higher grade. During the past six months there had been convincing and repeated proof that the securing of qualified teachers in the southern townships was no longer a chance or even a possibility, but a certainty depending entirely upon a businesslike procedure of school boards. The inspectorate covers the schools of Peterborough West.

Inspector Broderick's report also reiterated his former plea for the consolidation of schools, with a view to affording more educational advantages to the country children. Teachers should also be given salaries sufficiently large to induce them to go to remote sections to teach. He advocated an increase of $100 in the salary of each teacher in the twelve schools in the [illegible] Peterborough side of his [illegible] district.

HOW PRICES WERE MADE

Electrical Expert Gives Evidence Before Board of Arbitrators

The Board of Arbitrators sat again this morning. This morning Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, the company's representative, appeared and made the Board complete. At yesterday's session H. A. Fife was instructed by Solicitor Cowan to prepare a map showing the area of the city over which the distribution system of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. extended previous to 1906. This map was produced this morning and will likely be considered later.

The principle evidence being taken today is that of Archibald Sayce, an electrical expert of the H. M. Byllesby Co., Chicago. He had assisted in compiling the inventory presented the city by the Peterborough Light and Power Co. and it was his prices which the company put on their property. Mr. Sayce stated that the price fixed was based on information he received from various supply concerns, information he secured from Mr. Fife and his own personal experience. In all cases he put down what he considered a fair price. As to depreciation in the value of the property Mr. Sayce used his own knowledge and also made an inspection. In the poles he found the average life was 33 years and in arriving at a price he did not consider the possibility of revenue being made from the sale of these poles after they were discarded. As to the quantity of wire, Mr. Sayce had secured it from Mr. Fife, checking it over but roughly. He put the price at 18 cents per pound which he thought was a fair price. He took the price on a range of prices for three years.

To the summary he had added a certain per cent. for legal organization. That would cover all legal expenses in regard to the extending of the system. The amount was in his opinion, some $3,44[illegible]. To overcome the cost of engineering he added 5 per cent. and to cover possible commission he added [illegible] per cent.

Solicitor Cowan put Mr. Sayce through a rigid cross-examination as to the methods he used in arriving at the prices. Witness stated he secured all the information he could from such men as the superintendent and manager. He also went to such concerns as the Canadian General Electric Co. and Westinghouse Co. Asked if he had any other assistance Mr. Sayce remarked that he knew the prices in United States.

ASKS GOVERNMENT TO ASSUME CONTROL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—The Free Press in a heavy type editorial today calls on the Government to help Britain and her allies by assuming entire control of all food exported from Canada as to price and destination. It claims the middleman is making too much rake off and our wheat is actually going through the States to the Empire's enemies.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1915

CANADA MUST DEVELOP ITS OWN INSTITUTIONS.

DR. FALCONER, in his Presidential Report, brought out two or three points that should receive attention and which ought to be of interest to the public, as well as to all those who attend the University of Toronto or are interested in its students and welfare. The revision of the General Course in Arts has effected a reduction in the number of subjects, and thus permitted a more intensive study of languages in the first two years of the curriculum. This change ought to be beneficial in a high degree, as a language requires much hard study in order to get lasting benefit from the time invested in it. This is the policy that most efficient universities are following.

The extension in the course of Highway Engineering in the Faculty of Applied Science is another important advance. The scientific construction of highways is a problem requiring trained men. The building of highways of a permanent kind must be one of the big problems of Canada for many years to come, and will require the expenditure of millions of dollars. Already a vast sum has been invested in the highways of Canada. We have some good roads, but there is no doubt that much money has been either wasted or not spent to the best advantage. This has been due, we believe, not to graft or misappropriation, but simply to a lack of knowledge of scientific road construction. By that term we mean more than simply a technical knowledge of the constituents of a good road. There is the equally important economic side in road-building—how good a road the taxpaying possibilities of the community will permit —what kind of a highway the traffic of a certain section would demand, and many other important details, that make road-building not only a national problem, but also one of each individual municipality. The results from this course at Toronto University will be watched with interest by the public.

The closing paragraph of Dr. Falconer's report is worthy of attention, not only by those directly connected with Toronto University, but by all those who are interested in the progress of higher education in Canada. The point brought out in this paragraph should be considered carefully by all universities and the public generally. It is in part as follows:

> "One result of the war will be, as far as one can judge, that the American universities will be thrown on their own resources and will develop rapidly. It is altogether probable that for some years to come few of their students will go to Germany to study, that the influence of many of the leading American professors, who for some years have been complaining that they had been over-Germanized, will have its effect, and that the Americans, having learned method from Germany, will develop more and more their own learning and science at home. I believe, therefore, that there will be greater inducements in the not distant future held out by American universities to many of our students, who formerly went to Europe, to take their post-graduate work in the United States. There is, of course, much to be said in favour of this, but whereas nearly all our graduates, who formerly went to Europe, returned to Canada, a very large proportion of those who go to the United States find permanent employment across the border. Such emigration is very costly, as we know from experience. We must, therefore, provide graduate work for our Ontario and Canadian students in our own institutions. . . With the heightened national spirit that is bound to come with renewed material prosperity, Canada must be prepared, unless she is to lose her self-respect, to provide the most advanced kind of academic training for her own people. . . In the United States the university is becoming a potent influence. Its extraordinary power in Germnay, albeit towards a perverted ideal, is only too well known. We may expect, therefore, that in Canada, also, it will play a large part in the future. It will supply men who will speak with authority to a wide public not only on matters of medicine, engineering, and industrial science, but on historical, economic, and social problems. There should be also a place for the scholar who will set standards of taste for the people. . . The great scholar or scientist is rare, but the university must set about to discover among its students him who may become such and save him for his country. Such advanced work is costly, but without it we shall have the chagrin of watching our neighbours shoot past us, and we shall have to be content with obtaining from them such trained teachers as they can spare us."

ONE of the best songs recently published is "Saskatchewan, Good-Bye." The words are by Charles Charretier and the music by Neil Moret. Among much trashy stuff that comes out annually, a good composition deserves credit.

THE EASTERN PERIL.

THE WORKINGMEN of Canada will be called upon very soon to decide once more between Free Trade and Protection. Sir Wilfrid is still wedded to his idol of Free Trade, and, of course, its necessary accompaniment, Free Labour. The Globe admits that China, with her skilled workmen receiving 20 and 30 cents a day, is rapidly coming to the fore as a manufacturing country. So is it also with India. The Globe says: "Instead of rejoicing at the resultant prospect of getting underwear, steel rails and other products with much less effort than formerly, the reporting consul regards these things as portentous and even terrible." The Globe laughs at the fear of cheap goods. It says that all Canada has to do is to make what the Chinese want, and sell in exchange. Well! at what rate of wages? 20 or 30 cents a day? or how would Canadian workingmen be able to compete in those same articles, with home Chinese production? The truth is that if the Globe is right, and cheapness of production, as in China, is what we should bow to, the rate of wages here will have to come down. The Globe stands for the Chinese rate of wages. Now is the time to protest and to protect our people. We can do it. If the whole world was shut out, Canada could and would develop like magic, and the relative rates of wages be maintained. Foreign trade, under the Globe's conditions, is ruin, not benefit.

TOO MUCH FOR THEIR WHISTLE.

WHO are the men deserving the thanks of a municipality? Why is it said that the best men of a community do not enter municipal politics? Is it because there is no salary, indemnity, or monetary reward? It is true that a better class strive for the Legislature and the House of Commons, and that some regard municipal positions as the political rewards for inferior men. This is a false view to take, and has resulted in a large amount of harm to the common people. Every boy, and girl, too, for that matter, should be brought up in the expectation of fulfilling the duties of citizenship, and that the state requires in municipal matters the best men it can produce. Attention is called to a reprint article elsewhere on this page, dealing with the municipal debt of Montreal. Practically every Canadian city is heavily loaded with mortgage obligations to pay for such things as sewers, pavements, and municipal buildings. Whether the price paid for these as represented in the debenture debt is high or low is a matter worthy of investigation. But the important fact is that the high cost of living in urban centres has been materially raised by municipal debts. Heavy interest charges mean higher tax rates, which mean higher rents and higher valuations for property. These enhanced values necessitate increases in the price of goods, such as butter, bread and clothes, for a merchant must make up in the price of his goods increases in rents or taxes. Such changes in values, or rather prices, permit real estate speculations and cause the tremendous margin of profit commonly called the unearned increment. Higher wages follow as a natural consequence, and then some one cries out about the high cost of living. It is a current opinion that municipal politics are not conducted in the best interests of the people, and that the common citizen is paying too much for improvements, or, as Benjamin Franklin would say, to much for their whistle.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

LA PATRIE says that it despairs of converting Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., who addressed a second letter to it on the subject of French in Ontario. La Patrie says it cannot make him understand that it is not a question of supplanting English. La Patrie is sensible. When possessed of an idea, Mr. Burnham is a hard man to convert, but our Dominion member will not likely cease his efforts to convert La Patrie. Studying this question under the influence of the missionary spirit ought to result in an understanding of the two sides of the problem.

SAYS Beck's Weekly: The announcement that the completion of the Canadian Northern Transcontinental line will be celebrated by driving a silver spike next week disposes of the story that that railway is using mucilage and unsold bonds to attach the rails to the sleepers.

The Debt of Montreal.

(Beck's Weekly, Montreal.)

When Mayor Martin signed the last of the bonds for the loan of $6,900,000, negotiated in New York, the civic indebtedness of the city was raised to the sum of $84,201,399, of which $20,000,000 was added last year. The population of the city proper is given in the 1914 directory as 595,600, which makes a per capita debt of about $140. On the whole of this continent this is only exceeded by New York with $152, while in Detroit, with about the same population, the per capita debt is $15. Some other cities show: Milwaukee, $25; St. Louis, $35; Cincinnati, $53; Newark, $55; Cleveland, $60; San Francisco, $60; Philadelphia, $61; Buffalo, $65; Baltimore, $74; Los Angeles, $74; Boston, $106; New Orleans, $114.

What have we to show for this huge civic indebtedness? Our streets are a disgrace to a civilized community. For their equal you would have to go to some of the lesser cities of Russia and to the big centres of population in China. We own few public services, and are even on the eve of abandoning to private profit one of the most important. The public health of the city, though it possesses an efficient and zealous staff, is hindered and thwarted by private intrests and even by public officials. Our infant mortality rate is the highest on the continent. The record of our civic waste, graft and inefficiency is probably unequalled even in the cities of the small South American republics.

That is all we have to show for a debt of over $84,000,000. On the credit side there is, it is true, a partially whitewashed city hall and a mayor who looks as though he had stepped out of the scenes of a Gilbertian farce. But these benefits are scanty compensation for a policy that is bringing Montreal within measurable distance of bankruptcy.

Municipal Electric Light Plants.

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

Forty-four out of fifty of the largest cities in Great Britain have their own municipal electric lighting plants. According to a recent analysis made by the London Municipal Society, it is pointed out that if the municipal undertakings in Great Britain were taken over by private companies the cost to the consumers would be lowered by $860,000 per annum. According to this, the civic administration of electric light plants in Great Britain is not an altogether satisfactory plan.

RUSSIAN EMPEROR'S AFFAIRS ARE SHROUDED IN MYSTERY

Count Simon Rodianoff, For Many Years His Personal Bodyguard, Has Given the World Some Vivid Glimpses of the Private Life of His Imperial Master.

The Tsar of Russia, unlike his arch-enemy, the German Emperor, is a man whose life is largely shrouded in mystery, says Answers.

With the Kaiser it is a case of "power and publicity." With the Little Father of all the Russians it is a case of mighty influence, swayed by a man whose personal side is seldom revealed.

One of the officers closest to the Tsar is his personal bodyguard. This position was held two years ago by Count Simon Rodianoff, and after he relinquished it he gave to the world many personal stories of his Imperial master which otherwise would never have become public.

On one occasion his Majesty announced his desire to have a droshky brought, so that he might go for a drive in the country incognito. While Count Rodianoff went to inform the necessary members of the Household of the Imperial wish, the Tsar strolled in the park. When the bodyguard came upon him, about half an hour later, he was helping a gardener to lop off the dead limbs from a tree.

In civilian attire the Tsar and his bodyguard walked past a wing of the palace, and, through an open window, heard voices. They approached, and, looking in saw about a dozen sentinels seated at a round table, drinking vodka and playing cards. One of the men was telling his companions of a love affair, at which they all laughed heartily. The sentinels sprang to their feet, saluted, and presented arms.

The Tsar smiled.

"How do you do, boys? Go ahead, and don't be disturbed by me," he said.

When the droshky came they drove into the country, enjoying the sunshine and the delightful rural scenery, until they came to a typical Russian inn, where the Tsar stopped the horse, and, announcing that he was hungry, entered the hostelry.

Mine host was deep in a discussion of politics with a number of peasants who had stopped on the way to market with their produce to drink vodka.

"We want something to eat," said the Tsar.

But all the innkeeper had in the house were some old, dried-out ham, herrings and eggs. However, one of the peasants had a cartload of crabs, and the Tsar asked the innkeeper to buy a couple of dozen and boil them.

"I have no time to boil you crabs," quoth mine host. "If you are hungry eat herring and drink vodka."

"But suppose I pay you ten roubles?" persisted the Tsar.

The innkeeper looked at the speaker.

"I'm sure your money doesn't grow on trees," he replied. "You buy the crabs from the man and pay me fifty copecks for boiling them, and I shall be satisfied. I don't wish to be too greedy."

Half an hour later his Imperial Majesty and his bodyguard sat down at table with the peasants and partook heartily of a repast of boiled crabs and tea, of which the Tsar afterwards said that he had never enjoyed a meal more.

Later in the day the Tsar and the Count took part in a wedding they found in progress in the cottage of a humble fisherman. They were greeted at the gate by the host, who mistook them for wedding guests, but, when they explained that they were tourists, he asked:

"What is your business?"

The question was a confusing one, and the Tsar hesitated.

"I know people pretty well from their appearance," said the old peasant, smiling shrewdly. "I know from your face that you are either a commercial traveler or an agent for a drapery house."

Nevertheless, the two distinguished tourists attended the wedding, and drank with the bride and bridegroom; and the next morning the Tsar sent a present to the bride, consisting of a fine service of silver, a five-hundred rouble note, and a personal message, which ran:

"I congratulate the newly-weds, and send my wedding-present.
Tsar Nicolas I."

Though the Tsar enjoys a stroll incognito, he is guarded at his various residences in the closest possible manner. Count Rodianoff's room at the summer palace was situated so that, on a call from the royal apartment, he could reach it immediately. During six hours each day he had to stay at the door of the royal apartment, to follow the Tsar whenever he left it.

A Pointed Hint.

An author engaged a young lady typewriter to take down his new novel from dictation. At the passage, "Oh, my adorable angel, accept the confession from my lips that I cannot exist without you! Make me happy. Come and share my lot and be mine until death do us part!" his fair secretary paused and ingenuously inquired, "Is that to go down with the rest?"

Growing Alike.

"Don't you think little Elsa gets more and more like me?"

"Certainly; soon we shan't be able to distinguish the difference between you. She grows older and you grow younger."

Very Convenient.

SOME GUN

The following clipping from an old country paper deals with a new Krupp gun that will destroy Canada seven minutes after it has been fired from Berlin.

The Krupp 42-centimetre howitzer is eclipsed by a new Krupp gun "that will end the war at the first shot." Here is the description of this wonderful weapon supplied by Messrs. R. Ward & Sons, of Newcastle, on authority of "Mr. A. D. Liarsberg":

"This gun weighs 27,000,000 tons, and the muzzle is so large that the Kaiser drove his limousine down the barrel. A troop of artillery went through, and a Zeppelin also flew down the gun from one end to the other.

"It fires a projectile that weighs 23,000,000 tons. On the projectile is a clock, and it also carries a time-table. It will be fired from Berlin at 9 a.m., and will destroy the following cities at the times mentioned:

"Leave Berlin, Germany, 9 a.m., arrive London, England, 9.01 a.m.; Paris, France, 9.02 a.m.; Sydney, Australia, 9.03 a.m.; British South Africa, 9.04 a.m.; Petrograd, Russia, 9.05 a.m.; Antwerp, Belgium, 9.06 a.m.; Ottawa, Canada, 9.07 a. m.

The projectile is so highly trained that as it passes Ottawa and destroys the town it picks up the Bank of England's £20,000,000 gold reserve, resting there and flies back to Germany, landing it in the vaults of the Deutsche Bankogesellschaft at 9.13 a.m."

Marriage has deadly storms, but far deadlier calms.

Three short, sharp earthquakes have shook the Isthmus of Panama in the last three days, the third one occurring yesterday. None of the shocks did any damage, though the inhabitants were considerably frightened.

There's a Fine

For selling butter not properly put up and correctly branded.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than common tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

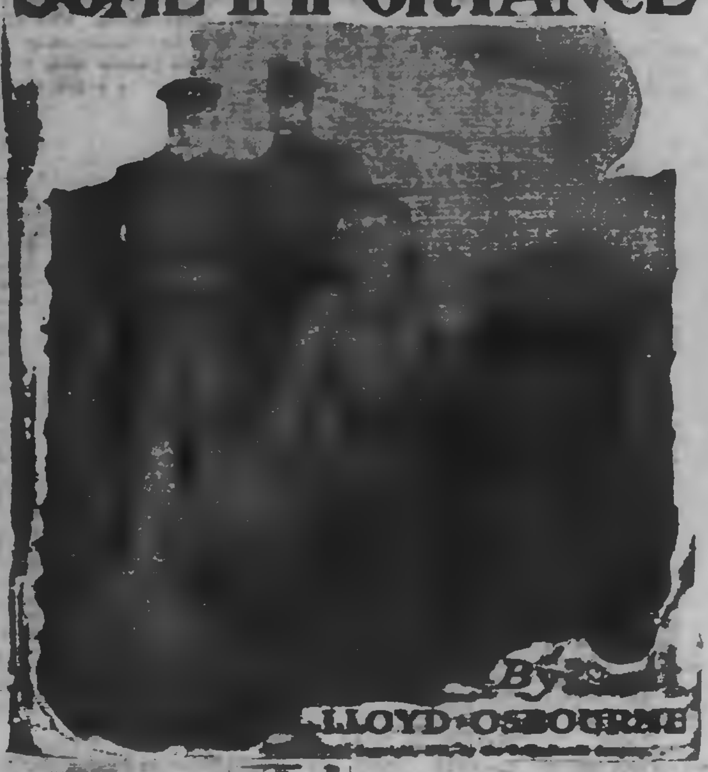
A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE



By LLOYD OSBOURNE

PROLOGUE.

Lovers of Romance, attention! Here's a story you will like. It tells of mystery under the dreamy moon of the Pacific islands and of love in the shady lanes of New England—and what more can a story reader want? The mystery, of course, is introduced early in the tale, and the love follows close after. Together they go hand in hand through the pages of the story, never parting company until the final chapter. There the mystery departs, but the love remains.

You know, of course, about the author, Lloyd Osbourne. He learned how to write in a worthy school, for he is a stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson. And no greater story teller than the latter ever lived.

CHAPTER I.

Who Is John Mort?

THE moonlight streamed through the palms of the Pacific island of Lotualofa, outlining on the beach a vivid tracery of fronds and stems. Across the lagoon, softened and mellowed by the stretch of glassy water, came the sound of a mouth organ and the rhythmic beat of a wooden drum as the crew of the North Star raised the chorus of "Good-by, My Friend." At intervals there was a deeper note as some mighty comber flung its might against the coral and burst with fury on the seaward reefs.

In all these lonely seas there is no lonelier island than Lotualofa. On some Pacific charts it is called the "four crowns of Quiros," with a question mark after it. On others, when it is noticed at all, it figures variously as "Melampus reef, p. d.," "Winslow shoals, p. d.," or merely "Island, e. d.," p. d. signifying "position doubtful" and e. d. "existence doubtful." In the fifties its handful of inhabitants was carried away bodily by Peruvian slavers. In later years it attracted the attention of Bully Hayes, who had had the intention, never to be carried out, of making it into a sort of pirate stronghold, and to this day there stands his battery of six small, rusty iron cannon, commanding the anchorage.

Here, leaning against one of these venerable guns, were two men in close and earnest conversation. One of them was about forty-five, tall and thin, with high cheek bones and a narrow, ugly, withered face, whose usual expression was one of sardonic melancholy. But it was not a commonplace face nor a weak one. The pale blue eyes were masterful, the nose pronounced and the general air distinguished. Whatever else he had been in the past John Mort, as he called himself, was ineradicably a cavalry officer, with an underlying military harshness that on occasions could flame up like a volcano.

His companion was Matthew Broughton, a man of thirty-one, sobered, hardened and somewhat worn by eleven years on the outposts of civilization. He was an American, alone in the world. He had had two years at Annapolis, from which he had been discharged for hazing. Later he had drifted to the Pacific. He had thrown himself wholeheartedly into the life of danger, daring and romance of the south sea islands, and all he had to show for it were a few scars, a smattering of half a dozen outlandish dialects and the memory of some desperate chances taken and lost. At thirty-one he had achieved nothing more tangible than $100 a month and the command of John Mort's schooner, and even these he was now abandoning, to begin again with nothing.

"But, my friend, is there anything you complain of?" Mort was asking, his slight foreign accent more marked than usual as the result of his concern.

"Oh, no, sir!"

"Money? Shall I double your salary—treble it? That is simple."

Matt shook his [illegible]

"It is here," he said, laying his hand to his heart. "I don't know what's the matter with me; but I'm tired of it all; homesick, perhaps, dissatisfied, depressed."

"And you are determined to leave me?"

"Do not reproach me, sir. I told you this before my last trip, not wishing to take you unawares."

"I'm sorry," said John Mort with emotion. "Sorry for myself at losing one I liked and admire, who for six years has always been so faithful, so loyal. Sorry, too, for you, my friend that you should choose to go back among strangers—back to that accursed civilization where none fares so well as the greedy and unprincipled. Is it that you prefer? So, is it that for which you will surrender this?" Mort raised his hand to the tropic moon. "What a choice!" he murmured. "What a choice!"

"It is an impulse stronger than I am," returned Matt after a silence. "After all, I am a white man, and those are my people. Have you never felt that sudden longing to get back—that overpowering, irresistible, unreasoning—longing?"

"No," retorted John Mort savagely. "No, no, no! To me it is a hell I have left forever."

"I wonder at myself," said Matt. "There is not a soul in the world I respect more, admire more—yes, love—than I do you. Yet I am going."

John Mort's eyes glistened, and he put out his hand, which the other grasped.

"Well, so be it," he said.

"Then, may I sail tonight with land breeze?"

"Yes, you may sail."

"And my accounts, my vouchers, and all that? You ought to pass them, sir, as well as arrange about the North Star's return. Pardon my insistence, but you have put it off and off"—

"What amount have you in the ship's safe?"

"Nearly £900, sir, in French, English and American gold, besides the chest of Chile silver."

"My friend, it is yours, and the schooner also, it is yours. It is small enough return for such loyal service. Ah, indeed, much too small, and I will increase it with this"— As he spoke he drew from his finger a superb ruby ring and forced it on Matt, whose stammering words of thanks were cut brusquely short.

"There's another matter much more pressing," he exclaimed, "a pledge to be given and by you sacredly kept—and"—

"But, sir, how will you manage without a vessel?" expostulated Matt, altogether bewildered. "You cannot allow yourself to be marooned here—utterly cut off from all"—

"Oh, I fear not that. We are self sustaining now, and besides in a couple of years I look forward confidently for your return. Isolation has no terrors for me—rather a charm, a picturesqueness and a greater sense of security."

John Mort paused on the last word, peering strangely at his companion.

"Do you realize, Broughton," he continued at last, "that during our six years' close association, intimacy, you have never asked me a question; that you have never betrayed the least inquisitiveness; that you have seen me draw forth whole packets of Bank of England notes, often thousands and thousands of pounds, and never once have you disturbed me by even a look?"

"Your private affairs were none of my business, sir. I have always made it a point of honor to keep my curiosity to myself."

"And even now, when you are going away, perhaps forever, with the riddle still unsolved, are you not tempted to ask?"

"Well, I suppose it's just this, sir: if you wished me to know you would tell me."

John Mort mused as though, indeed, he were very near to making a confidant of his companion. The spell of the moon, the beauty and stillness of the tropic night, the faint, mellow throb of the wooden drum timing a barbaric chant far across the water—all were conducive to an access of friendship, of affection and trust, that might sweep away the last barriers of reserve. He struck a match on the corsair's cannon, lit a cigarette, and, with an appearance of some indecision, took a few whiffs before he spoke.

"It is enough for you to know that I am a ghost," he said oddly. "Mort means dead, and the fancy pleased me to take it for my name. Before I died I was a person of some importance; of sufficient importance, in fact—were my existence here ever to be known—for the news of it to shake the world. Broughton, I ask no promises, no oaths. I simply tell you that my life, my happiness, all that is dearest and most precious to me, hang on your discretion. Vaster issues are at stake than you can dream of, and today there are hundreds on my track. A chance remark of yours, an unguarded word, the most innocent of confidences—and these bloodhounds might seize a clew that would destroy me. Broughton, I rely on you to guard my secret."

"I shall guard it, sir."

"And you appreciate, even in this half told way, its supreme, its vital importance?"

"I do, sir."

"Then let us go back."

In silence they walked up the path to the broad veranda of the house—the house that had taken three years to build, whose massive walls were timbered with whole trees—a low, red tiled, Spanish structure, in appearance half fort and half monastery, with a cloistered court where a fountain played. It had taken the North Star a dozen voyages to furnish it with a splendor almost incredible, considering the remoteness of the island and how recently its only inhabitants had been crabs and seamews. Noble pictures, Venetian carvings and old brocades, Flemish tapestry, exquisite furniture still showing the faded gild of medieval Italy—nothing, so it seemed to Matt, could vie in taste and luxury, in grandeur delicately modernised, softened and restrained—with this coral palace that sheltered Mort in exile.

But of all the beautiful objects within its walls, none could compare with its mistress, that radiant, girlish Mirovna, who shared John Mort's fortunes and engrossed his entire heart. As fair as he was dark, with crisp golden hair more red than yellow, with captivating blue eyes and a mouth all wantonness and dainty impudence, she could hardly have been more than twenty when Matt first remembered her in Guadalcanar. Who she was or what she had been—actress, dancer or exalted lady, Pole, Russian, Albanian or Magyar—all was a mystery she shared with her somber husband. Matt knew nothing save that she was one of the most adorable of women. Her caressing and pretty friendship meant much to him, and he repaid it with the profound regard of a man that had no other woman in his life.

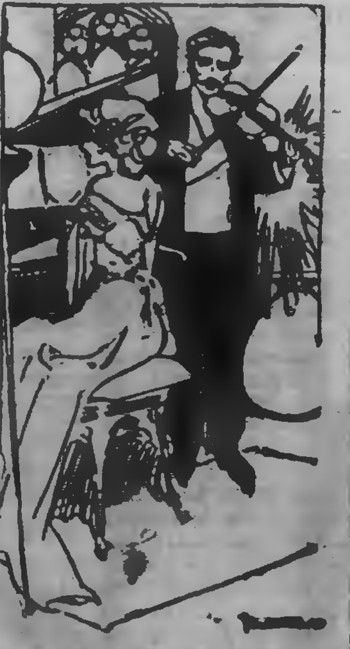
But all that was over now, to melt forever in the swirl of receding years. He was probably seeing that familiar room for the last time and those dearer faces of his friends. Matt's heart was very full and he faltered under Mirovna's questioning gaze.

"I cannot persuade him," said Mort, with affected lightness, stooping to kiss his wife's hand, "the captain abandons us."

There was no reproach in Mirovna's face, rather concern and regret.

"We have been fortunate to keep him so long," she said, enveloping Matt in a look of tender scrutiny. "And, oh, for six years, always so good, so loyal, so true hearted gentleman—surely never was another like our capitan."

"I have one favor to ask before I go," said Matt, somewhat huskily; "just one favor. Once," he went on, addressing Mort by his Kanaka title, "will you not get your violin—that wonderful violin—and you, Madame Mirovna, take your seat at the piano so that my last picture of you both may be as I have always loved you best, with your music following me out into the night?"



He Played as Matt Had Never Heard Him Play Before.

John Mort glowed at the request, the poetic fancy of it touching him to the quick. He drew the violin from its case, his face transfigured, his eyes scintillating and impassioned, as he gave a few swift strokes of the bow to test the tuning.

"Music is the only language—the divine language," he exclaimed, "and how far surpassing the stupid commonplace of words! Captain, you are a thousand times right, and all our affection for you, all our sorrow, all our unuttered hopes and prayers for you, will find their voice in what I play."

When once the violin had touched his chin John Mort became a different man. He was strangely ennobled; the glamor of his genius lent dignity and beauty to his gaunt frame; his thin, haggard, deeply lined face took on a new expression, so rapt, so inspired, that he might have been in communion with another world. That night he played as Matt had never heard him play before, with an intensity, a fire, an unendurable pathos that wrung the soul.

He had taken as a motive one of those simple, plaintive German folk songs, passing from improvisation to improvisation till it seemed the cry of all suffering, doomed humanity. Mirovna, herself a brilliant musician, was quick and apt in following and to Matt's untrained ear marvelously responsive and marvelously perfect.

An hour later he was aboard the North Star, and the rustling land breeze was bearing him out of the lagoon on the long slant north. Six years of his life were sinking with the palms behind him.

A Bold Monarch.

Charles IX. of France was bold enough to interfere with the attire of the women of his realm. In 1561 he forbade the ladies to use any "bands of embroidery stitchings or fixings of silk, excepting only a bordering the width of a finger or at the most two borderings with chain stitchings."

The Peacock Throne.

Of all the Persian crown jewels the peacock throne is the most magnificent. It is entirely of silver, a great camp bed structure, but modeled in lovely designs. It is incrusted from end to end and from top to bottom with diamonds. At the back is a star of brilliants that makes you blink. The rug on which the Shah sits is edged with precious stones, and the pillow on which he reclines is covered with pearls.

Marshmellow Apples.

Wash, wipe and core apples. Place in pan and fill the holes with sugar, a small piece of butter on top of each and a sprinkle of cinnamon if wanted. Sprinkle sugar in pan and add a little water. When apples are cooked through remove from oven, fill holes with nut meats, place a marshmellow on top of each apple and place in oven until the marshmallow is a dainty brown.

Not a Matter of Locality.

A FIERY DOSE

By JOHN Y. LARNED

When Billy Olcott was invited to spend a week with his friend Tom Roberts he was delighted. He had met Tom's sister, Fanny, and had fallen before a pair of liquid brown eyes, a pair of coral lips and a pair of dimples, one in each cheek. Since that meeting he had thought of her by day and dreamed of her by night. He received the invitation on Monday for the following Friday. Then followed the four longest days of Billy's life. He counted the hours till at last the day of his departure arrived, and an hour before dinner he was under the same roof with the girl who had enthralled him. Now for the wooing.

Tom's brother, Jim, was ill in bed and did not make his appearance. On the second night of Billy's visit he went to bed at 11 o'clock and was soon asleep. He was awakened by hearing some one moving about the room.

Whoever it was tried to light a match. It sputtered a moment and went out, but not before Billy saw by its light the face of Fanny Roberts.

"There," she grumbled, "the last match gone, and I don't know where to find another! However, I know exactly where I left your medicine—in the closet on the third shelf from the bottom in the right hand corner. I don't believe in giving medicine in the dark, but I'll risk it this time."

Billy heard her groping and fumbling, and finally she came to his bedside, put a glass half full of some liquid to his lips and poured it down his throat. Then she left him with a good night.

Olcott was one of the most modest, sensitive young men in the world, and he considered young girls to be even more sensitive than himself. If Fanny knew that she had come into his room at midnight by mistake to give him a dose of medicine she would never get over the shock. This is the reason why he had not made her mistake known to her and why he had permitted her to pour down his throat a medicine he did not need.

He lay congratulating himself on the delicacy with which he had handled the matter and how, if she came to know of her mistake, it would set him up in her opinion. Girls were sometimes caught by trifles, and he wouldn't wonder if this bit of sacrifice would cause her to fall in love with him.

Then he felt something down in his stomach where the dose had gone that felt as if a red hot poker had been applied to his internals. He started. A dose in the dark had been given him, and might it not have been the wrong medicine? Another application of the hot poker. He sat up in bed, his hair stood on end and a cold sweat broke out all over him. Fanny had been looking for a bottle in the closet in her brother's room, not Billy's. She certainly had given him the wrong dose.

Great heavens! Could she have poisoned him?

A third application of the poker. This time it seemed to Billy that some one had gripped him with redhot pincers. He sprang out of bed, ran to Tom Roberts' door and hammered on it. Tom came out in his pajamas and asked what was the matter.

"Bring me an emetic as soon as you can!" cried Billy. "I'm afraid I've swallowed poison."

Tom ran to his sister's door, called her up and told her to go downstairs and bring up some mustard and warm water. She tried to find out who had been poisoned, but Tom told her to "go on and be quick about it." When she brought up the emetic she found Billy's door open, the room lighted and her brother bending over the groaning invalid.

Then for the first time she understood the cause of the trouble. She flew to the closet, opened the door, took out a vial and read the label. Then she put the vial back again and gave Billy a look, but said nothing.

"I took a dose of that," said Billy between groans. "Will it kill me?"

"No," replied Fanny.

"What is it?"

"A preparation of ginger and red pepper."

"Is that all?"

"Yes; it won't hurt you."

"That's past praying for. It's eating my vitals."

"Thank heaven it's no worse."

"It's bad enough as it is."

"How came you to take it?" queried Tom.

This was a poser. Billy took advantage of another internal firebrand to invent a story. When the paroxysm had passed he said:

"Just before I came up here I felt sick and went to a doctor. He said I had [illegible] and gave me some medicine for it. I forgot to take it before going to bed; got up and hunted for it in the dark. I must have got into the wrong place."

By this time the emetic took effect, and Fanny took advantage of the [illegible] to withdraw. While Billy was [illegible] ing he thought he heard a te-hee in the next room.

"Confound that girl!" he said mentally—he was doing something else [illegible] "Next time she tries to give me a dose I'll [illegible] it down her own throat."

TOWNSHIP'S HONOR ROLL

Some of the First Settlers in Smith

The following extract from the letter of Mr. Burnham, M.P., to the council of Smith referred to last week regarding the coming centennial anniversary of the settlement of Smith township will be of interest. The council unanimously approved of the suggestion and will take the matter up with a view to maturing some plan worthy of the township and its honorable traditions. The extract quoted is from Poole's History of Peterborough:—

"The survey of the township of Smith was just completed in 1818 when a number of colonists who had sailed that year from Cumberland in England found their way to the township for the purpose of forming a settlement. There was as yet no semblance of a road through the almost unbroken forest from Port Hope and they accordingly chose the route by way of Rice Lake and the Otonabee river. On arriving at Smith the first thing done was to erect a temporary log house in the first lot west of the Communication Road which is a small triangular piece of ground just outside of the present limits (1867) of the town of Peterborough. Here they lived in common until by mutual assistance small houses or shanties were erected on several lots to which they then removed. The names of thes first settlers who comprised this group were William Dixon and his family of five sons, Joseph Lee and his sons (John and George), Robert Milburn, Robert Walton, John Walton (not the late reeve and no relative), Walton Wilson, Thomas W. Milburn, John Smith and his sons, Joseph Smith. These were commonly spoken of collectively as "the colony" settlers to distinguish them from others of an early period. The following were also among the early pioneers having settled in the township during the same season (1818) and but a little later than those already mentioned: John Harvey, Ralph Bickerton, Alexander Morrison, Jacob Brumwell, Robert Nicholson, James Mann and his son James, Thos. Lockhart and John Yates Among those from one to 3 years later were Walter McKibbon, Samuel McKibbon, William Tully, Thomas Robinson, Isaac Nicholson, Silas Pearson, Joseph Walton and sons, the eldest of which was the late reeve of Smith, Matthew and Robert Ball, John Edmison, Ephraim Jackson and sons and Thomas Milburn. These constitute the honor roll among the early settlers of Smith."

BLUCHER WAS FULL OF HOLES

German Sailor Says British Fire Was Terrible

LONDON, Jan. 27. — The Scotsman to-day published a narrative of a German bluejacket, one of the survivors of the German armored cruiser Blucher, who once lived in the United States.

The bluejacket said the German fleet was advancing at full speed to attack the English coast when the British warships were sighted. Thereupon the Germans turned and made for port. The Blucher, which was comparatively slow, made desperate efforts to keep up her maximum speed, but the British overhauled and opened fire upon her at a range of about ten miles.

"We were under fire from first to last," the bluejacket continues. "The British centred their fire on us. Their fire was awful. Our guns were put out of action, our decks were swept and our gun crews wiped out.

"One shell burst in the heart of the ship, where many men who had collected were killed. I saw five killed with one shell next to me. I don't know what finished the Blucher as she was full of holes, but I heard she struck a torpedo. If so we can thank the torpedo for saving hundreds of lives from the murderous gun fire. When the ship was sinking I jumped clear of her into the terribly cold water, which was full of dead men and men with shattered limbs, who were crying for assistance. After being rescued by the British we were warmed, fed and clothed."

The sailor is credited with saying that during the raid on Scarborough the men believed they were taking part in a great naval action which was extending all over the North Sea.

The Japanese battleship Hizen and the armored cruiser Iwate appeared yesterday outside the three-mile international limit and began taking coal from the collier Kamakura Maru, which had just left Honolulu.

PRINCES SERVING COUNTRY

The Prince of Wales (above) and Prince Albert, the King's second son (below). Prince Albert, it was recently stated had recovered from his attack of appendicitis, and would rejoin his ship in the North Sea. The Prince of Wales is doing his part as A. D. C. to General French.

IMPROVEMENT REPORTED IN SCHOOLS OF COUNTY

Inspector for East Peterborough Schools Reports to Council

Some improvement in the rural schools, was reported by Richard Lees, public school inspector of Peterborough East, to the County Council this morning. The report follows:

To the warden and members of the Council of the County of Peterborough.

Gentlemen: —

I beg respectfully to sumbit for your consideration my report on the work of the schools in the Inspectorate of Peterborough East, for the year 1914.

There were open during the year, 71 rural schools with 77 teachers and 3 village schools with 21 teachers. One of the schools classed as rural, No. 2 N. Monaghan, is now in reality an urban school having four teachers. In the performance of my duties, I made 221 half day visits, 173 in the rural and 48 in the village schools. Every rural school was visited at least twice except No. 13 Methuen which was closed when I was in that part of the inspectorate in the first half year.

Qualification of Teachers.

It is pleasant to be able to report continued improvement in the qualification of the teachers. Of the 77 teachers in the rural schools during last term, 3 held first class, 37 second class, 12 third class, 9 district, and 14 temporary certificates. Two had no certificates. This is an increase of one first and 11 second class certificates, as compared with the same period a year previous. While at that time there were 27 teachers with no professional training, the number had been reduced to 16 last term.

While this is encouraging, it will be seen that there is still ample room for improvement. The difficulty in getting qualified teachers has greatly decreased during the past couple of years, and with the encouragement now given to the poorer schools in the form of extra grants, there should be little difficulty in securing teachers with at least, Model School training, for all schools except those that remain open for a part of the year only. Of these there were last year only 6 or 7.

The 21 teachers in the village schools, including the four Continuation School teachers were, for the first time, all fully qualified.

Increase in Salaries.

There was a gratifying increase in the salaries paid, which no doubt, accounts for the improvement in the qualification of the teachers. The average for the whole inspectorate, based on the rate being paid during the fall term of last year, was $517 as compared with $478 a year previous, or an increase of $39. The average by townships for the past four years was:

	1911	1912	1913	1914
Asphodel ...	$491	$514	$536	$575
Belmont and Methuen .	391	413	448	478
Burleigh and Anstr. ...	332	371	380	437
Chandos ...	305	344	365	397
Douro	448	509	530	555
Dummer ...	421	458	503	519
N. Monaghan	475	520	535	567
Otonabee ..	505	525	553	582

Grants.

A year ago, attention was called to the fact that the government had been compelled to make a pro rata reduction of 28 per cent. in the grant on account of salaries and certificates. For 1914, the reduction was 36.3 per cent., but notwithstanding this the total amount received for the inspectorate was $219.21 in excess of the amount for 1913. This however, was still $1,243.59 below the amount received in 1912. As was pointed out last year, this is an indication that the increase in salaries here has not kept up with the average for the whole province for the two years, though for last year alone, it would indicate that the increase had been greater for this inspectorate than for the province as a whole. This is encouraging as it is evident that until our schools pay salaries equal to the average, the teachers will also be below the average.

The assisted schools grant for 1913 which was received in February last was $2,810 as compared with $1,365 the previous year. The increase in this grant did much to offset the falling off in the other. For 1914 the sum of $2,910 was asked for but notice has not yet been received in regard to it.

Agriculture and School Gardens.

During the year, two schools, Nos. 7 Douro, and 13 Otonabee, undertook the teaching of agriculture and the conduct of school gardens, under the direction of the Department of Agriculture. The latter spent a considerable sum in acquiring land and making the necessary provision. Though the early part of the season was very dry and conditions unfavorable, the garden did well and the experiment was a decided success. Conditions as to soil and surroundings were less favorable at No. 7 Douro and the results were not so encouraging.

A third garden was conducted independently at Hiawatha School, No. 11 Otonabee. The trustees there acquired half an acre of land adjoining the school ground, and fenced it separately. The results were more than gratifying and demonstrated the possibilities of this work when backed up by interest and enthusiasm.

In addition to this, the pupils of some twenty or more schools conducted home gardens and experimental plots under the direction of the district representatives of the Department of Agriculture. This work was well organized and successfully carried out. At the close of the season school fairs were held, at which the products of the gardens and other articles, as well as live stock, produced under the care of the pupils, were exhibited. Two fairs were held in the inspectorate, one at Westwood and the other at Greystock, in Otonabee. At each of these fairs about two hundred school children were present, besides three hundred parents and young people The number of entries was large, the quality of the products good, and the interest manifested all that could be desired.

S. S. No. 6, Asphodel.

The school house in Section No. 6, Asphodel, which was almost a new building and one of the best in the inspectorate, was destroyed by fire on January 10th last year. The trustees at once made temporary arrangements for the carrying on of the work, and as soon as possible proceeded to replace the building. The new building was completed at midsummer. It is slightly larger than the one destroyed, is more complete in some ways, and is a credit to the section.

Hindrances to Progress.

As in former years, irregularity of attendance and frequent changes of teachers continue to be the most potent hindrances to satisfactory progress. Of 77 teachers in the rural schools, 16 changed at the beginning of last year, nine between that and June, and 41 at midsummer, making a total of 66 changes during the year. While this is bad enough, it is an improvement on the previous

If you really want your old-time boy appetite to return to you once more, form the practice of eating a Stuart Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal. Results will astound you.

"Good Old Mince Pie Like Mother Used to Make."

The reason a Stuart Dyspepsia Tablet is powerful enough to digest your next meal is because it is composed of those things which a weakened digestive system lacks.

One ingredient of these tablets, digests 3,000 times its bulk in food. Think what a great assistance this kind of co-operation on your part is to the worn-out nerves and juices of your stomach and intestines.

You cannot understand how the body really and gleefully O. K.'s such help until after you see that the ordinary distress after eating no longer bothers you.

If all the stomach sufferers who have been relieved of their misery and restored to health by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets could be gathered together into one column, they would make a larger body of men, women and children than were ever gathered together on this globe.

This fact is a fact because no town is so small that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not to be found in its drug store. Wherever you may go, there you will find in every drug store Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, price, 50c per box.

A small trial sample package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will be mailed free to anyone addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

DACIA CASE IS SERIOUS

Washington Suspicious of Bona-fide Character of Sale

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The case of the former Hamburg-American steamer Dacia, recently sold and transferred to American registry, has assumed a more serious phase, likely to lead to a dangerous issue. Several additional circumstances have increased suspicion as to the bona-fide character of the sale as understood in international law, and these may place those concerned in a position of having to defend themselves from a charge of bad faith.

There appears to be no doubt in well-informed circles here that the vessel obtained $50,000 insurance from Hamburg, being unable to obtain insurance for the hull from the Federal War Risk Insurance Bureau or from an American company. The Government was only willing to insure her cargo of cotton.

Furthermore, it is claimed that documentary evidence exists that the sale of the Dacia was made under the stipulation that the steamer should not be used by the new owners in trade with or between British and French ports.

ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

German Airship Brought Down at Libau

CREW CAPTURED

PETROGRAD, Jan. 27.—The Naval General Staff yesterday received a report that on Monday a Zeppelin airship dropped a number of bombs on Libau. The guns of the fort fired on the German airship and the Zeppelin fell in the water. The dirigible was destroyed and its crew made prisoners.

The attack by the Zeppelin was made early in the morning. Nine bombs were dropped on the undefended portion of the town. The destruction of the dirigible was accomplished by small warcraft, which attacked the winged and crippled airship as it floated on the surface of the sea. The crews of the vessels first took the crew of the Zeppelin off, and after assuring themselves that not a vestige of the aircraft remained available for further use, brought their prisoners ashore.

Holland Stays Mobilized.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 27.—(Via London.)—"We must maintain under the colors our entire army, for at any moment incidents are possible which may render it necessary for us to make an appeal to arms," said P. W. A. Van Der Linden, Premier of the Netherlands, yesterday.

The statement was made in the second chamber of the Dutch Parliament when a bill for the extension of the military service was being discussed. The Premier added that the Government could not disclose the information it possessed concerning the foreign situation, because much of it was based on confidential documents.

GERMAN ARMY IS RETREATING

Nearly a Million Fresh Russian Troops Are Now Operating on the Right Bank of the Vistula and Main Body is Moving on Kiket, About Fifteen Miles From West Prussia.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 27.—The German army, under Gen. von Francois, has been defeated before Mlawa, and is reported to be retreating along the line of the railway toward Soldau, in East Prussia, followed by the right wing of the Russian army. Nearly a million fresh troops are now operating on the right bank of the Vistula. The main body of the army is advancing in the region of Kikot, fifteen miles from the frontier of West Prussia.

On the front along the Bzura and Rawka, before Warsaw, the Germans are fighting entirely on the defensive, with artillery duels and minor infantry engagements on Rawka. In the region of Sochaczow the right wing of the German army has been repulsed in a number of attempts to advance. The German loss has been particularly heavy in this region. The total of killed, wounded and prisoners in the second great advance towards Warsaw which has now been definitely checked, is estimated at more than 250,000.

In night attacks the Germans are now using a peculiar kind of bullet, which if it hits nothing, burst giving out a flame, which is equivalent to the lighting power of an ordinary match, but is only momentary. If it strikes a man it is a nasty species of explosive bullet. They have also been using some new artillery ammunition, which throws off stupefying gases.

The Russians are making another effort to advance in East Prussia, while in middle and southern Poland there has been a slackening in the fighting on both sides for the moment. The Russians appear to be concentrating themselves on their offensive north of the lower Vistula, while the Austro-Germans are busy making preparations to meet the Russian advance through the passes of the Carpathians and in southern Bukowina.

GENERAL VON FRANCOIS.

Gifts of Quarter Billion.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—John D. Rockefeller, jr., yesterday told the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, which is investigating the great philanthropic foundations and the cause of industrial unrest, that he felt justified in placing the amount of money his father had devoted to philanthropy at a quarter of a billion dollars. The bulk of this sum, he said, had been turned over to the Rockefeller Foundation, the University of Chicago, the General Education Board and the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

GERMANS FORCED TO GIVE UP GAINS AT LA BASSEE

Sharp and Sanguinary Victory is Won Near Givenchy, Where Grand German Advance on Orders From Potsdam is Turned Into a Rout—Is New German Assault Beginning?

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Official Press Bureau last evening, gave out the following statement dealing with the fighting between British and German troops Monday in the region of La Bassee, in France:

"Yesterday (Monday), in the neighborhood of La Bassee, the enemy delivered several violent attacks against the First Division. They were repulsed with severe losses.

"In one place alone, on the La Bassee road, 300 Germans were killed. Fifty-five prisoners, including two officers, were captured.

"An attack made on the French line opposite Ypres was also repulsed with great loss."

A Paris despatch says: "The success claimed by the Germans over the British at La Bassee was short lived. The Germans had captured a trench or two at a point in the lines called Givenchy-les-Bassees from the British troops guarding them, and the next night they followed this up with what was intended to be a grand advance upon orders from Potsdam. But the Germans were unable to do anything against the troops which had defeated them four to one in Flanders last autumn, and instead of carrying any more trenches there the enemy himself was tumbled back much faster than he went forward, and did not cease his flight from the British bayonets until he had abandoned all the points he had previously carried.

"To the British first division belongs the honors of the day.

"The Germans also made an attempt to advance from La Bassee to Bethune, along the only road available, and paid dearly for the attempt. They fled, leaving behind three hundred dead. The British here captured fifty-five prisoners, including two officers.

"The French made a strong counter-attack of the trenches which the Germans captured between Hurtebise and the Foulon wood, west of Craonne. In this encounter the new air bombs were used, and at the time of reporting, one section of the lost wooded ground was regained.

"The Germans, evidently from these activities, war critics believe, have begun a big new assault on the lines of the allies. The British and French are presumed to have plenty of men in France, and are expected to come out of this contest with great profit. If the Germans make a great sacrifice of life it may be the prelude to what the allies are waiting for, a grand, general advance.

"The French are recovering some ground lost in the Argonne last week, after the German advance had exhausted itself. A foothold has been gained in trenches which have been lost near St. Hubert and Fontaine Madame. Several German saps were destroyed."

The afternoon bulletin said:

"On the Yser front Belgian troops have made progress in the vicinity of Pervyse.

"At daybreak yesterday the Germans, one battalion strong, delivered an attack against our trenches to the east of Ypres. This movement was arrested sharply. Three hundred dead, including the commandant of the company at the head of the German advance, were left on the field of battle. This attack was to have been supported by certain companies from the German second line, but these men, under the very exact fire of our artillery, found it impossible to come out from behind their shelters.

"Not far from La Bassee, at Givenchy and Guinchy, the enemy delivered five attacks against the British line. After having made some slight progress the Germans were repulsed and left on the field numerous dead and 60 prisoners, including two officers. This attack was accompanied by endeavors at diversion at several points on our front. Between the road from Bethune to La Bassee and Aix Noulette a detachment of the enemy which endeavored to come out from its trenches was at once stopped by the fire of our infantry and of our artillery. On the rest of the front between the Lys and the Oise yesterday saw artillery duels.

"To the west of Craonne the enemy delivered two successive attacks, each of great violence. The first was repulsed, but the second penetrated our trenches. By an energetic counter-attack, however, our troops succeeded in regaining almost all of the ground lost by them. At this point the fighting is still going on around that part of the trench which is occupied by the Germans.

"In Champagne the artillery of the enemy yesterday showed less activity than on preceding days, while our batteries delivered an effective fire against the German positions.

"In the Argonne, in the vicinity of St. Hubert, we checked with our artillery fire an attempt on the part of the Germans to deliver an attack.

"In Alsace the enemy was active in the employ of his mine-throwers against our positions at Hartmann-Wellerkopf; at this point yesterday saw no fresh fighting. The Germans yesterday bombarded Thann, Lanbach and Sennheim."

Lt.-Col. Jackson Dead.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 27.—An outstanding figure in the military history of Ontario passed away with the death here yesterday of Lt.-Col. W. H. Jackson, aged 87, a life-long resident of Brockville. He came from a military family, near relatives fighting with the British forces in the war of 1812. He was a veteran of the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870, of the Northwest expedition of 1875.

Steamship traffic between Trelleborg, Sweden, and Sassnitz, Germany, has come to an end. The route is now controlled by allied submarines.

The TRIUMPH of SCIENCE SCIENCE

THE completion of a long distance telephone line from New York to San Francisco is an engineering and scientific achievement, the fame of which knows no national boundaries. Canada, the birthplace of the telephone, will freely join her neighbor, we feel sure, in according due praise to those engineers and scientists to whose efforts this triumph is due.

It is a scientific achievement of the very highest character. The power that sends the human voice out over the telephone is scarcely greater than that of a breath, yet the means have been provided by which this tiny, almost imaginary impulse, made up of as many as 2,000 separate vibrations a second, can be picked up by a delicate instrument, conserved over a distance of 3,400 miles, and reproduced perfectly and instantly across the continent. The human voice has been made to travel as fast as light, faster than sound when unaided by technical apparatus. Indeed, it rivals even thought, in the swiftness of its flight.

In this work the experimental and research department of the Bell System, of which this Company is a part, has been engaged ever since the telephone became a commercial possibility, less than 40 years ago. It has required vast expenditures of money and immense concentration of effort, but these have been justified by results of immeasurable benefit to the public.

Facilities will soon be provided whereby the residents of Ontario and Quebec may have their part in this, the latest triumph of science.

"Every Bell Telephone is a Long Distance Station."

GUNNERY HONORS IN NAVAL BATTLES ARE WITH THE BRITISH

Eye-Witnesses of Battle in the North Sea Say Germans Shot Wildly—Cruisers Lion and Meteor Were Hit and Damaged, But Will be Quickly Repaired.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The battle cruiser Lion, which led the British squadron into battle with the Germans in the North Sea last Sunday, and the torpedo boat destroyer Meteor were disabled and had to be towed into port and in addition, one officer and thirteen men were killed and three officers and twenty-six men wounded on three of the ships — the Lion, Tiger and Meteor.

This information is contained in an Admiralty statement issued last night. This statement gives denial to the German reports that one British cruiser and two torpedo boat destroyers were sunk by declaring that all of the British ships engaged in the action have returned in safety to port.

The announcement was made by the Secretary of the Admiralty, whose statement said:

"All the British ships and torpedo boat destroyers engaged in Sunday's action have returned in safety to port.

"The Lion, which had some of her forward compartment flooded by shells below the water line, was taken in tow by the cruiser Indomitable. The cruiser Meteor, which also was damaged, was taken in tow by the destroyer Liberty. Both vessels were guarded by strong escorts of destroyers. Repairs to both vessels can be speedily effected.

"The total number of casualties among the officers and men reported to the Admiralty is: On the Lion 17 men wounded; on the Tiger, one officer and nine men killed and three officers and eight men wounded; on the Meteor, four men killed and one man wounded. It is not believed that any other casualties occurred, but if so they will be immediately published.

"As soon as Vice-Admiral Beatty's report is received a fuller account will be given."

Benjamin Stead, former member of the navy, who witnessed the battle Sunday between the German and British fleets from the steam trawler Octavia, arrived at Hull yesterday. He says that those on board the Octavia suddenly heard a heavy cannonade and almost immediately found themselves in the very midst of a terrible naval battle.

The German squadron of six battleships tore by the Octavia at full speed, their stern guns belching at the pursuing British. The latter fired a veritable stream of shells at the Germans, many of which scored clean hits.

The enemy were obviously trying to reach their own shores, says the eye-witness, while the British were striving to drive them on in a southerly direction. He declares that the Germans were firing wildly, with practically no effect, while the British gunners were training their pieces with the precision of target practice, and continued to reach the Germans as long as the two fleets were in sight.

The Blucher passed very close to the Octavia, and it could be seen that she was rapidly sinking. One funnel was gone, her bridge smashed and hull riddled when she limped by the Octavia. Men on board the trawler had an excellent view for the fight for 20 miles.

A Sheffield sailor, a first-class stoker on the light cruiser that took part in the naval action, came home on Sunday night on short leave, and told a vivid story, in the course of which he said:

"It did not take many hits to finish the Blucher. The last one took her on the waterline and she slowly heeled over and went down like a glass sinking in the water. Some of our destroyers immediately went to the rescue of the drowning crew, but other German boats fired on them, and as a result far fewer were saved than otherwise would have been the case."

Gift Nearly All Given Out.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—Nearly all of Canada's war gift of a million bags of flour has now been distributed. The following shows where it has gone:

For relief of local distress, 90,474 bags; Belgian refugees, 1,691; damaged flour sold, 3,219; sold by Wiles & Son, 1,500; transferred to War Office, 399,760; commission for relief of Belgians, 443,856. Total, 940,530 bags.

Woman suffrage passed the West Virginia Legislature yesterday. The vote in the senate was 28 to 1, and in the house 80 to 6. The measure will be voted upon by the people at the next election.

Emil Nerlich, charged in Toronto with high treason, occupied the same cell in the jail on Sunday night as Henry Asher, who shot the Rev. J. [illegible] Scott some time ago in the east end.

ONE DAY TO BE REMEMBERED

Patricias First Spell in Trenches is Described

MONTREAL, Jan. 27.—The Princess Patricias' Light Infantry, now in Flanders, have taken their first German prisoners. This is revealed in a letter from Mrs. Hamilton Gault, wife of Major Gault, to relatives here.

Mrs. Gault, describing the Patricia's engagement on Jan. 2, says: "Three men were killed and six were wounded in the fight which was evidently successful, as they took their first German prisoners. It was a terrible day. Constant fire. Poor Denzil Newton was shot through the abdomen just as he was getting out of a trench."

Mrs. Gault says Lord Kitchener referred to the Patricias as "the premier regiment of my second army" when asked whether they were to be considered as Territorials or regulars.

Mrs. Gault gives several instances of the unquenchable cheerfulness of the men. One sergeant told an officer he had been reduced to the ranks, pointing out that a shell had ripped off the stripes from his sleeve. Another sang the "Maple Leaf" while being carried away on a stretcher. He had been very badly wounded. Major Gault himself had his ear grazed by a bullet while going into a trench.

Infantry in Battle

While there have been many discussions as to the relative value of the different branches of an army, there is no doubt, according to a writer in the Scientific American, but that it is the infantry that wins battles.

While it is probable the success of a battle will depend to a large extent on the support of the field artillery, it is certain that the principal and most important arm is the infantry, which in practically every case must decide the final issue. The cavalry may be the first to be drawn into a battle and the artillery may destroy the enemy's artillery, but a battle is never won until the infantry has driven back the enemy's lines.

The usual mode of advancing for the infantry is to deploy them in a line with a long interval between each soldier. This naturally is for the purpose of offering a smaller target for the enemy. It makes it more difficult, however, for the leaders to keep as good control over the men, and for that reason one of the objects of field artillery is to make the enemy's troops deploy early.

A Glimpse of Parnell.

Like most men with claims for greatness, Parnell had his peculiarities as well. One of them was a distressing lapse of memory on occasions, which often caused him to be late to—indeed, sometimes to miss—meetings where he had promised to speak.

When he failed a meeting like this, where hundreds of people were waiting for him, I sometimes would want him to telegraph or write apologizing or excusing his nonattendance, but this he would never do, saying: "You do not learn the ethics of kingship, Queenie. Never explain, never apologize," adding, with his rare laugh, "I could never keep my rabble together if I were not above the weakness of apology."—From "Charles Stewart Parnell," by Katharine O'Shea.

OPEN YOUR HANDS.

Open your hands, ye whose hands are full! The world is waiting for you. Give and spend and be sure that God will send, for only in giving and spending do you fulfill the object of his sending.—J. G. Holland.

KING'S TITLES

Quite amusing is King Alphonse's claim to territories which have long since passed from under the Spanish domination. For instance, he is, along toward the last of his fictitious titles, "King of the East Indies," "King of the West Indies," "King of Gibraltar," "King of India," and, with a bombast and sweeping magnificence, "King of Oceania." Such pretensions lend an almost opera-bouffe flavor to the resonant terms such as "King of Castile," "King of Arragon," "King of Navarre," and "King of Galicia."

To the Spanish don this pomp and show appeals with unction. Nor is it peculiar to the Romance nations, this worship of grandeur. The Emperor of Austria boasts sixty-one extra titles, and the Sultan of Turkey eighty-two.

The Sultan has by far the most laughable list of names. He starts out by being High Prince and Lord of Lords. Then he specifies in great detail practically all of the states and cities and even districts of the Orient, and explaining after each of the various names that he is ruler of "all the forts, citadels, purlieus, and neighborhood thereof." Nothing is presumed to belong to anyone else. A land may have never belonged to Turkey, except in some transient raid or invasion, but that matters not to the Sultan; he adds it to his string, calm and indifferent to the progress of other nations. He loves to proclaim his religious prominence. "Head of the Faithful," "Supreme Lord of All the Followers of the Prophet," "Direct and Only Lieutenant on Earth of Mohammed" are some of his most extravagant pharses. His more nearly valid title of "King of Jerusalem" is also claimed by his more civilized brother rulers. The Emperor of Austria, the Pope, and the Kings of Spain and Portugal all announce in their titles that they have under their thumbs the Holy Land.

The Kaiser, with his love of publicity, has seventy-two. Most of the states of Germany are included in the list of the Prussian King, and have been ever since the Union of the States.

King George has a very modest outlay in comparison. It merely reads: "George V., by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India." Some of the lesser nobles in Britain boast of long lists, the Duke of Argyll leading with twenty-seven titles.

Whales live to be 400 years old, says a scientist. A whale would be a good thing for a man to buy who hates to part with a pet after he becomes attached to it.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—First signs that export buying of wheat had outrun the supply already produced, and was grabbing at next summer's crop, brought about today the highest war prices yet, not only for wheat, but for all other kinds of grain. July wheat, the first delivery of the yield of 1915, made a sudden upward leap of nearly 5c a bushel.

The wheat market, as a whole, closed greatly unsettled at ⅜c to 4⅛c above last night. Corn gained ⅝c to ⅞c net and oats ⅛c to 2c. The finish in provisions ranged from 7½c decline to an advance of a shade.

Ontario flour—Winter, 90 per cent. patents, $6 to $6.10, seaboard, in bulk, or track, Toronto.

Cornmeal—Yellow, 98-pound sacks, in car lots, $2.10, in small lots, $2.40.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 26.—The Canadian Government is said to be buying seed oats in the west, which will mean only low grades to come this way, and all stocks in eastern ports are said to be practically taken up. The cash demand for wheat rules quiet, and few offerings are on the market. For cash oats the demand is keen.

Inspections on Monday 301 cars, and in sight 130 cars.

New records were run up on both wheat and oats. May wheat sold at $1.44⅝; July, $1.45⅝; May oats sold at 65⅝c; July, 66½c. Closing prices were fractionally easier. Wheat futures closed ⅝c to ¾c higher, cash ⅝c to 1½c higher on contract, oats 1½c to 1⅝c higher, and cash oats at 1½c to 2c up; barley 84½c, and cash barley 3c higher for No. 3 and 4. Flax closed ½c to 1c higher to ½c lower.

MONTREAD GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—There was very little demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and the few bids that did come forward were so far out of line with prices on this side that no business was done. The feature of the local grain trade continues to be the very strong undertone of the market for oats, and prices have scored a further advance of 2c to 4c per bushel under a good active demand, the Canadian Government having purchased 1,000,000 bushels within the past few days. Manitoba feed barley is also 1c to 2c per bushel higher. On account of the continued steady advance in prices for wheat of late, millers have marked up prices another 20c per barrel for spring wheat flour and winter wheat flour has advanced 50c to 70c per barrel. Local trade in flour is good. Creamery was in good demand from outside points. Cheese is quiet, but firm. Demand for eggs is good.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 26.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.42⅞; No. 1 northern, $1.41⅞; No. 2 do., $1.39⅞; May, $1.42⅞.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 12,000; market steady; native, $5.90 to $6.85; yearlings, $6.90 to $8; lambs, native, $7.25 to $8.90.

FREED ON ONE COUNT

Union Life Shareholders Acquitted of Blame

TORONTO, Jan. 27.—Both prosecution and defence scored yesterday in the trial of Harry Symons and F. G. Hughes in connection with the charges of fraud in the Union Life case. Shortly before noon Mr. Justice Clute entered a verdict of "not guilty" on the third count, in which the defendants, along with the late Dr. Millichamp and the absent Pollman Evans, were charged with conspiring to defraud the public by increasing the value of the Canada Provident & Investment Co.'s shares beyond their cost or fair value. No evidence against Symons or Hughes was offered on this count.

On the other hand, in the afternoon, the first witness for the defence, Douglas J. Scott, went so far as to say that after 1910 ex-Manager Pollman Evans went "crazy" in his business policy.

Ex-Judge Ardagh Dead.

BARRIE, Jan. 27.—One of Barrie's oldest and best known residents died yesterday, in the person of John Anderson Ardagh, late senior judge of the County of Simcoe. He was 80 years of age and retired from the bench three years ago, after 30 years of service.

For The Children

Politeness in Athens.

A long time ago in Athens the Spartan boys were guests of the Athenian boys at the theater. They were sitting in the front row because they were the guests of honor.

Just before the play began an old man came into the crowded theater and made his way down to the front. He stopped by the seats of the Athenian boys, and they commenced to make fun of him. He turned sadly away.

As he was about to go away the Spartan boys all rose and motioned for the old man to come and sit with them. At first the Athenian boys were ashamed; then they began to cheer.

All the people were attracted by this and looked to see the cause of it. When the cheering was over the old man stood up and said:

"Athenian boys know what is right, but Spartan boys do what is right."

A Strange Idol.

Madagascar natives have a strange idol. It is a piece of wood covered with silk and attached to a wire, which the priests pull in a certain way. The god performs movements in all directions, to the great terror of the faithful, who believe it is really alive. The priests dwell in houses of wood, as the god will have neither stone nor brick. To distinguish themselves from the other natives the faithful wear their hair rolled in curl papers, like women, and keep it in the shape of a horn by means of pins.

Dangers in Australia.

Bush life has its decided drawbacks in Australia, even in the quiet walks of life. While the Rev. Dr. Davidson was conducting service at Runnymede, Victoria, a voice in solemn tones cried, "Do not move, Mr. Davidson; there is a snake at your elbow!" The minister glanced around and shuddered, for quite close was a tiger snake quietly coiling up for a slumber. It required considerable nerve for him to remain still, but he did so until one of the congregation killed the reptile.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

THE MODEL MAN.

There Was a Difference of Opinion on His Right to the Title.

Aladdin rubbed the lamp.

A genie appeared.

"Well," said Aladdin, "the messenger service here certainly is prompt. But what I wanted to say, Genie, is this: Go and fetch me a model man."

"But, sir," the genie began, "I have always heard that there is no model"—

"Never mind; do as I say."

The genie left. When he came back he was accompanied by a man and two women.

"Are you a model man?" asked Aladdin.

"He is," returned the elder of the women.

The younger woman spoke up quickly.

"He is not. He is far from being a model man."

"Who are you?" Aladdin asked.

"I am his wife."

"Who is the lady that says he is the model man?" queried Aladdin.

The elder woman spoke.

"I," she said proudly, "am his mother."—Detroit News.

Bitter Lady Lytton.

In "Unpublished Letters of Lady Bulwer Lytton to A. E. Chalon, R. A.," the editor slips in the following when referring to S. C. Hall's impressions of Lady Bulwer Lytton:

"Mrs. Hall was Irish, and Lady Lytton had no partiality for her compatriots. On one occasion her husband entertained Daniel O'Connell and other Irish members at dinner, and S. C. Hall relates, 'The next day I saw Mrs. Bulwer directing some arrangements in the dining room, which she told me she was fumigating in order to get rid of the brogue.'"

Tiger-like Cat.

Although he's no bigger than an ordinary house cat, the dasyure of the South American jungles is strong and fierce. He has the temper of a tiger pent up in a soft coated, speckled body of tomcat size. Good fighter that he is, the dasyure never fights for his food, for his chief subsistence is the ant and other small insects, but when attacked by a man the latter very often gets the worst of it.—Wisconsin State Journal.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

MARK STREET WON FROM CHARLOTTE STREET WHILE ANGLICANS PLAYED A TIE

Two Fast Games in Junior Church League Last Evening—Some Good Material Being Developed

Two very fast Junior Church League games were played at the rink last evening between 6 and 8 o'clock. In the first conflict Mark Street defeated Charlotte Street by 6-2, while All Saints' and St. John's battled to a 3-3 tie in the final game. Both games were well played and the boys appear as though they want to play the game as it should be played. Looking over the material in sight, the Junior Church League is bound to work wonders along the line of developing hockey players, for in last evening's games there were dashes of hockey that would do credit to teams composed of much older players.

The score at the end of the first half of the Mark Street and Charlotte Street game was 2 to 2, but in the last period the men from East City swooped down repeatedly in combined rushes, and the result was victory. For the winners, McIntyre and Lipsett were very prominent, while Williams, the little rover, was always in the thick of the fray. Sherret, the rover for the Methodists on Charlotte street was easily the pick of the losers; in fact, he was about the speediest boy on the ice. His work thus far this season gives every assurance that he is a comer. The teams—

Mark St.—		Charlotte St.
Hollist	goal	Austin
McIntyre	r. def.	English
Lipsett	l. def.	McWilliams
Williams	rover	Sherret
Gillespie	centre	Soden
Hagerman	r. wing	Thompson
Cook	l. wing	Williamson

Although St. John's was credited with being a stronger team than All Saints', there was little to choose between the sevens when they hit the ice. What the Saints lacked in speed they made up with their combination and team play. At half-time the score was 2-1 in favor of St. John's boys, but All Saints' tied it up a few seconds after play was resumed and lost little time in evening up again when St. John's scored. It is doubtful which team would have won had the tie been played off.

Catchpole, the goaler for All Saints', had a very busy evening, clearing and blocking cleverly. "Phil" Taylor, the little rover for the Saints, also showed good form. For St. John's, Park was about the most effective man, while Soward on the defence, also acquitted himself creditably.

The teams—

All Saints'		St. John's

TANKARD HONORS FOR PETERBOROUGH CURLERS

Group is Won in Games With Lindsay and Millbrook --- Lost in District Cup Competition at Lindsay

There were plenty of fine shots and exciting moments in yesterday's Tankard competitions, the honors of which were won by the Peterborough rinks, they being 15 shots up after the second tussle with the Millbrook quartettes.

W. H. Taylor's rink made the win possible by their high scores as W. M. Lang's rink was down in the initial contest with Lindsay. He had some with Millbrook. Taylor had some real opposition in J. W. Flavelle's rink which was made up of four of the Lindsay's best curlers but the locals made much the better showing after the game was well advanced and were 10 up at the finish.

On the other hand, Geo. Little made a strong finish against Lang scored 9 points in the last four ends while Lang was blanked. The scores:

Against Millbrook the Taylor rink kept up the good work and had a 15 point win over Needler, while Lang was one up on a 15 end game with Wood. The visitors had no hopes of overcoming the lead piled up by Taylor and the game was shortened to allow them to catch the train. The scores:

DISTRICT CUP.

Only two outside curling clubs put in an appearance at Lindsay to compete for the District Cup, namely, Bobcaygeon and Peterborough. The latter club drew the bye, and consequently Lindsay and Bobcaygeon commenced to play in the morning, and finished the 18 ends shortly after 2 o'clock. Both Lindsay rinks won out. The rinks:

Skips Denham and Campbell met Lindsay in the final dash and both Lindsay rinks were up. The scores:

Peterborough.		Lindsay.

Totals	23		32

Lindsay majority, 9.

Lindsay Curling Club figured on sending four or six rinks to Peterborough bonspiel, but it now appears that the 'spiel is scheduled for the same dates as the finals in the Ontario Tankard. No one wishes to count chickens before they are hatched, but at the same time either Lindsay or Peterborough (generally Lindsay) win the Tinkard group, and as a result if Lindsay wins the number of rinks to attend the 'spiel will be lessened.—Lindsay Warder.

ST. JOHN'S TEAM.

The following St. John's seniors are requested to be on hand at 7.30 tomorrow evening at Brock St. rink for their game with Murray Street: W. Flowers, E. LeBar, V. Morphet, M. Pammett, A. Heard, R. Stevenson, W. Pammett and H. Frost.

COMMENT — As You Like it

MAURICE PARK is not only playing an extra good game for the Intermediates but he is giving the assurance that the Peterborough will be on the hockey map in the future. The popular centreman who is principal of the King George School, has secured the rink for three or four hours a week and during those hours all the youngsters from the East City institution are out with the necessary equipment. Last evening from 5 to 6 there were about thirty kids chasing the puck and such a fact means but one thing—the developing of young players.

IT WOULD, in our opinion, be in the interest of the game and for the good of the game should the rink management donate the rink certain hours during the week for the boys who are "comers." There are many juveniles who are not connected with any of the church league or school league teams and such being the case they seldom enjoy a game of hockey. Hockey players are not born, they are made. Ask any of the HRDLUU made. Ask of any puck chaser in the limelight today and invariably it will be the same story — raised with skates on. The rink given free to the boys of the city for one or two hours a week would mean a lot for the hockey in Peterborough in 1920.

THE BOYS around Sacred Heart rink are getting abundance of hockey. Three or four hours a day are given entirely to those who wish to play the game and looking the south end kids over, one is forced to think that there is mighty good material being educated along the proper line. In the days of yore the Ruf Neks from the south ward had their rink on the Little Lake and a game of hockey there meant an equal to the battle of Ypres. That day is passed and the boys from the Sacred Heart School and King Edward School are now having their regular games on the Sacred Heart rink. The games on the rink are always played under a referee and the boys are kept playing the game at its best. The management of the south end rink is to be commended on their efforts to keep hockey to the fore.

The Speed Limit.

Motorists going through a small town up in northern Indiana bear witness to the fact that sarcasm reaches a high stage of development there. Going into the town one is met by a sign reading, "Speed Limit 110 Miles an Hour."

"Mighty decent people in this town," thinks the motorist. But before he has gone far he realises the sarcasm fully. The streets are so rough and the road through there to Chicago has so many turns in it that it would be impossible to go faster than ten miles an hour without running into some one's front yard.—Indianapolis News.

Auto Ailments.

"Brother Jim has the automobile face, Joe has the motorbike back, and sister Sue has the auto speed craze."

"Any other automobile ailments in your family?"

"Well, papa says he has the automobile pocketbook, and it's badly punctured."—Minneapolis Journal.

A Cynical, Clinical Doc.

The surgeon remarked in his humorous way

Lectures on Conduct of War Come Ill From Germany, Says Grey.

LONDON, Jan. 27. — Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, yesterday authorized a statement in reply to an interview obtained with Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, by a representative of the Associated Press, and published in London Jan. 26, and in the United States Jan. 25.

After tracing the negotiations preceding the war and making comparison with the Chancellor's later version, the statement concludes:

"The sincerity of the German Chancellor's professions to the American correspondent may be brought to a very simple test, the application of which is more apposite, because it serves to recall one of the leading facts which produced the present war.

"Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg refused the proposal which Britain put forward and in which France, Italy and Russia concurred, for a conference, at which the dispute would have been settled on fair and honorable terms, without war. If he really wished to work with Great Britain for peace, why did he not accept that proposal? He must have known, after the Balkan conference that Great Britain could be trusted to play fair. Herr von Jagow had given testimony in the Reichstag to Great Britain's good faith in those negotiations.

"The proposal for the second conference between the powers was made by Sir Edward Grey with the same straightforward desire for peace as in 1912 and 1913. The German Chancellor rejected this means of averting the war. He who does not will the means must not complain if the conclusion is drawn that he did not will the end.

"The second part of the interview with an American correspondent consists of a discourse upon the ethics of the war. The things which Germany has done in Belgium and France have been placed on record by those who have suffered from them, and who know them at first hand. After this it does not lie with the German Chancellor to read to the other belligerents a lecture upon the conduct of the war."

ANNUAL TEA FOR BANDSMEN

Work of Temple Band is Reported on

The Temple bandsmen and their wives sat down to a banquet provided by the ladies last night at the Temple. It was the annual meeting of the band and a social hour for the wives and families.

After the tea the events of the passed year were reviewed and fitting speeches were made by Envoy Brewer Brown, Adj. McElhiney, Bandmaster Beer, Band Sergt. Hensley, Y. P. Bandmaster Blunt and Mrs. E. Hensley, and Mrs. Jas. Richardson.

The progress of the band during last year has been very satisfactory and even greater results are looked forward to this year.

The meeting closed by the singing of the Doxology and prayer by Mr. Geo. Legott.

LAST ADDRESS AT Y.W.C.A. TONIGHT

Miss Una Saunders, National Secretary of the Y.W.C.A., gave two addresses yesterday in the Y. W. C. A. parlors. The subject for the afternoon was Christ's work among Individuals, and Miss Saunders impressed upon all present the necessity of doing personal work for Christ.

At eight o'clock, Miss Saunders spoke on the Woman's Movement, showing the development of the movement from its earliest inception and she pointed out that women and men should stand together for the highest ideals of life in all its phases.

Miss Saunders speaks this evening at eight o'clock on The Glory of the Christian Life. It is hoped a large number of persons will avail themselves of the privilege of hearing Miss Saunders' last address.

GAVE ADDRESS TO C.L.A. SOCIETY

The members of the C.L.A. Society connected with Charlotte Street Methodist Church had the privilege of hearing last night an instructive address on Light, given by Mr. Archibald B. Gates, electrical engineer, president of the literary department of the society. He went into the subject thoroughly and traced the development of illumination from the days of the candle down to the present high grade and efficient electrical illumination. He also performed some experiments to illustrate a new system of lighting that was becoming popular. The evening was made more enjoyable by selections on an Edison Disc talking machine kindly placed at the disposal of the society by Mr. J. M. Greene.

It was decided to solicit donations of linen from the congregation of the church for use as bandages for the soldiers in Europe. There will be some one at the parsonage of the church any time next week to accept any contributions of bandages left in.

REBEKAH LODGE OFFICERS.

The Rebekah Lodge officers who were elected for 1915 at the last regular meeting were as follows:—

KNOX CHURCH GUILD HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET

French Beat the Russians to Berlin, According to Outcome of Membership Contest

The Young People's Guild of Knox Presbyterian Church had a merry time last night in the Sunday school room, the occasion being the annual banquet, which is always a banner night for the young people. Rev. J. A. MacKenzie was present.

The banquet also marked the close of a membership contest with the French and Russians, lead by Messrs. R. Hillier and Kingsley Kenyon. The objective was Berlin and according to a special war office announcement, the French gained the day.

The Guild has a membership of one hundred and sixty, the average attendance being sixty. The young people take a large interest in their department of the church work and they look forward with pleasure to their associations with the new minister.

Mr. Cecil Williamson, president of the Guild, was chairman and the following program was carried out:

Toast—"King and Country" — Responded to by Rev. Jas. Rollins.

Solo—Mr. Humpage.

Toast—The Church, responded to by Rev. R. Pogue.

Toast—The Guild, proposed by Dr. McCulloch, responded to by Mr. Cecil Williamson.

Solo—Miss Hinchcliffe.

Toast—The Guild Contest, responded to by Messrs. Hillier and Kenyon.

Toast — The New Minister, responded by Rev. J. A. MacKenzie.

Solo—Mr. Smith.

Toast—The Ladies, responded to by Mr. Laing.

Duet—Battle Eve—Messrs. Smith and Humpage.

Remarks—Mr. Yale.

FIFTY-ONE YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE

A very pleasant and interesting event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Loucks near Foxboro, on the evening of Jan. 20th, when they celebrated the 51st anniversary of their marriage. Their only daughter, Mrs. L. E. Henderson was present and took an active part in the celebration. The guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Coulter, Mr. and Mrs. A. Ross, Mr. Long of Peterborough, Mrs. E. Canniff, Mrs. H. Mott, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bronson and their pretty little daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hoard, Mr. and Mrs. Caverly, Mr. and Mrs. S. Gay, Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Faulkner and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Jones. The guests were entertained by games, vocal and instrumental music, a recitation and a program of toasts. Lunch was served about 11. The menu consisted of a large variety. The recitation was given by Mr. Loucks entitled "The Race for a Life, or the Feat of Tecumseh." It was one of E. M. Pierce's poems and was quite lengthy. The details were thrilling and exciting and it took over forty minutes to deliver it. This he did without a note or a prompter, a remarkable thing for him to do, and the rendering was such as you could not have anticipated from a man of his age. One of the most prominent in the recitation was a little girl, 13 years of age who proved to be one of the brightest, bravest and pluckiest little girls the world has ever known. To make the account seem more real this little girl was represented by Miss Anna Bronson in her clever, modest, graceful way and it reflected much credit upon her. She was dressed very prettily and was the admiration of all present. After lunch the following toast was proposed:—

"Here's to the woman whose hand
Is firm when she clasps your own
Like a grip of steel
That makes you feel
You're not in the world alone.
"Here's to the woman whose laugh
Puts the sombre clouds to rout
The woman who's fair
And kind and square
To the one that's down and out."

The toast was responded to by Dr. J. A. Faulkner and Rev. Mr. Jones in speeches that were very appropriate, fully in keeping with the subject, interesting and edifying and were appreciated by all.

Mr. Loucks in writing some reminiscences says,—

"I find I am now 75 years old and looking over my past life I can see that my school boy days were the most pleasant and happy days of my life, free from cares. I will never forget the pleasant times I spent in a "rural school" over 60 years ago. Among the many boys that were in my class there is but one living now. D. J. Fairfield of Belleville is the only one, he was a class mate for over six years. When a boy he was a genial good natured fellow, always full of fun, and I don't think he has gotten over it yet. Our associations as mates were mutually very pleasant and agreeable.

"WHEN I WAS A BOY."

"The play ground and the village street
I see, and an again a boy,
When life was beautiful and sweet,
And just to live and love was joy,
Aglow with all good natured fun.
When careless, merry times were ours.
We felt we were afloat upon
A summer sea of sunny hours."

Former Constable Gets Jail Term

He Was Found Guilty of Practising Fraud

Chief Rogers, of the Ontario Provincial Police, received word Monday morning from Wainwright, Alta., to the effect that William Bowers had been sentenced to one year in prison on a charge of fraud. Bowers was arrested at Bancroft, Ont., some weeks ago by Inspector of Provincial Detectives John Miller, where he was acting as town constable.

The charge against Bowers was that he went west several years ago, and purchased several horses from farmers. He gave notes against the horses as security, but subsequently sold them and left the country. He was traced to Ontario, and the Provincial Police found him at Bancroft.

HOW PRICES WERE MADE

"Did you know the freight or duty on any piece of apparatus sold in the United States," asked Mr. Cowan.

"No."

"Did you get the price of poles in United States?"

"Yes."

"Did you know the cost of shipping them to Canada?"

"No."

Continuing through the inventory, Mr. Cowan came to meters priced at $12.50 each. Witness stated that he thought that a fair price for Westinghouse meters, five ampere, when bought in lots of 500.

"What was the price in 1914?"

"I should say it was low."

"That's not what I'm asking you, what was the price?"

"I would say from eight to nine dollars."

"There is a difference of a dollar. What was the price in the month of March?"

"I could not say."

"What was the price being paid throughout Canada?"

"That would depend on how late a model the meter was."

Mr. Cowan informed him he wanted the price of Westinghouse meters, style C. Witness could not give the price. Mr. Cowan had a catalogue of prices which stated the meters could then be purchased for $7.75.

"With the Westinghouse meter selling for $7.75 all other meters would correspond in price would they not?" asked the solicitor.

Witness replied such was the case.

"I'm told the Westinghouse model leads when it comes to meters."

"Only in Canada."

"Well," exclaimed Mr. Cowan, "this plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. was situated in Canada."

The next point brought up was how Mr. Sayce secured his price on transformers. Witness said he went and talked with men of the C. G. E. and Westinghouse Co. The prices were taken on a range of five years. As to the price of cross-irons. Mr. Sayce secured information from the Northern Electric Co. He could not remember what gentleman of the Northern Electric Co. he interviewed or what position he held. He knew nothing about him.

The price of wire Mr. Sayce had put at 18 cents. There was a difference of about a cent and a half in the prices in United States and Canada. The average across the line was about 16 or 16½ for the past three years.

"Why did you take three years into consideration when getting the price of wire and take 5 years on meters?" asked Mr. Cowan.

"I did not want to go back too far."

"Did you know that three years ago copper wire reached its highest price and has been coming down ever since?"

"No, I did not."

"Tell me what company you secured information about the price of wire."

"The Imperial I think."

"Was it the Imperial Wire Co.?"

"Yes, I guess that was the name."

"Well," remarked Mr. Cowan, "the Imperial Wire Co. is of Collingwood and is a fence wire concern."

This afternoon's session Mr. Cowan questioned Mr. Sayce in regard to how he valuated other apparatus.

NEW HOME FOR PROTESTANT FEDERATION

When the formal opening of the new Protestant Federation hall takes place on Friday night, visitors will be surprised at the well-appointed and spacious rooms which have been secured by the association for their use. The hall is on the third floor of the Bradburn block, and the main part is what was once the Bradburn opera house, and later a bowling alley.

Now it has been renovated, seated, and brightened, and is capable of accommodating one thousand people, if need be. It will be available for dances, socials, concerts and public performances, at moderate rates, terms to be arranged by the trustees, who have a five year lease on the rooms. Committee rooms adjoin it, and also the Orange lodge rooms.

There is ample space in the hall for almost any kind of large public function, and the trustees have not spared expense to make their quarters inviting and attractive. All new seats have been installed and there are more yet to come.

OFFICERS AND MEN WILL BE DINED

Twenty-two officers and members who are volunteers of the Third Contingent, have accepted invitations to be guests of honor at a supper to be served at the Y.M.C.A. Rosabelle's "Favah."

Never was there a blacker daughter of Africa than was Rosabelle Jackson when, as a girl of but thirteen years, she was taken into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Deene, a childless couple who purposed training Rosabelle into a maid of all work. This they succeeded in doing, and so many admirable traits of character were developed in Rosabelle that they became much attached to the girl, and her affection for them was pronounced. One day when she was nearly thirty years old she came to Mrs. Deene to ask a "favah" of somewhat startling character.

"I wants to ask jes one favah, Mis' Deene," she said. "Dis is de favah. If I do dies befo' you' does I want de favah ob havin' you put a tombstone ovah my grave an' have on it, 'Rosabelle Jackson, only chile of Mistah an' Missus Abner Deene!'" — New York Post.

GERMAN CAVALRY REGIMENT IS WIPED OUT BY RUSSIANS INFANTRY ALSO MET DEFEAT

Foe Put to Flight by Siberian Regiments in Another Move and Victors Emerged With but Slight Losses

ENEMY LEFT FIVE HUNDRED DEAD

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 28. — A Russian officer commanding a battery of machine guns, tells a story of the fighting yesterday near Sochaczew. His battery, under orders to check the Germans, entrenched and masked, and lay all night waiting for the attack. Soon after daylight, a cavalry regiment approached within six hundred yards, and then suspecting something, started to retire, and the Russians, not having received orders to fire, they were about to escape unhurt, when machine guns on thel eft gave the signal, and the cavalry were almost wiped out.

Half an hour later, three infantry regiments gathered on a hill on the front and began entrenching, but three volleys from Russian machine guns cleared the ground and the Germans left five hundred killed.

Germans, supported by the fire of two guns, then attempted to get around the Rsusian left, but the Siberian regiments soon put them to flight. During all this time the Russians, thanks to excellent artillery fire, scarcely lost a man.

GIVE JOB OF ASSISTANT FIRE CHIEF TO LOCAL MAN

Efficient Fire Protection With as Few Additional Expenditures as Possible, the Policy of Fire, Water and Light Committee

Working with the smoothness of well oiled machinery, the Fire, Water and Light committee got away yesterday for another year with good promise of a calm, harmonious voyage. Alderman Joe. Duffus has taken firm hold of the helm and evidently has started out to maintain the standard set by his predecessor, Ald. G. Walter Green who still occupies a seat on the committee. Alderman Duffus has familiarized himself with the work associated with the office and gave a sort of inaugural speech at the first meeting yesterday in which he outlined his policy for the year. In a nutshell it is efficient fire protection with as few additional expenditures as possible. It is to be a case of hew to the line in keeping down expenses without crippling or lessening the operations of the department or its efficiency, a policy which seemingly had the endorsation of his confreres.

Want an Assistant Chief.

Business centred most upon the fire department, and the necessity of appointing an assistant chief was one of the important matters considered. As the department stands just now there is no one really competent to assume charge in the event of accident to Chief Howard or illness. Engineer George Jamieson has been acting as assistant but according to Chief Howard's statement feels that he is scarcely capable of continuing in the position. Previous to his appointment Edward Soulsby had the job but relinquished it owing to nervous breakdown. Chief Howard said he knew of no man in the city capable of holding the position save former assistant chief Grange, but his services were unavailable now. Advertising for a man was suggested but it was thought that a local man should be given preference in filling the position. Mayor Buller was sure there were many capable men in the city who could handle the job if developed. It was decided on motion of Alderman Green to leave the matter in the hands of the chairman and chief to endeavor to secure a competent man and report to the committee.

Keep Civic Offices Down.

Whether or not a wiring inspector should be appointed was another live question but upon which no action was taken. Herbert A. Fife was recommended for the position but as there are financial considerations attached to the matter in regard to which the committee were rather unfamiliar it was agreed to let it rest until the provincial wiring superintendent was brought to the city to impart complete information relative to the position. Both the chairman and Mayor voiced pronounced objection to creating more civic offices than were absolutely required. Alderman Green also announced his opposition to any present action and thought it could afford to safely stand until the city's hand was forced more in the matter.

It was noted that the estimates of the fire department last year amounted to $17,250 and that the committee had kept within its appropriation. Alderman Duffus said however that during hard times such as the present it would not do to overlook anything really needed to maintain good fire fighting efficiency. The committee had to face additional expenditures in the shape of two more fire horses and possibly three; natural increase in salaries as per schedule which would be approximately $1,000, and the cost of replacing a satisfactory underground cable besides the matter of appointing an assistant chief. Now was the time also to take steps to acquire sufficient property to erect a sub-station.

"I think a fire department should grow with a city," said the chairman. "The greater the efficiency the smaller the loss and the lower the rate of insurance. The manufacturers and citizens are entitled to the best protection possible but if the department can get along as it is for the

CONTRACTORS WILL REPAIR PAVEMENT

Surface on First Year's Work Will be Re-laid

That all the surface laid by Foley and Gleason on the street paving performed in this city during 1913 would have to be torn up and relaid because of the inferior qualities of sand, not allowing the pavement to give the satisfaction guaranteed in the contract with this city, was made known by a letter read at last evening's board of works meeting. The contractors claimed it to be the first instance in all their career where such a "snag was met," and they were only anxious to go ahead and rectify the matter in the spring. The work would be performed gratis, and to make doubly sure that the city will not be at a loss, they wil insert a half-inch binder between the base and surface. The agreement did not call for this binder. As their plant would be on the ground to commence work as soon as spring opened, they desired to learn if the city would not add the proposed work for the coming year in with last year's list, a small portion of which had not been completed, owing to the late date the work was begun. The firm was in no way responsible for the work not being commenced earlier.

The contractors also asked if it would be possible for the city to pay $9,000 of the $12,000 which they are retaining till the 1914 contract is completed, as a guarantee. This would leave the city still with $3,000 which would, in the contractors' opinion, be sufficient to cover any possible contingencies.

A little discussion was given the matter, during which Ald. Green pointed out how honorably the contractors have come forward and offered to reconstruct the surface laid in 1913. Mr. Driscoll, one of the officials of the firm, had told him that the firm intended lifting every foot, if necessary. It was decided to refer the matter to the city solicitor to ascertain if it would be legal to add the proposed 1915 work to last year's contract, and also if he would advise the payment of the $9000.

VALUE PLACED ON POWER PLANT

The approximate revenue of the combined properties of the Peterborough Light and Power Company for one year ending October 1st, 1914, when the city took over the electric light plant of the company, was:

Electric	$107,580
Gas	32,602
Railway	47,515

Before the Board of Arbitrators, Mr. Hawkins said he calculated the value at five times the gross annual receipts, making the power plant worth, according to his figures, $587,900.

SERIOUS UPRISINGS BY SOUTHERN SLAVS

Crowd From Cathedral Cried "Down With War, Down With Germans"—Mobilization Notices Torn Down

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Geneva, Jan. 28.—An unofficial report from the Austrian House states that there have been serious uprisings among Southern Slavs, prompted by the German order for mobilization of last line of reserves. These advices say clergymen headed the movement of resistance. After a sermon by a Slavonian priest, last Sunday morning, at Laibach, near Trieste, the crowd left the cathedral shouting, "Down with war, down with Germans."

Several persons were killed and mobilization notices were torn down. Rioting still continues.

EARNINGS OF THE COMPANY

Profits of $356,935.25 for Ten Years and Nine Months

At the sitting of the Board of Arbitrators yesterday afternoon, Mr. John Littlejohn, treasurer of the Peterborough Light and Power Company whose head office is in Toronto, was called to the stand and gave the earnings and expenses of the company for the past ten years and nine months, as follows:

Year ending Dec. 31	Gross Earnings	Gross operting expenses including taxes

1913	96,025.76	54,735.70
1914 (9 mos.)	79,296.24	40,911.24

This shows the total earnings for ten years and nine months were $723,194.35, while the total expenses for the same period were $366,259.10. The profits, therefore, were $356,935.25.

Mr. Littlejohn stated that the local office of the Peterborough Light and Power Company contributed to the upkeep of the Toronto office. Questioned by Mr. Cowan as to what information could be secured from the company's books, the witness stated that the various purchases were recorded in bulk, but not in minor items. Mr. Cowan further asked if these books could be secured by the city's legal battery, and Solicitor Tilley, answering for Mr. Littlejohn, stated that they could.

Mr. Harold Almert, consulting engineer, of Chicago, and formerly of the H. M. Byllesby Co., of the same city, gave evidence, in which he claimed that Mr. Sayce's prices for the company's property were very conservative.

BIG DECREASE IN LIGHT ACCOUNTS

The extent to which consumers of light benefit as a result of municipal ownership, was made known today when the light bills were received by householders in whose residences there is a meter.

Hydro rates went into effect on the first day of January and as a result consumers find their bills decreased by one-half.

GERMANY'S INABILITY TO STAND FINANCIAL STRAIN WILL END WAR NEXT MAY

The Prediction in London Financial Circles --- Teutonic Powers May Also Collapse Through Lack of Ammunition

ALREADY FEELING THE PINCH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 28. — The prediction is made in leading financial circles here that Germany's inability to stand the financial strain will end the war in May next. The prediction is based on the supposition that when Great Britain, France and Russia find it necessary to combine to meet, from their united resources, the immense outlay required to carry on the war, Germany and Austria cannot much longer continue to find the sinews of war. Germany cannot hope to obtain outside financial assistance.

When this prediction was mentioned to an ambassador here, of a great power, he expressed no opinion on this phase, but said he would not be surprised to see the collapse of the Teutonic powers from lack of ammunition. Germany, it was true, had made great preparations, even expending the whole of the last loan she raised, in buying ammunition, but her calculations were entirely inadequate, and there is cumulative evidence that she is already feeling the pinch and husbanding her supply.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Carpathian passes in Western Galicia and the Caucasus, by reason of the sudden offensive of arms heretofore, are again the chief factors of interest in military operations. In the Carpathians, a big force of Austro-Germans has been concentrated, and is fighting not only to stop the invasion of Hungary, but if possible to draw off the large Russian force occupying Bukowina in the south.

In Egypt, the Turkish advance appears really to have been begun and that on the Caucasus shattered. Turks have more or less reorganized, and have paused in their flight towards their own frontier and have resumed the offensive.

FOE'S LOSSES ARE PLACED AT TWENTY THOUSAND

Foe Sallied Forth From Trenches at Several Points, Only to be Driven Back

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 28. — The afternoon official statement says: "January 27th, Emperor William's birthday, was good for us. Every German attack was repulsed, and every French attack made progress. If a special effort was made by the Germans in honor of the day, it did not result to their advantage. At several points, from Arras to Soissons, German infantry, engaged, came out of their trenches, but were driven back by a severe fire.

"In the region of Craonne, the German losses Monday and Tuesday equal one brigade (six thousand men). German prisoners in our hands are all of the opinion that they have been strongly checked. Judging from the number of bodies found on the field east of Ypres, at La Bassee, at Craonne, and in the Woevre, the German losses Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday must have totalled twenty thousand."

WORK HANDICAPPED BY QUICK SAND AND WATER

Operations on Outfall Sewer are Progressing Very Slowly

According to a statement made to the Board of Works last evening by City Engineer Parsons, the work on the outfall sewer is progressing very slowly. Only some 12 feet of pipe is being laid daily. Although the City Engineer regretted to state it, it will be a long time before the work will be completed. He was not in favor of putting on another gang, which would cost some $3,000 to get started. The rumor that the delay was caused through the shortage of pipes was erroneous. The men are up against water and quick sand and that naturally means delay. Ald. Johnston asked if it would be possible to start another gang at the corner of Rink and Park Streets and work south but the city engineer stated that water and quick sand are to be found in that section as well as nearer the river. The water and sand is prevalent all through the proposed route.

Asked if the high water in spring would further delay the work, City Engineer Parsons stated that he is of the opinion it would. The high water mark is in some places six feet above the level of the sewer. However the delay would not be for more than two or three weeks. The average depth the sewer level is below the surface is from 13 to 15 feet.

A MATTER OF QUALIFICATION

City Engineer Gave Foremanship to John Thirnbeck

An application was read at last evenings meeting of the Board of Works from Martin Neary asking an appointment as foreman on sewer construction. The matter was in a fair way of being referred to the City Engineer as is usual, when Ald. Saunders asked for information as to why Neary had been laid off and John Thirnbeck given work. The south ward representative thought that as there was only one gang at work, Neary and Thirnbeck should be given the work every other two weeks instead of Thirnbeck getting it all. Ald. Saunders did not desire to interfere with, or offer criticism, to the manner in which City Engineer Parsons selected his men, but he thought Neary had not been given a "fair deal."

Ald. McIntyre followed Ald. Saunders' remarks with the assertion that as long as he knew anything of municipal matters Neary had never been given a fair shake from the city. He wanter everyone to be used squarely. City Engineer Parsons stated that Thirnbeck had been employed on the construction of sidewalks and Neary was on sewers. When all the work was completed and the one position as foreman on the outfall sewer remained, he gave it to Thirnbeck because he considered him the better man.

That Neary had far more experience than Thirnbeck and that former employers always spoke of Neary as a first-class man, was advanced by Ald. McIntyre. The Engineer replied that he knew very little about any previous work but based his decision on the work the two men have performed for him. Ald. Johnston thought that the matter could be looked after by the City Engineer and it was left in his hands.

N. E. Hagel, K.C., died yesterday in Winnipeg after a long illness, aged 68. Born in Oxford county, he was called to the Ontario Bar in 1873. He practiced in British Columbia and the Yukon.

WADED THROUGH WATER FOOT DEEP

Private Wood Tells of Life at Salisbury Plain

Mrs. J. C. Wood has received a letter from her son, Pte. M. M. Wood, who is with the First Canadian Contingent at Salisbury Plain. Pte. Wood enlisted at Brantford where he was employed at the Royal Bank, having been transferred from the local branch.

Pte. Wood had just returned from a trip to London. He writes: I was with Odely Taylor and Greene from Havelock for a few days until they returned to camp. I spent the remainder of the time alone as I could not find Barney Quinn the boys having separated.

We are having bad floods here and I had to wade about 100 yards in water over a foot deep, to reach camp. It being dark, I stopped to inquire the route and remained to have a cup of tea and a piece of Christmas cake at the cookhouse of the camp. The cook is a Queen's student. So said he knew Ian Reveile and Roy Dixon and he also told me Hawley Grant was in his regiment. I found Hawley and spent some time with him. He was well and had letters from nearly every one around Hartington.

We are still in tents and I am not sorry as I think the tents are healthy. Odely and Barney are here in the Y.M.C.A. camp writing letters. Odely has seen Alan Kingscote but I have not.

I had my Christmas dinner in camp. The Duchess of Connaught sent us each a cake of maple syrup which we enjoyed very much.

P.S.—I have just received the Christmas box you sent for Barney and I have given Barney the gifts for him. I had a fine time. The boys in the tent send thanks.

Petitions in London, Ont., are being circulated calling for a civic or military trial of H. J. Glaubitz, the German-born general manager of the London Public Utilities Commission, who is charged with aiding a German reservist to leave the country.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1915

IS THE GLOBE CHINAIZED!

THE GLOBE advances a rather curious argument in reply to the Review's article with reference to the growth of China's trade. The Globe, in a "volcanic" article, says:

> "The Chinamen's object in manufacturing is not to give, but to get. They want to get our goods. This shows how delusive is the notion that imports or purchases deprive us of work. It is only as we work that we can purchase. The delusion about money leaving the country comes in here, but that is another story. Every industrial expansion in China or elsewhere is a blessing to the world at large, and especially to the industrial workers. When this is understood and acted upon we will no longer have the paradox of want through an excess of producing capacity and efficiency."

The basis of the assertion in this paragraph, which is the pith of the article, is that Canada pays for her imports with her exports. For the year ending March 31st, 1914, Canada's total exports were $478,997,928, against $650,746,796 for our total imports. Thus, Canada bought goods in excess of what she sold, to the value of $172,000,000. These goods were paid for, not from exports, but by borrowing, and by placing mortgages on our country. The Globe speaks of the delusion about money leaving the country, evidently a whack at Protection, the National Policy, that played such a great part in making Canada a progressive and important country. If it had not been for the National Policy, there are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of factories now paying out good wages that would not exist in this country, because the parent concerns in the United States or in Europe would do the manufacturing for Canada. If these goods, that are now produced in Canada, were imported, would we not be deprived of work? The Globe says no, because we pay for them with our work, when our work does not even now pay for all the goods we buy. If the Globe's policy were followed, we would not produce these goods in Canada; we would not have the workers nor the work to pay for purchases. But, our contemporary says this is another story, and ends up with the generalization that every expansion in China or elsewhere is a blessing to the world at large. As generalizations go, this is true. Improvement in China is a good thing, but the question can never be adequately considered on such a narrow scholastic basis. The awakening of China industrially cannot be confined in its influence to China alone, but will extend its encircling influence around the world, just as Germany's millions of low-priced wage-earners caused the phrase "Made in Germany" to be a by-word in Canada and in practically all civilized countries. The Globe says itself that the Chinamen's object is to get. That is true. To get Canadian business, if possible—a natural and legitimate object—is part of the industrial awakening of China. That means that China will compete in Canadian markets with the things China produces, such as iron and steel products, fabrics, such as silk, and other items, as they are developed. How can a Canadian manufacturer of underclothes, paying our standard of wages, sell his product in Canada against a Chinese article produced where the rate of wages is from twenty to thirty cents for a day of, usually, not less than twelve hours? It cannot be done, unless there are difficulties or barriers in the way, such as a protective duty, and which the Globe decrys. The Globe would break down this bulwark of Canadian industry and industrial progress by freely admitting goods produced by Oriental labour. As long as the present status of society or of nations exists, it is a delusion to hope that free goods would be a benefit to Canada or that the products of this country could compete with the products of a country like China. Yet this is what the Globe advocates for Canada.

A TAXLESS PARADISE.

THE ISLE OF MAN has a code of laws entirely its own, says the London Chronicle. The island has never been ruled by the laws of England, and, although Parliament reserves the right to make any imperial enactment applicable to the Isle of Man, the privilege is seldom or never exercised without consultation of the Manx people. These happy islanders have no armed forces to maintain, no income tax, death, estate or stamp duties to pay, and their customs dues are in most cases on a lower scale than in the United Kingdom.

Manx women, too, have special privileges. Every female adult, widow or spinster, in the Isle of Man, whether she is owner, occupier or lodger, has a vote for the House of Keys elections. Every widow enjoys half of her husband's personal estate, and has a life interest in his real estate, and she cannot be deprived of this by will; whilst her written consent must be obtained to all transfers and deeds affecting her husband's property. On the other hand, no married woman can legally own in her own right either money or property in the Isle of Man; she can have no separate estate unless specially protected before marriage, and can make no will without the leave of her husband.

THE NEXT IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

THE PRESENT YEAR does not appear opportune for calling the next Imperial Conference, although some London newspapers have suggested it. It has not been made the subject of any official statement by the Government, but there is, nevertheless, good ground for concluding that no conference will be held this year. The present organization of the Empire is proving sufficient for the main business of the moment, that of prosecuting successful war against the common enemy, and, although the status of the self-governing dominions will undoubtedly be raised in the future readjustment of Imperial relations, there does not seem to be any good reason for bringing the problem forward for settlement at this stage. Canada's present position is, of course, somewhat in advance of that of the other dominions, through the accidental circumstance which finds a member of the Canadian Government in London as Acting High Commissioner, in close daily touch with the Imperial Government. So far as the question of Imperial defence is concerned, a permanent arrangement might be difficult of determination in advance of the changed conditions which will arise from the destruction of German militarism, and there are no other Imperial matters sufficiently pressing to call for the holding of a conference during the present stage of the war. This seems to be the Ottawa view, and it is not too much to assume that the attitude of the Dominion would be an important, if not a deciding, factor for or against the calling of a conference.

Imperial affairs are in a too uncertain condition while the war endures, to consider questions of political theory, such as a Council of Empire and representatives of the Dominions in it. Imperial Defence can very well wait until the Empire has successfully defended itself, and then very probably the Imperial problem of defence will be solved in a way satisfactory to all and based on the tried success of a great war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT IS just because something cannot be got for nothing, that goods made by the Oriental must be paid for by the product of Canadian labour. If, however, the Orientals, with their cheap labour, have captured the world's market in the various forms of production, as they are doing, in what way is Canadian labour to find employment, and, by exchange, enjoy the blessings of the Globe's "shower"? If the world and its nations were perfectly balanced, there might be some truth in the Globe's contention, but, as it is now, even the smallest reduction or rise in wages or labour-cost will go far to win and lose a market. It is just as plain as it is that one shop will lose custom while another gains, because of prices.

THE TORONTO GLOBE of January 27th says editorially: Ontario has but one official language—English. If the agitation now going on in Quebec is intended to secure for French the standing in this Province of an official language, it is foredoomed to hopeless failure. It is only in the Federal arena that such a right exists. By claiming an official status for French in Ontario, extremists of the Lavergne type are injuring rather than helping Ontario people of French-Canadian origin, who naturally desire to have French as well as English taught to their children in the schools of the Province.

THE DEAD.

(Charles Heavysege.)

How great unto the living seem the dead!
How sacred, solemn; how heroic grown;
How vast and vague, as they obscurely tread,
The shadowy confines of the dim unknown!—
For they have met the monster that we dread,
Have learned the secret not to mortal shown.
E'en as gigantic shadows on the wall
The spirit of the daunted child amaze,
So on us thoughts of the departed fall,
And with phantasma fill our gloomy gaze.
Awe and deep wonder lend the living lines,
And hope and ecstasy the borrowed beams;
While fitful fancy the dull form divines,
And all is what imagination dreams.

Cape-to-Cairo Railway.

(Toronto Globe.)

The Cape-to-Cairo Railway, projected by the late Cecil Rhodes, bids fair to be completed, as the result of the war, sooner than was generally expected. This, at least, is a fair inference from the successful bombardment of the capital of German East Africa by two British warships. If the German colony is seized by Great Britain, it will probaly be held after the war in order to make British colonial territory continuous from Cape Town to Alexandria. It would not now be in accord with British ideals to have a section of such a railway running through German territory. The bombardment of Dar-es-Salaam is probably only the prelude to a formidable sea-and-land expedition.

A Protest from Huntingdon, Que.

(Huntingdon Gleaner.)

If the Quebec Legislature is within its power in telling the Ontario Legislature how it should change its educational regulations, then Ontario may respond by lecturing Quebec on how its education law ought to be amended. Nothing save strife and ill-will can come out of our premier's action; indeed, he has hurt the cause he desired to help, for Ontario will resent Quebec's dictation and do less than it otherwise might have done. In seeking a favour, it is poor policy to shake your fist at the body that alone can grant it.

HASTINGS HAPPENINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, Jan. 27. — The adult Bible class in connection with the Methodist church held their annual banquet on Friday night in the Sunday-school room, with a large attendance. The ladies who had charge of the tables reflected great credit in their taste in that direction, the floral decorations being quite profuse and all other arrangements in accordance therewith. After ample justice had been done to the tasty viands provided, a good program was rendered by members of the class, and a very sociable and profitable evening spent. Great credit is due Mr. C. Jones, the capable leader of the class, and his excellent staff of officers, for the success of the undertaking.

The "literary evening" in connection with the Epworth league, was held on Monday night, and was much enjoyed. A miscellaneous program was given, consisting of readings, recitations, vocal and instrumental music, and a debate, "Resolved, that the summer months are more enjoyable than the winter months." Several of the young people took part in the debate, and all showed a painstaking preparation of both sides of the subject. The judges found it a somewhat difficult matter to decide, but finally came to the conclusion that the debaters in favor of the summer season had brought up the best points. A very pleasing part of the program was an instrumental duet given by Miss Annie and Mr. George Brooks. Altogether the evening was most pleasantly spent, and those who came out were well repaid for their troule.

Mr. James Stevenson sent a large shipment to Toronto on Tuesday last, among which were two very fine hogs purchased from Mr. Firman of Percy, and which, we are informed, tipped the scales at 1,250 lbs., one weighing 645 and the other 605 lbs.

The local chapter of the I. O. D. E. are putting on their play, "The Dust of the Earth," in the town hall on Friday night of this week. Judging from the amount of practice, the public will certainly be given a rare treat. The seats are being taken up quickly.

Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty were in Keene on Wednesday last.

The stork called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Johnson Monday last and left a baby boy.

Mrs. J. Greenley of Campbellford has been the guest of her sister, Miss Hermiston, town.

Mr. Fred Hore, Port Hope, visited friends in and around Hastings during the past week.

Miss Leila Buck, Norwood, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. Doughty, Toronto, spent a few days last week in this vicinity in the interest of the Empire Separator Co.

Rev. D. A. Thomson was in Peterborough on Thursday officiating at the induction of the Rev. Mr. MacKenzie, the new pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Duncan Fife visited friends in Peterborough for a few days during the week.

Miss Annie Sargent of Westwood was in Hastings on Thursday.

Mr. James Hall, of Peterborough, passed through here on Saturday en route for Norwood to visit friends.

Some of our local sports have been quite fortunate of late, having captured some fine specimens of foxes. They report the chase as very interesting and exciting, and intend to give it another trial in the near future.

Miss Caldwell of Westwood made our hamlet a visit on Thursday last.

Business is kept humming around the G. T. R. station. Mr. Richard Walsh shipped a large consignment of cattle and hogs on Friday last. A very fine bunch of cattle was delivered by Mr. T. Walsh of [illegible], numbering some eight or [illegible] head and weighing in the neighborhood of 1,100 lbs. apiece.

Mr. and Mrs. William Baker spent Saturday with friends in Warkworth.

Miss Nellie Pickens, of Peterborough is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pickens.

Miss Mabel Carter is holidaying with friends in Westwood.

Practice is well under way for the play, "The Minister's Bride," to be presented by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church in the near future.

Mrs. Green and son of Colborne are guests of friends here.

Mr. Bert Beavis of Campbellford paid us a short visit on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. George Oakman left last week for Moorefield to visit the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Oakman.

The head agent for barn supplies came in on Monday to assist the local agent, Mr. A. J. Parsons.

Mr. Shorter went to Peterborough on Monday to enlist with the soldiers for active service. Mr. Shorter was in South Africa on duty, and has had considerable experience.

We understand that Mr. Lonergan is disposing of his interest in the Royal Hotel here and purposes moving to Lindsay.

Mr. Lew Fife spent Saturday in Hastings.

Messrs. Lewis and Wilbert Beavis took a trip to Peterborough Thursday last.

Miss Mae Beavis spent Sunday with her parents.

Miss Ethel Collins visited with her brother, Mr. Robert Collins, on Sunday.

Mr. Parsons has disposed of one of his drivers. Mr. Lew Kelly was the purchaser.

The skating rink is being well patronized and lovers of this sport are making good use of their opportunities.

Our local merchants are busy stocktaking and getting their goods in order for their new spring shipments.

Miss Helen Fowlds has received notice that she has been accepted as nurse, to accompany the contingent for service at the scene of war. Her many friends wish her a safe journey and a speedy return to home and friends.

Mrs. A. Knight was summoned to Picton last week to attend the funeral of her brother-in-law in that town.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Fred McKee has almost completely recovered from the horse bite he received a few weeks ago.

Aeroplane raids and bomb-dropping expeditions, the Carranza agency at Washington announces, are to be conducted against Mexoci City.

There's a Fine

For selling butter not properly put up and correctly branded.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than common tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

Extract from the San Francisco Chronicle of January 24, 1904:

"RESCUE AT SEA.

"Among the passengers yesterday on board the incoming Oceanic Steamship company's Mariposa were Captain Broughton and nine south sea islanders, of the schooner North Star, capsized in north latitude 34, west longitude 132, during a heavy squall. Captain Broughton was below at the time, and hardly managed to scramble out of his cabin before the ship went over. The disaster is ascribed to the carelessness of the Kanaka crew, who were all asleep at the moment the squall struck the vessel, which was lying becalmed with her sails up.

"The crew, none of whom drowned, contrived to perch themselves on the ship's bottom, and after four days of intense suffering were picked up by the W. B. Hall of this city, in lumber for Suva, Fiji. The Hall, in her turn, transferred them to the mail steamer, which was fortunately intercepted a week later.

"Captain Broughton cannot speak too highly of the extreme kindness of Captain Hayward, Purser Smith, and the officers and passengers of the Mariposa toward himself and his crew. A concert was given in aid of the shipwrecked mariners, and the sum of $318.75 realized on their behalf.

"The North Star was of seventy-four tons register, built at Bath, Me., in 1884, and carried no insurance. It was learned from Captain Broughton that she had been employed in the copra trade for many years, and was on her way to this port for drydocking and repairs. Western bound ship masters are warned to look out for the derelict, which was still afloat when last sighted."

The loss of the North Star, together with the coin in the ship's safe, cost Matt between $18,000 and $20,000. The vessel had not been insured, owing to the troublesome and prying questions that would have been asked, which, if truthfully answered, would have invalidated the policy. Had it not been for the ruby ring on his finger and his portion of the small sum raised by the passengers of the Mariposa he would have landed in San Francisco utterly penniless. As it was his crew and he became dependent on a seamen's charitable institution. While others had talked and telephoned and promised vague assistance, leaving the poor castaways shivering on the wharf in a circle of newspaper men and photographers, it was the Rev. John Thompson, crisply English and bustlingly practical, who descended on them, checked off their names in a notebook and led them away like so many sheep.

After a night under this kindly but somewhat austere roof Matt sneaked away in the morning to try to pawn his ring. He hated to part with it, yet what else was he to do? He had not even an overcoat, and here it was January and piercingly cold. He had nothing—not a toothbrush, not a spare shirt.

His chief preoccupation, however, was there to avoid being cheated in the disposal of the ring, for, though he had little knowledge of jewels, the stone seemed to him of unusual fire and purity and evidently was very valuable.

He determined to pick out the biggest and most fashionable jewelry store and, explaining his position, ask the favor of their expert advice. They might be obliging enough to tell him what the gem was worth and thus help him materially. Matt knew San Francisco well and accordingly chose Snood & Hargreaves for his objective. His entrance, which he attempted to make as inconspicuous as possible, caused an undercurrent of commotion in this splendid establishment. As he paused at a case of napkin rings, nerving himself for a further advance into the glittering stronghold, he was bumped into by a passing gentleman, and as he was receiving the apologies of the passing gentleman a hand from behind felt for a possible revolver or bomb in his rear pocket. It was all so quickly and coolly done that Matt had hardly time to realize he was under suspicion.

A large, imposing mirror gave him the clew, for there, at full length, he saw what a deeply tanned, wild haired, ragged desperado he appeared and saw also with the tail of his eye a scurry of pale employees to guard the exits and block his escape.

Flushing to the eyes, more with shame than anger, and still closely followed by the store detective, he made his way to the nearest clerk.

CHAPTER II.

The Ruby Ring.

"I AM Captain Broughton of the shipwrecked schooner North Star," he explained. "All I had went down with my ship except this ring, and I should be glad to get some idea of its value so that the pawnbrokers can't cheat me."

"It's hardly in our line," snapped the clerk. "Expert valuation is a business in itself, and"—

The conversation was interrupted by a bald, oldish man, who, with an air of authority, demanded to know what was the matter. On its being explained, he took up the ring, looked at it with some surprise and asked Matt if he belonged to the people that had been rescued at sea by the mail steamer.

"Yes," said Matt, smiling, "and though appearances are against me, I am neither one of the James brothers nor a bandit."

The man thawed at this and requested Matt to step into his private office.

"I am Mr. Snood," he said, "the managing partner of this concern." As soon as they were inside the office and seated, Mr. Snood examined the ring carefully.

"Where did you get this?" he asked suddenly, raising his keen eyes to Matt's face.

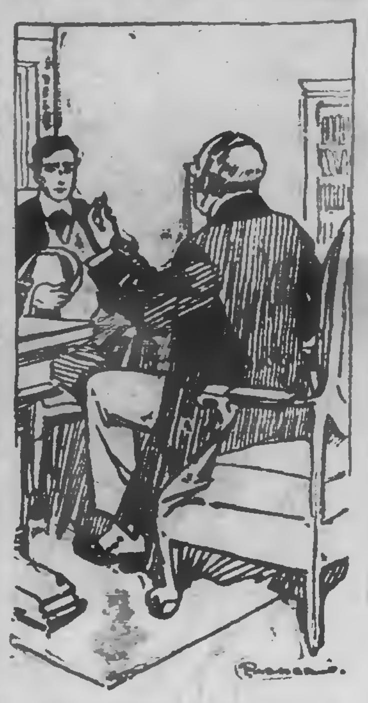
"It was given to me."

"Permit me to inquire by whom?"

"My employer—the gentleman whose ship I lost."

"Why did he give it to you?"

"I was leaving his service. I had been associated with him for years. He held me in very great esteem and made me a present of the ring on my departure."



"We'll advance you $4,000 on it."

"He's a very rich man—this employer?"

"Oh, yes; very rich indeed."

"Then you have no reason to doubt that this ring was—er—legitimately acquired?"

"No one who knew him could ever doubt that. Why, it would be utterly incredible."

"You must pardon me for asking these questions," went on Mr. Snood in a kinder tone. "It's a good plan to be careful, you know. After all, it is to your own interest as well as ours, isn't it?"

"Quite so," assented Matt, hoping that Mr. Snood would soon come to the point.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said the latter, hesitating and examining the ring again with evident admiration. "Mind, I'm not saying you mightn't get a better offer elsewhere, but this is the best Snood & Hargreaves can do for you. We'll advance you $4,000 on it at 7 per cent interest, and we'll engage to buy it outright, now or later, for $5,500."

This was so much more than Matt had ever dreamed of that he could only gasp. Fifty-five hundred dollars! He had thought vaguely of a couple of thousand, trembling at his own presumption. Fifty-five hundred dollars! Why, that was a fortune—not that he wished to sell the ring except in the last extremity, nor, as he bewilderingly considered the proposal, did he care to take so large an advance as $4,000. The interest charges would soon grow beyond his powers to meet them, and the ring would be irretrievably lost. Explaining his perplexities to Mr. Snood, it was finally agreed that he was to be advanced a thousand dollars only, with the privilege of selling the ring at any time he wished for the larger sum.

A little later he left the store with fifty twenty-dollar gold pieces weighing down his pockets and the following memorandum pinned carefully inside his waistcoat:

San Francisco, Jan. 24, 1904.

Messrs. Snood & Hargreaves hereby acknowledge the receipt of a solitaire ruby ring, of an antique, oriental setting, from its owner, Captain Matthew Broughton, who, in consideration of one thousand ($1,000) dollars advanced to him today by Messrs. S. & H. on security of said ring, and receipt by Captain Broughton hereby acknowledged, agrees to pay S. & H. 7 per cent interest semiannually on said loan.

GEORGE H. SNOOD,
For Snood & Hargreaves.
MATTHEW BROUGHTON.

Matt returned to the windy street in far better spirits than he had left it. He had $1,000 in his pockets; $4,500 more to draw on if need be; and best of all he could now "go home." It was a strange instinct that called him back to Manaswan, in the east, for there was not a single tie that bound him to the place unless it were his parents' graves. But after years of wandering, of contented exile, of acquiescence in the life he had made for himself, something within him had at last revolted. Homesick, heartsick, weary of palms and reeds and naked savages, Manaswan appeared to him as the solution of this subtle malady of the soul. At Manaswan a miracle would happen, and he would be happy. The first use he made of his money was to buy his ticket.

He gave the clergyman $500 to assure the safe return of the natives to their various islands; and that afternoon the honest, devoted fellows, in charge of nine-year-old Master Thompson, accompanied him across the bay to cheer his departure on the Overland. Standing there in a line of nine, marshaled by that little white boy, they presented a singular spectacle on the platform, what with the earrings in their ears, two with tattooed faces, and all weeping copiously. Nor was the effect diminished by their singing a resounding hymn, and then listening, with bowed heads, to the prayer Tanielu, the Tongan, offered up amid the jostle of trunks and passengers. Matt's own eyes were dim as the train moved away, and there was a very real lump in his throat. Why was he going to Manaswan while everything he valued lay behind him? Why was he leaving tried and true friends for strangers? An island fairyland for a prim little Connecticut town? Yet his resolution did not waver, and he was inspirited by the thought that in five days he would be "home."

Matt was less disillusioned by his birthplace than might have been expected. The snowy landscape, the sluggish river, with its frozen shallows, the icicled and silent pines, the delight of hearing sleigh bells and watching the bright animation of scenes so long unfamiliar—all were satisfying to the craving that possessed him. On the human side, however, Manaswan was disappointing. No one seemed to care particularly whether he had come back or not. The most cordial greeting he received came from an old gentleman who mistook him for some one else. In fact, Matt remembered Manaswan a great deal better than Manaswan remembered him, and when he wrote to Washington and learned that both his uncle and aunt had long been dead he felt lonelier than ever.

Matt took up his quarters in Mrs. Sattane's boarding house on Jefferson avenue and fell into an aimless, drifting sort of life, in which the dinner bell was the most important part of the day. He took long tramps, assiduously read the daily paper, interested himself in the other boarders and vaguely turned over schemes for his future. With $4,500 he could surely make some kind of start somewhere. But what precise form of "start" and what "somewhere?"

Meanwhile he smoked his pipe and made friends with the other boarders. The principal of these was Hunter Hoyt, a genial, fat old scamp of fifty, never altogether sober, though varyingly drunk, who in his palmy days had been a sensational journalist of some celebrity in the newspaper world of New York and San Francisco. Drink had been his ruin, and he was now doing reporter work for the local Manaswan paper, the Banner. Shabby, jolly and always with a flower in his buttonhole and a pleasant (if often inarticulate) word for everybody, Hoyt was one of those irresistible nuisances who are popular when better men are not. He never paid Mrs. Sattane more than half his bill; his engagement with the Banner was almost in the nature of alms to fallen greatness; the liquor dealers allowed him to fine them an incalculable number of bottles of whisky. Even the flower he was so particular about was never paid for, except by an amiable condescension that Signor Tony Frendo perforce accepted in lieu of cash. There was everywhere a contemptuous affection for the old scallawag, whose courtly ways and husky compliments made him an especial favorite of the women.

Hunter Hoyt took an instant fancy to Matt and in many ways, some of them pathetic enough, sought to win his regard. In spite of his decadence there were often times when Hoyt could be both clever and entertaining. When with the right level of whisky in his sodden old carcass he could regain his former powers and astonish one with his mocking, humorous, brilliant flow of talk. It was then that contempt changed to admiration, and intimacy followed. Except in regard to John Mort, Matt kept nothing back from the old fellow, who was insatiable in his questions and as fascinated by the younger man's past as any boy.

Matt had no conception of what a picturesque figure he was to those watery, bleared old eyes, nor how sincerely Hunter Hoyt adored him. As for his own looks, he had long ceased to give them much thought. At thirty-one most men have outgrown that. He was scarcely aware that his fine, sensitive face was recovering the color it had lost in the tropics or that his vigorous frame and broad shoulders and wavy, clustering black hair were likely to attract favorable attention. The key to his whole character and the underlying cause of his charming manners could be found in the modest estimate he had of himself. The principal endeavor of the naval academy is to teach the midshipman he is a person of very small importance, who is to do what he is told, keep his mouth shut and respect the flag, and Matt had not wholly outlived this youthful training which had been put in his bones to stay.

(To be continued.)

It was stated authoritatively yesterday that President Wilson will veto the immigration bill because of the literacy act.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case".

MRS. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson V.—First Quarter, For Jan. 31, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Judg. xiii, 8-16, 24, 25—Memory Verses, 12-14—Golden Text, Judg. xiii, 4—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This is another record of the Lord delivering His people by a strange instrument, strong physically, but very weak spiritually; one who might have been a very great man for God if he had kept himself wholly for God, yet honorable mention is made of him in Heb. xi, 32. The story of Samson covers four chapters, xiii to xvi, of which our lesson chapter tells of the announcement of his coming, his birth and growth to manhood. The other three chapters tell of his doings, and whatever was worth while was by the Spirit of the Lord, who is mentioned four times (xiii, 25; xiv, 6, 19; xv, 14).

It was during the longest period of Israel's oppression that Samson was born and when he came to manhood began to deliver Israel. They did evil again in the sight of the Lord and were oppressed by the Philistines forty years (verse 1). The messenger from heaven, who appeared first to Manoah's wife and later to Manoah, is mentioned fourteen times and is called the angel of the Lord ten times, the angel of God twice and the man of God twice. When asked his name by Manoah he replied it is "Wonderful" (verse 18, margin and R. V., text), which is the same name as in Isa. ix, 6, so that we recognize the Son of God, whose goings forth have been from of old, from the days of eternity (Mic. v, 2), who appeared to Gideon, to Moses, to Joshua and others.

As here He appeared first to Manoah's wife, it is at least most interesting to note that He is first called "the angel of the Lord" in His appearing to Hagar, and it is written that "she called the name of the Lord, who spake unto her, Thou God seest me" (Gen. xvi, 7-13). This was also in connection with a child to be born, who was the first named before his birth, and there were just six others so named. It is worthy of note that as Manoah and his wife had no child, so it was also with Zacharias and Elizabeth, and in some respects the boys were similar (compare lesson verses 4, 5 and Luke i, 13-17).

There is more in these Bible records than any of us have yet seen, and some day in the kingdom we will be surprised at their significance. We may not be able to tell why this man and his wife of the tribe of Dan were chosen to be thus honored, but possibly they were devout, like the father and mother of John the Baptist. We may judge from lesson verse 8 that Manoah knew the Lord and knew how to pray and obtain an answer. The lesson is called a temperance lesson because his wife was forbidden to drink wine or strong drink (verses 4, 14) or to eat anything that cometh of the vine or anything unclean. The child was to be a Nazarite unto God all his life (verses 5, 7). 5, 7).

The essential thought of such consecration was separation unto the Lord, and the full requirement is given in Num. vi, where it is seen that either man or woman might take such a vow, but if they became defiled the days of their defilement were lost (verse 12). It was a vow only for a time, and when fulfilled the Nazarite might drink wine (verses 13, 20). In the case of Samson he was to be a Nazarite from birth to death, but he became defiled through his fellowship with Delilah (chapter xvi, 17-20). There were few Nazarites, and our Lord Jesus was the only perfect one in the sense of being wholly and always separated unto God.

Because it is so costly to be a disciple (Luke xiv, 26, 27, 33) there are few disciples. It seems so much easier to be in some measure conformed to this present evil age than to be wholly separated from it. Yet the Lord is ever looking for any willing ones that He may show Himself strong in their behalf (II Chron. xvi, 9). The Holy Spirit, the same who came upon Samson from time to time and who dwells in every true believer, has a greater desire to fill us than any of us can desire to be filled, for it is written, "The Spirit whom He made to dwell in us yearneth for us even unto jealous envy (Jas. iv, 5, R. V., margin), but the previous verse shows us that the great hindrance is the friendship of this world.

It is the valley of Sorek or the lap of Delilah or some such phase of worldliness that hinders us from being what He would like us to be. Samson was not in appearance a strong man, for had he been such the Philistines would not have wondered at his strength nor inquired the secret of it (chapter xvi, 5). As his birth was a special gift from God to his parents, as in the case of Isaac and John the Baptist, so was his great physical strength. We must first be born of God, born from above, and then if we are willing to be wholly separated unto Him He will work in us mightily both to will and to do.

It is the privilege of every true believer to be strengthened with all might by His Spirit in the inner man; to be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. But this can only be when we know our own weakness and cease to have any confidence in ourselves and yield fully to Him.

GRAND ATTACK WAS MISSING

Assaults on Ypres and La Bassee May Have Been Intended as Such But They Are Easily Repulsed By the British —French Detachments Are Cut Off by a Landslide at La Creute.

LONDON, Jan. 28. — Nothing has been heard of the military venture which it was reported the Germans were preparing for Emperor William's birthday, unless their attacks on the French at Ypres and on the British at La Bassee were intended as such. All the official accounts agree that these attacks were very severe ones, but beyond this there is nothing in common between the accounts of the allies and the Germans concerning the fighting.

The French communication last night repeats the statement that the Germans were repulsed with heavy losses, while the Germans say the British were unable to recapture their former positions.

Similar contradictory statements are made regarding the severe fighting which is taking place near Craonne and Perthes, in the Argonne, and in the vicinity of St. Mihiel. In all these cases both sides claim that the battles resulted in their favor.

The French War Office issued the following last night:

"The enemy attempted a sudden attack last night (Tuesday) in the St. Mard wood, in the region of Tracy-le-Val (northwest of Soissons). After a violent fusilade the Germans exploded mines which destroyed our trenches for a distance of about 50 metres, but they were not able to establish themselves by reason of the dominating fire of our artillery.

"These trenches have been reoccupied and put in order.

To the west of Craonne the night was calm. The fighting on Jan. 25 and 26 in this region presented the following character: After a prolonged and intense bombardment with projectiles of large calibre and bombs, the German infantry delivered an attack on the Heurtebise-Bois-de-Foulon front, but were repulsed everywhere with heavy losses, except at La Creute. A landslide, caused by the storm of immense projectiles, obstructed the entrance of an old quarry, which served as a storehouse and shelter for the garrison of our trenches at La Creute. Two companies of these troops were taken prisoner there.

"The enemy having thus gained a foothold at La Creute penetrated the Foulon wood and rendered untenable the neighboring trenches, which we have evacuated.

"The counter-attacks which we delivered over a good part of the ground lost were brilliant. The ardor of our troops was beyond all praise. The enemy suffered very great losses and left on the field 1,000 dead. The prisoners taken belonged to five different regiments, which is an indication of the importance of the attack.

"In the Argonne near St. Hubert a German attack failed. During the day three new attacks were executed within two hours, every one of them being vigorously repulsed.

"The night of Jan. 26-27 was calm in Alsace and the Vosges. There is nothing of importance to communicate on the rest of the front."

SPIES FOUND AMONG NURSES

Americans With German Sympathies Arrested in France

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Nursing Mirror, one of the organs of trained nurses in Britain, calls attention to the danger of spies masquerading as nurses, and adds that Lord Kitchener himself is aware of this menace, and caused an investigation to be made at one of the Southampton hospitals some weeks ago. There he found, according to the journal, that four women had been indiscreet in the matter of discussing subjects relative to the army. While they were not spies, they showed so little common sense that they were dismissed.

On the other side of the Channel the state of affairs has been more serious. Two nurses were recently found to be out-and-out spies. Both were Americans with German sympathies, according to The Nursing Mirror, and both, it says, were "effectually dealt with." Just what this implies was not made clear.

Stock Yards Closed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — Orders closing the Pittsburg and Chicago stock yards because of new infections of foot and mouth disease, were given out yesterday by the Department of Agriculture. The yards probably will be closed a week.

Cattle may be still received at the yards for immediate slaughter, however, and the newest order merely stops outgoing traffic while there is danger of spreading the infection.

Doctor's Breakfast

"My breakfast"—says a physician—"consists of a dish of Grape-Nuts, one or two eggs, or fruit."

A good breakfast, that, with the cereal part so nourishing—so full of the rich food value of prime wheat and barley.

Grape-Nuts is remarkably easy of digestion—about one hour, as against 2½ to 3 hours for ordinary bread.

Comes ready to eat, crisp, delicious, economical. Good at any meal.

CELEBRATION IS SOLEMN

Festivities on Kaiser's Birthday Take Gloomy Turn

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Emperor William's birthday was celebrated with enthusiasm in Berlin yesterday, although with a degree of solemnity which would not have been expected in times of peace. A Reuter despatch from Amsterdam transmits a telegram from Berlin describing the celebration. The city was decked with flags. Members of the diplomatic corps, court officials and representatives of the state and municipal governments attended a service at the cathedral. Crown Princess Cecilie and Prince August William attended the service and were cheered enthusiastically. A reception was held later in the city hall. The Emperor's birthday was celebrated generally in the other cities of the Empire.

Religious services were held at the headquarters of Emperor William, where he delivered an address expressing his satisfaction with the progress of the war and in which he asked his officers to continue to discharge their duties to the Emperor and the fatherland as they hitherto had done.

The Berlin newspapers, including the Socialist organs, publish warm eulogies of the Emperor and predict that he will emerge from the war not only victorious, but with his reputation considerably enhanced.

Empress Augusta Victoria sent a long, affectionately worded telegram to the Emperor. As a birthday present she forwarded him a cover for a field altar designed by herself.

Emperor William received telegrams of congratulation during the day from Emperor Francis Joseph and the Sultan of Turkey.

REBELS WORE GERMAN UNIFORM

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The South African rebels under Col. Maritz, who were overwhelmingly defeated in a second attack on Upington Tuesday, were dressed in German uniforms, says a despatch from Cape Town. The force under Col. Maritz, the last of the rebels in the Union of South Africa, made their escape into German territory after their defeat on Oct. 27, and the attack on Upington, just across the border into Beuchuanaland on Monday, was their first aggressive movement since that time.

The fire of the Cape artillery was magnificent. Nine of the rebels were killed and the rest surrendered.

Factory Is Destroyed.

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—The comparatively new five-storey building of the Rudd Paper Box Co., 374 West Richmond street, was almost completely destroyed by fire, which is thought to have originated in the engine room about 12.30 yesterday afternoon. The damage to the building, stock, and equipment is about $125,000. Robt. McKinnon, driver for the Rudd Company, was the only employe injured in the fire, and he sustained cuts on his face and hands in fighting his way out of the basement after the heat exploded the windows.

Baron von Burian, the new Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has been decorated by Emperor William with the order of the Black Eagle.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

(Special Correspondence.)

Norwood, Jan. 28. — A case of some local interest was heard this (Tuesday) afternoon at the town hall here before County Magistrate Langley, in which Mr. Joseph Marshall, a C. P. R. constable, charged William Nesbitt and Kenneth Kavanagh, both young men living near Indian River C. P. R. station, with trespassing on the company's property. It apears that for some time past certain young fellows have been gathering at the station and making themselves obnoxious to the agent and others, so much so that the detective was sent for, to try and apprehend the guilty parties. Saturevening, January 16th, Constable Marshall dropped off the Port McNichol local at Indian River and took the names of two young men who were in the station at the time, and entered action. Both young men were able, however, to clear themselves of the charge and brought witnesses to prove that they were there for legitimate purposes, having been sent to meet friends whom they expected to meet on the Tweed local. The magistrate, after hearing the evidence on both sides, found that the charges had not been substantiated, and dismissed the cases without costs. This will be a warning to people who may have been using the C. P. R. station for other purposes than what it is intended for.

A couple of rinks of Norwood curlers intend going to Hastings on Friday evening of this week to try conclusions with the Hastings brethren. We expect to send at least three rinks to the Peterborough bonspiel next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The games in the Union Bank Cup competition are being run off as quickly as possible.

On Monday evening of this week J. R. McKelvin defeated Thos. Watson in a closely contested game by 11 to 9. C. I. Puffer defeated T. Finley on Saturday evening by 10 to 5. Two games will be played tonight. T. G. Finlay vs. J. R. McKelvie at 7 o'clock, and Thos. Watson vs. C. I. Puffer at 9 o'clock.

Lovers of the game are taking a lively interest in the games being played, a large number of spectators being present to witness each game.

Rev. T. W. F. G. Andrews of Toronto, spent Saturday at his home in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Feorge E. Mills entertained a number of young people at their home on Queen street on Thursday evening.

Messrs. M. McNeely and J. McNichol attended the hockey boys' dance in Havelock last Wednesday evening.

On Monday night the Presbyterian guild joined with the Methodist Epworth leaguers and supplied a very interesting program. Miss Broatch gave a very instructive address on the life and work of Pauline Johnson, after which Miss Helen Anderson recited one of her poems. Miss Allan also gave a very interesting paper on the life of Jane Austin, which was very much appreciated. During the evening short addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Wolland and Rev. Mr. Irwin, and a solo, "My Little Pink Rose," was beautifully rendered by Miss Isobel Robb. At the conclusion the social committee of the league served light refreshments, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

A FAREWELL GATHERING.

The members of the Baptist church and congregation, the Sunday school and the B. Y. P. U. were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Waddell to bid farewell to Miss Pearl Mathews prior to her departure for Kingston. A very enjoyable social time was spent in games in the early part of the evening, after which the audience was treated to several readings by Miss W. Rorabeck, Mr. J. Simpson of Campbellford and Miss V. Would. At this time Miss Mathews was asked to step forward. Mr. Ernest Patterson, from the Sunday school, then read the following address:

Dear Miss Mathews:

It was with a feeling of deep regret that we learned of your intention to leave our midst to train for a nurse in a hospital at Kingston. During your stay of three years among us you have faithfully endeavored to do your part in the working out of God's plans in this little part of His vineyard, but your ambitious and progressive spirit is leading you to another part, to a different work, but we know you will carry with you the same helpful Christian spirit which characterized you here, and we trust you will always be the kind, useful worker you were in the Norwood Baptist Church.

We will always look back with real enjoyment to the times spent together with you in the Sunday School, B.Y.P.U., choir, church and socially, and our hearts will be as warm to you in future as they are today. (We trust warmer.)

You will be greatly missed in each of the departments of the church in which you have always been interested and in which you have taken such an active part, so we take this opportunity of conveying to you some expression of our united love and to express in a tangible form our appreciation of your valuable services. We ask you kindly to accept this little gift as a slight token of the attachment we each hold in our hearts for you.

(Here the presentation of a German silver brush set, comb and mirror was made by Miss Vida McNaughton.)

We sincerely trust each time you may use them it may remind you of your many warm friends in Norwood who have only the kindest thoughts for you.

We earnestly pray for God's richest blessings to rest on you always. May He ever keep you faithful and may your life on earth be such a success that you will be admitted to that higher school where there are no partings.

Signed on behalf of the S. S., choir, B.Y.P.U. and church.

MRS. E. J. PATTERSON,
VIDA McNAUGHTON.

Miss Mathews although taken wholly by surprise made a suitable reply thanking her friends for their many kindnesses and thoughtfulness towards her.

Refreshments were then served at which a toast to Miss Mathews' health and success was proposed by Mr. G. Patterson, the superintendent of the S. S. and responded to by Mr. Earnest Hall. Before separating all joined in singing "Blest be the tide that Binds."

NEWS NOTES FROM OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Jan. 28. — There seems to be no end of entertainment for the residents of this busy little town. There is some special attraction every night in the week which one can enjoy.

On Saturday night, January 23rd, Omemee had a chance to hear what is reputed to be one of the leading musical companies of the Dominion, the Jubilee Singers. Being under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church, it probably drew a larger crowd than it would have drawn had it been run independently. The concert itself was interesting, and some really splendid numbers were rendered. The most brilliant performer of the troupe is undoubtedly Mr. Gerard Millar, the famous basso. His rendering of "Some Old Love Letters" and "The Bell in the Lighthouse" was beyond criticism. Mr. Williams, the entertainer, is exceptionally witty, and his dialect selections kept the crowd in roars of laughter. The remainder of the company are above the ordinary as performers, and on the whole they give an interesting and profitable concert.

On Sunday evening the Jubilee Singers assisted in the service at the Presbyterian Church. Gerard Millar, who is a Methodist minister, occupied the pulpit and preached a splendid sermon. The company gave several selections of sacred music and were given an extra good hearing by the large congregation which assembled.

Rev. A. McLauchlin of Toronto occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church Sunday morning and the pastor spoke in the evening. The morning subject was "What a truly wonderful man this was," that of the evening being "Godliness."

The pulpit of the Anglican Church was honored by the presence of Rev. F. E. Lynch, rector of the Church of the Advent, Toronto.

Miss Laura Down has returned to her home, after a two weeks' visit in Toronto.

The Rural Deanery of the Anglican Church held session on Tuesday evening, January 26th. Keen disappointment was felt over the absence of Rev. Dr. Ellot of Port Hope, who was unavoidably detained. The meeting was well attended, and those who went were amply repaid. One of the finest addresses upon the war that has been delivered to an Omemee audience was given by Rev. Mr. French of Bobcaygeon. The subject was, "The causes and course of the present European war." Rev. Canon Marsh of Lindsay was present and assisted.

If you are out for real fun, don't miss the carnival Thursday night, Jan. 28th. There will be good ice and a splendid time. Prizes will be given for the best gentleman's costume and the best lady's costume. Prizes will be given for the costumes representing each one of the allied nations, England, France, Canada, Belgium, Russia, Australia, etc. This is your night for a prize. Be sure and come.

Mrs. (Dr.) Thompson and Miss E. Thompson are making a visit with friends in Toronto.

Miss Mulligan of Peterborough is visiting her uncle, Mr. R. J. Mulligan.

We must extend our heartiest congratulations to Mr. R. J. Mulligan upon his latest triumph. He has just been elected warden for the ensuing year.

Those who are interested in Methodist Sunday school work should not fail to attend the district convention to be held in the church Thursday, February 4th. Afternoon and evening sessions will be held, and arrangements are being made for the billeting of delegates from outside points. The field secretary will be in charge.

Mr. D. H. Currie and Mr. D. A. Merner, of the Bank of Toronto staff, spent Sunday with friends in Peterborough.

CHANGE OF MEN CAUSES DELAY

But the Unemployed Are Being Benefitted

There is a remote possibility that some of the aldermen do not read the daily papers. At any rate last evening's meeting of the Board of Works found a couple of the city dads enquiring if the men on the outfall sewer were being changed every two weeks. City Engineer Parsons stated that such was the case and that this action had been taken ever since the work was begun. Ald. McIntyre thought that changing the men would help to delay the work. Ald. Green agreed with him but reminded the board that the work was commenced for the purpose of supplying work for the unemployed and the men must be changed.

City Engineer Parsons remarked that some of the men he is employing are far from being fit for the job. "If I was doing the work by contract I certainly would not let good men out at the end of two weeks," he remarked.

PRISONERS SAY NAVAL VICTORY WAS GREATER THAN FIRST REPORTED

Sir David Beatty, in Fuller Report of North Sea Battle, Says Over-Salvos From British Ships Are Believed to Have Sunk Light Cruiser—Seydlitz, Moltke and Derfflinger in a Bad Plight.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The extent of the British naval victory is much greater than at first reported. According to reports of naval officers who were engaged and have been brought to London, Germany now, through the damage done to the Derfflinger, Seydlitz and Moltke and the sinking of the Blucher, and with the Von der Tann in dock on account of a recent collision, has not got a single battle cruiser ready for action. The Derfflinger, Seydlitz and Moltke were all badly damaged, according to these stories of officers who participated in the fight, and it will take some weeks to repair them, particularly as the German dockyards are short of labor. They also have suffered severely in loss of men. The Seydlitz, according to reliable information received in London, arrived at Kiel with 200 dead aboard.

The Admiralty have received the following preliminary telegraphic report from Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, regarding the naval action between the British and German squadrons in the North Sea on Sunday:

"A flotilla of destroyers, patrolling about 7.30 o'clock in the morning, sighted and attacked the enemy, whose force, according to the reports received, consisted of four battle cruisers and some destroyers. Their position when sighted was approximately 14 miles east southeast of our battle cruiser squadron.

"Orders were given by signal to the destroyer flotilla to chase the enemy and to report their movements. As it appeared that they had at once commenced to retire to the east southeast, the battle cruisers were directed to steer southeast, with a view to securing the lee position and to cutting the enemy off if possible. The situation developed by degrees into a stern chase.

"Speed was worked up to 28 or 29 knots and the enemy were gradually being overhauled. At about 18,000 yards a slow and deliberate fire was opened, and we began to hit at a range of 17,000 yards. Our fire was returned by the enemy.

"The Lion and the Tiger, having drawn ahead of the remainder of the squadron, were in action alone for some time, and consequently were subjected to the enemy's concentrated fire, more particularly the Lion, which ship suffered more as a result.

"The other vessels, as they drew up, engaged the enemy. A German flotilla of destroyers was disposed on the starboard beam of their cruisers, and an attack by them was driven off.

"At about 11 o'clock, unfortunately, a lucky shot damaged one of the Lion's feed tanks, causing the port engine to be stopped. At the same time the enemy's submarines were observed on the starboard bow and a course was steered in order to avoid them.

"The Blucher (German), was now in a critical condition, with her speed reduced, and the Indomitable, which had now come up, was directed to complete her destruction.

"The rest of the squadron were directed to attack the rear of the enemy. The Lion, with escort, steered to the northwest, steaming with one engine, and I transferred my flag to one of the destroyers, and subsequently to the Princess Royal. Through the damage to the Lion's feed tank by an unfortunate chance shot, we were undoubtedly deprived of a greater victory. The presence of the enemy's submarines subsequently necessitated the action being broken off.

"The result of the action was that the Blucher was sunk and two other battle cruisers were heavily on fire and seriously damaged. The German prisoners reported also that the Kolberg had been sunk by over-salvoes from our squadron.

"Subsequently the starboard engines of the Lion also developed trouble from the same cause as the port engines and the Indomitable took her in tow and brought her into port. The damage to the Lion and the Tiger is in neither case serious, and repairs can be completed in a short time. The remainder of the squadron were not hit.

"The casualties were very slight. The death of Engineer Captain Taylor, whose services have been invaluable, is deeply regretted.

"The behavior of officers and men was only what was expected, and great credit is due to the engine room staffs for the fine steaming of the squadron.

"According to a trustworthy authority the condition of the German battle cruisers Seydlitz and Derfflinger when the pursuit was abandoned owing to the approach of the German mine fields, was desperate in the extreme. The Derfflinger was reported to have been torpedoed by a British destroyer, and it was considered questionable whether she would be able to reach the safety of the mine fields.

"The battering of the German ships was said by this authority to have been rather underrated than exaggerated. Two of the German destroyers, it was asserted, were so badly damaged by the British fire that they could not long remain afloat."

Death of Alfred Pelland.

QUEBEC, Jan. 28. — Alfred Pelland, publicist, attached to the Provincial Department of Mines and Fisheries, died rather unexpectedly yesterday morning at his home here from acute disease of the stomach. He had been sick but a couple of days, and his condition had never been regarded as serious.

BUGLER MEETS HIS DEATH

LONDON, Jan. 28. — A dramatic story of a Canadian bugler's death is told at Salisbury to-day. The victim was George Dean, aged 16, bugler of the 17th Battalion. The night previous he was riding in a small automobile with John Alexander Campbell of the Canadian Dragoons. They came to a halt through engine trouble beside a big motor lorry left on the roadway a derelict, and without lights. There then came along in another car Sergt. McIvor, Sergt. Smylie, also Canadians, who, trying to avoid the lorry, disarranged the steering gear. Their car first ran into the hedge, then crashed back upon the small car, which turned completely over. Dean was killed outright, and Campbell was gravely injured. The coroner's jury's verdict was accidental death.

Despite the announcement that the Boer uprising in South Africa has been completely crushed, the rebels in Bechuanaland are still fighting against overwhelming forces.

ACTIVITY IS RENEWED.

Russians Moving Steadily Towards German Base at Thorn.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 28.—A renewed activity by the Russian army in the Mazurian Lake region and a continuation of the movement of forces in northern Poland along the Mlawa-Soldau railway line and toward Thorn is reported.

The success of the great advance along the right bank of the Vistula requires that the Russians gain control of the Poland-East Prussian border. The main body of the new army is strengthening its positions along the frontier before Thorn with the approaches to Wloclawek, where the only bridge between Plock and the frontier is situated, is in its possession.

In East Prussia the Russians are advancing along the two available routes through the lakes, on the Lyck-Loetzen line and on the Bialla-Johannisburg line.

Along the line before Warsaw the Germans are on the defensive and are being heavily pressed at two points. In southern Poland the combined Austrian and German forces are endeavoring to make a demonstration of strength.

Roumania, which has just received a loan of $25,000,000 through the Bank of England, is said to be watching closely the concentration of the Austro-German force in Transylvania, which might be used either against her or the Russians, who are advancing through Bukowina.

Huge Food Shortage.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—A shortage of 76,000 tons of food for the relief of Belgian refugees must be made up within the next three months by the commission for relief in Belgium or many people will perish, Vice-Chairman Bates announced yesterday to relief committees throughout the U. S. The commission here was apprised of the inadequacy of the food supply by a cable message from London.

The latest casualty in the Canadian Expeditionary Force is the death on Jan. 26th of No. 27519, Pte. Charles R. MacKenzie, 15th Battalion, at No. 1 Canadian General Field Hospital, Netheravon, from bronchopneumonia.

SITTINGS ADJOURNED

Board of Arbitrators Meet Again February 15th

The Board of Arbitrators, composed of His Honor Judge Huycke, chairman Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, Toronto, and R. A. Ross, C.E., of Montreal, which is determining the price the city of Peterborough will pay the Peterborough Light and Power Co. for their property, adjourned at one o'clock today till February 15th or 16th. The exact date will be set at the convenience of the arbitrators and solicitors.

The evidence of W. S. Hawkins, managing director and chief engineer of the Dominion Power and Transmission Co. of Hamilton was the last to be taken and it concluded the company's side of the case. When the Board sits again the city will present its side.

The morning's session of the Board of Arbitrators was taken up by the cross examination of Mr. Harold Al. Almest by Solicitor Cowan. In the box, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Almest stated he went over the figures of Mr. Sayce who valuated the property of the company and in all cases he found the prices to be very conservative. Mr. Cowan endeavored to ascertain how Mr. Almest arrived at the price the city should pay for the expropriated property of the company.

Witness stated that he figured on a supposed comparative plant erected in 1915 and carried forward until it would reach a condition similar to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. when taken over by the Utilities Commission.

Mr. Almest further pointed out that in his figures he did not include the educating of the citizens to the use of electric lights. He figured merely on running the pole line down a street and leaving the people waiting to be served.

Solicitor Cowan asked witness to suppose the Peterborough Light and Power Co. to be just self-supporting, making no profit or no loss. The counsel for the city desired to learn when a condition such as this prevailed, how he (Almest) would figure the cost.

Mr. Almert answered that the cost would be lower, lower than in this case.

"How much lower?"

"That I would not state."

Want More Lights.

Alderman Weir brought up the question of better lighting for Engleburn Ave., East City. The lights that were there failed to extend as far down the street as there were houses built and consequently it was in total darkness for considerable distance. Alderman Evans supported his brother alderman in this request. Following a discussion a motion was passed, "That the attention of the Utilities Commission be called to the unfavourable lighting in the city and that the committee request the commission to inform the council as soon as possible what system of street lighting they would recommend and what it would cost."

The consideration of the estimates for the department was laid over. It was decided to order at once a new set of wheels and axles for the ladder wagon belonging to the fire department and have whatever painting done that was required. The Chief was also authorized to get in touch with several hose manufacturers and obtain their prices, the manufacturers to guarantee that the wire therein would be satisfactory for the purposes required.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ALL FOOD IS CONTRABAND

Germany's Action Prevents Chance of Shippers Evading Britain

LONDON, Jan. 28. — The decision of the German Government to seize stocks of flour and grain makes them absolute contraband instead of conditional contraband, as they were heretofore, argues The London Globe in a leading articles printed yesterday.

"We permitted food to be imported by Germany," the newspaper says, "provided it was intended for the civil population alone, but now that it is to be treated as Government property it becomes absolutely contraband, and vessels carrying food supplies to the enemy's ports, or to neutral ports, from which these cargoes are to pass into Germany, will do so at the peril of capture."

The editorial argues that in view of the new status of flour and grain the American steamer Wilhelmina, which sailed from New York, Jan. 22 with a cargo of food for Germany, has no right to land her supplies at Rotterdam.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Increased difficulty in obtaining wheat thruout the west resulted today in a broad market here and new high record war prices. There was a nervous feeling at the close, which was 1 7-8c to 2½c above last night. Other leading staples, too, all made net gains—corn 5-8c to 1c, oats 1⅛c to 1 7-8c and provisions 7½c to 62½c.

Cornmeal—Yellow, 98-pound sacks, in car lots, $2.10, in small lots, $2.40.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 27.—Futures opened unchanged; in the first ten minutes of business, however, prices were run up over former records and at about noon May was at $1.45¾ and July at $1.46¼ bid.

The bullish sentiment prevailed and responsible brokers, speaking on the subject, said it was a difficult matter to explain the basis of these conditions. There were few or no export sales worked here, but in the south contracts were being fixed for August exports. Oats eclipsed wheat in record-breaking, as yesterday's records were put in the shade this morning entirely. Both months opened at new records, May selling at 68¼c and July at 67⅝c. Further advance took place later. The cash demand for Nos. 2 and 3 northern wheat was good, but offerings were light. A considerable amount of cash wheat has been sold during the last few days.

Inspections yesterday were 142 cars, as against 261 last year, and in sight today were 115.

The weather was cold all over, 43 degrees below zero being recorded at Qu'Appelle and 36 below at Winnipeg.

Wheat futures closed 1¼c [illegible] higher. Cash closed 2¼c to 2⅝c higher on contract grades. Oats closed ⅜c to ⅝c up on the futures and 1c to 1¼c for cash. Flax closed unchanged to 1c to 1½c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 27. — Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were stronger today at an advance of 3d to 6d per quarter, but owing to the continued upward tendency of prices in the Winnipeg market and the limited demand from foreign buyers the volume of business done was small. There was no further change in prices for coarse grains in the local market, but the feeling is still strong and higher values are anticipated in the near future. Demand for oats was somewhat quieter, but on the whole a fair trade was done. The market for spring and winter wheat flour is strong at the recent advance in prices with a fair trade doing. Demand for millfeed continues at firm prices. A more active business was done in cheese. Eggs are firm and higher.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Jan. 27.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 769 cattle, 1502 hogs, 398 sheep and lambs and 49 calves.

Stockers and Feeders.

There is a fairly good demand for feeding steers, about half-fat, weighing from 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6.75 to $7.15; steers, 800 to 850 lbs., at $6 to $6.50; stockers at $5 to $6.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a good demand for milkers and springers at about the same values. Prices ranged from $60 to $90 each, the bulk of sales being made between $65 and $80.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were light and prices firm. Choice veal calves, $9.50 to $10.50; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $8; common, $6 to $7; grass calves, $5 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, $5.25 to $6; heavy ewes, $4 to $4.50; culls, $2.50 to $3.50; lambs, a very few, weighing 80 to 90 lbs. each, sold at $8.75 to $9; but very few at the latter price; heavy lambs, 110 to 130 lbs., $7.75 to $8.50; cull lambs, $6 to $7.

Hogs.

Selects, weighed off cars, sold at $7.90 to $8; selects, fed and watered, $7.60 to $7.75, and $7.20 to $7.30 f.o.b. cars at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 27.—At the C.P.R. live stock market owing to the limited number of cattle offered the market was firmer and prices were slightly higher. Demand was fair, but sales were principally in small lots to fill actual wants. A few good steers sold at $7.50, and the lower grades at from that down to $6, while butchers' cows brought from $5 to $6.50, and bulls from $5 to $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and lambs unchanged. Ontario lambs sold at $8 to $8.25 and Quebec at $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt., and sheep at $5 to $5.50.

Demand for calves good at prices ranging from $6 to $12 each.

Hogs steady, with selected selling at $8.40 to $8.50 per cwt., weighed off cars.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Jan. 27.—Cattle—Receipts, 900; steady; prices unchanged.

Veals—Receipts, 150; active, $4 to $12.

Hogs—Receipts, 6000; heavy, slow; light, active; heavy, $7.10 to $7.25, mixed, $7.25 to $7.50; yorkers, $7.65 to $8; pigs, $7.90 to $8; roughs, $6.25 to $6.65; stags, $5 to $5.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 5000; active; sheep, steady; lambs, $5 to $9.25.

OSHKIGMONG

(Special Correspondence.)

Oshkigmong, Jan. 28. — There was a big turnout last Saturday night to see and listen to a very fine illustrated lecture given by Mr. James Stubbs of Peterborough, in the Chemong town hall. There was an evidence throughout the audience that the entertainment was acceptable and appreciated. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Chemong Sunday school. The following day (Sunday) Mr. Stubbs preached in the morning, and in the afternoon spoke to the children in the Sunday school. At night Mr. Stubbs delighted a very large congregation with his Sabbath evening illustrated service. The church was filled, some being unable to find seats. Mr. Stubbs was kept busy during his stay at Chemong.

Mr. Jeremiah Crow, of Hiawatha, is here visiting his daughter, Mrs. Ben. Taylor.

The entertainment at Chemong will be on the 27th inst. instead of the 28th. The young people are busy preparing the program. There will be a hockey match between Chemong and Buckhorn played early in the afternoon.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

PETERBOROUGH CURLERS PLAYED WELL AT LINDSAY

In a report on the District Cup games at Lindsay the Warder says:

The ice was in good condition and very keen. Peterborough club presented a number of new faces on the line-up, Skips Campbell and Denham being new here. They also had two well-balanced rinks and many dangerous ends were built up. They managed to get wise to the tricky ways of the ice early in the game and consequently were soon at home and playing a steady game. In the early stages of the game Skip Beall's front end played very erratic, but Skip Beall played a number of excellent draws and saved two or three large ends. Later on the rink steadied down and played in splendid fashion. Skip Gregory's quartette played consistently and secured many hard shots after the end appeared to be all bottled up by Peterborough.

Of the Tankard games, the Warder says:—

Later on Peterborough played Millbrook and again won by 16 shots, and, consequently, for the first time in about 15 years Lindsay rinks were defeated in the preliminary play for group honors, and Peterborough will go to Toronto to play in the play down for the finals.

BOWMANVILLE INSISTS THAT LOCAL INTERMEDIATES PLAY GAME

Bowmanville, Jan. 28. — Picton again lead this district by defeating Bowmanville here last night by 11-4. In the first period each team made two goals. The visitors came back strong next period and notched five goals, while the locals made two. Condition told, and in the final period Picton got four more goals. The play was closer than the score indicates, but the winners recovered the puck by quick back checking.

Taft and Hudgin starred for the winners, while Higginbotham, R. Williams and Jones were the pick of the locals. A request came from Peterborough yesterday offering the Bowmanville club $50 to default their game here Friday night, but Manager Taylor refused to entertain such a proposition, although the local team has no chance to win the district. The largest crowd of the season witnessed the game, and a record crowd is expected Friday.

The lineup:

Bowmanville — Goal, Spry; right defence, Jones; left defence, F. Williams; rover, R. Williams; centre, Roenigk; right wing Hooper; left wing, Higginbotham.

Referee—Chad Toms, Toronto.

The Bowmanville club is perfectly within its rights in insisting that the Peterborough club abide by the schedule, and it is no violation of the rules for the local club to make such an offer to Bowmanville. One or more of the local seven might meet accidental injuries in the game, and the team, should they win, would be handicapped in the decisive game for group honors with Picton.

Condensed Language.

"Samoa has an ideal language, and there it was I got my inspiration," says Gelett Burgess in "Burgess Unabridged." "Can't we make English as subtle as Samoan? I wondered. There they have a single word, meaning, 'A-party-is-approaching-which-contains-neither-a-clever-man-nor-a-pretty-woman.' Another beautiful word describes 'A-man-who-climbs-out-on-the-limbs-of-his-own-breadfruit-tree-to-steal-the-breadfruit-of-his-neighbor.' 'Sulia' means 'Change-the-subject-you-are-on-dangerous-ground.' Another happy word expresses a familiar situation, 'To-look-on-owl-eyed-while-others-are-getting-gifts.' Have we anything in English as charmingly tactful as this? No, our tongue is almost as crude as pidgin English itself, where piano is 'Box-you-fight-him-cry.'"

His Second Thought.

A politician named Blank got a place for a clerk during one of the sessions of the legislature of his state. The clerk was very grateful. At the end of the session he came around to Blank and said: "Mr. Blank, I want to tell you how much I am indebted to you for your kindness in getting me the place I have had. It meant more to me, Mr. Blank, than you may think. I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Also I want to say, Mr. Blank, that if there ever comes a time when I can do anything for you—anything at all—you are to command me. I will do anything you may ask me to do. I am at your service."

Blank thanked the man, and he started to go. As he reached the door he turned and said, "Of course, Mr. Blank, I would prefer that it should be something honorable."

Weight After Meals.

There is, or used to be, an idea that one weighs less after a meal than before, but that is nonsense. There is always a definite increase of weight after a meal, and with most people it is curiously uniform. After an average dinner washed down with the average amount of liquid—three-quarters of a pint—the average man will invariably find that he weighs two pounds more than he did before the meal. There seems to be no reason why a really determined diner should not double that increase. A half pint tumbler of water or a breakfast cupful of tea weighs ten ounces, so that probably over half of the two pounds increase of weight after dinner is accounted for by the liquid part of the meal.—Manchester Guardian.

One of the Firm.

A friend of ours went out as a representative of a business firm. He presented his card.

"I'm one of the firm," said he.

"Which one?" said they.

"Well, it's 'Wilson & Co.,'" said he. "I'm the 'and.'"—Milwaukee Free Press.

GABBY IVERS SENDS CONTRACT

First Baseman of Hams Gets in Early

Hamilton, Jan. 28.—Gabby Ivers, the husky first sacker of last year's ball team, is the first of the old players to remit his signed contract to the local club. Gabby's contract came in yesterday and was a welcome spring sign. It has been carefully locked up in the strong box in President Garthwaite's office.

THREE SENIOR GAMES TONIGHT

In the Senior Church League the following games are scheduled for tonight:

Murray Street vs. St. John's.
St. Paul's vs. George Street.
St. Luke's vs. St. Andrew's.

Last Thursday night considerable interest was shown in the three hard-fought games, and tonight, with the above teams so well matched there should be some fine hockey. Make things exciting by coming and cheering for your own church team.

The first game is scheduled to begin at 8.15.

The following is the standing of the league:

—	Won.	Lost.	To play
St. Luke's	3	0	3
George St.	1	0	5
St. John's	1	1	4
Murray St.	1	1	4
St. Andrew's	1	2	3
St. Paul's	0	3	3

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The first skating carnival of the Boys' Department will be held tomorrow night, commencing at eight o'clock. A large number of the boys have their costumes complete, and are confident of carrying off some of the prizes.

A special feature of the carnival will be the skating races for boys 12 years and under, 14 years and under, and a senior race, 16 years and over.

Saturday afternoon the members of the Boys' Department will meet at Jackson Park for afternoon games. Bring your skis and snowshoes. A large turnout of all grades of the Boys' Department is asked for.

Poison of Nicotine

"Tobacco heart" is a condition well known to physicians. It is really a phase of arteriosclerosis, due to excessive smoking, and is generally characterized by angina pectoris, a severe pain in the chest. The New York Medical Record, commenting on some statistics published in Germany by Dr. J. Pawinski, says the important conclusion to be drawn from them is "that tobacco has a certain, possibly a specific, affinity for the coronary arteries." These are the arteries of the heart itself, those that supply its muscles with blood.

That nicotine is a powerful poison has long been known, but there has been a wide divergence of opinion as to whether tobacco smoke contains nicotine or not. The investigations of Zulinski and Zebrowski prove that it does. The quantity of nicotine absorbed by the body from tobacco smoke is probably small, and if smoking be indulged in with moderation it will not injure healthy adults, but when carried beyond the limits of moderation or when indulged in by young people it is certain to do harm to the heart.

Its effect is to cause a considerable thickening of the inner membrane of the coronary arteries, a pronounced degeneration of their middle coat, which is composed of muscles, and marked changes in the muscles that contract and expand the heart, thus bringing about disturbances of its rhythmical beating.

An entertainment will be given by the W.M.S. of the Methodist Church on Friday evening, Jan. 29. Mr. M. S. Staples will give his talk, "A Peep into Germany," and his difficulties in making his escape as a prisoner.

Easy to Forgive.

A business man made an appointment with a friend a few days ago, and when the time rolled around he forgot the matter entirely.

The incident worried him so much that he dreaded to meet the friend and for several days tried to keep out of the latter's way.

Finally, however, the inevitable happened, and the two met face to face in the lobby of a downtown club.

Before the business man could voice his explanation the friend extended his hand and began to apologize humbly:

"I must beg your pardon, old chap, but really I quite forgot about our engagement the other day, and I am indeed very sorry to have disappointed you."

When he fully recovered from the shock the business man exclaimed, with a magnanimous wave of his right hand:

"Don't worry, old man; even the best of us will sometimes forget."—Philadelphia Ledger.

NEALE—LINTON.

A very interesting and pretty event took place Monday evening, Jan. 25th, at "Stoneleigh," Campbellford, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Linton, when their youngest daughter, Effie Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. Stanley H. Neale, of the Bank of British North America, Campbellford.

The bride, who was beautifully gowned in ivory satin with overdress of chiffon and pearl trimmings, wearing a veil of tulle with wreath of orange blossoms and carrying a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley, entered the drawing-room to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Julia Thompson of Belleville. She was attended by Miss Lily Smith, as bridesmaid wearing a dress of pale blue silk crepe and carrying a sheaf bouquet of pink roses and ferns. The bride was given away by her father. The groom was attended by Mr. Frank Linton of Peterborough, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. C. Carpenter, rector of Christ Church, Campbellford, about eighty guests adjourned to the spacious dining-room, where they sat down to the wedding dejeuner, the tables being tastefully arranged and decorated for the occasion. During the festivities Miss Mary Dickson rendered a vocal solo. Following the supper a toast list was carried out. Mr. W. H. Noel Gill of Kingston, brother-in-law of the bride, acting as toastmaster.

The bride's going-away dress was of navy blue cheviot with hat of black velvet trimmed with ermine.

The groom's gift to the bride was a magnificent set of ermine furs, to the bridesmaid a gold necklace and pearl pendant, and to the groomsman a silver-mounted cane.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of very beautiful and useful gifts.

She has certainly proved herself to be an organist of no mean standard, and her playing has proved her to be possessed of keen musical intellect.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. F. J. SAWERS

Yesterday afternoon at St. Luke's Rectory, the members of the women's auxiliary of St. Luke's Church made a presentation to Mrs. Sawers, their vice-president. Mrs. John Butcher read the address, and Mrs. S. Gaskins presented the gold pin which confers life membership in the women's auxiliary. This is accompanied by a certificate also.

The address was as follows:

Dear Mrs. Sawers:

We, the members of St. Luke's branch of the women's auxiliary, take this opportunity to express the love and appreciation we have for you as one of our members. We deeply regret your departure from St. Luke's. Your bright, happy and loving spirit will be greatly missed by your many friends in this church, and in this society. You have won our hearts by your cheerful and kindly manner, and we found in you one who was always ready and willing to help whenever called upon. You are assured of our earnest good wishes for your health.

As a slight token of our love and esteem, we ask you to accept this life membership pin and certificate, and pray that you and Mr. Sawers may have many, many years of happiness and blessing in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the auxiliary,

Mrs. S. Gaskins, President.
Mrs. J. Butcher, Cor. Sec.,
Mrs. H. Butcher, Rec. Sec.

Mrs. Sawers replied expressing her deep appreciation of the great kindness of the ladies in making this presentation. Mr. Sawers also spoke, thanking the ladies for their much-appreciated gift.

FIRE BROKE OUT IN PHOTO STUDIO

Fire Chief Fell Through Trap Door

Fire Chief Howard was hurt last evening while fighting fire which brok out in the basement of the Cowan photo studio, 170 Charlotte Street, causing damage that will approximate $900 to $1,000. While the injury to the chief was not serious it was painful. He fell through a small trap door that he failed to see in the dense smoke which poured up from the basement, sustaining a severe bruise on the thigh.

At 6.15 p.m. Mr. W. J. Routley, owner of the grocery store adjoining the Cowan studio, smelled smoke and immediately after, was alarmed to see thick clouds of it rolling up from the cellar way which is midway between his shop and the studio next door west. He phoned in an alarm. There was a little delay before the department arrived owing to wrong information being given them as to its location. Another delay was caused by a street car cutting a hole in a line of hose that was laid across the rails. When the department gained access to the studio they were met by thick volumes of black smoke which extinguished their lanterns. It was while the lights were out that the chief stepped into the open trap and fell heavily. It became necessary to chop out a portion of the flooring to pour water on the flames which were in the basement and where a large supply of photographic supplies were stored. Luckily the department was successful in keeping the blaze confined to the basement.

Lost 20,000 Negatives.

Mr. Cowan showed a reporter this morning about 20,000 to 30,000 negatives which were stored in the basement that were destroyed. He estimated his loss to stock at about $700, although it was difficult to figure. He carried $1,200 insurance with the Canadian Fire Insurance Co. on his stock.

Mr. Cowan told the reporter how in his opinion the fire started. He had placed an enlarging camera in which an exposure was being taken against some dry woodwork, leaving it, while away to supper. This must have ignited the wood.

While the worst sufferer, Mr. Cowan was not the only one. Next door Mr. W. J. Routley's grocery stock was deluged by smoke which filled both floors and caused damage which he had not estimated when spoken to by the reporter.

Ald. Jos. Duffus, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, was at the scene of the fire when it started.

HAVE SANCTION OF THE BOARD

For Steps Taken to Provide Disposal Plant

When the discussion on the outfall sewer was proceeding at the Board of Works meeting last evening, Ald. McIntyre asked if any word had been received from the Provincial Board of Health in regard to the site for the sewage disposal plant. He was informed that nothing further had been heard of it, but he was assured that no step had been made without sanction of the Provincial Board and it is almost a positive fact that that body, which is supreme, will not ask the plans to be altered.

"Do you really think the site selected is the best possible?" was the blunt question Ald. McIntyre presented to the city engineer for answer.

"I certainly do," was the reply.

The engineer went further to state that as soon as the work on the outfall sewer and disposal plant was completed the Provincial Board of Health would in all probability urge the city to overcome the sceptic tank in East City, which although up-to-date when constructed, has grown very inadequate. Should the Provincial Board make such a recommendation the engineer has in mind a scheme whereby the sewage from East City will be brought across and disposed of at the disposal plant, which will be situated as previously announced across the river from the street railway wharf.

Chocolate Bread Pudding

A delicious way to make good use of the stray bread ends is this old-fashioned Chocolate Bread Pudding. Two cups bread crumbs, 4 cups scalded milk, 2 tablespoons Fry's Chocolate Powder, ¾ cup sugar, 2 eggs, ¼ teaspoonful salt, 1 teaspoonful vanilla. Soak crumbs in warm milk. Melt the chocolate, add the sugar and enough milk taken from the bread and milk to make a thin mixture. Combine with the first mixture and add the sugar, salt, vanilla and slightly beaten eggs. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake one hour in a moderate oven. Serve with whipped cream on hard sauce.

NO LATE SESSIONS FOR BOARD OF WORKS

The first meeting of the Board of Works for 1915, was held last evening all members being present with the exception of His Worship Mayor Buller. The new chairman, Ald. G. Walter Green made a very pleasing announcement when the motion to adjourn was made at 10.25. He stated that the meeting had lasted twenty-five minutes later than he expected the meetings of the Board would last during his term as chairman. The statement met general favor.

After the meeting the board adjourned to the Boston Cafe and enjoyed an impromptu luncheon as the guests of the genial chairman.

Paid in Full.

Paid in Full, seen in moving pictures at the Grand Opera House last night, was enjoyed by large audiences. The pictures will be repeated tonight.

LEFT WOOD ON STOVE TO DRY

The Result Was Fire at Downie Street Home

Thoughtlessness in leaving a pile of firewood to dry on a stove, nearly caused a bad fire yesterday at 617 Downie Street in a house occupied by Thos. Blodgett. No one was in the house save a daughter of Mr. Blodgett and while the wood was drying she went into the house of a neighbor. While there the wood caught fire and upon returning to the house the volumes of smoke blocked her entrance.

She telephoned in an alarm of fire from a near-by house. No real damage was done to the house.

FUNERAL AT LINDSAY.

The funeral of the late Henry Hall took place Tuesday afternoon from the residence of Mr. Andrew Hall, corner of Sussex and Francis Sts., and was largely attended by friends. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. Andrew Hall, Jos. Hall, Geo. Hall, William Hall, Harvey Hall, and Robt. McGill.

Rev. Mr. McIntosh conducted the service at the house and at the cemetery.—Lindsay Warder.

WILL INQUIRE INTO ALD. DOBBIN'S PLAN

Ald. F. H. Dobbin's scheme to provide work for some of the unemployed, the details of which were announced in last evening's Review, came before the board of works last night, and the members took very kindly to it. The possibility of having gravel to fill in such places as the creek on Bonacord street, the Goose Pond, and the sides of Smith street bridge, and obtaining it at a very low cost found great favor. A committee composed of Mayor Buller, Ald. Green, Johnston, Duffus and Weir and the city engineer were appointed to go thoroughly into the matter, meet the Peterborough branch of th Canadian Patriotic Fund and Peterborough Relief Association on Saturday night, and report to the council on Monday evening.

The committee met this afternoon at the City Hall, and accompanied by Ald. Dobbin, left to look over the ground.

Something Entirely New in Eyeglass Mountings

No more poor lenses and very few weak eyes, if you use the NEW TAIT NO-SCREW MOUNT. These mounts are attached to the lenses without the use of screws or rivets and thereby do away with the need of drilling a hole in the lenses which of course weakens the lenses.

Also the mounts never work loose like the old style. These mounts are manufactured at the Tait Optical Co.'s Hamilton factory and are sold here exclusively by Tait Optical Co. See sample in window.

BUY PLANT FOR STREET PAVING

Board of Works Again Tackle Much Discussed Question

When Alderman Johnston remarked casually that he would like to see the work to be done by the Board of Works, during the coming year, begun as soon as possible, he opened discussion on a big proposition. The matter was hardly mentioned last night when Ald. McIntyre asked if it would not be possible for the city to construct its own street pavement during this summer. At any rate the north ward man thought it would do no harm to "get a line on it."

City Engineer Parsons stated that a plant for a similar pavement as laid by Foley and Gleeson (bithulithic) would cost anywhere from $2,000 to $15,000 according to capacity. The Engineer remarked however that to his mind, a concrete road as the residents of Chambers Street are now favored with, would be serviceable for the outlying streets and to construct it, no plant would be necessary. When the work on Chambers Street was performed it cost less than $1.00 per square yard, whereas the pavement supplied by Foley and Gleeson cost the city $2.19 per square yard.

Some of the aldermen expressed themselves as being in favor of having concrete roads in the residential sections of the city. Ald. Duffus' assertion that he would not have concrete on the main thoroughfares under any consideration also met with general approval. Chairman Ald. Green thought the matter should be given "an evening all its own" and in the meantime City Engineer Parsons could prepare a report. It was decided to have it thus.

MATTERS MUNICIPAL

Assistant City Engineer T. A. S. Hay is on a fair road to recovery. At last nights Board of Works meeting a resolution of Ald. Duffus and Dobbin authorizing the City Clerk to write Mr. Hay expressing the regret of the Board on his illness and its hope for his speedy recovery, was passed.

The Property Committee will meet tonight at eight oclock. The principal item of business is in regard to the musical instruments owned by the city and used by the 57th Regimental Band. The band is to quit the city hall shortly and take up their new quarters at the armouries.

Already they are starting to apply for street watering. The residents of Wolfe Street from Aylmer Street to the C.P.R. had a petition before the Board of Works last night. It was left over to deal with when others arrive.

E. R. Watts & Co. which manufactures grafting instruments wrote the Board of Works in hopes of a sale. Evidently the graft part of the word scared the chairman and he buried the communication.

If any teamsters desire city work they must leave their names and addresses with the City Engineer.

CUTHBERT TOUR TO PANAMA EXPOSITION

There will be no Cuthbert-Shaffer tour to Europe during 1915 but one of their old time private trains will leave Toronto early in July to make the tour to the west, including San Diego and San Francisco Expositions, returning via Canadian Pacific, Vancouver and Winnipeg, enabling party to view the magnificent Rocky Mountain scenery and visit the palatial Canadian Pacific Hotels, which have a world wide reputation for the high standard of service offered to the travelling public.

The hundreds of patrons who have made this trip under their management will testify that there is no cheaper, jollier, more comprehensive or comfortable way to go. Write for particulars up to February 15th to E. Y. Cuthbert, Pasadena, Calif., R. R. No. 1; after February 15th to 321 Jarvis Street, Toronto.

BRIDGE WANTED

Bonacord Street Residents Ask for New Structure

A petition was read at the Board of Works meeting last evening, from the residents of Bonacord Street asking that a bridge be built across the creek on that street. At present there is a foot bridge but according to Ald. Johnston it is in a very poor condition. It was decided that the petition be received and the matter referred to the city engineer for a report.

Hole Has Been Filled.

City Engineer Parsons reported that the hole at the side of the Street Radial Railway Co. which the city was asked to fill, had received attention.

HELD MARCHOUT

Without the beat of drums and minus music of any kind, the recruits for the Third Canadian Contingent from Peterborough marched down George Street this afternoon, watched by hundreds of interested spectators. The boys although in civilian garb presented a very good appearance and stepped out just as smartly as though on dress parade, with a band giving out a lively marching air. In the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty were in line.

The march out was merely a little deviation from the regular drill held every afternoon at the armouries.

NIGHT ATTACK WAS COSTLY FOR ENEMY

German Batteries in Vosges Silenced by French Fire

FOOTING GAINED ON GRANDE DUNE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 29. — The afternoon official report reads:

"January 26th saw nothing more than local engagements, which resulted favorably to us. In Belgium, in the vicinity of Nieuport, our infantry secured a footing on Grande Dune, a locality which was mentioned in the communication of January 17th. A German aeroplane was brought down by our artillery fire.

"In the sectors of Ypres, Lens and Arras there were yesterday artillery engagements which at times became fairly violent. Several infantry attacks were undertaken, but at once driven back by our fire.

"In the sectors of Soissons, Craonne and Rheims there is nothing to report. Between Rheims and Argonne yesterday saw artillery engagements, but not of great intensity.

"It has been confirmed that a German attack repulsed by us on the night of January 27-28 at Fontaine Madame cost the Germans dear.

"On the heights of the Meuse and in the Woevre yesterday was quiet.

"In the Vosges there were artillery engagements, our cannon at several points silencing the fire of German batteries and machine gun detachments. We have everywhere consolidatd the positions occupied by us on January 27th."

TWO RUSSIAN ARMIES THREATEN KOENIGSBURG.

LONDON, Jan. 29. — The Times' military correspondent estimates that Germany is still retaining two-thirds of her active troops on the western frontier, or ninety-four divisions, compared with forty-three divisions on the eastern frontier, and that she may be expected to make a last violent effort to break the allied line before the allies have completely assembled their armies and before neutral powers come into the war. Two Russian armies are now threatening Koenigsburg, East Prussia, one moving from the north on Tilsit and the other coming from a more southerly direction. A Russian official statement says they have destroyed a railroad station at Poggen, a few miles east of Tilsit.

Quartermaster for Mounted Rifles

Peterborough Squadron to go to Ottawa Next Week

Ottawa, Jan. 29. — Major J. R. Routh, formerly of the 5th P.L.D.G., has been appointed quartermaster of the regiment of Mounted Rifles. This almost completes the officers for the regiment. About the only vacancy remaining is a signalling officer. Lt. J. D. Fraser, who is to command the machine gun detachment, and Sgt. Palmer will leave for Kingston the end of the week to take a course in this branch of the work.

The Peterborough squadron will arrive in Ottawa next week.

No Further News of Mobilization

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., is in receipt of a letter from the Department of Militia today, saying there has been no change whatever in the Government's mobilization plans.

It is obvious that all important plans, such as those for mobilization, must be kept secret. The Department of Militia has for years been collecting information and keeping itself fully informed on all matters necessary to a complete understanding in detail of the whole country.

Renewed activity at any time need not excite comment.

VEST INSTRUMENTS IN 57th REGIMENTAL BAND

Ald. Edgar Wants People to Understand That the Council Does Not Own the Instruments

Major Eastwood, Capt. Hounsell and Messrs. R. Shelton, F. Miller and R. Chambers, constituted a deputation which appeared before the property committee last night with the request that the instruments of the 57th Regimental Band be vested in the band.

Seventy-five per cent of the instruments have been replaced by the band funds. All the instruments have heretofore been vested in the city. In March, 1915, the instruments were valued at $2,490.

The band expects to move from its present quarters to the armouries, and take its proper prestige as a military band. To accomplish this, the organization must control the instruments. The councils of Peterborough have never purchased an instrument, according to statements made. The relations financially or otherwise between the city and the band would continue as is the case today, it was explained.

Ald. Edgar suggested that the commanding officer and the city solicitor confer, and report so that the public would understand the whole transaction. Then they could not at some future date, ask the council why they gave the instruments away.

Ald, Edgar presented a copy of a morning paper, with a report, in which he said he had not been correctly reported. This was one argument, he advanced, for a clear and definite statement to go before the public so that the people would understand. He won the day as the motion which recommended that the request be acceded to, also explained that the city did not own the instruments. The motion was moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Weir.

Wanted—A New Flag.

The chairman will secure prices on flags, as a result of J. J. Turner and Sons drawing attention to the "grand old rag" which floats over the city buildings.

Boiler Insurance.

"It hasn't been insured for ten years and we're at war, so I move that no action be taken," remarked Ald. Weir, when the chairman produced a policy which had been submitted by an enterprising agent. The boiler in question is at the city buildings.

The committee adjourned "without oysters" although the chairman had the notion.

TROUBLESOME STEAMSHIP AND HER OWNER

The steamer Dacia in dock at Galveston, Texas, and her multi-millionaire owner, Edward N. Breitung, of Marquette, Mich. The Dacia, formerly a Hamburg-American liner, was transferred to American registry, and her owner wants to take her with a load of cotton unmolested to a German port. Britain takes the stand that the vessel is still German-owned and that the transfer was not a legitimate one. It is likely she will be seized if she puts to sea.

EXTEND ENQUIRY TO TEST QUALIFICATIONS OF MR. GORDON TO SIT ON BOARD

Mr. Hill is Advised That Facts Disclosed in Such Investigation Will Show That New Member is Disqualified

The right of Mr. G. N. Gordon to hold a seat on the Board of Education is questioned by that body. A special meeting of the Board was held last evening to take up the matter. Mr. Gordon had previously notified the secretary by letter that he would not be present. The meeting did not last longer than half an hour, Mr. Hill being the principal speaker.

"At the last meeting of this Board," said Mr. Hill, "a resolution was carried on the motion of Mr. Gordon to have a sweeping investigation of a very wide character made respecting my record as a member of the Board.

"So far as I am personally concerned I am prepared to have such investigation made before the County judge so that I may be in a position to effectually answer the charges and insinuations that have been made against me.

"I also believe that it is not in the interests of this Board to have any of its members sit on it who are disqualified by law and for that reason I propose to move the following resolution:—

"Whereas at a meeting of the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough held on the 14th day of January, 1915, the following resolution was passed that is to say,—

"Moved by Mr. Gordon, seconded by Mr. Eastwood, "That the Board of Education of the City of Peterborough request the council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to take steps to have a Judicial investigation made under Section 248 of the Municipal Act into the matter referred to in a Memorandum addressed by the Mover to the Chairman of the Board of Education dated 14th January, 1915." Carried.

And whereas it is expedient that the scope of such enquiry should be extended.

Now therefore be it resolved and it is hereby resolved that the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough respectfully request the Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to pass a further resolution pursuant to Section 248 of the Municipal Act requesting His Honor Judge Huycke, Judge of the County Court of the County of Peterborough to investigate all acts, matters and things touching or relating to the appointment of G. N. Gordon, Esquire, to the office of solicitor for the corporation of the City of Peterborough, the duties of his office and all acts, matters and things which may have conflicted or which might conflict with the faithful performance of the duties of his office

High School Act

It is interesting in connection with the matters now before the Board of Education to note that Section 12 of the High School Act provides as follows:—

"Any ratepayer who is a "British subject, has attained the age of 21 years, resides in the High School "District and is not a member or officer of a municipal "council shall be qualified to "be a high school trustee."

MAIL FOR SOLDIERS

The post office department at Ottawa has issued this notice concerning mail for Canadian soldiers:

"With reference to the correct addressing of mail for soldiers at the front, it is desired that every publicity should be given to the fact that in order to facilitate the handling of this correspondence and insure its reaching the addresses without delay, there should be included in the address of all letters and packets:

"Name of soldier in full;
"Regimental number;
"Battalion, battery, squadron or unit;
"Brigade;
"Number of contingent."

WM. HARE HAS ACCOUNT OF $100

If he Sues, City Will Contest the Action

Wm. Hare, garbage collector in 1914, has an account of $100 against the city. The amount he claims is due him for the removal of garbage.

The mayor said it was a hold-up and his motion seconded by Ald. Weir, that the solicitor take steps to protect the city, in the event of an action, was carried.

Hare claims he was forced to go outside his agreement in the case in dispute. The solicitor thought differently.

The order came from Ald. Johnston, who acted on the complaints of residents near the Goose Pond, who objected to ashes being deposited there.

PROGRESS AT ST. ANDREW'S

Fifty-six New Members Into the Church

INCREASED GIVINGS

Rev. Jas. Rollins Enters Upon His Fifth Year

That a satisfactory and encouraging condition prevails in all departments of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church is shown by the annual reports presented last Thursday and last evening. To make possible an intelligent discussion of the work, St. Andrew's church has adopted the plan of holding their annual meeting on the third and fourth Thursdays of January. The following statement is taken from the reports submitted at these two meetings.

The session report gave a total membership of 545. Fifty-six new members were received during the year of which 35 were by profession of faith and twenty-one by certificate.

In a review of the contributions to missions and extra congregational funds, the session found that the givings for the year amounted to $2,459.84, made up as follows:—

Congregation (by envelope)	$1,621.40
Sabbath School	143.90
Women's Missionary Societies	320.82
Young Ladies' Mission Band	82.90
Willing Workers	16.00
Daughters of Erin	50.00
Lord's Day Alliance	34.65
Sailors' Miss. Society	120.45
Dominion Alliance	52.25
Bank Interest	11.51
	$2,459.84

This is $476.61 in advance of 1913.

Manager's Report.

The manager's report was presented by Mr. A. McFarlane, chairman of the Board. In presenting his report he referred to the financial depression of the past year and congratulated the congregation that notwithstanding, they had ended th year with a small surplus on the year's operations, Mr. E. A. Peck, ex-M. L. A., was tendered a vote of thanks for his services in connection with the securing of a bill from the Ontario Legislature which gives the congregation authority to dispose of certain properties should the congregation at any time wish to do so. The report concludes, "Your board are of the opinion that taking everything into consideration we have much to be thankful for and after the organ is paid for, we believe we should seriously take up the consideration of improved Sunday School accommodation.

The report of the organ committee was made by W. A. Richardson, sec.-treas., which showed that the organ and expenses of installation had amounted to $7,957.75. This had been reduced to $674.18 of which $1,263.75 was paid during the past year. It is the intention to close out this account in 1915.

Better Sunday School Accommodation

The special committee appointed one year ago to investigate the question

TURKS MAROONED ON DESERT SANDS

No Word Heard of Them for Three Days When Advance Party Was Engaged

NO FURTHER OUTPOST CLASHES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 29. — With the renewal of offensive operations on the part of the Turks in the Caucasus, apparently timed so as to force Russia to send more troops into this field, Austro-German activities in Galicia and the Carpathians continue to dominate the military situation.

So far as news is concerned, the Turks, supposed to be advancing into Egypt, are marooned somewhere on the sands of the desert. Not one word has been heard of them since the announcement, three days ago, of their presence to the eastward of El Kantara, and no further clashes with British outposts have been reported.

Different Method of Distribution

To be Carried Out by the Oddfellows

It was practically decided to re-arrange the method of disbursing the benefits in the local and district lodges of the I. O. O. F., following a meeting held last night in their lodge rooms. The new plan will necessitate a readjustment of bylaws governing the order, by which a deceased brother will receive $50 funeral benefit and his widow will receive $25. At present $75 is the amount received for funeral benefits, while the widow receives nothing. It will be seen that no difference in the total amount disbursed takes place, but simply a different method of distribution employed. Another proposed re-arrangement which will be embodied in the amended bylaws will be the shortening of the $4 weekly, allowance in the event of illness, from 51 weeks to 26 weeks.

WHAT MR. GORDON THINKS OF SCHOOL BOARD'S ACTION

When asked today if he had anything to say respecting the meeting of the Board of Education last night, Mr. G. N. Gordon said that he was perfectly satisfied to have the whole matter threshed out in a judicial enquiry to deal with the question as to his disqualification and also as to Mr. Hill's receiving pecuniary benefit from contracts with the Board of Education.

Mr. Hill said that he never received any commission on insurance but he did not say that he had never received any pecuniary benefit from it. Mr. Hill also intimated that he—Mr. Gordon—had withdrawn certain statements. Mr. Gordon said that nothing had been withdrawn by him.

Mr. Gordon said that he had no other desire than to have the whole thing threshed out if the council is willing to send it up before the County Judge to deal with the whole subject matter. He stated in conclusion that it was apparent that some of the members of the Board were not anxious for him to sit on it, or they would not be making such desperate efforts to baulk the will of the ratepayers who elected him at the head of the poll.

NEW HALL FOR NORTH MONAGHAN

For Educational and Religious Purposes

At a meeting last night of the residents of North Monaghan who reside near Brayley's schoolhouse Mr. Geo. Leggot was chairman and Mr. Campbell was secretary and after considerable discussion it was decided to make an endeavor to build a hall on the ground occupied for some years by the Grangers' Hall.

Mr. Bradburn has been interviewed and has given his consent to a lease of the property for a building which would be used for educational and religious purposes.

A committee composed of Messrs. Leggott, Wm. Waller, sen., and Richard Payne war appointed to prepare estimates as to size and cost of a building and report at another meeting.

The committee will also appoint three trustees who will assume responsibility for the rent of the building and hold the lease for the residents.

HAVELOCK PEOPLE ARE UP IN ARMS

Social Service Association is Determined That Law Will be Enforced

Havelock, Jan. 29.—Wakened to the necessity of some immediate action, by the awful examples of the prevalence of drinking among children, as shown in recent court cases, a determined band of about forty representative citizens gathered in the basement of St. John's church on Tuesday night and organized themselves into an Association to be known as "The Social Service Association."

Mr. A. C. Denike was appointed President; Mr. C. W. Butcher, Secy.-Treas., and the resident clergy Vice-Presidents. These officers were then empowered to add to their numbers as they deemed advisable and necessary. The committee so formed, and indeed all that joined the Association and will yet join it, are to endeavor to do all in their power to suppress the illicit liquor traffic and the immoral houses said to exist and flourish in Havelock.

No harsh steps will be taken at first, but moral suasion invoked to effect reform. However if such be not effective, the members of the Association are determined that the law will be enforced.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915

WHAT TRENCH FIGHTING IS LIKE.

A MEMBER of the fourth company of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, Private Robert Grant MacDonald, has given a vivid account of the trench fighting that is now taking place along five or six hundred miles of battle front in Europe. For an endurance test, it ranks with the severest trials of the armies of Napoleon or Hannibal.

This particular division dug three miles of trenches per day for some time, and soon got into splendid physical condition—"fit" the soldier called it. Then they were ordered to relieve the Frenchmen in the trenches, and, in holding the extreme British left, were given the post of honour. This meant a day's marching without food, when they were within three miles of the trenches, with shells bursting nearby. Before they reached the trenches they had four hundred yards of open ground to cross that was so muddy they had to take their hands and pull one leg out at a time. Bullets were whizzing all around. Whenever a flare of the enemy shot up, they had to throw themselves down on their faces in the mud, which plastered them from head to foot, got in their ears, and made their rifles look like brooms. Finally they reached the trench, when the Germans turned a machine gun on them, but they wriggled through on all fours, and the Frenchmen bolted for safety and rest. The slush in the trenches was well above their knees, and they numbered off in three, every third standing guard one hour in rotation. The Germans were only sixty yards away, and there were many artillery exchanges. A drizzling rain added to their discomforts for the forty-eight hours they were guarding the trenches. This took place early in this month, and when they were relieved, by the fortunate arrival of a dark night, they were half dead with cold, and shaking as if afflicted with ague. They could hardly hold their rifles, and several suffered severe frost bites, Private MacDonald having his feet frozen.

Guarding a battle line of such length and under such conditions is a terrible ordeal. It shows what a frightful wearing it has on the opposing armies when a company is almost incapacitated by hardship in forty-eight hours, without considering losses from actual engagements. One can form an idea of the hospital service required to treat the men suffering from exposure, as they come every couple of days or so from the trenches, and the large supplies of fresh men required to make up losses. Many Canadian citizens were inclined to blame the authorities for the high standard of physical fitness required of volunteers for overseas service, but, when the actual conditions of winter warfare are considered, it is quite evident that only the hardiest and strongest physical frames could stand such an endurance test as that required for trench fighting. Salisbury Plain is bad enough, but we believe the firing lines are the acme of severity.

WHAT DOES THE OTTAWA FREE PRESS MEAN?

THE OTTAWA FREE PRESS has worked itself into a fit of hectic anxiety over Canadian exports of food. It makes, with the fury of a German mob, a slashing attack on the middleman. Well, the middleman is a personage so indefinite that no great quantity of blood will be spilt in the fracas, although some ink may be squandered. After massing, for the assault, a column of type, interspersed with black-faced cohorts, the Free Press says the Dominion Government should control exports, both as to destination and price.

The Review some time ago drew attention to the importance of Canada knowing more of the destination of food shipments. This is quite within the realm of the authorities. Food shipped in bond, whether via the United States or through Canada, goes to the place consigned. But the large shipments to American buyers or American mills may remain in the United States or they may be re-shipped to Germany. These are the shipments that need consideration, and the Government can easily take action.

The Free Press goes very much farther, however, and says the Government should control the price. If the Free Press will suggest some practical method of a government controlling prices, it will earn a just title to originality and to great fame. Economic history has many examples of the failure of governmental attempts to control prices. As a matter of fact, a government cannot control prices any more than it can control the winds. Prices are not subject to arbitrary regulation, but arrive at their respective figures by a multiplicity of causes or factors that go far afield. Our Ottawa contemporary may not mean that the Dominion Government should set the legal price for certain articles of food, but it would be interesting to know just what the Free Press had in mind when it said the price of exports should be controlled by the Government.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

ACCORDING to the London Financier, the war is costing the belligerents between $27,500,000 and $30,000,000 a day, or a maximum of $4,260,000,000 for six months. Financing already arranged will cover the expense of the conflict for two months and a half forward from January 1, or until the middle of March. Of the $5,300,000,000 of loans placed by the fighting nations, $3,325,000,000 has been on account of the Allies and $1,075,000,000 for Germany and Austria. Thus the Allies have secured over three-fifths of the combined belligerent total, and their opponents less than two-fifths. This is taken to indicate that the war is costing Germany and Austria a little over $10,000,000 a day as compared with nearly twice that amount to the Allies.

SIR PERCY GIROUARD, who celebrated his forty-eighth birthday recently, was born in Montreal, and educated at the Seminary of Three Rivers and at the Royal Military College, Kingston. For a short time he acted as an engineer on the Canadian Pacific Railway, but later took up military work and became a director of the Soudan Railway and still later director of the railways in South Africa at the time of the Boer War. He served under Kitchener in many parts of Africa, and has been frequently mentioned in despatches. Kitchener, who is always meagre in his praises, referred to Girouard as "an officer of brilliant ability."

IT APPEARS that the last British victory in the North Sea was under-rated rather than exaggerated. If it is true that over-salvos sunk the German light cruiser Kolberg, the damage to Germany was considerably greater. It is also asserted that several of the German battleships that got away were damaged so badly that they could hardly keep afloat. That means that they will be out of commission for several months, and the fighting power of the German fleet is thus much reduced by the battle.

AS WE READ IT, the Globe administers a severe rebuke to N. W. Rowell, K. C., the leader of the Liberal Opposition in Ontario. On one page the Globe gives an account of Mr. Rowell's demand for an Imperial Conference at once. The Globe is loyal to Sir Wilfrid, however, and says in its editorial columns of the same date:

> "That old warning against trading horses when crossing a stream should be taken to heart by those who want to change Imperial relationships at the present time."

THE PORT HOPE GUIDE says the municipal council of Dysart township, Haliburton, does not know whether it can legally transact business, as the date set for the inaugural meeting has passed and no notices have been sent out. Why not pass up the whole business and save the township a lot of taxes?

THE SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN says that Germany has now but four armoured cruisers, compared with Britain's forty, and that if Germany is to continue any effective patrol of the Baltic, she will be compelled to risk her priceless Dreadnoughts.

A GENIUS is a man who can unfold and fold a map in the back of an historical work without tearing it.—Toronto News. If he can do so without resorting to a vigorous and prohibited vocabulary, he is also a wonder of self-control.

THE SEYDLITZ didn't fiz on the British fleet.

IT TAKES Admiral Beatty to beat them.

Ominous Attrition of German Fleet.

(New York Post.)

So heavy have been Germany's losses in armoured and battle cruisers, that it would seem as if she would be extremely loath to risk any more in dashes towards England, which are merely pin-pricks and help the British Government instead of making its task more difficult. Of its most powerful cruisers the German navy has now lost six — the Bluecher, Yorck, Gneisenau, Scharnhorst, the Goeben by sale to Turkey, and the Friedrich Karl by striking a mine, if Russian and English statements about the vessel are correct. If, in addition, two of those engaged in the North Sea are seriously damaged, there are left only four battle cruisers and five armoured cruisers. The three ships that escaped from Admiral Beatty were battle cruisers of the newest type, the Derfflinger having been completed and put in service since the war began. Two others, the Hertha and Lutzow, are counted above as also having been completed; if they are not in service, the Kaiser's cruiser fleet is still smaller. Germany is fortunate in not having lost a single battleship thus far, but in cruisers she has paid the price, having lost sixteen all told since hostilities began. The attrition of the German fleet is thus far more ominous than that of the British.

Admiral Beatty's victory will probably stop further raiding of the British coast by cruisers, or at least make the Germans realise just what risks they are running. Certainly, we shall hear less from the German press now about England's control of the sea having been broken, and of the boasts that England's coasts are at Germany's mercy. There will probably, however, be an increased likelihood of aerial raids.

The Risk and the Certainty.

(Westminster Gazette.)

The distinction between insuring against the risk and preparing for the certainty is all-important. The only power which can prepare for war as a certainty is the power which is determined to make war. It alone knows the day and the hour, and can bring its forces up to the required strength at the time decreed. Such a power must always have the advantage which the offensive gives to those who seize it. It can mass its forces behind a screen of peaceful intentions, and prepare for the great rush which is to take its enemy unawares. That advantage Germany took by her practice of the "preventive war" so called, and one of the things we are fighting for now is to make it impossible for her to take it again.

Why Hard Times Come.

Too many men raising the price of real estate.

Too few men raising crops.

Too many promoters seizing hold of every tidy factory and thrifty business and irrigating the same until it could float rafts on watered stock.

These are a few advance agents of the calamities that now afflict Canada. These calamities would have come upon this country if Europe had remained peaceful as a summer Sabbath evening in an Ontario village.

THE DISPOSAL PLANT.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—In the report of the Board of Works reference to the sewage disposal plant on Wednesday evening, a member of the Board who desired to learn if the Provincial Board of Health had authorized the construction of the plant in Otonabee—across the river from the St. Railway Wharf—was informed in effect that no authorization had yet been received. In the face of this the city engineer, in the same report, is said to have stated most positively that the plant will be located on this site. Whom are we to believe? Personally I am inclined to take the Board's statement that the city's plans have not been authorized, but assuredly this is too costly an undertaking for the ratepayers to be handled by their servants on the "steam roller" and "bluff" principle. Thousands of dollars are being sunk in the quicksands of the South Ward that may be an absolute loss in the event of the Provincial Board of Health refusing to endorse the city's plans. Would the chairman of the Board of Works or the city engineer employ such astonishing business tactics in the management of their own personal affairs? The fact of the matter is that the city officials are treating the opposition of the Township Council of Otonabee and interested residents on both sides of the river, as well as hundreds of our own citizens, as a joke. They no doubt feel like all other sufferers from swelled-head that their superior knowledge and business acumen so far overshadows that of their opponents that they have nothing to fear. A rude awakening, however, is in store, and when it comes the ratepayers will see that the axe falls on the heads of those responsible. I venture to predict that if the sewage plant is ever located on this site it will bring the city such a crop of actions for damages that every official who helped to railroad the scheme through will be relegated to social, moral and political oblivion for the remainder of his days.

Germans Will Make One Convulsive Fight Says Expert

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Col. Repington, the Times' military expert, says this morning:

"What Britain has to expect is that Germany may make a last violent effort in the west before the allied armies are all assembled, before the winter season ends in the east and before the states which contemplate abandoning neutrality place Germany at a manifest disadvantage.

"Already we hear of the Landsturm in front of the German trenches in Flanders, training battalions full of half-fledged soldiers behind them and the withdrawal for a period of repose of some of the active army corps. On our part we must be prepared to meet the replacement of first line German troops in the trenches by newer levies, and assemble at one or more points a great mass of active army corps.

"From the last direct attempt to break through between Arras and the Oise it is not an unlikely front for such an operation, but wherever it comes we must be ready for it.

"February and March are the most likely months for the attempt. We shall not be so foolish as to goad this or that commander into a premature offensive. We can bide our hour in the knowledge that the commanders of the allies, in the west fully realise what Germany may be about and are quite prepared for her.

"We shall all welcome a German advance, and if no such advance takes place, then we shall act at our own time, all the allies together, so that whether we have already finally broken the German offensive, or one more convulsive effort on Germanys' part is still to be expected, we can make our minds easy concerning the result."

There's a Fine

For selling butter not properly put up and correctly branded.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than common tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

PETERBOROUGH.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

In contrast to Hunter Hoyt the rest of Mrs. Sattane's boarders seemed commonplace indeed. One of them was too humble a creature to call himself a boarder at all. Matt lived a week at Mrs. Sattane's before he even discovered the man's existence—a grave, elderly mulatto of a kindly, open face and ingratiating manners, who was something in the nature of the boarding house skeleton. His name was Daggancourt, a possible corruption of De Goncourt—Victor Daggancourt—who, although he paid $7 a week, while the others paid only $5, had what might be called a furtive position in the house. He would wait unobtrusively about the porch until the rest had finished their meal, when a second tinkle of the bell would summon him to the disordered table. Here color prejudice forbade that he should be served by Bridget, who placed the dishes near his plate and left him to shift for himself. The sitting room was, of course, forbidden to him, though he might linger for a moment in the doorway without impropriety and listen to the superior race. He was the owner of a small garage and machine shop—"Victor's garage" it was called—and was a widower without children.

"This is a hard world for a colored man, sir," he said once to Matt, "'specially if he's better educated than the most of his race and is given to thinking a little, like I do. The majority of them are no company for me, with their common ways and cheap ideas; and, of course, I am personum non grata to white folks. Here I am, stuck middlewise between the two."

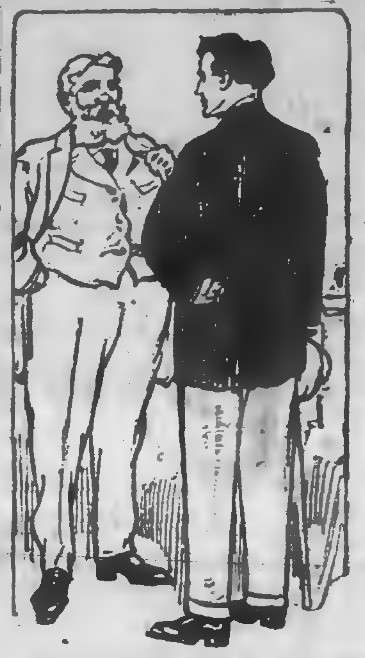
Matt conceived a sincere regard for the old fellow, whose lowly, effacing life was not without a certain tragedy. There was a fine strain in the mulatto and an innate dignity and kindness that commanded respect, not to speak of a whimsical humor that gleamed out even in his most earnest moments. "You're a man," he once said to Matt, "while I have the misfortune to be a problem. That's a bigger difference between us than color itself. The darky can't go anywhere and do anything, but right off, he's a problem. When we eat, we're a problem; when we go to a hospital, we're a problem; we can't hop on a train, but there again we're a problem; when we die, we're a problem, for, Lord save us, black bones mustn't lay next to white."

Nothing could be got from the boarders except warnings. Each one ran down his own business. On Matt's appealing to Victor the latter foretold the swift finish of the garage business. "Owners are getting to know too much," he said. "You can't sell a ten dollar pair of gas lights for sixty like you did once. If I was you, Marse' Broughton, I'd try mules. There never has been enough mules, and there never will be!"

Matt accordingly, though rather slackly, it must be confessed, began to look into mules; he accumulated stacks of mule information; he wrote to Washington and got for nothing the concentrated wisdom of a whole mule sub-bureau. All this was very encouraging, and was made more so by Victor's request to come in as a partner. He thought he could sell out his garage for $1,400 or $1,600, and volunteered to be Matt's man Friday.

"I won't be any trouble to you," he pleaded earnestly. "I know my place, and I'll keep it, no matter how close we have to live; and I'll cook and wash, and do everything till we're on our feet."

Matt did not commit himself; it was so much easier to dawdle along and coquette with imaginary mules, and work out imaginary mule profits, than to bestir himself with actualities.



"And so you are a real live king?"

One day, after breakfast, while he was in his room, he was called down to the parlor by the only visitor that had ever sought him. The grizzled, smiling man who rose to greet him was a stranger.

"I'm the editor of the Manaswan Banner," said the stranger, introducing himself deferentially. "Tom Maynard, my name is, and a very injured man, Mr. Broughton! Yes, sir, a very injured man, for surely the local paper had the first call on a local boy? Oh, Lord!" he ejaculated in the same key of pretended indignation, "to think you were hiding here all this time, and I didn't know a thing about it!"

"I don't understand," said Matt, smiling too. "What's this all about, anyway?"

"And so you are a real live king?" went on Mr. Maynard, ignoring the question, and gazing at him in humorous awe. "What a lot of stick in the muds it makes us feel that one of our boys could go out and do that, while we stayed at home with the chores."

CHAPTER III.

A Voice at the Telephone.

"KING?" cried Matt. "I don't know what you're talking about. You're mistaken—who said I was a king?"

"Now, it's no good putting me off like that," said Mr. Maynard. "If it's in the New York Clarion first, it has to be in the Manaswan Banner second. It wouldn't be fair if you didn't give us second place, considering you were born and raised here, and owe that much to the town. I've got a crackerjack stenographer waiting in the office, two typists, and the operator's holding the wire for the Associated Press, so get your hat, and come along quick, like a good chap."

"I wish you would tell me what you're talking about," exclaimed Matt, growing impatient. "Is your office in a lunatic asylum or where?"

"Then you haven't seen it?" asked Mr. Maynard, offended and incredulous, searching the younger man's face.

"Seen what?"

"The big front page Sunday story of the Clarion—the New York Daily Clarion?"

"Of course I haven't."

The editor, recovering his good nature, drew a newspaper from his overcoat pocket, and flattened it out with his hand.

"There it is," he said.

The staring scare heads swam before Matt's eyes.

Matt had scarcely reached the end when there was a violent commotion outside—horses galloping, men descending excitedly, the porch shaking with the tramp of feet, and pull, pull, pull at the bell as though the house were on fire. A second later a crowd of newspaper men and photographers surged into the room, spattering the carpet with mud and snow; a noisy, jostling throng in heavy overcoats, all demanding "the Kanaka king."

"Me first, gentlemen," cried Maynard, grabbing Matt as though he were a bale of goods. "The king's mine till noon!"

"The dickens he is!" exclaimed one of the mob, elbowing up to Matt. "We're all in on this, aren't we, boys?"

"You bet we are," came from a dozen ready throats.

Matt rose, speechless with rage, and, tearing himself clear, strode to the door and up to his bedroom. Here with a bang he locked himself in, the whole pack pounding at his heels like school boys after a runaway.

"I'm not a king," he roared through at them. "There's not a word of truth in that idiotic article. The first fellow that breaks down my door will get his head punched!"

It was fully half an hour before they descended, disheartened and growling, to bundle into their sleighs and depart. "Three hoots for the king!" cried one of them, trying to lead off, but his suggestion met with no response, and the jingling bells drowned his solitary effort.

A little later there was a shuffling, lumbering sound outside Matt's door, and Hoyt's husky voice came through the keyhole.

"Shay, ole man, you aren't angry with me, are you? Good joke. Dresh it up a bit and git fif' dollarsh! Didn't mean any harm—shole and honor, didn't mean any harm. Great newspaper stuff, shat story. Royal Broughton returnsh to childhood's home, and I got fif' dollarsh for it. Come along and painsh town red. Come along, you old stiff!"

• • • • • • • •

The Manaswan Banner printed the Clarion tale in full and by that one issue lifted Matt from obscurity to local greatness.

Matt's own appearance contributed not a little to the deception. Men who have led adventurous lives on the frontiers of civilization usually get a peculiar stamp—a peculiar and marked individuality. Matt was not only good looking, but there was something unusual, attractive and even distinguished about him. It was impossible for any one to "place" Matt; the Sherlock Holmeses were always baffled; he fitted into no class and yet had an "air." This capacity to rouse interest, favorable interest, is a human possession of great value. It has also, of course, its drawbacks. When the Banner raised Matt to kingship Manaswan was thrilled, but not altogether surprised. Manaswan had long been aware "that he was somebody out of the way."

One result of the grotesque fiction was to bring Matt into contact with some of the better families of the place. The Cleghorns, the Randalls, the Russells and the Bucks—all in some manner or other contrived to scrape acquaintance with him. These social overtures, made first out of sheer curiosity and in most instances inspired by the women, opened to Matt a number of pleasant, if somewhat stiff and old fashioned, households. And he was led finally into the extravagance of buying evening clothes and began to cut a modest dash in Manaswan society.

It wasn't the best society, however. There was an upper crust still, to which the Cleghorns, the Randalls, the Russells and the Bucks were as houris outside the gates. In this higher realm were the Marshalls, the old general and his daughter, who rode thoroughbred horses and lived within a vast park; the Derwents, owners of the shoe factories; the Bells, and others—an aristocracy of wealth and compactly exclusive. The old general had been American minister to half the courts of Europe and was described as very "grand."

Matt enjoyed the homespun gayeties to which he was now so often invited—the candy pullings, the parties where they played games, the jolly sleighing rides and suppers. They offered him a more enlivening companionship than he found in the boarding house, which in contrast grew drearier every day till its fly specked walls took on the aspect of a morgue. But money was ebbing fast, and the arrival of spring and Daggancourt's lengthening face all hastened his resolution to leave Manaswan and pay a flying visit to Kentucky to spy out the land. The mules were calling, and it was time for dreams to become realities! Daggancourt would have bought a pair in Manaswan, loaded their joint effects on a wagon and started off. But Matt was not such a burner of bridges. He would prudently inspect mule territory and mule conditions and then return with well formulated mule plans.

While nerving himself to depart and putting it off from day to day on one excuse or another, he wrote to Snood & Hargreaves, the San Francisco jewelers, saying that he had made up his mind to part with the ring and requesting them to remit him the $4,500 by express, deducting whatever interest had accrued. It was not without a pang that he dropped this letter into the box. It marked the knell of those easy going days at Mrs. Sattane's. It had now to be mules in earnest, with hard work and frugal living and evening clothes put away perhaps forever.

He spun out his farewell calls, dillydallied, held back all he could, but at last the inexorable morning arrived. Daggancourt was there in an automobile. Matt's suit case, packed bursting, stood ready on the porch, together with a large brown paper package of the overflow. His pockets bulged with hard boiled eggs and sandwiches, and never was a man more apparently destined for instant departure—when the telephone bell suddenly rang and Bridget came rushing out to say that Mr. Doty wanted Mr. Broughton on the wire.

At the moment it seemed an intolerable infliction. Mr. Doty was a clergyman, a mild creature of an anxious cordiality, whose acquaintance with Matt was of the slightest. Matt took up the receiver with the intention of making short work of the reverend gentleman, an intention emphasized by the honk of Victor's horn, imperiously bidding him to hurry.

"Hello," he said.

"Oh, Mr. Broughton," returned Doty, "this is just to remind you of our church social tomorrow night, tickets 25 cents, including hat check, and to say I simply cannot take a refusal. Please tell me that you will come."

"Come!" cried Matt. "Why, I'm leaving this minute for Kentucky!"

"Put it off, then," protested Doty. "I have a special reason—a very special reason—for wishing you to come. Indeed, I must make my request imperative. Oh, Mr. Broughton, refuse me if you like, but do not say no to one of the sweetest and most gracious of our young patricians."

"Can't help it," exclaimed Matt curtly. "Sorry to disappoint you, but really"—

"Mayn't I try to persuade you, Mr. Broughton?" said a new voice in his ear—a girlish voice with the indescribable cadence of good breeding. "I've been counting so much on meeting you tomorrow night—in fact, I only agreed to come for that reason."

Matt's own tone softened.

"Do tell me who you are," he asked. "I oughtn't even to wait for that, but I'm too flattered not to."

"I'm Miss Marshall," she replied, "General Marshall's daughter, you know—or I suppose you don't know, though"—

"Miss Marshall!" cried Matt, dazzled at the name. "I had no idea I was talking to angels unawares. Of course I know you, in a faroff, cat looking at king sort of way. Who doesn't?"

"I know you better than that," she returned gayly. "Let me count—yes, it's five times I've seen you, and once I was so close to you in the music store that I might have touched you. I am sorry I didn't now—hold out my hand, I mean—but it's a world where people are too easily misunderstood, isn't it? And here we are, like ships that pass in the night—with you going to Kentucky. Must you really go to Kentucky, Mr. Broughton?"

"I'm afraid I have to."

"Does that mean you've found Manaswan horribly dull? But of course it does. People only stay here who have to—like barnacles on a rock."

"I don't know. I've liked it well enough," stammered Matt, "though you make me ashamed to admit it. I think I'm sorry to leave the old place, specially now."

"That settles it, Mr. Broughton. You simply must come!" exclaimed the young lady. "Please tell me that you will!"

Matt listened eagerly as she laughed again and then struck his flag. The sound of his voice startled him with its earnestness.

"Certainly, if you wish it," he said. "It's too charming an invitation from too charming a person for me to refuse."

Apparently Miss Marshall was a little taken aback. There seemed a shade less cordiality in her tone as she replied, "Oh, if you would much rather not, you know—if it's inconvenient or anything—please don't let me put you out."

"Oh, but I'd love to come. Really and truly I would."

With an even more ambiguous: "Oh, thanks! Then we will expect you. Goodby!" the phone was closed.

Poor Daggancourt was terribly cast down at the news and expostulated tremblingly, with tears in his eyes. He was so humble, so quaveringly restrained, that his reproaches were harder to bear than if they had been more outspoken. Mrs. Sattane and the others were merely surprised, very much surprised indeed, and listened with the greediest of ears and the most evident incredulity to the tale of a forgotten promise to Mr. Doty.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

St. Raphael Ont., Jan. 5th

"Four years ago I had such pains in my back that I could not work. The pains extended to my arms, sides and shoulders. I used many kinds of medicine for over a year, none of which did me very much good. I read about Gin Pills and sent for a sample and used them and found the pains were leaving me and I was feeling better. So I bought one box and before I had used them all, the pains were almost gone and I could keep at work. After I had taken six other boxes, I was entirely cured and I feel as strong as at the age of 30. I am a farmer, now 61 years old."

GREAT BATTLE IMMINENT NORTH OF CARPATHIANS

Initial Stage of Conflict For Hungary's Wheat and Oil Areas Goes in Favor of the Slavs, When a Russian Force Attacks Austrian Army.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 29.—Evidently the opening stage of the new campaign, which has been forced on the German staff by the Hungarian crisis, will be a great battle north of the Carpathians. They have spread very large forces across eighty miles of front, covering the outlets from the passes eastward of Bukiat. They have developed some advance during the past three days, but this causes no anxiety. It is a process which the Russians have induced them to go through twice already, when they were defeated in the same region. The best results have always been won hitherto in the Carpathians by drawing the enemy forward from the densest woods to the open country sloping towards Galicia. This battle must greatly influence the entire southern campaign, for as to Serbia and Transylvania, it is an infinitely more serious matter than the constant collisions in the centre of Poland, which, for the time being, are the least important factors in all the Russians' battle line.

The initial stage of the battle has already brought the Russians a valuable success. The Austrians, who had gathered strong forces near the outlet of Yaslisk Pass, were suddenly subjected to a Russian counter-attack and suffered heavy losses. Their fighting begins to reveal the same fatal defect that ruined them in the early period of the Galician campaign. They enter the battle with good discipline and up to a point fight stubbornly, but when the battle is prolonged into the third or fourth day, an entire division suddenly throws up the sponge and the idea of surrender becomes infectious. The position of three Bavarian corps in Hungary has now been definitely established. One is congregating on the western border of Transylvania and two others in the region south of Temesitar, where they might turn upon Roumania or Serbia, according to the requirements of the situation. There are also six Austro-Hungarian corps in this region.

The scope of Russian operations in the Mazurian Lakes region, in East Prussia, is steadily growing. The battle front of fifty miles is being pressed westward toward strategic railway points, possession of which will remove any possibility of attack on Poland from the north and will imperil the position of Gen. von Francois' army between Miawa and Soldau.

The new Russian army in northern Poland, with its left flank on the Vistula, has met no decided resistance, and is now but a short distance from the frontier, with the Germans retreating before it.

Before Warsaw the Germans continue to attack along the line from Borjimow to Skierniewice, without success.

In Southern Poland the result of the battle of the last two days is still in doubt. The main German effort is now directed there against the Russians northeast of Cracow, to stop the advance on that stronghold and aid the Austrians in their struggle to regain passes in the Carpathians.

FRANCE RAISES MORE MONEY.

Sum of $200,000,000 is Added to Issue of Treasury Bonds.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—The Chamber of Deputies adopted yesterday a bill increasing by 1,000,000,000 francs ($200,000,000), the issue of treasury bonds which limits the amount to 3,500,000,000 ($700,000,000). It also provides for the issuance of short time treasury bonds.

The Minister of Finance, M. Ribot, declared before the adoption of the bill: "After six months of war the expenditures of France have amounted to only 3,900,000,000 francs ($780,000,000) of the amount originally appropriated. If before the war we had said that after six months hostilities we would have been so far from exhausting the sum at our disposal it would have been received with smiles of skepticism. We have confidence in the unlimited resources of the country, and in its will to continue the struggle to the end."

The Novoe Vremya states that in order to establish the legal status of bomb-dropping Russia will place the Germans captured in the Zeppelin, which recently attacked Libau, on trial.

FIRST SHOT TOOK FUNNEL

Aurora Played Havoc With Kolberg

STORIES OF BATTLE

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Further stories of Sunday's sea fight, as told by the men of the British squadron, are given in The Daily News. The light cruiser Aurora was in action with the German cruiser Kolberg, and her first shot carried away the Kolberg's midship funnel. Her gun raked the German ship, which, when last seen by the Arethusa, was in a helpless and sinking condition.

Some men who took part also in the Heligoland Bight battle in August said: "The Bight fight was a picnic compared with Sunday's fight. This was fine sport."

On one destroyer, it is stated, the crew sang "See How They Run." But there was quite another tale from the Meteor.

"We were told," said one man, "to act as a decoy. Our commander is noted for his seamanship. We double-banked our fires and we went ahead, letting out dense volumes of smoke from our funnels. We were like a piece of greased lightning. We did some fancy skating and the German gunners must have been sick at missing us time after time. We spun around at times like a spinning top, but they got us twice, and we got a shell into our boiler-room, which laid four of our fellows out at once. Then we got another in the stern, and this stopped our merry little dance. We were sorry, and yet we were not. We wanted to go back again, but we had to be content with watching the game of hare and hounds. We saw the Blucher go down. The sight was magnificent, yet horrible."

"I don't think much of the German airmen," interposed a comrade. "They dropped bombs, and I believe that they drowned many of their own men by doing so."

A putty man is useful, but is apt to be hard to get rid of after his period of usefulness is over.

At Brooklyn, N. Y., Louis Stone, five years old, and Dorothy, three, daily had seen their mother, Mrs. Rose Stone, bathe their infant sister, and they tried to do as she had done. The result was the drowning of the infant.

EXTEND ENQUIRY

as such solicitor and particularly the acts, matters and things wherein such conflict may or would arise by reason of his being a member of the said Board of Education and the following statement contained in the letter of G. N. Gordon, Esquire, to the Examiner, dated December 31st, 1914, wherein he says,—"A story that I am seeking the solicitorship for the Board of Education which I do not want and would not take as the interests of the Board of Education and of the City may be in conflict and my view is that one man should not act for both," and the right of the said G. N. Gordon, Esquire, to be a member of the Board of Education while he fills the office of Solicitor for said Corporation and to make all proper and necessary enquiries in connection therewith and for such purpose that the Judge have all the powers which may be conferred upon Commissioners under the Public Enquiries Act and that he shall with all convenient speed report to the council the result of the enquiry and the evidence taken and that a duly authenticated copy thereof be sent to the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough."

Following the motion which was seconded by Col. Miller, Mr. Hill said "I am advised that if this resolution is passed and the investigation is granted by the City Council that the facts disclosed in such investigation will show that Mr. G. N. Gordon is disqualified to sit upon this Board.

"I am advised that the solicitor for a municipal corporation who is paid a salary is an officer of such corporation and as such is disqualified by law from being a member of the School Board in the same municipality.

"I am further advised that the law is that the municipal council and the school board must be entirely separate and independent of each other and free from the influence and control of each other as there are so many matters in conflict between these two bodies. Mr. Gordon in his address to the electors recognizes this principle because he says,

"A certain 'pot hunter' who may be financially interested if I am elected has circulated the story that I am seeking the solicitorship for the Board of Education which I do not want and would not take, as the interests of the Board of Education and the City may be in conflict and my view is that one man should not act as both."

"In matters of conflict between this Board and the Municipal Council Mr. Gordon could not conscientiously advise this Board as a member of the board to take a certain course and as the paid officers and adviser of the City Council advise them to take an opposite course. The matter is of such consequence and of such public importance that I deem it my duty to introduce this resolution and if it is carried and the investigation granted I propose to press the investigation and to follow to its legitimate conclusion the results of such investigation."

No discussion took place and the members immediately adjourned after the chairman had put the motion which carried unanimously.

Bert Quinn, aged 30, died in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, yesterday, as the result of injuries received late on Wednesday night, when his horse ran away. Quinn was a farmer living on Pittsburg road.

Col. Williams Better.

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—Two messages have been received at the Militia Department concerning the condition of Col. Victor Williams at Salisbury. One states that he is slightly better and the other that he is about to report for duty. The nature of his illness is not known, the original statement that he was suffering from meningitis having been corrected, but without further information.

Not Possible This Year.

VICTORIA, B.C., Jan. 29.—The report of the royal commission on agriculture secured at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars has been laid before the Legislature. The commissioners recommend the Government to advance money to settlers on the land, but the Premier explained it will be impossible to give effect to the recommendations this year.

tion of better Sunday School equipment and accommodation reported that the work of investigation was well under way and that should financial conditions improve, a complete report would probably be made to a congregational meeting, before the end of the year.

The committee is Messrs. G. Walter Green (chairman), A. McFarlane, Geo. Edmison, R. M. Waddell, W. J. Henry, J. I. Allin, W. S. Campbell, Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., E. B. Fowler, F. E. Kerr, B.A., W. I. Chisholm, M.A., W. G. Read, W. A. Richardson, G. W. Gilman, Richard Lees, M. A.

The choir reported a good year under the leadership of Herbert C. Treneer and showed a balance in choir fund of $60.27. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Treneer for his services. The choral class conducted on Monday evenings by Mr. Treneer showed an enrolment of 42 members. This class is comprised of young people in the congregation who are interested in singing. From its membership the choir will be reinforced from time to time.

The Sunday School report contained the following suggestive paragraph:

"A very pleasing and encouraging incident in connection with the work of the year occurred in May. At that time an effort was made simultaneously throughout the Presbytery to get the members of the older classes to definitely decide for Christ. This effort took the form of personal and individual work on the part of the minister and it met with a response that was as gratifying to the school as it must have been to the parents and indeed to all who have the interest of the work at heart."

The Women's Home Missionary Society and Women's Foreign Missionary Society were amalgamated in May. The contributions from these societies for missionary purposes was $326.82, of which $110.17 was contributed for the Women's Home Missionary Society and $41.65 by the W. F. M. S. before amalgamation. The name of the new society is The Women's Missionary Society.

The Ladies' Aid showed receipts of $323.23 and an expenditure of $237.79 showing an active year in this organization. This society has a special fund in the bank amounting to $260.38.

Rev. James Rollins has entered upon his fifth year as pastor of the church.

Poincare Visited London.

LONDON, Jan. 29. — That the French and British armies, reinforced by nearly five million fresh troops, are preparing to launch a terrific offensive against the Germans in the western theatre of war, was reported here yesterday, after it had become known that President Poincare of France paid a secret visit to London last week and conferred with King George, Premier Asquith and War Secretary Kitchener.

Mr. Ames Explains Patriotic Fund

Requirements for the Present are $150,000 Per Month

The Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Peterborough Relief Association has received a copy of an address recently delivered in New Brunswick by Mr. H. B. Ames, M.P., the Honorary Secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The remarks of Mr. Ames gave a very comprehensive explanation as to how the five million dollar Canadian Patriotic Fund for the soldiers' wives is being raised and administered. His statements included a record of the past five months.

Mr. Ames touched on the work of the prime movers and the reasons why a central organization was necessary so as to equalize the assistance given the soldiers' dependents. By the end of 1914 the work of organization in respect of the National Fund, had been in the main, completed. Provincial branches had been formed and were operating satisfactorily in Nova Scotia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island. Throughout Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick the city and county system had been inaugurated, each district dealing directly with the head office at Ottawa. These eastern branches up to the middle of January, had sent in to the honorary treasurer of the fund, the Hon. W. T. White, about $2,350,000, while the total cash disbursement had amounted to about $550,000, leaving net cash resources available for future needs to the extent of $1,800,000. The several branches had collected further sums amounting to $400,000 which had been deposited at the capital of each province, and could be drawn upon only with the consent of the honorary treasurer of the National Fund. Furthermore, many committees are collecting on the instalment plan with a view to having a regular and continuous source of revenue, and it is probable that before the year of 1915 comes to an end the present receipts will have been doubled.

With reference to the popular criticism that the fund is already too large and other demands are more pressing, Mr. Ames said, "We never endeavored to the slightest extent to divert moneys that are going to other similar organizations such as the Belgian Relief Committee and the Red Cross Fund. They are deserving of every dollar which they may receive. But experience has gone to show that giving is a habit and that a generous community will help all, while a stingy community will do very little for any good cause. At the present time it is estimated that between nine and ten thousand soldiers' families in various parts of Canada are being assisted from the Patriotic Fund. This involves a present expenditure of $6,000 per day. If the war continues and successive contingents are called for, we may expect this demand to steadily increase. There is less danger of a surplus than for a call for renewed effort. At present we require $150,000 per month. This sum will shortly reach $200,000 and probably $250,000 per month before the end of the year. The National Committee will feel secure, only so long as the monthly contributions coming in to the central fund are keeping pace with this monthly outgo."

"From all appearances," concluded Mr. Ames, "we are likely to have a long and terrible war. Canada is only beginning to send her contingents. The Prime Minister recently stated that no limit would be placed on the number of men that should go to the front. The Canadian contribution may reach 100,000 men or the number on overseas service may be even larger. We must, therefore, prepare for continuous help to the soldiers' dependents. Every part of Canada should share in carrying the common burden. Hence the work of organizing the Canadian Patriotic Fund must continue until there is not a town, village, hamlet or rural district in this entire Dominion which has not been asked and which has not responded to the call for help."

COURT WHITE LILY FORESTERS

Officers for Juvenile Branch Are Installed

Court White Lily, No. 86, Juvenile Branch, Ancient Order of Foresters, held its monthly meeting on the evening of January 27th, in S. O. E. hall, C. Ranger J. Hendry in the chair. A large gathering of the members turned out, it being installation of officers. After the usual business, District Chief Ranger Tom Hendry proceeded to install the following officers:

Past Chief Ranger—Bro. H. Morton.
Chief Ranger—Vincent Miller.
Sub Chief Ranger—A. B. Hendry.
Secretary—Arnold McWilliams.
Treasurer—A. Laws, Sr.
Senior Woodward—S. A. Lawes.
Junior Woodward—Percy Dallin.
Senior Beadle—Gordon Boyce.
Chaplain—Bro. Halliday.

One candidate was initiated and propositions for two more were received. The prospects for 1915 are good and the boys are displaying great energy in their quest for new members.

The boys then sat down to a heavily-laden table of good things, which soon disappeared in the usual boyish fashion, after which the Chief Ranger, Bro. Vincent Miller, in a neat little speech, advised the members to come out to the meetings and work for more members. A song by Bro. H. Hendry took the boys off their feet, and 'Tipperary,' sung in chorus, helped to put away the big feed and leave room for fruit, which caught the eyes of the boys. Bro. J. Marshall sang "The Maple Leaf" in great style, followed by Bro. Ball with a recitation. Bro. Harrison then gave a neat little song, "The Busy Bee," after which the boys formed a circle and sang "Auld Lang Syne," finishing with three cheers for Branch White Lily.

BATTLE AT LA BASSEE PROVES BRITISH ARE SUPERIOR TO GERMANS

Correspondents Tell Vivid Stories of Great Hordes of Germans Driving Down on British Positions at Givenchy Again and Again and of Their Final Defeat in Counter-Attack.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Several of the newspapers this morning publish from their correspondents in France additional accounts of the recent heavy fighting in which the British took part.

The Times correspondent: Details of the fighting near La Bassee clearly show that the action is the most important fought on the northern battle-line in many weeks.

The objective of the German attack was the little village of Givenchy, which has been held by the British troops since the beginning of the year. Givenchy is only four kilometres from La Bassee, which is in the hands of the enemy.

From a military point of view, the importance of the small agricultural and mining village lies in the fact that it stands on rising ground in a wide, marshy plain, which commands the high road from La Bassee to Bethune and which is skirted both by the railway and the canal.

The attack developed very suddenly. In the morning dense masses of the men emerged from the trenches and charged our positions. The rifles and machine guns opened fire from our trenches and the houses of the village. Heavy loss was inflicted upon the enemy, and they were repulsed again and again, but each time they were reinforced and returned to the charge.

For nearly three hours the issue hung in the balance, until the weight of overwhelming numbers began to tell in favor of the enemy. Our fire could no longer stay them, and they came right up to our trenches, throwing hand grenades with considerable effect as they came.

Then with a final rush with the bayonet the trenches were won. Our men retired in good order upon the village and upon the second line of trenches.

The enemy, flushed with success, pressed onward, with the object of capturing Givenchy. The 56th Prussian infantry and a body of the Seventh Pioneers actually penetrated into the village streets. A furious fusillade opened then from the houses, and they broke and fled.

The British artillery near Festubert, on the north, and the French artillery, on the south, now came into action. Their shrapnel fire made the road back to La Bassee practically impassable. The German supports could not reach them, and many fell in running the gauntlet, while some succeeded in reaching the trench they had captured at so great a cost.

At one o'clock in the afternoon the British counter-attack began to develop. One unit was directed to retake the lost trench, and, aided by the French on their right, they did it manfully and well, charging often knee deep in water and mud. By nightfall the lost positions had been regained.

The Chronicle correspondent says:

The initial engagement in the La Bassee region was but a prelude to the severe engagement still in progress on Wednesday. This revival of desperate fighting synchronizes with the spell of very cold but dry weather, which made the ground firmer every day this week, lending increased mobility to both infantry and artillery, and filling the men with more of the exhilaration of hand-to-hand fighting. Nevertheless, the country side is still soft enough to make the Germans in their attack show a decided preference for the roads, and this explains how on the main thoroughfare between Bethune and La Bassee such a grim massacre of the enemy took place.

ASSASSINATION IS ATTEMPTED

Report Current of Attack on King of Greece

LONDON, Jan. 29. — A Central News despatch from Copenhagen gives a report that an attempt was made several days ago to assassinate King Constantine of Greece. This report is conveyed to Copenhagen in a despatch from Constantinople, which says that the authority for the report is the statements of travelers arriving at Constantinople. The attempt on the life of the King, according to the rumors, was made at Patras, Greece.

Report Untrue.

LONDON, Jan. 29. — The Greek Minister here declares that the Constantinople report of an attempt to assassinate King Constantine is absolutely untrue.

University Debate Cancelled.

TORONTO, Jan. 29. — The debate which was scheduled between Ottawa and Toronto Universities, in Ottawa to-night, for the championship of the university debating series, was cancelled yesterday by action of the Dominion police in Ottawa. The subject was: "Resolved that Russia is a greater menace to Great Britain than Germany."

Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany has been stricken with a severe attack of influenza and is seriously ill. He is under the care of two physicians at his headquarters.

FRENCH LIKE THE ROYAL FUSILIERS

The City of London's Regiment, the old Fighting 7th Royal Fusiliers, have gone straight to the hearts of our French allies. Deprived of their shoulder and cap badges by admiring Gauls, the Royal Fusiliers have been compelled to denote the name of their regiment by inscribing in indelible pencil upon the front of their caps the letters "R.F." These letters, of course, have been taken by the French people as meaning Republique Francaise, or, in other words, a delicate compliment to France. After this, naturally, a gallant Royal Fusilier can do no wrong in France.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—War advances today outdid anything hitherto in regard to prices of grain. May wheat took the lead and crossed above $1.50, a mark which not long ago seemed fabulous. Active buying carried other cereals as well as wheat to new high levels. Wheat closed unsettled at 5-8c to 1½c above last night, corn finished 3-8c to 3-4c up, oats a shade to 1-8c up and provisions at a rise of 15c to 30c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 28.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and as cables were stronger at another sharp advance in prices, a fair amount of business was done for February shipment. A very strong feeling prevailed in the local market for oats and prices scored an advance of 2c to 3c per bushel, with sales of 10,000 to 15,000 bushels of local Nos. 2, 3 and 4, at prices ranging from 58c to 60½c, and carlots of No. 2 were placed at 61c. The tone of the market for Manitoba barley was also very strong and prices are much higher, with sales of carlots of sample grades for shipment to Toronto at 78c track here. Some 5000 bushels of the same grade were placed with a local buyer at the same price. Manitoba feed barley, for shipment from the west, was quoted at 84c, and No. 3 at 92c per bushel, track. American No. 3 yellow corn sold at 85½c, and Argentine corn is quoted at 86½c. A very strong feeling prevails in the flour market, and another advance in prices is expected soon. A fair local trade is doing, but the demand from foreign buyers is quiet. The tone of the market for millfeed is stronger and prices are $1 per ton higher, with a good demand.

The trade in butter is fairly active and prices are firm. Cheese is quiet. Eggs in good demand.

PRINCESS PATRICIAS "PETS" ARE MEDALLED VETERANS

Every Soldier Among Them Is Entitled to a Service Medal and Some of the Men Are Noted Characters—The London Daily Chronicle Discusses the Personnel of the Unique Regiment.

The London Daily Chronicle has the following on the camp of the P.P.C.L.I. at Winchester before they left for the front:

"Why is it we are here, ready for the front, while the rest of the Canadians are still on Salisbury Plain? Because we are all trained men. It's a lesson for the Old Country."

Thus spoke a brawny Scottish non-com. in Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, otherwise "Pat's Pets," a splendid battalion, 1,100 strong.

It is significant, but not surprising, that this battalion should have precedence over the remaining 32,000 Canadians. The battalion is composed entirely of men who have seen service, many of them active service.

It has the largest percentage of war-ribboned men in the British army, for something like 80 per cent. claim one medal, while quite a number can show several. One has actually five medals, beginning with the Zulu medal of 1879.

There is hardly a regiment or unit in the British army which is not represented in the battalion. They are many of them ex-non-coms. who have emigrated on discharge, and on the outbreak of war they came hot foot from all parts of the Dominion, from Halifax in the east to Vancouver on the west.

In the sergeants' mess may be seen scores of township pennants which were worked by the ladies of Canada and given to the men on their departure.

Strathcona's Horse, of South African fame, is also well represented, and from the States, too, there came recruits, men with service in the U. S. cavalry, artillery and infantry, all eager, as they term it, to "have a go at the Kaiser."

Nor is Australia left out, and worthy of note, there are two Boers, who fought against us in the S. A. war. Says one of them (he has the biggest chest measurement in the battalion): "Once we fought against you, but now we fight with you."

A big Scot, Stewart Paterson, a member of the Rhodesian Mounted Police, who knows Africa "from the Zambesi to the Cape," is one of the non-coms. He had been on furlough in Canada three weeks when the war broke out. He immediately applied for and got a year's leave, and promptly enlisted in the P.P.C.L.I. This will be his third campaign. He is a "hard case." So is Jim Lee of Toronto, late of the Queen's West Surreys, another non-com. Says a comrade of him: "West Africa couldn't kill Jim, so we're sure the Kaiser can't."

Armourer Sgt.-Major Hoad, though 58 years of age, is one of the toughest men in the battalion. This will be his fifth campaign. The first of his four medals is for the Egyptian war of '82, when he was a troop sergeant-major in the Royal Irish Dragoons Guards.

From Saskatoon comes one of the marvels of modern surgery. That is Sergeant Dudley Ward, of the Ambulance detachment. He served in the S. A. war in the Queen's West Surrey Regiment, and he was terribly shattered by a Boer shell. The doctors considered him a hopeless case, but with a wonderful constitution he nullified the doctors' prophecies, and from being a hopeless case he has recovererd to join the band of "hard cases" as the members of this joyful battalion style themselves. Not all the suffering caused by that Boer shell could keep Ward back. I believe he was well known on the Rugby football field in the nineties.

There are several other individuals of note of which the battalion is proud. They will tell you with gusto that they have as comrade Jack Munro, who fought Jeffries and Jack Johnson.

They also refer proudly to their bulldog mascot. "No goats for us," they say, but most of all they boast of their huge 17-hands mule, dubbed "The Kaiser." They say he is a fine worker and a beggar to think, and "you can tell when his brain is working by the cock of his ears."

Then there is their band of Highland pipers. This band puzzled a recruiting officer in a distant township, so he wired to headquarters "Piper band wishes to enlist in body. Will I enlist them?" With brevity worthy of Napier came the reply "Will you not!"

The battalion claims to be as fit as any in the British army, and it is an absolutely independent unit. Its equipment, even to bootlaces, was paid for by the second in command, Colonel Hamilton Gault, before the battalion was offered for service.

The men, having colonial experience can turn their hands to anything. There are enough master cooks with Aldershot certificates sufficient to staff a dozen battalions; there are many more machine-gunners than can be used, and the same may be said of signallers. There are sufficient ex-gunners to man a battery of artillery, and there are also several expert aviators enrolled.

Men Fight For Day's Work.

MONTREAL, Jan. 29.—The struggle for existence of the city's unemployed becomes a real struggle every morning when, before daylight in Youville, at the far north side of the city, laborers fight fierce hand to hand battles for the possession of picks and shovels that they may get in a day's time on the construction of the water system.

Roumania Assures Bulgaria.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 29. — A despatch from Berlin states that it is privately reported from Sofia that the Roumanian Prime Minister has given Bulgaria assurances that the preparations for war in Bucharest are not directed against Bulgaria.

Roumania will not be ready for war before March, according to a German report.

MAKING HOG-RAISING PROFITABLE WORK

Swine are kept on the majority of farms throughout the country, but no systematic attempt is made to make hog-raising an important part of the operations. In the Spring most farmers purchase from two to half a dozen newly-weaned pigs and fatten them during the Summer for late Fall or early Winter slaughtering. Here the swine operations cease until the following Spring, when more young stock is purchased and the work of developing the new animals duplicated. While this means growing the home supply of pork and a small surplus to sell, it is not profitable, nor in keeping with the opportunities afforded the industry on most farms.

The cost of raising swine can be reduced to a minimum on the ordinary farm. There is so much continually going to waste that the hogs can utilize and turn into a profit. When properly managed the work of caring for the pigs amounts to very little and can be performed along with the other chores. Every farmer should give greater attention to hog-raising, for it affords a chance to increase the annual income of the operations in general. The old method of growing a few pigs during the Summer and Fall should not be considered in establishing the new swine enterprise, however.

In forming a swine department on the farm start with sows and breed the little pigs at home. If the proper animals are purchased pigs will be had that are bred to lay on flesh and fat rapidly. Because of this inborn tendency the pigs will develop twice as fast as the scrub animals formerly bought. If more pigs are raised than accommodations are had for, they can be sold, when weaned, for fattening or breeding purposes and a larger price secured than if they were of no particular breed. Every farmer ought to purchase two or three thoroughbred sows now that will produce their litters in early Spring. Later on, a boar can be obtained to head the new swine department.

FARMERS ARE URGED TO HOLD THEIR STOCK

Saskatoon, Sask.—In a new country in process of development from the raw by mostly poor men, and mostly on credit, the existence of accumulated money for the weathering of any unpropitious exigency, cannot be expected. If the oat crop fails, as it did last season, and if feed, in consequence of this and other circumstances, soars to high prices, the rushing of stock upon the market is the inevitable outcome. And, as the market which, under normal conditions, would now be very strong, can only absorb a certain maximum without glutting, prices have been most disappointing of late. It is true that the effect of a glutted market upon prices has been aggravated by the poor condition of much of the stock received, and which resulted from feed shortage. It was unfortunate, too, that the recent removel of the United States foot and mouth disease emargo flooded the markets of that country at the same time, and with results equally disastrous to prices. However, this unsatisfactory condition is merely transitory, a fact that is now being impressed upon the farmer by the Dominion and Provincial Governments, which are doing everything possible to enable the holding of stock for better prices inevitable in the near future. Meantime, all authorities are agreed that meat is likely to ascend into the realm of luxuries ere very long. Certainly, all indications point that way.

Bravery of Belgians

When Caesar in his "Commentaries" pronounced the Belgae the bravest of all the Gauls he was merely recording the reputation that they had earned on many a battlefield and which they maintained even in defeat. Caesar overwhelmed more than a quarter of a million of them in the year 57 B. C. on the banks of the Aisne. After the crushing defeat on the Aisne several tribes, headed by the Nervii, made a last stand on the Sambre, taking the offensive against the Roman legions and very nearly defeating them by the intensity of their onslaught. But the training and discipline of Rome saved Caesar, and the final result of the heroic resistance of the Nervii was their practical annihilation. Their peace emissaries said, "Of 600 senators we have lost all but three; of 60,000 fighting men but 500 remain." It is from this stock that the Belgians of today are descended.—F. J. Splitstone in Leslie's.

Facts About Furs.

The costliest sable is the "Yakutsk or Russian skin that runs "silvery"—that has, in other words, a number of equally distributed white or silvery hairs among the soft and silky brown ones. The black silver fox is most valuable when there is no silver in it—when it is a pure rich black throughout. Ermine, contrary to the general belief, cleans well and is an exceedingly durable fur. Sea otter skins measure 48 by 24 inches. The best color is a dark bluish brown, almost black. Fisher is a large marten found in Canada and the northern United States. The skin measures 30 by 12 inches.

New Laid Eggs In Demand.

Considerable quantities of Canadian eggs are being sold in England, but the demand is so far in excess of the supply, that new laid eggs are selling in Birmingham for 75 cents a dozen, according to latest trade reports. Last year Russia shipped $23,000,000 worth of eggs to Britain and Denmark shipped over $10,000,000. The sources of supplies have been very largely cut off by the war and there is a great market for all the eggs Canada can supply. In all probability, the scarcity will become still more acute in the near future.

PETES LINE-UP WILL BE SAME AS IN OSHAWA

Locals Should Have Little Difficulty in Winning Tonight

The Peterborough Intermediates left today at noon for Bowmanville, where they will play their final district game with the Rubber Necks tonight. The Petes should have very little trouble in defeating the Bowmanville crew. They opened the season here, and the locals vanquished them quite handily. Since then the Peterborough team has improved one hundred per cent.

The Peterborough team will line up the same as in Oshawa.

MORE LIKE CIRCUS THAN SOUL-SAVING MEETING

New York Man Was Disgusted by Evangelist Billy Sunday's Talk

Evangelist "Billy" Sunday's revival meetings in Philadelphia are attracting attention throughout the East, and newspapers in nearly every large city in the North Atlantic States contain letters praising or condemning the evangelist, or at least discussing his methods. The following letter by Luther B. Davis in an issue of the New York Sun conveys the impression one of Sunday's meetings made on a New York man who went to Philadelphia to hear the famous evangelist:

"A friend and myself, moved by the newspaper accounts of 'Billy' Sunday's evangelistic exploits in Philadelphia, went over to that city the other evening to see the former baseball player shoo the devil out of Philadelphia. To us, good Methodists though we are, the whole spectacle was disgusting, although we confess to having been highly amused. We occupied advantageous seats, and could see this so-called man of God from every angle. The place was crowded. A study of the crowd convinced us that those who came remained to scoff and not to pray.

Much Like a Circus.

"Near us sat a delegation of young men who made the objects of their prayerful devotion a bevy of young girls who occupied seats in front of them. When the audience started to sing, the young men launched forth in tones loud enough to be heard by hundreds of people that well-known refrain, 'How Dry I Am, Nobody Knows How Dry I Am.' Everybody who heard the song giggled and laughed. The girls appeared to enjoy it as much as their admirers. At one incident of the hymn that was sung by the audience two of the young men started to do the tango. The effect was contagious, judging from the numer of others whose bodies swayed to and fro to the tune of the hymn.

"We were particularly amused by the methods employed by Billy in making converts, or, as he terms it, 'hitting the sawdust trail.' In old-time Methodist revivals the penitents were led to the altar or went there at their own volition. Not so with Billy.

"There was no examination of one's past deeds, no solemn act of dedication, no prayer, and consequently no sorrow, or promises to God to do better. There was a handshake, a smile. Such is Sunday's method of salvation. As far as the eyes could reach, men sat chewing tobacco and expectorating upon the sawdust. Some ate peanuts and popcorn purchased from the fakirs outside. It was more like a circus than a soul-saving meeting.

"A handshake with Billy is sufficient unto salvation, according to the pulpit ethics of this itinerant pulpit mountebank. My friend and I watched the whole spectacle with feelings of sorrow for such a man, who for the Lord's own sweet sake breaks chairs, tears off his collar and necktie, dances and raves like a maniac, makes use of talk that reeks of the gutter, takes the Bible's most beautiful stories, strips them of their sacredness, vulgarises them with the slang of the slums, talks to and of Jesus Christ in the language of the longshoreman.

"As, for instance, using a telephone, 'Hello, God, this is ——.' An indescribable shock came to us when Billy in the midst of a prayer burst into a sardonic laugh, jumped up from his kneeling posture and said to the devil, 'Ha, ha, old man, you're up against it now. Come on you —.' Here he assumed the attitude of a prize-fighter and punched at an imaginary devil.

Rush to Saloons.

"Personally, I doubt whether any good will come of these evangelistic performances. If religion itself becomes irreverent, how can it teach man reverence, which is the very life of religion? After Sunday has decamped from Philadelphia, taking with him his well-filled money bags, it is doubtful whether those who 'hit the trail' will ever see the inside of a church. No one should judge Sunday's success by the size of the crowds that go to hear him. Thousands go to see this man and laugh at his efforts.

"After we left Sunday's circuslike meeting another shock awaited us. As the hundreds of persons filed out of the many exits from the Tabernacle we noticed that the men made straight for the saloons, several of which are in the neighborhood. The thirsty 'hit the trail' — the trail that ended at the brass rail. Here was a jocular situation, to say the least. It consistently proved to us that a majority of those who went to hear Sunday did so out of curiosity.

"The several saloons were doing a land office business. Two of them had additions built to their bars, and all of them had extra bartenders to serve the crowds, which stood four deep. At one of the saloons the line extended from the curb to the front door.

"The incongruity of the thing caused much laughter from those who waited to quench their thirst when the city proper was reached. No doubt these saloon keepers would be willing to pay Billy a bonus to remain the rest of the year.

"There is one sure thing about Billy; he separates the crowd from their dollars, religiously and successfully."

CLEARING UP THE TANGLE

In Erie and the Home of Curly Blount

ERIE FOR CENTRAL

Erie, Penn., Jan. 29. — Final efforts were being made in Youngstown yesterday to round up enough cash and a big enough bunch of supporters to assure the Steel City a Central League ball club this year. President Louis Heilbronner, who with Thomas J. O'Connor of this city spent Tuesday in Youngstown working out the problem, remained in that city until the situation seemed favorably set.

Mr. O'Connor returned from Youngstown Tuesday night with the report that close to $6000 had been subscribed, through season tickets and donations. The other $4000 necessary is expected to be easily obtained.

Central League magnates will meet this week to settle the circuit's appearance for 1915, and unless the altogether unexpected should hapen—and the bottom drop out of Youngstown — Erie will be one of the cities in the league. Things have progressed so well in the Steel City, however, that there is little fear for the future.

In this city the baseball wheels have already begun to move, and arrangements are now being made to send out contracts to the players reserved on last year's list. Larry Quinlan is now negotiating with Geo. O'Neil and others relative to the terms of his coming, and it is expected that within a few days the situation will be brought to a head.

When conditions have so shaped themselves, the Erie Exhibition stockholders will meet and decide what course they wish to follow concerning the ownership and conduct of the Erie team. It is expected that they will vote to share with O'Neil in the ownership and running of the club, but to what extent cannot be prophesied. The company has about $1200 in cash available, and could raise almost any reasonable amount desired. So far as O'Neil is concerned, he is willing to meet the Erie company on its own terms.

PETERBOROUGH AND PICTON WILL PROBABLY PERFORM ON MONDAY AND WEDNESDAY

First Game to be Played Here if Petes Win at Bowmanville Tonight—Clubs Disagree on Referee—Excursion Train May be Run to Picton

Although the Peterborough club has received no official notice from the O. H. A., it is very probable that in the event of Peterborough winning this evening in Bowmanville, the dispute between Picton and Peterborough for district honors will be settled by home and home games, total goals to count. Clarence Morgan of the Picton club 'phoned Harry Morgan of the local club yesterday, and they agreed that Tuesday and Friday would be dates which would meet the satisfaction of both clubs. R. M. Glover, the local member of the O. H. A. executive, took the matter up with Secretary Hewitt, but the latter was prepared to permit home and home games only on condition that the first game be played Monday and the second Wednesday. If the teams could not play the games on those dates, it would be necessary to have the dispute settled by a sudden death game on neutral ice. The local club have signified their willingness to play Monday and Wednesday, and as soon as Picton does likewise, the O. H. A. wil send out official notice to that effect.

Disagree on Referee.

The Peterborough club has asked that Lou Marsh be appointed referee for the two games. Walter Knox's organization have asked for O. G. Bernhardt of Brantford. When teams disagree on the official, the O. H. A. make the appointment, so who will be on hand to ring the bell is not known.

May Be Excursion to Picton.

The Peterborough club may possibly run an excursion to Picton on Wednesday night, and if so it is expected that there will be some three or four hundred fans aboard.

Reserved Seats on Sale.

The price of tickets for reserved seats for Monday night's game has been raised to 75 cents. There will be no advance in the prices of the other seats. Tickets for the reserved section can be secured at the Morgan Hardware Co.

TWO SCHEDULE GAMES AND ONE EXHIBITION BATTLE IN THE SENIOR CHURCH LEAGUE

St. John's and George Street Won Regular Game While St. Luke's Vanquished St. Andrew's in Exhibition

Two schedule games and one exhibition game were played at the rink last evening by Senior Church League teams. In the regular league games the winning teams were St. John's and George Street who conquered Murray Street and St. Pauls respectively. The attendance was not large, the reason probably lying in the fact that the mercury hovered around the zero mark. The hockey was well up to the usual standard of the league particularly the battle between George Street and St. Pauls. In the first game St. Johns had the edge and played hockey by times that would keep Sid Gibb's St. Luke's septette going hard to win against.

Six Man Hockey.

As only six men of each roster were present the fans had an opportunity of witnessing six man hockey in the first game. The players were not accustomed to having three on the forward line and for a while efforts to combine were futile as the passes went astray. Toward the latter part of the first half however the Anglicans produced a little more team play with the result that the score at half time was 4-0 in their favor.

Immediately after the resting period the Murray Street team pressed hard but the rear guard of their opponents withstood the attack and soon had them shooting outside the defence. The long shots were easy picking for Walter Flowers. The St. John seven kept on forcing the play for the greater portion of the last period but once they let up St. Johns assumed a very aggressive spirit and notched two counters, making the total 6-0 in their favor when the final gong sounded.

Flowers and Lewis the goalers both played good hockey. Morphet Heard and Stevenson were about the pick of the St. John's team. This Stevenson is the correct build for a hockey player and is only a kid. A couple of more winters and he'll be heard of. For Murray Street Fitzgerald and Eastwood played well.

The teams:

St. Johns.		Murray St.
Flowers	goal	Lewis
Lebar	r. def.	Brown
Morphet	l. def. ...	Eastwood
Heard	centre ..	Fitzgerald
Pammett	l. wing	Webb
Stevenson	r. wing	Lapp

St. Pauls Scored First.

Just a minute after play was commenced in the George Street-St. Paul game, the forward line of the latter team swooped down and scored. It was only a flash in the pan. George Street "hit their stride" and through team play and hard back-checking they soon had annexed four goals. The score at half time was 4-1. During the last half the game was a little more even. St. Pauls pressed hard but the defence of the Methodists composed of Wade, Lowes and Darling were too strong. The Presbyterians had to be content with one more counter while George Street made their total 6.

The game was fast in sections while at other times the players lagged a little. The keen ice made the going good and combination was a little more prevalent than it has been on previous Senior Church League evenings. The forward line of the winning team produced the best team play although Cranfield, Fleming, Loucks and Waters for St. Pauls combined quite frequently. This Waters is formerly of Norwood and will do.

The teams:—

George St.		St. Pauls.
Darling	goal	H. Hall
Wade	r. def.	Turner
Lowes	l. def.	Kerr
Palmer	rover	Loucks
Stewart	centre	Fleming
Tully	r. wing ...	Cranfield
Darling	l. wing	Tully

St. Lukes Won Another.

The exhibition game between 10 and 11 o'clock found St. Lukes playing St. Andrews. The East City team won when the two sevens met before and won again last night but to do so they had to step much faster than they anticipated. "Had" Lees was between the irons for St. Andrews and although four beat him he played a very good game. The final score was 4-0. Two were scored by St. Lukes in the first half and two in the last.

Harold Morrow, the Junior O.H.A. player, handled the games very satisfactorily.

The teams:—

St. Lukes.		St. Andrews.
Butcher	goal	Lees
Cox	r. def. .	McWilliams
Regan	l. def.	Swanson
Hagerman	rover	Sharpe
Butcher	centre	Brown
Phillips	l. wing	Henry
Stewart	r. wing ..	McDonald

CONTRACTS SENT TO BALL PLAYERS

Committee Will Endeavor to Secure Funds by Subscription

At the meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Baseball Club last evening a committee was formed to investigate the possibility of raising money by subscription, for the purpose of assisting in financing a Canadian League team this season. The committee will go thoroughly into the matter and report to the directors in the course of a week or so.

President W. H. Denham, Vice-President E. G. Patterson, and Director W. H. Bradburn tendered their resignations. All the liabilities in connection with the past season have been cleared away.

The contracts were sent to the players on Wednesday.

In Doubt.

Ethel—Oh, dear me! I don't know what to think! Algy asked me last night if I wouldn't like to have something around the house that I could love and would love me. Edith—Well? Ethel—Well, I don't know whether he means himself or whether he is thinking of buying me a dog!—Puck.

BIG PROGRAM FOR CURLERS

Several Events Scheduled for Next Week

The good old game of curling is in for a boom next week. Games are coming in a bunch, and "ice maker" Angus McIntosh foresees a real lively week ahead of him. It happens that the open bonspiel is on for three days which alone is enough to guarantee delight to the curling fans. On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, if the weather continues as it is, the 'spiel will be the head-liner. On Monday there will be something doing all the time. Orillia will be on deck with four rinks of their curlers to play off for the Neill Sheppard trophy, which is being contested today in Orillia by four rinks from Peterborough. A personnel of those who left from here was unavailable, but the skips were G. W. Morrow, T. F. Matthews, H. F. Foot, and R. Neill.

Old rivals in the form of Bobcaygeon, to the number of four rinks, will be on hand to participate in the contest for the Fitzgerald-Bottom trophy on Monday, and intend to remain over to take part in the bonspiel. Orillia, when they come on Monday, will also remain, and participate in the open event.

Just how many competing knights of the broom and stane will be on hand for the 'spiel is unknown. Some twenty or thirty rinks have been circularized by Mr. Brownscombe, secretary of the local club, in the district as far west as Toronto and east to Belleville. It is usually the last moment before some of these reply, signifying whether or not they will be on hand. They have till Monday night to send word. It is plainly to be seen that a full house will be recorded next week.

For the benefit of curlers, Mr. Brownscombe is having a schedule board prepared to be placed at the rink, upon which will be posted the standing of the various rink teams, so that one can see at a glance where his team stands.

There were no schedule games on last night.

All members who desire to play in the bonspiel and who have not already been attached to any rink, are asked to meet at the rink Saturday night at 7.30.

AUSTRIA COMPLAINS.

She Wants U. S. to Interfere For Prisoners in Russia.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—(Via wireless to London.)—Word was received here yesterday from Vienna that the Austrian Foreign Minister, Baron Stephan Burian, had telegraphed to Secretary Bryan at Washington, expressing regret that the American diplomatic representative in Russia, into whose care Austrian interests in that country were committed at the outbreak of the war, had not been able to afford better protection to the Austrian and German prisoners of war. Baron Burian suggests that the American ambassador at Petrograd make new representations to the Russian Government in behalf of the prisoners.

The condition of the prisoners, Baron Burian says, has not been improved, either in France or in Russia, since Secretary Bryan took action in their behalf some time ago. Baron Burian requests a telegraphic reply from Mr. Bryan.

REPORT ON THE HOUSE OF REFUGE

Seven Deaths Recorded During the Year

INMATES NUMBER 37

Fred McKee, chairman of the board of management of the County House of Refuge, yesterday submitted the report for 1914, to the County Council.

At present there are thirty-seven inmates (twenty-six men and eleven women.)

There have been seven deaths during the year.

The room in the attic has been finished and fitted up and is being occupied by two of the old men who were somewhat troublesome.

Thirty-five windows and one door were fitted with Chamberlain's metallic window and door stops, also one new radiator was installed and is giving good satisfaction.

The receipts were $857.22 and the expenditures $4,941.41.

The report says: You will notice the average cost a trifle lower than last year, and we feel satisfied the ratepayers at large will understand that each board from year to year are doing their best to economize consistent with the providing of proper comforts for the old people.

HERE'S ONE FOR NICK CARTER

Where Did the $5 Bill Come From

A young lady and a young man were participants in a rather unusual incident yesterday which almost caused a police court case and may yet cause a civil case for the recovery of $5.00. The lady in question, according to her story, was standing in front of Turnbull's store yesterday afternoon inspecting some of Dame Fashion's latest productions. While there she could see the reflection in the glass window of the man in question. Her story is to the effect that she had a five-dollar bill in her coat pocket, and the man reached his hand into her pocket and took it. She turned and grabbed the bill from his hand and then informed the police. This morning she failed to appear to give evidence, and the charge was withdrawn.

According to the young man's side of the story, he was proceeding along George street in front of Turnbull's store and he found a five-dollar bill Just as he picked it up the lady turned and asked him if he had found five dollars. She did not wait for an explanation, but grabbed it from his hand. He told his story to P. C. Blade.

G. N. Gordon is acting for the man, and he stated this morning that he intended suing the lady for the five dollars, on the grounds that the finder is the owner unless it be proven who the real owner is.

JEWELER FINED FOR SELLING AFTER HOURS

Lindsay, Jan. 29.—A by-law governing keeping retail stores open after hours and selling after hours was made workable at the Police Court yesterday morning, when Mr. Milburn, jeweler in Stevens' confectionery store, was fined $5 and costs, $8.45, for selling after hours. It appears that Mr. Milburn has been holding an auction sale of jewelry, and was fined for doing so after hours, the offence occurring on Tuesday night last.

For a similar offence on Wednesday night he pleaded guilty, and was taxed the sum of $2.

HOME GUARD

Church Parade Will Leave Armouries at 10.15 Sunday Morning

The Home Guard held the weekly drill and instruction last night, and also had a marchout. At the armouries orders were read as follows:

Peterborough, Jan. 28, 1915.
Orders by Lt.-Col. J. E. L. Goodwill, Officer Commanding Peterborough Home Guards.

The Battalion will parade with bands on Sunday, January 31st, to attend Divine Service. The members of the Roman Catholic Church will parade as Company 12, and be in charge of Chaplain J. J. Duffus. They will drop out at St. Peter's Cathedral.

The members of the Protestant Churches will attend All Saints' Church.

The church parties will rejoin each other at the corner of Charlotte and Rubidge Streets at 12.30 p.m.

The parade will leave the armouries at 10.15 a.m. sharp and proceed via the following streets, George and Hunter to Rubidge and return via Rubidge, Charlotte, George to Armouries.

A class of instruction will be formed and organization meeting will be held Monday evening, February 1st, at 7.30 sharp. Every officer and non-commissioned officer is expected to attend. The companies shooting Monday night will so arrange their shooting to be finished at 9 o'clock, as the ranges will be required for a lecture by the class.

Shooting will be continued as usual on Saturday and Tuesday afternoons. The cadets will use the ranges at 4 p.m. on Tuesdays under the direction of Musketry Sergeant Tillcock.

LADS OF TENDER YEARS GET DRUNK

Said They Got Liquor at Livery Stable

The Havelock Standard says: The evils of a poorly enforced Local Option law were strikingly illustrated in court here on Friday last, when Ray Gibbs, a 15 year old boy of town, was charged by License Inspector Williams with supplying liquor to Willie Haughton, aged 13, Cecil Colquhoun, aged 15, and Arthur Watson aged 16. Haughton swore that Gibbs produced a bottle of whiskey at the gravel pit, that he opened it and drank over a cupful, and all the other boys also partook of the fiery beverage. He was so drunk that after a time he didn't know any more until he woke up in bed next morning. Colquhoun verified Haughton's evidence but didn't take as much and wasn't affected as badly. Young Gibbs swore that he got the bottle at Andrew's livery stable where he saw three or four other bottles, and where he said he expected to find liquor, because he had procured it there before. He had never heard of any one else, however, getting liquor there. Magistrates Joyce and Mathison fined Gibbs $10.00 and costs for the offence, or $16.35 in all.

BOBCAYGEON BIRDS WERE PRIZE WINNERS

The handsome brass umbrella holder given by Messrs. Cole-Burger Co. as a special prize for the Lindsay Poultry Show, for the largest number of entries of any variety, was captured by I. R. Stewart, of Bobcaygeon with seventeen Aristocratic Buff Orpingtons. They were a great bunch, and admired by many. Mr. Stewart, besides this trophy, won first and third on cockerel and second and third on pullet in keen competition.

DR. GRENFELL IN LABRADOR

Missionary Work Illustrated by Mrs. Wakefield

The noble work which the missionaries in Labrador and Newfoundland are carrying on in looking after the welfare of the inhabitants of those two countries was well illustrated both by word and picture by Mrs. Wakefield, wife of Dr. A. W. Wakefield, in her lecture last night in St. Paul's Church on "Dr. Grenfell's Work in Labrador." Mrs. Wakefield has spent some years in Labrador and Newfoundland in furthering the work of Dr. Grenfell. Not only is the spiritual welfare of the dwellers in these remote expanses looked after, but their bodily and material welfare as well.

In her lecture last night, Mrs. Wakefield gave a most simple, yet comprehensive survey of the work now carried on in Newfoundland and Labrador. She told of the hospitals, the orphanage, and other phases of the social and educational work of the missionaries and also told much that was new regarding the life and manners of the countries she knows so well. Of especial interest was the parts relating to the medical and industrial work. The people of Labrador and Newfoundland are particularry prone to tuberculosis owing chiefly to the inadequate housing conditions. In the industrial classes the women are taught to sew, the men are taught how to better their livelihood and the children taught to read and write and to take care of their own bodies. Mrs. Wakefield related many interesting personal experiences among the people, the dogs, and the reindeer of Labrador. The lecture was illustrated throughout by a splendid series of lantern views many of which were colored beautifully.

The lecturer is speaking in many other places in the Dominion, and the proceeds from the lectures will be used for mission work.

THE LAST DAY

Of Reid's Successful January Clearance Sale

We have determined to make the last day of this successful Clearance Sale the greatest selling day of the two weeks of which it has been running. Everything in our entire stock is cut, and deeply cut. Our Spring apparel will soon be here, and as our motto is not to carry a garment from one season to another, we are clearing all winter goods regardless of cost. Saturday, January 30th, ends this great Sale. Come! You will find here the most remarkable bargains in winter coats, suits and dresses you have ever been offered in Peterborough.

Coats Half Price

The way we have slaughtered coats is a shame. No woman has need to be without a new coat when she can buy them at the prices we have them marked. If you need a coat, don't think of buying one until you have seen ours. We are selling them for less than they were manufactured for.

We are headquarters for dresses, and are demonstrating the fact to perfection. Here are some values that cannot be beaten: $5.00. Dresses, serge, $2.95; $8.00 Dresses, serge and fancy materials, $4.79; $10.50 Dresses, all kinds, $6.75. We have many others cut on the same basis.

THE REID CO.,
WHERE THE STYLES COME FROM

Separate Skirts at Remnant Prices

You cannot buy the material equal to what is in these skirts for the prices below quoted, to leave out the cost of making: $2.50 and $3.00 Misses' Skirts, $1.49; $5.50 Ladies' Skirts, $3.49. Others just as cheap.

40c Ladies' Ribbed Hose 26c

In our show window tonight and tomorrow you will see all sizes in Ladies' 35c and 40c, some 45c, seamless Hose, for the ridiculous price of 26c.

STUNG AGAIN

The City is Billed for $1290 for Power

SOMEBODY BLUNDERED

"It's an injustice," exclaimed Ald. Johnston, at the finance committee meeting yesterday afternoon, when the committee found itself confronted with an account of $1290 from the Hydro-Electric Commission, the bill being for power used in the new street lighting system.

On behalf of the city, the Hydro Commission contracted for power with the Peterborough Light & Power Company. All went well till the Council decided that there were too many lights, and that half the number would do. The lights took a rest but the power continued business as usual, just the same as though no change had been made.

Why this should have been permitted and who was at fault could not be fully explained, and as a faint hope, the committee delegated Ald. Johnston to take the matter up with the manager of the Utilities Commission. Some time ago the Commission learned of the situation and stopped the waste.

Ald. Green was inclined to absolve Ald. Johnston of blame and place the responsibility on the Hydro Commission, which body, he claimed, had not protected the city. In the first place, Hydro engineers recommended all the lights, when the city did not need them. Ald. Johnston had cut off half the number of lights, and in the belief that he was also cutting down the cost of power by one-third.

Ald. Stratton said that the compqany knew that the power was being used.

"I would not consider that a fair deal," remarked Ald. McIntyre.

"They were playing the fox game, as they always do," commented Ald. Johnston.

There is sufficient money left from the appropriation for last year to meet the account.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Sunday school convention of the township of Smith and village of Lakefield will be held on Wednesday, February 3rd, in the Baptist Church, Lakefield. Afternoon and evening sessions. An interesting program has been arranged, and everone is invited to attend.

APPEAL TO BE HEARD.

The appeal of the C. P. R. and T., H. and B. Ry. against a judgment made at the sitting of the fall assizes here which awarded Arthur Sharpe of this city $1000 as damages for the death of his son, Thomas, who was killed in Hamilton some time ago, will come up at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

TURKS LOSE GUNS AND AMMUNITION

Also Left Hundreds Dead on the Field After Battle With the Russians

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 30. — A Reuter despatch says the Russians have routed Turkish troops in Persia and have entered the city of Tabriz, which the Turks occupied early this month.

The official statement at Petrograd says, concerning this fighting: "We came in contact with the enemy in the valley of Alashkout, and after a stubborn battle, captured their colors, guns and supplies. The enemy retired towards Tabriz, leaving many hundreds of killed on the field."

The statement also says the Turks were repulsed south of Batum, retreating precipitately.

STOP EXPORT OF OATS AND MAIZE.

PRETORIA, Jan. 30. — The South African Government has prohibited the export of oats and maize, owing to the needs of the defence forces.

County Council Appointments

The first 1915 session of the Peterborough County Council which has been continuing since Tuesday last was brought to a close this morning. The various committees submitted the last of their reports today and they were adopted. The recommendation from the Finance Committee that the sum of $400 a month until the June session be paid toward the relief of suffering as a result of the war, to be paid in a manner authorized by the Warden, and Councillors McKee and Shaw, carried. A grant of $100 will be made to the Plowman's Association in the event of a match being held in the County.

The following was the report of the Committee of Appointments:—

Moved by Mr. Brown, seconded by Mr. Forster, that Jas. O'Leary be appointed caretaker of Chemong Br.

Moved by Mr. Jobe that Mr. T. Black be appointed caretaker.

There being no seconder for Mr. Jobe's motion a vote for Mr. O'Leary was carried.

That Messrs. Shaw and Crough be a committee to deal with the matter of appointing a caretaker of Pigeon Creek Bridge, and if satisfactory settlement can be made with Mr. Flood, and they have power to reappoint him.

That E. A. Peck be a member of the Board of Auditors to audit the Criminal Justice Accounts.

That Dr. Morgan be re-appointed gaol surgeon on the terms as previous years.

That H. Nesbitt be re-appointed caretaker of buildings at the same salary as last year.

That W. H. White, Esq., be re-appointed fireman at the same salary as last year.

Caretakers of bridges were also appointed.

Officer in Charge of Quebec Brigade

Colonel J. P. Landry, who will command the Quebec and Maritime Provinces Brigade in the Second Contingent. He is a lawyer by profession, but has passed through all ranks in the militia, from private to colonel.

SOLDIERS BANQUETTED BY KITCHENER LEAGUE

Each Was Also Presented With One Pair of Socks, at the Y.M.C.A.

About seventy-five in all sat down last night to a banquet given by the Kitchener League to the eighteen members of the Y.M.C.A. who have volunteered for active service in the Third Contingent. Patriotism and patriotic speeches featured the toast list. The honor of presiding fell to Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A. Beside him were seated His Worship Mayor Buller, Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., Jas. Connal, Rev. Canon Davidson, M.A. and Mr. C. N. Meserve, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. At the same table were Major Medd, Lieut.-Col. Johnston and Mr. Joseph Wearing, [illegible] Rev. Mr. Rollins, B.A., was [illegible]

[illegible] soon disposed of [illegible] spread, the wants [illegible] looked after by [illegible] League. [illegible] sat together at one table each wearing a red flower. Toasts to the "Empire," "Canada," "The City of Peterborough," "Our Guests," "Boys of 1st and 2nd Contingents," and "The Ladies," were proposed and heartily honored. The speakers were Major Medd, Mayor Buller, James Connal, Alvin Morrow, C. E. Sisson, Rev. Mr. Peever, Rev. James Rollins, Rev. Canon Davidson, Lieut.-Col. Johnston and C. N. Meserve. Frequent reference was made to the gallant showing that the boys of the association were making in answering the call for help from the motherland. It was with feelings of pride that the city could point to the stand they were taking in such a crisis and the physical and spiritual training received inside the association should be of inestimable value to them in the stirring times that they would likely share. Following the toast list each recruit was presented with a pair of socks, knitted by the Kitchener League, a gift that was heartily acknowledged by the recipients. Mrs. Knox is president of the Kitchener League.

NEW ROOMS ARE OPENED

Social Evening Spent With Protestant Benevolent Federation

Altogether the opening of the new Protestant Benevolent Federation hall in the Bradburn block which took place last night might be called successful and gratifying to the committee and trustees. An audience of respectable proportions turned out and enjoyed a program that was varied enough to prove interesting. Among the occupants of seats on the platform were Mayor Buller who did the honors as chairman, Alderman W. J. Johnston, Wm. Kemp and Rev. F. A. Conners. Mayor Buller extended his customary cordial words of welcome to all present and hoped they would take advantage of the commodious premises when occasion required. One of the features of the night was the delightful lack of formality that prevailed.

A quartet composed of Messrs. Lee, Ridyard, Hartshorn, and Naish sang nicely and received an encore. Encores were the order of the evening.

Bandmaster Beer of the Salvation Army showed his skill with the cornet in a couple of well rendered selections. "Billy" McLaren is losing none of his popularity or ability as a comic sketch artist and was given a cordial reception in a couple of numbers. Mrs. Lock followed with a classic selection but about half way through she seemed to be dissatisfied with her piano acompaniment and stopped to assume charge of the instrument herself and finished her number by playing her own accompaniment. Her vocalism is deserving of praise however. An instrumental quartet composed of members of the Salvation Army band, Messrs. Beer, Richardson, Kelvet and Robertson, gave several selections and won rounds of applause. Mr. Hartshorn showed some skill as a mimic taking off a parson rather cleverly both in articulation and appearance. As an encore he sang a character song, "I'm the Most Miserable Man."

Rev. Mr. Conners told some funny stories and after another selection by the Salvation Army quartet the gathering dispersed.

Before the entertainment the visitors spent some time inspecting the premises and passed many commendatory remarks upon its nice, bright, inviting appearance.

BRITISH VICTORS NEAR LA BASSEE

Attack of Three Battalions of Germans Driven Back With Heavy Losses

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 30. — The official statement today says: "Generally speaking, January 29th passed quietly. In Belgium there were artillery engagemnets. In the front of Cuinchy, near La Bassee, the British army drove back an attack delivered by three German battalions. The Germans in this case suffered heavy losses.

"To the north of Arras, near Neuville-St.-Vaast, our heavy artillery brought a German battery under its fire and caused caissons of the enemy to explode.

"In the sectors of Albert, Roye, Soissons, Craonne, Rheims and Perthes there were yesterday artillery engagements at times rather severe.

"Our battries acquitted themselves efficiently.

"In the Woevre district, near Flierey, Germans exploded a mine, the object of which was to blow up our trenches. All they did was to destroy theirs.

"There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front."

LOOK FORWARD TO IMPORTANT FIGHTING.

LONDON, Jan. 30. — Two conditions call for comment particularly this morning at the hands of British observers of war —the Austro-German concentration in the Carpathians, which is regarded as a menace to the Russian armies in Bukowina, and the Russian activities in East Prussia, which have been characterized as a threat to German forces in that territory. Thus, at the extreme ends of the immense eastern front, military operations of greatest importance are now developing.

On the western front another big battle in the vicinity of Soissons is confidently expected, as is a bitter conflict near Le Bassee, where the Germans have been piling up reinforcements.

The Russian front in East Prussia is only fifty miles from Koenigsberg. Many miles to the south, Russians are battling with forces of Teutonic allies amid the snow of the Carpathian passes, but as usual with mountain fighting, the situation is confused. It will be hard to form a clear picture of the situation until either the Russians emerge in force on the Hungarian plains, or the Austro-German forces hammer them back to the passes, and perhaps at the same time cause the Russians to retreat from Bukowina.

FOE'S LOSSES IN EAST PRUSSIA EXCEED THOSE ON THE WEST FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 30. — The Daily Mail correspondent at Copenhagen says the German casualties suffered in East Prussia during August and September were published today and far exceed the enormous losses on the west front.

The third infantry reserve regiment no longer exists. All its officers have been killed or wounded, or are reported missing. The 1st and 161st infantry regiments were annihilated during fighting in Poland.

MUST PAY IT

Council Can't Dodge Overdraft of $18000

OF SCHOOL BOARD

In regard to the request of the Board of Education that Council pass a bylaw authorizing the issue of debentures to pay for the extras in the erection of the Queen Mary and King George Public Schools, Mayor Buller moved at the finance committee meeting yesterday afternoon that a bylaw be prepared. He said the Council could discuss the matter.

"We've got to pay it; we can't get out of it," declared His Worship.

Ald. McIntyre opined that the Board had paid a pretty good price for the land.

"The Board is supreme," said Ald. Green. "We can talk till dooms-day, and end up where we started."

"The sooner a change is made in the law, the better," said Ald. Johnston.

Ald. Green felt the committee should go on record as being against issuing debentures for large amounts without first going to the people.

Ald. McIntyre suggested that an investigation be made to find if there had been extravagance.

It was moved by Ald. Duffus, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that the matter stand, to be considered by the Council, and that the school board be asked to attend.

Ald. Green reiterated his statement that Council should not issue large debentures before first going to the people. Then if the people approved, the responsibility was theirs. "We have powers," he said, "that we might better let the people act on."

Pays Two Taxes.

M. E. Ketcheson has a business on Hunter street for which he pays a business tax. He also peddles wares, and the police say he must take out a license. Ketcheson does not think this fair. He cites the case of grocers and others who have a business stand and also take orders.

The clerk explained that Ketcheson did business for a Toronto firm, and on this account it was necessary to take out a peddler's license.

As the question is covered by the city bylaws, which are enforced by the police, Mr. Ketcheson will have to fight it out with the police. The clerk will write him.

Ald. Johnston wanted to know if a grocer, who solicited orders from others than his own customers was acting within the bylaw. No one seemed to be very sure, but thought the grocer was not violating the bylaw.

City Clerk's Department.

It was recommended to Council that the city clerk be instructed to employ a young man when the next change is made in the personnel of the staff, and that the clerk be asked to make the change within six weeks.

There is really very little in the recommendation, as the clerk already has power to make changes as he may see fit.

What the committee was trying to do was to bring about some scheme whereby the city clerk would secure a young men who could be relied upon to help him in the arduous duties of city clerk.

However, the whole matter of salaries and suggested re-arrangement of the civic departments will be considered by the Council on Monday night. Ald. McIntyre intimated that trouble was brewing and that a lively discussion would ensue. He was not prepared to make any definite statement, and he had not made up his mind that no changes were necessary in the city clerk's department.

"Well we don't expect it to be a love-feast," remarked Ald. Stratton.

"Or a prayer-meeting," added Ald. Johnston.

SIGNS OF THE END OF THE AGE.

The Rev. Robt. Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's Church, will begin a series of sermons tomorrow evening on, "Some Signs of the End of the Age." He will discuss during the series such signs as The Restoration of the Jews to Palestine, The End of the Mohammedan Power, The Rise of the Anti-Christ, the Battle of Armageddon.

Tomorrow evening he will speak on, "The Sign Foretold of our Lord, —"On Earth Distress of Nations," the Apostacy in the Church, and the Jews."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1915

THE AGRICULTURAL WAR BOOK.

WE HAVE just received from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, the Agricultural War Book, which is a credit to the Department and a valuable contribution to the published information relative to the great European War. It is very finely printed and well bound, and arranged in a manner that makes it of great service.

This Agricultural War Book is a presentation of facts and suggestions bearing on the present and probable future supply of agricultural products as influenced by the war.

It has been issued by the direction of the Honourable Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, primarily for use of the speakers who will address the Agricultural Conferences to be held throughout Canada. The articles have been carefully prepared by the Agricultural Commissioner and officers of the Department of Agriculture and other gentlemen keenly interested in this great topic.

As the title implies, it relates to agriculture, and should be of interest to all farmers who are concerned in production, particularly for the all-important year that is now upon us. Emphasis is given to the statement that 1915 is the year of Canada's golden opportunity, especially for the sowing of a large acreage of winter wheat. The immense size of the armies engaged will demand enormous supplies of grain, and, owing to the fact that devastation may extend over a much larger area than is now anticipated, much of what has been sown in Europe may not be reaped. Besides, there will be thousands of farms on which the harvesting will have to be left to women and old men. This lack of labour, together with that of transport, horses, and motors, will deplete hoed crops, such as potatoes and beet roots, and this shortage will have to be made up by wheat, especially the surplus wheat from countries like Canada. As for the crop in the United States, unfavourable weather and the appearance of field pests have considerably reduced the bright prospects of that country, and these same conditions may also produce evil effects in some European countries. It is, thus, a reasonable conclusion that high remunerative prices will be maintained, so that there is every inducement to the farmers to extend this year year their cultivation of wheat. The increased demand for coarser grains and fodders will also stimulate prices, so that economic interests and patriotic duty ought to cause the agriculturists of Canada to put forth extraordinary productive efforts during this year.

SIR GEORGE FOSTER ON THE WAR.

DESCRIBING the war as a fight between the German ideal which made the man for the state and the British ideal which put the man first, Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, in an eloquent reply to the toast of "The Empire," at the annual banquet of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers in Montreal, pictured the hammer which had been raised to shatter that Empire sending the rivets home and welding it together into one solid mass.

The speaker emphasized the necessity of each member of each profession to think, in terms, not of that profession, but of wider humanity. While it was a good thing to be a good engineer, or a good doctor, it was a much better thing to be a good citizen.

> "What are fighting along the battle lines of France and Belgium and Prussia and Austria and Russia are not men and guns. The men and guns are only the result of something gathered there for something. The things that are fighting are the ideals of government and liberty. The ideals are ghosts, in fact; but they come up, not as ghosts, but incarnated as living men. In blood and flesh the ideals suffer and are victorious."

There were being tested today in Europe the German ideal and the British. In the German ideal the state is dominant and the individual lives but for the state, and has neither conscience nor morals and has not to bow to the dictates of honour. That is the ideal of the German state, which was embodied by Prussia in the system of blood and iron. There was evolved the super-man and the super-state, with the German as the super-man and Germany as the super-state.

Dealing with Canada's part in the war, the first was, he said, to see the fight through. This was no time to speak of the future relations of the Dominion and the Motherland.

> "Think it over, if you will, but when the struggle for life or death is on, it is no time to put conditions. The first thing is to see this fight through, to save the Empire, and if we do it with simple faith and honest hearts, the Empire is just to all its parts, and every part will get what it deserves and what it is able to carry. We know that Canada will never be what she was before the first of August. We know and feel that when we emerge we will be a different people from when we went in. There is a return to the great verities of life. We are taking on a deep sense of responsibility and returning to the spirit of our fathers."

Sir George Foster, as Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Borden Government, has done excellent service to Canada in the articles published under his direction relative to Canadian and German trade. He is fully aware of Canada's duty and responsibility in this war, and is doing what he can to improve Canadian conditions and to help this country do its part in defending the Empire.

THEY APPLY TO CANADA.

DISCUSSING from an American standpoint the situation created by the European war, Mr. George Otis Smith, Director of the United States Geological Survey, emphasized the essential requirements of American industry. As his remarks are also applicable to Canada, they are quoted herewith:

> "Coming down to bottom facts, the United States will profit by the European war only as the nation makes larger and wiser use of its mineral resources. Foreign markets in the main can be won and held only as the quantity or quality of the "Made-in-America" product rivals that of the goods offered by the other producing nations. The buyer, whether he be in the Far East or in South America, wants the most and the best for his money. Yet it would seem a safe rule of national conduct that industry should begin at home, and therefore every industrial opportunity in America should be improved. If these opportunities are recognized and grasped, every one of us can indulge in optimism."

DR. ROCHE WILL NOT RETIRE.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT that Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, will not retire on account of his health, but will be a candidate at the next Dominion elections, will be gratifying to a very large number of Canadians. Dr. Roche has made a good minister, and has had to contend with long seiges of very serious illness, but he has fought them off, and, we trust, will be able to remain in Canadian politics for a long time.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SOME IDEA of the enormous quantity of boots alone that are required may be formed when it is remembered that there are now from eight to ten million men under arms, and that the average life of a pair of boots in the field is eight weeks. Small wonder that the manufacturers are busy. Nor is the private consumer likely to get his boots much cheaper in the near future. Indeed, so great is the demand just now for all kinds of leather that both the seller and the manufacturer can afford to be independent and to ask almost what they choose.

THE DISTANCE from New York to New Zealand by the Cape route is 11,571 miles, while by the Panama route it is 8,500 miles, a saving of over 3,000 miles. Under the old time-table by the Cape route, the American cargo boats called at Australian ports before coming on to New Zealand, but since the Panama route has been opened, the Dominion ports are the first touched at.

A DELICIOUS WAY to make good use of the stray bread ends is the old-fashioned chocolate bread pudding, says the opening lines of a new recipe. The amount of thought and energy devoted to disguising plain old bread scraps seems to show that the average man has developed wonderful introspective powers. Why not ship the scraps to the war and save the chocolate?

With Malice Toward None.

(London Times.)

We cherish no anger against the masses of our enemies. We pity them for the ease with which they have suffered themselves to be blinded and misled; but, as the wonderful Christmas scenes in the trenches showed, there is no malice on our side, and none in many of those who have been marshaled against us. We feel a stern and a righteous anger at the way in which this war was forced upon us and upon our allies, and at the savage cruelty with which it has been waged in Belgium and in northern France. For these things we shall surely exact reparation whenever we have the power; but we shall not exact it in a spirit of vindictiveness or hate.

PATRIOTIC ORGANIZATIONS.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I notice in the daily papers of our city the announcements of the meetings of different organizations, called into existence by the exigencies of the present war. We have the Daughters of the Empire, the Red Cross Society, the Kitchener Red Cross Club, the Canadian Kitchener League, and the Queen Mary Fund. This multiplicity of organizations, all presumably working for the same purpose, is a little mystifying to the unitiated, and you will confer a favor on some of your readers if you will explain the nature of these different associations, and the special work which each is trying to do.

INQUIRER.

It might be first stated that the local chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, which is a purely patriotic organization, was formed in this city about three years ago and the aim is to promote a spirit of patriotism and loyalty and assist in the military life of the city. The local chapter some time ago had erected a bronze tablet to the memory of the late Dan Spence who was killed in South Africa and the chapter has assisted in the social activities at the garrison. Since the outbreak of war, they have directed their efforts in other channels and have accomplished much in the interest of soldiers and the dependents of those who have gone to war.

The Red Cross Club is a branch of the parent body and the members have endeavored to help in providing those articles most necessary for the treatment of wounded soldiers.

The Kitchener Red Cross Club and the Canadian Kitchener League are new organizations. The members provide comforts for the soldiers now on active service. The Queen Mary Fund is another new organization whose aim and purpose is to add to the comfort of boys of the King. It is quite possible that better results would be obtained by the amalgamation of several of the organisations.

ARMAND LAVERGNE'S LETTER.

Editor Review,

Sir,—In view of many requests for information concerning the threatened revolution in this country over the Bilingual Question I would ask you to publish the following letter from Lavergne. It expresses what Cardinal Begin, Archbishop Bruchesi, the Legislature of Quebec, Bourassa, La Patrie, La Presse, Laval University, in fact all the representatives of the French race, have been thundering at our gates for weeks past.

J. H. BURNHAM.

The Letter in Full.

Quebec, January 2, 1915.

To the Editor of the Standard:

Dear Sir,—I have read your editorial, "Bilingualism Must be Fought to the Death." I am sorry I can't say I share its views of the question, but a frank expression of opinion is always the best and clearest way to truth and to the adjustment of any difficulty.

I may appear to you as ignorant, narrow-minded and prejudiced, but I fail to see why the spirit which made this confederation of ours cannot be kept up for its upbuilding and the attainment of its higher prosperity—be it moral or material. This confederation has been founded on the well-known understanding that there would be absolute equality of race, and language in Canada. You might take up Sir John A. Macdonald's answer to Mr. Dalton McCarthy on this very question.

We, in Quebec, have fulfilled our part of the bargain. Why wouldn't you do the same in Ontario? Mind you, there is no more text in the B. N. A. Act to protect English schools in Quebec than there is to protect French schools in Ontario. But this spirit of tolerance and justice is the spirit our fathers had when they made Canada. We intend to maintain it; why not you, in Ontario?

We could treat the minority in Quebec as we are treated everywhere else; but never shall we do that even if our brethren suffer, because it would be unfair, unjust, and two wrongs would not make a right.

The sentiment of those who think Canada should be one in language and religion is highly respectable, but let me tell you it comes too late. Even if the Roman Catholics were to disappear, the question of one religion would not be settled, would it? If the French language should be forced out of the country, this country would be but a pale copy of the United States. Is that your ideal?

We are the strongest barrier against Americanism and possibly annexation. Did our language ever prevent us from being loyal to Great Britain? Is unity impossible in a dual country?

Take Belgium, which has two languages, official and absolutely equal, did she not give the world the greatest lesson of united patriotism the world has ever seen? Was she not before the war the most prosperous nation in the world? And aren't her social and economical laws a lesson to humanity?

IF YOU ANGLICIZE THE FRENCH-CANADIANS YOU WILL MAKE THEM AMERICANS, BUT NOT BRITISHERS.

On the contrary, instead of persecution, give them justice, do to them as you would they should do unto you and you will have no more faithful defenders of British institutions.

Anyway, why argue: IT IS TOO LATE. THIS COUNTRY WAS BORN BILINGUAL AND IT WILL REMAIN BILINGUAL, OR IT SHALL END. We cannot close you out of it, neither can you close us. We have always treated you as brothers. Is it too much to ask to be treated as partners?

Our language is no dishonor; it is spoken by our King, our Governor-General and all educated Englishmen. What! by all educated men of the world! You say English is the language of America. Do you know that outside of Great Britain, Canada, the colonies and the United States, in all the rest of the world you have nine chances out of ten, if you don't know the lingo, to be understood in French and not in English, when doing business? Do not say this is not a crusade against the French language, and that you only want us to learn English. We know English well, I will not say perfectly, but fairly enough and better than 95 per cent. of English Canadians know French.

I was told in England an educated man could not know English but he had to know French. How many are educated in Canada?

The compassion of Bishop Fallon for the poor handicapped French-Canadian is only hypocrisy—that of a degenerate Irishman who, having lost his noble language and the glorious traditions of his forefathers, is jealous of those who have kept them. Let Bishop Fallon worry for souls, if he is a priest of Christ. His Master said: "Do unto others as you would others should do unto you."

As for "the interests of the French-Canadians," we will take care of that ourselves. We never asked Mgr. Fallon to be our guardian; the story of Abel is one of the first we learn in our inferior schools.

Let me apologize for this letter: I agree with the title of your article: YOU WILL HAVE TO FIGHT US TO THE DEATH. We WILL LEARN FRENCH and you can't prevent us. MAKE LAWS, WE WILL DISOBEY THEM; PUT US IN JAIL, WE WILL GO TO JAIL; KILL US BY FORCE OF ARMS, WE WILL DIE GLADLY. But deny our language, never. If we did, you would not think us fit to share with you this great Dominion. The whole Anglo-Saxon race would despise us, and rightly, too. WE WILL HAVE OUR LANGUAGE, THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGE OF THIS COUNTRY, JUST AS ENGLISH, TAUGHT IN OUR SCHOOLS OR THERE WILL BE NO SCHOOLS AT ALL. Is this policy of persecution, of injustice, of narrowness, good for Canada? Will it help our common country?

IF THERE ARE NOT ENOUGH ENGLISH-CANADIANS TO UNDERSTAND THAT CONFEDERATION HAS BEEN A COMPROMISE AND THAT EACH PARTY HAS GOT TO KEEP ITS SHARE OF THE PLEDGE, WELL, THEN, CONFEDERATION WILL DIE. For we would not think life worth living if we cannot live it with the glorious inheritance of religion, traditions and language our ancestors have left us.

FRENCH SCHOOLS.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—The following extract from the Bobcaygeon Independent is interesting:

"Quebec Provincial Legislature following the cue given by the Quebec hierarchy, has thought proper to express disapproval of the laws of Ontario regarding French schools in Ontario. The politicians and hierarchy of Quebec can always be relied upon to take every available opportunity of forcing their own interests. They evidently think that the present moment is a favorable one. DeWet, over in Africa, had a similar thought, and the Clan-na-gael of Ireland is affected with the same idea. It may be wise just now for Ontario to salt down this little affair for consideration later on. And it will not be any more tender when it comes out of pickle."

SYNOPSIS

Matt Broughton leaves the service of John Mort on a Pacific island to return to America. Mort gives him a valuable ring. Broughton promises to say nothing about the mysterious Mort and his woman companion. He is shipwrecked and must realize in San Francisco on the ring.

Raising $1,000 on the ring, to be repaid, Broughton returns to his old home at Manaswan. He thinks of going into the auto business with Victor Deggancourt, a colored garage keeper. Broughton is visited by the local editor, who calls him "king."

An unreasoning elation possessed Matt. He was eager to be alone with himself and dream, for had not a lovely queen stooped to notice him and thrown him a flower?

Never was a Saturday night more slow of arrival, yet when at last Matt stood at the entrance of the church and heard the babel of voices within he was stricken with a sort of terror. He entered guiltily and once inside had a fresh spasm of dismay to find he was apparently the only man there in evening dress. The place was crowded and hot and noisy and disconcerting; committeemen with rosettes grabbed his hand and welcomed him as "brother;" excited young ladies surrounded him, holding up objects for sale and overwhelming him with saucy pleasantries; little girls, with immense bows in their hair, tried to drag him toward the booths, of which there was a row on either side of the church, forming a sort of street or promenade between.

Over all, here, there and everywhere, was Mr. Doty, feverishly cordial, perspiringly gay, gimleting his way through the crush to make sure that every one was having "a good time."

It was all very kindly and simple and good natured and genuine, and had it not been for a devouring suspense, and a restlessness that kept Matt ever on the alert, he would have entered into the affair with his usual amiability. But at the moment it was maddening. He had to laugh and chatter; to eat things he didn't want to eat; to buy things he didn't want to buy; to be hilarious when arrested by the comic policeman—infliction after infliction to one whose heart was in a tumult, and whose eyes were ever on the watch.

CHAPTER IV.

"Always call me Chris."

BUT Mr. Doty was more to be trusted than Matt had thought; of a sudden he came bustling up like a rushing little tug, towing two statelier ships. Bewildering introductions ensued; Matt found himself shaking hands with an imposing gentleman with a white mustache; shaking hands with a young lady in blue foulard, whose dark, soft glance lingered curiously on his own. Matt hardly knew whether she was pretty or not—or at least very pretty. His first impression was more of graciousness, youth and breeding; of rather an impudent little mouth, parting continually on perfect teeth; of delicately penciled eyebrows, a nose slightly aquiline, and an abundance of glossy hair, which under the lamplight appeared darker than it really was.

"I've met a considerable number of kings in my time," said the general genially, "but always glad to add another to the list, you know. It's rather a reproach to us, I'm afraid, that we let the papers discover you first."

"Oh, those papers!" exclaimed Matt. "But really, general, what is one to do? I might as well run after an express train as try to deny all that rubbish."

"Nobody is safe in this country," agreed the general, with great good humor. "You can go to bed at night an honored citizen and wake up in the morning an alliterative outcast—Merciless Marshall Murders Maid or something equally surprising and unpleasant."

"It's the smudgy pictures I hate most," put in Miss Marshall. "I've had mine stuck all round with little cupids shooting arrows into an unfortunate foreign nobleman."

The general, still laughing at his own sally, was greeted and diverted by a passing acquaintance, affording Matt the opportunity of asking Miss Marshall if she would not like to make the round of the booths with him. Her face showed her pleasure at the proposal, and in her answering look, so arch and eager, Matt seemed to read something that made him dizzy. She was more than pretty; she was exquisite, and the sudden realization of her beauty was not without a dart of pain. They moved about, talking—or, rather, trying to talk, for the noise and jostle caused constant interruptions—talking and hoping for chairs and eluding the general like a pair of truants, all the while looking into each other's eyes and laughing. But there were no chairs; there was not an empty spot in the whole church except in the pulpit, and that was set inaccessibly in midair like a wooden lily on a long, twisted stem. Matt gazed at it much as a castaway sailor might gaze at an airship—an unmanned airship drifting high above his head. But as he gazed his resolution grew, and he announced it recklessly.

"But they'll all see us!" cried Miss Marshall, aghast.

"Only the tops of our heads, and they won't recognize us," said Matt.

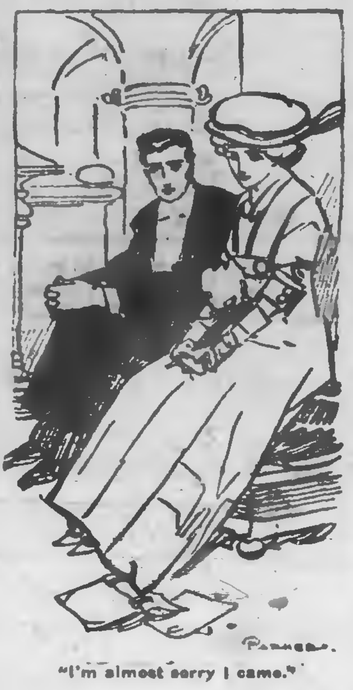
"And Mr. Doty will be scandalized—everybody will."

"Oh, nonsense," said Matt. "It's the dickens to stand up here, with people digging into you and pestering you to buy beadwork pincushions, when you'd give everything in the world for a cozy talk."

"A cozy talk would be nice, wouldn't it? Though it would take an elephant to get through all"—

"Come along. I'll be the elephant."

The pulpit was reached by a spiral stair—or, rather, could be reached by pressing apart a stout lady gabbling to another stout lady, sweeping through five gauzy little girls and disturbing a mounting tier of sweethearts, two to a step. Had Matt not been in evening dress he would never have succeeded in dislodging these lovers, but his swallowtail was an awe inspiring garb and bore with it a mysterious authority. Moreover, with quick presence of mind that convulsed his companion, Matt announced that he was going to give a recitation, which allayed resentment and filled every one with delighted anticipation. The blockade was broken, and Matt had the supreme satisfaction of leading Miss Marshall into the pulpit. He would have put her on the chair—there was a chair—but she preferred the hassock, insisting at the same time that he should sit on the floor. Here they cowered out of view, trying to restrain their laughter.



"I'm almost sorry I came."

"Now, tell me about those five times," said Matt.

"What five times?" inquired Miss Marshall, provokingly insincere and with that pretty parting of her lips.

"Oh, you know—what you said over the phone."

"I'd rather hear about your first time."

"That's easy. I came here expecting to find you adorable, and you are."

"Men say things like that just as little boys about 'Get a horse, get a horse!' when you're stuck in a motor."

"But you really and truly are, and"—

"And what?"

"In all seriousness, I'm almost sorry I came."

"Oh, dear! Why? Isn't the great, splendid, swaggering king happy in his little pulpit?"

It became Matt to look grave—became his strong features and well cut mouth.

"I might like you too well," he said simply.

"Would that be so dreadful?"

"I'm afraid of life—afraid of deep emotions."

"But you've got over them before?"

"Not without scars."

"Isn't that what life is, Mr. Broughton?"

"Getting hurt and getting mended?"

"No—looking for that other half of one."

"Have you looked?"

Miss Marshall nodded with an air of great seriousness. "I found him, only he was the wrong half—somebody else's half, you know—anyway, not mine. You mustn't think me so young. I am nearly twenty-three and have broken an engagement."

"I suppose it would be horribly presumptuous to ask if I have any of 'the other half' qualities?"

"Oh, you want to make sure of a doughnut before trading in your cooky. My other half could never be so cautious."

"But you do like me, don't you? You would scarcely have telephoned to me like that if you hadn't."

"That's true. It was perfectly crazy of me and almost entitles you to think everything."

"Everything? What's everything?"

"That I meant more than I did."

"What exactly did you mean?"

"Oh, how you pin me down! It's so impossible to tell you! You never could understand."

"Why not? I'm not so conceited as that. I am quite capable of understanding that a woman might like me 3 cents' worth, but not a dollar."

"It's that very literalness that makes it so impossible. Men—oh, how can I express it—men see everything so clearly, can express everything in different kinds of symbols and chart them in their mind like a barometer record or immigration statistics. We are hazier, more—more unformulated, all instinct, with a tingle where you have a fact."

"That's awfully clever. Go on."

"Is it clever? You see, we're even clever in the same haphazard sort of way and hardly know it when we are! You came and I saw you and didn't think anything much about it except that you stayed in my head. Stayed and stayed, you know—not right out in front, but in a corner, like a hatbox your maid has forgotten to take away. And every time I saw you the hat box grew bigger and more worrying, till finally"— She broke off with a smile, adding lightly, "Oh, well, there's your doughnut, and now, please, I want my cooky."

"It's a darling little doughnut," said Matt, "and instead of eating it I'm going to put it away in silver paper and keep it just to look at. And as for cookies—all I know is that the sweetest voice in the world said, 'Come to the church social tomorrow night,' and I came to the church social tomorrow night, where I found the sweetest voice in the world belonged to the sweetest girl in the world, and then everything seemed to go round and round till the sweetest girl in the world, who is also the cleverest girl in the world, suddenly became the only girl in the world, and—and"—

"Yes, you'd better stop there," said Miss Marshall. "That isn't frankness, that's conventionality. A second later you'll be saying 'Love me and the world is mine.'"

"Would that be so awfully silly?" asked Matt.

"Not only silly, but bromidian."

"Bromidian? What's bromidian?"

"Repeating commonplaces, like a parrot."

"Mayn't anybody say I like you without being called a parrot—or that bro-name?"

"In good society Mr. Anybody never says that to Miss Somebody after an acquaintance so very brief as ours."

"No short cuts allowed; is that the idea?"

"Yes."

"What's the most I could be permitted to say, then?—worrying? You said worrying, yourself."

"It isn't quite fair to steal my word."

"How clever one has to be—to like you. One mustn't say this; one mustn't say that; it's like a complicated game, and terribly beyond a poor sailor like myself. You must forgive me for being blundering and stupid. I hardly know anything about young white ladies."

Miss Marshall laughed outright at being thus described. "I never thought of myself as a young white lady," she said, much entertained. "It sounds as funny to me as though you called me a young pink lady, or a young blue lady. Oh, dear," she went on softly. "I don't want to be too hard on my poor sailor, who's awfully nice and winning, even if he is stupid, and doesn't know the right word. Let's just admit that I like you and that you like me—and that perhaps in some queer way it was all inevitable."

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

"Fruit-a-tives" Have Proved Their Value In Thousands of Cases

WONDERFUL RECORD OF A WONDERFUL CURE

Only Remedy That Acts On All Three Of The Organs Responsible For The Formation Of Uric Acid In The Blood.

Many people do not realize that the Skin is one of the three great eliminators of waste matter from the body. As a matter of fact, the Skin rids the system of more Urea (or waste matter) than the Kidneys. When there is Kidney Trouble, Pain In The Back and Acrid Urine, it may not be the fault of the kidneys at all, but be due to faulty Skin Action, or Constipation of the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures weak, sore, aching Kidneys, not only because it strengthens these organs but also because "Fruit-a-tives" opens the bowels, sweetens the stomach and stimulates the action of the skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Milady's Mirror

Washing the Face Correctly.

If you wash your face in the wrong way every day for a year your skin will be coarsened and your color spoiled. If you look at yourself in a good light you will see many wrinkles.

This is the right way of washing your face:

Start by bathing it in clear hot water.

Apply a little good pure soap to a soft flannel or your fingers and go over your face with this.

Rinse the soap off again with hot water.

Sponge your face lightly with cool—not cold—water.

Dry your face downward. By careless rubbing upward you can very soon spoil the shape of your nose.

Brush or comb your eyebrows, which will have become a little rumpled with the drying of your face. If you leave them as they are they will grow into bad lines.

It is not necessary to use soap on your face more than once a day. If you come home at night with a thoroughly soiled face and neck you can cleanse them best by rubbing a little pure toilet cream all over them and then taking this off again with a bit of soft rag. The grease will bring the dirt away wonderfully. After you have wiped it all off bathe your face in warm water.

If you are very pale it is a good thing to splash cold water up into your face when you have finished washing. Throw it up briskly with both hands from the basin.

Care of the Hands.

Almond meal used in place of soap beautifies the skin.

Instead of using soap when the hands have become grimed with dry soil or grease, try rubbing oil or vaseline to remove the dirt, then follow with soap and water. Dry thoroughly and sprinkle a little perfumed rice powder over the hands.

Cosmetic gloves hasten the beautifying effects and may be purchased ready to slip on.

A simple exercise to remove awkward movements of the hands is to open and close them ten times a day. Do this work slowly and with as much grace as can be commanded.

Relaxing the hands, allowing them to remain idle from twenty minutes to half an hour, is excellent for nervous women who have difficulty in keeping them quiet or free from trembling.

BABY'S BATTLES

Baby's battles for health can be easily won if the mother will constantly keep at hand the means of aiding her little ones when the emergency may arise. Baby's Own Tablets should be found in every home where there are small children. The Tablets are a gentle but thorough laxative. They break up colds; relieve croop; prevent constipation; cure indigestion; promote sleep and in fact cure all the minor ills of little ones. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Lake Winnipeg.

Of the lakes of Manitoba Lake Winnipeg is the largest, being 275 miles long and from 40 to 60 miles wide, its area being about 9,000 square miles and its total coast line longer than that of any of the great lakes except Lake Superior. No other province or state has entirely within its boundaries a body of water at all approaching it in magnitude. Great Salt lake, in Utah, is only one-fifth of the extent of Lake Winnipeg. The largest of its tributaries is the Saskatchewan river, one of the four great rivers of the continent east of the continental divide. Its total length is 1,090 miles. The Red river, 700 miles in length, and the Winnipeg river, 300 miles in length, and many minor rivers also pour into Lake Winnipeg. The Nelson river is its principal outlet and connects it with Hudson bay.

Going Too Far.

"Why would not Jiggs patronize the fortune teller? Was he afraid to have his future told?"

"Oh, no; he said he didn't care what she said about his future, but she threatened also to tell his past."—Buffalo Express.

Literary Elegance.

"Some of your hymns are very poor poetry," said the critical theologian.

"That doesn't signify anything," replied the clergyman. "We all know of some very fine poetry that would make exceedingly poor hymns."—Washington Star.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

cure many common ailments which are very different, but which all arise from the same cause—a system clogged with impurities. The Pills cause the bowels to move regularly, strengthen and stimulate the kidneys and open up the pores of the skin. These organs immediately throw off the accumulated impurities, and Biliousness, Indigestion, Liver Complaint, Kidney Troubles, Headaches, Rheumatism and similar ailments vanish. Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

● We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of any one else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

Pumpkin Pie.

To one quart of pumpkin which which has been stewed and pressed through a fine colander add one quart sweet milk, one tablespoonful cornstarch dissolved in a little of the milk, four tablespoonfuls melted butter, beaten yolks of three eggs, one cupful sugar, one-half teaspoonful salt and cinnamon, nutmeg and ginger to taste. Mix well, and just before adding to the crust fold in the beaten whites of the eggs. This will make four ordinary pies or three if bake in deep tins.

Bull Racing in Burma.

A form of sport very popular in Burma is bull racing. These contests are largely attended by the natives, who bet considerable sums of money on the result. A native sportsman who owns one of these bulls values it at $12,000, and it is said to bring him in yearly from $5,000 to $7,000.

THE DOMINION BANK

The shareholders of the Dominion Bank and in fact all Canadians have reason to be proud of the manner in which this institution as well as all other large Canadian banks, have weathered the storm and stress of the year 1914. Never in history have more unknown factors been injected into business and financial conditions, and a great deal of credit should be given to the wisdom and level-headed courage of the managers and directors of our large financial institutions in their handling of emergency conditions.

The net profits of the Dominion Bank for the year which has just ended amount to $925,000 or some $25,000 less than the previous year. The bank during the year was careful to strengthen its reserves and to maintain an unusually high proportion of its assets in liquid or quickly convertible form. It has now over $11,000,000 of its assets in gold and silver coin and Dominion notes, while its total quickly available assets amount to over $27,300,000 or more than 40 per cent. of the total liabilities to the public.

A slight contraction was made in current loans during the year but these amount to $47,196,000, indicating that the Bank fully catered to the business needs of its customers. There was also a reduction in call loans abroad, but the call loans in Canada show an increase as does Bank Premises Account, this latter being principally caused by the erecting of the Bank's fine new head office. Total assets amount to nearly $80,500,000. Altogether the showing should prove very gratifying to the shareholders and it reflects most favorably on Mr. C. A. Bogert, the General Manager, and his associates. Mr. John Crane is manager of the local branch of the Dominion Bank at Peterborough.

How Canada Got Its Name.

The origin of the name Canada is strange enough. The Spaniards visited that country previous to the French and made particular search for gold and silver, and, finding none, they often said among themselves, "Aca nada," meaning "There is nothing here." The Indians, who watched closely, learned this sentence and its meaning. Later on the French arrived, and the Indians, who wanted none of their company and supposed they had come on the same errand as the Spanish, were desirous to inform them in the Spanish sentence "Aca nada." The French, who knew as little of the Spanish language as they, supposed that the incessantly recurring sound was the name of the country and ultimately christened it Canada, which it has borne ever since.

Compensation.

King Alfonso is very English in some of his expressions. For instance, he was discussing with a well known British peer the difficulties and dangers of kingship.

"So you think, sir," remarked the peer, "that it is rather a thankless task being a king?"

"It is rather difficult work at times," replied his majesty with a grin, "but it is denced well paid!"—London Globe.

ARRESTED AS SPY.

Robert W. Service Almost Faced a French Firing Squad.

Mr. E. W. Walker, head of the wholesale department of the Methodist Book Room, Toronto, returned from Europe recently. He met Mr. Robert W. Service in London and discussed with him his new novel "The Pretender," before it was issued.

Mr. Service said he was going to the front to see what he could see—he was determined to go. So about a week later Mr. Walker was surprised to again meet the Sourdough poet in London. He had got to the front but he had come back faster than he went. He had gone to Calais, from which point he took the train for Dunkirk which is "at the front." As he approached Dunkirk he thought it wise to alight at a village some miles out and walk the rest of the way, as he knew he would be seized at the railway station and sent back, or locked up. He entered the town as quietly and circumspectly as he could, but a French soldier soon demanded his passport. The only one he possessed was a year old, and dated at Naples. The French were very suspicious of him, and concluded that he was a German spy. An officer told him that they already had two spies and that as they were shot in groups of three he would just make the required party for a regulation execution.

Mr. Service was very seriously alarmed. He speaks French quite well now, his wife being French, and he earnestly appealed to be taken to a British officer. This was done and the latter was soon convinced of the Canadian author's identity. But he was also very angry. After giving Mr. Service a tongue-lashing for trying to go to the front, although he knew of the stringent rule against correspondents accompanying the army, he put him on the first train and sent him back the way he came with dire threats in case of a repetition of the offence. The Poet of the Yukon didn't stop till he got to London.

GERMANS FAILED IN TWO ATTEMPTS

Battle of Soissons is Resumed, But Without Any Gain to Invaders---Aviators on Both Sides Make Raid---German Airmen Sought to Destroy Gen. French's Headquarters in Dunkirk.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—German forces in great strength have renewed the battle of Soissons. Two attempts to cross the Aisne were made to the east of Soissons. Both attacks were repulsed by the French. The first was made at a point known as "the Mill of the Rocks," and the second was directed against the bridge head held by the French to the north of the Venisel bridge.

In retaliation French aviators made a night attack with bombs on the camps of the German troops. Bombs were rained on the trenches and dugouts occupied by the invaders for three hours, from 11 o'clock on Thursday night to two o'clock yesterday morning. Two aviators were engaged in the attack, which centred on the German strongholds in the region of Laon and Le Fere, and points across the river from Soissons. No report of the extent of the damage is made in the official communique received from Paris last night.

Confirmation of the Berlin report of an attack by German airmen on Dunkirk is contained in the French statement. The raid was carried out at midnight of the 28th. It was the second German raid on Dunkirk within a week.

This French coast town is the headquarters of Gen. French, commander of the British Expeditionary Forces, and it is believed that the object of the air raiders is to destroy these headquarters. Paris states that while the damage wrought was insignificant the air raiders killed and injured a number of persons.

Two German aviators were brought down by the French and British gunners, according to yesterday's reports.

The most important action was fought in the sand dunes to the east of Nieuport. Here the French assert the Franco-Belgian forces were able to gain a foothold on the Great Dune, where a terrific fight occurred on Jan. 17. The Berlin report says the allies' attacks were repulsed. At one place, according to Berlin, the allies succeeded in penetrating as far as the German trenches during the night, but by a bayonet attack they were routed.

Artillery combats, with here and there an attack by infantry, repulsed as soon as attempted, are recorded on the remainder of the battle front.

In Alsace, particularly to the north, in the region of Cernay, the opposing forces are now strongly entrenched. Neither side seems capable of dislodging its adversary.

The unhappy town of Thann has been practically destroyed by the fire of the German 21-centimetre guns. Its inhabitants have taken refuge in Montbeliard. Cernay, on the other hand, has been evacuated under the pressure of heavy fire from the French guns.

The entire Cernay garrison has been transferred into the quarries northwest of the town, facing Steinbach, and as the enemy already holds the fringe of woods through which an attack from the southwest would have to be pushed, the task of the French, if they wish to capture the place, will be extremely hard.

Thus the two shells of the towns of Thann and Cernay, riddled by shrapnel and devastated by flames, have become the strategical objectives of the rival armies, and the situation has become like that around Ypres.

"At the east of Soissons the Germans have made two attempts to cross the Aisne—one at the mill of the rocks and the other at the head of the bridge, which is held by our troops, to the north of the bridge of Venisel. These two attacks were repulsed.

"During the night of Jan. 28, Dunkirk was bombarded by more aviators, who caused some insignificant losses, but killed or wounded a few persons.

"Between 11 o'clock the night of Jan. 28 and 2 o'clock of the morning of Jan. 29, two of our aviators launched numerous bombs upon the enemy's works in the region of Laon, Lafere and Soissons. On the morning of the 29th a German aeroplane was brought down east of Gerbevilier. Its pilot and mechanic, a German officer and a sub-officer, were made prisoners."

The French War Office yesterday afternoon gave out an official report on the progress of the war, which reads as follows:

"The day of Jan. 28 saw nothing more than local engagements, which resulted favorably to us. In Belgium, in the vicinity of Nieuport, our infantry secured a footing on Grande Dune, a locality which was mentioned in the communication of Jan. 17. A German aeroplane was brought down by our artillery fire.

"In the sectors of Ypres, Lens and Arras there were yesterday artillery engagements which at times became fairly violent. Several infantry attacks were undertaken, but at once driven back by our fire. In the sectors of Soissons, Craonne and Rheims there is nothing to report. Between Rheims and the Argonne yesterday, saw artillery engagements, but not of great intensity.

"It has been confirmed that the German attack repulsed by us the night of Jan. 27-28 at Fontaine Madame cost the Germans dearly.

"On the heights of the Meuse and in the Woevre yesterday was quiet. In the Vosges there were artillery engagements, our cannon at several points silencing the fire of German batteries and machine gun detachments.

"We have everywhere consolidated the positions occupied by us Jan. 27."

Man Puzzles Doctors.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 30.—Ernest Gobell, with a respiration of 225 per minute, is mystifying the local doctors. Gobell, who is out of work and has been living at the civic shelter for the past few weeks, has been examined by eighteen doctors. When his trouble becomes acute his extraordinary respiration is given a check temporarily by pressing back his eyeballs. Yesterday after this treatment was applied the young man's heart failed to beat for three minutes. Then the pulsation was resumed by a severe punch in the stomach. Gobell has been in this country but a few months and is anxious to return to the old country. An effort to have him deported will be made.

Almost Every One Needs A Tonic

Almost everyone — man, woman and child—needs a tonic at sometime. It is often said that a man is lazy because he takes little or no interest in his work; but the truth is he is not well. He needs a tonic. The same is true of a woman who does not hustle over her home work, but only feels fit to be in bed. She is not merely tired, but ill. A dull pain in the head or back, poor appetite, loss of strength with low spirits and loss of interest in life show that you need a tonic to brace up the nerves and give you a new lease of life. The proof is that when the right tonic is taken all the trouble quickly disappears. The one tonic—the only tonic—for weak and ailing men, women and children is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which speedily bring back abundant health, strength and energy. They have done this in thousands and thousands of cases, as is proved by the following. Mr. Ed. A. Owen, Burdett, Alta., says:—"About two years ago my health was in a wretched condition. My whole system seemed to be run down and the doctor seemed puzzled at my condition. I had no appetite, exertion would leave me breathless, and I was troubled much with dizziness. All the medicine I took did me no good and I was steadily growing weaker. My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and before I had taken them very long I began to feel like a new man and continuing their use I was restored to complete health. I now recommend them to all run down in health as they are the best medicine I know of."

Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Russia's Forces Are Moving at Both Ends of Long Line.

Austro-German Plans For Defence of Hungary Set at Naught by Discovery of a New Army in Field and Ready to Attack Flank of the Austrian Army.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30. — Armies of great numerical strength are now moving at both ends of the eastern theatre of war without the Russians having to withdraw any forces from central Poland. The entire elaborate scheme for the protection of Hungary and disturbance of the Russian campaign against Transylvania seems finally overthrown by disclosures that the new Russian army from Galicia has penetrated several days' march into Hungary westward of the Dukla Pass. This force is now in full fighting strength turned upon the left flank of parallel columns of the huge Austrian army disposed northward towards the eastern Carpathians. With astonishingly short delay the Russians have forced the Austro-German tacticians by dread alternative of deciding the destiny of the Austrian empire on the plans of Hungary. All efforts of Austrians since the appearance of three German corps amongst them in the past fortnight has been turned to avoiding this and establishing some kind of initiative which would permit a series of long dragging fights on Galician sides of Carpathians.

It is believed the Austrians can still keep in the field in Hungary probably seventeen corps more or less complete, and this should enable them to flounder on for some time, but the ultimate plight between the Russian armies on the north, southeast, and now below Dukla on the west, is beyond repair.

The Russians are now making as satisfactory progress in the extreme north. They rapidly turned the German left flank at Pogebon, above Tilsit, before the Germans could cover themselves under the customary screen of barbed wire. Concurrently with this there was valuable progress of the Russian left wing on the north bank of the Vistula, where they are stretching upwards from Dobrzyn. This concerted enveloping movement of the Russian northern army is now seen as important, threatening the entire German defensive in East Prussia down to Thorn.

An officer of the Russian invading force, which recently passed through Pilkallen, East Prussia, says the Russians surrounded the town, and the fight lasted throughout daylight hours before it was taken. It is a place of considerable size, with many works for farmers' tools. When the Russians were passing through German children were sliding on ice and ran after the Russians, asking for sugar and chocolate, which they often got while old people kept on drawing water from the wells.

Some critics expect Gen. von Hindenburg in the presence of a successful Russian offensive in the north and south may be secretly preparing a last furious onslaught on the Russian lines in central Poland, but the continuous accession of strength to all the Russian armies during the past month has assuredly barred the eastward road against him.

Two Russian forces are operating in East Prussia, according to the latest advices here. One, which advanced into the Masurian Lakes region, and occupied Angerburg, is holding the Germans on the defensive there, while the other is pressing forward on the Inster river, having occupied Pillkallen and Gumbinnen, and is threatening Insterburg at the junction of the Inster and Angerapp rivers. Insterburg, which is an important railway centre, and on the direct line east of Koenigsberg, has been fortified by the Germans, and the campaign in the north is now centering about it. Its capture by the Russians would put them in control of the railway lines leading west and southwest, and enable them to threaten the German army which is holding a position in the Mazurian Lakes region.

IS AWAITING THE SUMMONS

Roumania is Steadily Preparing for Effective Service

BUCHAREST, Jan. 30—Roumania having set her hand to the plough is not going to turn back, but is steadily and quietly preparing an effective entrance into the already somewhat overcrowded stage of the world's greatest war. In the public mind the cause of the Triple Entente nations is indissolubly linked with that of a greater Roumania, and German gold is spent vainly here in an attempt to spread the gospel of Count von Bernhardi that "might is right." Even if there never had been a Transylvania, or no Austrian enemy to Roumanian national aspirations, it is questionable if Roumania in the present titanic struggle would have been anything else but a confirmed Germanophobe.

The Roumanians, who in culture, love of liberty and perfervid patriotism are the French of the Near East, have to a singular degree appreciated the disinterestedness of Britain in drawing her sword when she felt her national honor impugned. Roumanian officers drink to "The Day"—the Roumanian day when their army will set about freeing their countrymen from the galling Austrian yoke. "For God and our native land!" is the battle cry which resounds from the shores of the Black Sea to the snow-capped Carpathians. In such a holy cause as that of a greater Roumania local political animosities have been blotted out. It is a united nation that calls its sons to rally under the tricolor of the motherland. They have responded nobly to the appeal, and that well-organized and superb fighting machine, the Roumanian army, is ready when the trumpet sounds the call to arms.

Italy Calls Reserves.

ROME, Jan. 30.—A royal decree has been issued, calling to the colors the Italian soldiers of the first category, born in 1888, and belonging to the field artillery, and also the Alpine troops, and the soldiers of the third category, born in 1891, 1892, 1893 and 1894, belonging to the Alpine troops.

Turks Reach Gulf of Suez.

CAIRO, Jan. 30.—(Via London.)—The Turkish outposts have reached the vicinity of Tor and Kubri, on the Sinai Peninsula. Up to the present the fighting has consisted only of small outpost affairs.

Tor is on the Gulf of Suez, about 140 miles south of Suez.

REVOLT IS SIMMERING

Turkey in Ferment as Result of Young Turk Domination

LONDON, Jan. 30.—H. F. Baldwin, a correspondent at Saloniki, writes that if reports received there are to be credited all Constantinople is "one simmering revolution."

"The Turkish officers realize," he writes, "that unless Enver Pasha, former Minister of War and leader of the Young Turk party, is deposed from his control of affairs, Turkey's ruin is inevitable and certain.

"Executions are frequent. Turkey's declaration of war was the signal for an outbreak of mob violence. The mob looted and wrecked Totakalin's Cafe, a Russian establishment which was much frequented by war correspondents during the Balkan campaign. All the bakeries and European stores were served similarly.

"The mob, inflamed with Totakalin's wines, and amazingly garbed in clothes stolen from the stores totally wrecked a large German establishment at Galata bridge where English clothing was advertised for sale."

Turk Offensive Collapses.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30 — Telegraphing from Tiflis, the correspondent of The Bourse Gazette says that the fresh attempt of the Turks to assume the aggressive in the direction of Olti has collapsed, and the flanking Turkish column has been destroyed. The enemy's losses were enormous.

News has been received in well-informed quarters here that the situation in Turkey is very bad. The troops suffer through want of clothing. Contagious disease prevails in the Turkish army. Moreover, there is a good deal of bad blood between the different races composing it. In a railway carriage containing a mixed lot of prisoners, the Kurds attacked the Turks and cut off their ears. The carriage was drenched with blood when it arrived at its destination.

Spotted Typhus in Austria.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Morning Post correspondent at Berne, Switzerland, cables: Besides an epidemic of smallpox, which the Austrian authorities are endeavoring to combat by all means, spotted typhus is now reaching alarming proportions.

To Give $1,000 a Month.

TORONTO, Jan. 30.—Despatches received yesterday from St. Thomas and Goderich state that the County Councils of Elgin and Huron, respectively, each decided to grant $1,000 per month to the Patriotic Fund as long as the war lasts.

MUST SMASH GERMANISM

Russia Could Win Now But at Too Great Cost

PROLONG THE WAR

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30.—In connection with the sitting of the Duma an important semi-official pronouncement as to the attitude of the Government towards the war appears in The Bourse Gazette. The communication refers to the rumors of the possibility of concluding a separate peace with the Dual Monarchy, or at any rate with Hungary. It affirms that such ideas are devoid of foundation, and continues:

"Peace will be made only after complete and final victory over Germanism. Only in that event can enduring tranquility prevail in Europe. This result could actually be obtained now, but for its attainment it would be necessary to sacrifice 200,000 or 300,000 lives. Rather than bring about such a slaughter, the Government, fully assured of the final victory of our arms, thinks it better that the war be prolonged.

"A separate peace with Austria-Hungary is a practical impossibility. To obtain peace it would be necessary for the Hapsburg Monarchy to acknowledge itself defeated, but even in this event the conditions under which peace could be effected would hardly be acceptable to it.

"Moreover, there is little ground for anticipating a separate peace with Hungary, which could be obtained only at the price of the detachment of the Crown of St. Stephen from Austria. The first fundamental condition of such a peace would be our demand and that of our allies that Hungary, being separated from Austria, should not only abandon Germany, but also come openly into our camp.

"It is hardly to be supposed that the Hungarians would agree to such a demand, which would force them to begin an armed struggle with Austria."

SIXTY CANADIANS ARE PRISONERS

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—(Via London.)—A despatch reaching here from Hamburg says that all British colonials in that city, with the exception for the time being of the Australians, have been arrested and transported to Ruhleben, where they are to be interned in the concentration camp along with other British civilians.

Something like sixty Canadians are in this new draft of prisoners.

Capt. Casimir-Perier Taken.

TROYES, Jan. 30.—(Via Paris.)—Capt. Claude Casimir-Perier, son of the former President of France, was taken prisoner during the recent battle of Soissons, according to The Petit Troyen. The paper adds that the distinguished conduct of Capt. Casimir-Perier in this fight gained him special mention in the army orders.

Preparing For Siege.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Morning Post's correspondent at Berne telegraphs:

"Strasburg is being placed in a state of siege. Even officers' wives have received orders to leave there immediately."

South African M. P. Arrested.

BLOEMFONTEIN, Orange River Colony, Africa, Jan. 30.—A preliminary hearing in the case of Barend Wessels, a member of the South African Parliament, who was arrested early in December on a charge of treason, was held here Thursday. According to the evidence given, he induced 500 burghers to join the rebels. Later the case was adjourned without date, and Wessels was held without bail.

Munitions Intended For Germany.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 30.—Fifteen carloads of arms and ammunitions were ordered held yesterday by Federal officials at San Diego, Cal., pending an investigation of their destination.

Rumors of the presence of a German ship off the coast and a report of the chartering of a schooner for a voyage from Topolobampo, Mex., to the Island Tres Marias, off Acapulco, led to the inquiry.

The munitions are consigned ostensibly from W. C. Hughes, 103 Duane street, New York City, to John Bowen, said to be a former secret service official. Their reported destination is Topolobampo, Mex., for use by the Carranza forces.

Queerest Dance in the World.

The Godavari dance of the malayers, or drummers, of Malabar is a very popular function when the native farmers are taking their ease after the hard work of harvest. The principal character is a weird figure supposed to represent the sacred cow of the gods, Kamachenu. A small boy carries this about while the other performers, decked out in primitive fashion with painted bodies and hideous masks, go through a weird dance, accompanied by much drum beating and singing. Wherever it goes the cow is supposed to shower blessings and prosperity, and so, ostensibly to please the animal, but in reality to satisfy the dancers, presents or money, paddy or rice are given to the performers. This custom has been in existence from time immemorial and is likely to continue as long as agriculture endures among the Hindus of Malabar.—Wide World Magazine.

CROWN PRINCE IS TALKING

Gives Out Statement for Benefit of Americans

GENEVA, Switzerland, Jan. 30.—(Via Paris.)—Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, has sent to the local correspondent of the Associated Press, in response to a request for a statement on the war, the following reply, dated "Near Verdun" Jan. 22:

"You ask me to send a message to the American people. Being an officer and no diplomat, I have no right to do so, but if you like I will tell you three things.

"First: Every single German and Austrian is quite certain that we will come out on top, and will give his last drop of blood to this end.

"Second: We are convinced that the day will come when the people of Russia and France will find out that they are only doing the dirty work for England.

"Third: We expect from America absolutely fair play in all questions.

"These are my personal ideas, but a good many of my countrymen feel the same. Greetings.

(Signed) "Wilhelm, Kronprinz."

CARNAGE TERRIFIC.

German Sailors Attest To Havoc of British Navy's Guns.

EDINBURGH, Jan. 30. — Matter which is printed by The Scotsman this morning throws a new light upon the severity of last Sunday's battle in the North Sea. Strong testimony as to the terrible and deadly character of the British gunnery is afforded in the composition of the large body of German prisoners. Practically every large vessel and most of the smaller vessels of the raiding squadron are represented in the men rescued. In every case their experiences were the same as those of the survivors of the Blucher.

Horrified by the carnage on board their vessels, scores of men leaped overboard and were picked up. Their ships, swept by shot and shell from the British guns, were unfit towards the end to do more than trust to their engines taking them out of the action.

The experiences of these men confirm the statements that the large German vessels and many of the smaller ones sustained damage which will keep them off the sea for a long time. Indeed, it is questionable if some will ever appear again.

The loss of life on board was so great and the scenes during the action were so terrifying that the men regarded the ships as doomed. During the transference of a batch of prisoners from the British ships to the shore one lost his reason and leaped overboard, but was promptly rescued.

MAIN FORCE IN WEST.

Times' Military Correspondent Says 94 Divisions Face the Allies.

LONDON, Jan. 30. — The Times' military correspondent, analyzing the present disposition of the German forces, arrives at the conclusion that the preponderance of the German troops still are on the western frontier, where, he estimates, there are 94 divisions, as against 43 divisions in the east.

"In other words," the correspondent says, "their pride would not allow them to shorten and rectify their western line, which would alone have enabled them to detach sufficient forces to bring about a decision in Poland and capture Warsaw. As a result, the bulk of the active corps are in the west still, while in Russia the bulk of the troops are second and third-line men. It may be expected that Germany will make a last violent effort in the west to break the allied line before the allied armies are all assembled and the other neutral powers come into the war."

TO CONFISCATE GRAIN.

Austria Follows Germany's Lead Regarding Foodstuffs.

VENICE, Jan. 30.—(Via London.)—The Austrian Government has decided to organize a grain monopoly on similar lines to that established by Germany. The Austrian Minister of Agriculture yesterday announced that the army has procured supplies of grain sufficient to last until the end of August.

Owing to the quantities of barley and maize now being taken for breadstuffs, according to advices from Vienna, there is a serious shortage in the supply of fodder.

G. T. R. To Suggest a Wage Cut.

OTTAWA, Jan. 30.—It is still the intention of the Grand Trunk to ask about 14,000 of their employes on the G. T. R. lines, both in Canada and the United States, to accept a decrease in wages on April 1 next, should traffic receipts continue to show a decrease, said E. J. Chamberlin, president of the road, who is in Ottawa to-day.

Mr. Chamberlin explained, however, that if the men registered a protest the company will be agreeable to submitting the matter to a board of conciliation appointed by the Minister of Labor, and abide by the decision of the board.

War To End In August?

SASKATOON, Sask., Jan. 30.—Major-Gen. Hughes spent three hours in Saskatoon yesterday afternoon inspecting the troops, and addressing a house meeting under the auspices of the Canadian Club. He stated that it was his hope that the war would end in August.

John McCoy, aged 53, a prominent Conservative and councillor, of Madoc, is dead at Welland. A widow, two daughters and a son survive.

NEVER CAME BACK

Airship Lost at Libau Says Berlin

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—(Via London.)—The Parseval airship, which flew over Libau, the Russian port on the Baltic, on Jan. 25, did not return.

The report that the German cruiser Kolberg was sunk in the battle in the North Sea last Sunday, is untrue. All the German ships, with the exception of the Blucher, have returned.

The above despatch apparently confirms a statement by the naval general staff at Petrograd, that a German airship, which dropped bombs on Libau last Monday, was brought down by gunfire, falling into the sea. The airship was destroyed and the crew captured, it was stated. The statement, however, referred to the balloon as a Zeppelin.

Regarding the Kolberg, Vice-Admiral Beatty, commander of the British fleet in the North Sea fight, stated that German prisoners reported that the Kolberg was sunk. The British Admiralty in its statement regarding the fight also referred to the Kolberg as "reported" sunk.

Crew of 258 Perished.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A casualty list issued last night shows that the British armored merchant vessel Viknor, which was lost off the coast of Ireland several days ago, carried a crew of 258, composed of naval reserve men and boys belonging to the mercantile marine, all of whom perished.

Among the crew were 24 royal naval reserve men from Newfoundland.

A PIMPLY FACE LOSES FRIENDS

Why Stand This Humiliation When Stuart's Calcium Wafers in a Week Make Your Face Clean and Radiant.

No need for anyone to go about any longer with a face covered with pimples, blotches, eruptions, blackheads and liver spots. These are all due to impurities in the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly and the blemishes will disappear.

"Everyone Looks at a Face Bearing a Lovely Complexion—It is Nature's Greatest Gift to Woman."

That's what Stuart's Calcium Wafers are intended to accomplish and do accomplish. Their principal ingredient is Calcium Sulphide, the quickest and most thorough blood cleanser known.

These wonderful little wafers get right into the blood, and destroy eruptive substances present in it. In some cases a few days is sufficient to make a marked improvement. And when the blood is pure the whole system is a hundred per cent. better.

Don't fret any longer about those blackheads, pimples, boils, tetter, eczema, spots or skin eruptions; they all go and "go quick" if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Go to any druggist anywhere and buy a box. Price 50 cents. A small sample package mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich.—"I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

A Dreadful Possibility.

Frances has been taught to use only the choicest English, colloquialisms and all other departures from the linguistic straight and narrow way meeting with serious disapproval. One day Frances desired to play near some workmen, but was refused permission on the ground that they sometimes used bad language.

"What do you suppose they say, mamma?" inquired the diminutive daughter of Eve, all eager interest.

"Oh, I couldn't tell you," was the mother's natural rejoinder. "Just bad words."

"Mother," whispered Frances after a period of silent self-communing, "do you suppose they say 'ain't'?"

WHEN THE WORLD WAS YOUNG.

(By Isabel Ecclestone Mackay.)

Would I had lived when the world was young,
When its boundaries no man knew,
When mystery hung on the far sea-wall
Like a haze of quickening dew—
And a ship was lost in the Great Beyond
What time she was lost to view.

Then had I been, when the world was young,
The king of a shapely ship,
Full-manned with British sailor-men,
Blue-eyed and straight of lip;
With a chanty gay we had sailed her out
Where the green horizons dip.

(Sailed her out to the sparkling nights
And out to the glad, free days,
With ever the Lure, like a star, to guide
Through the ocean's tumbling maze,
And hope set up like a taper light
At the shrine where a seaman prays.)

Would I had loved when the world was young,
When love burnt fierce as hate,
When passion's draught was no brackish brew
But wine from the flask of fate—
Danger and bliss, and a man made strong
In the strength of a weaker mate!

(Then I had snatched her first quick look
As the gay parade swept by,
And mine had been the sacred tryst
While the lover's moon rode high—
The vow, the hush and the ecstasy
And dawn in a crimson sky!)

Would I had faith when the world was young!
The faith of a simple creed
That a man be man with his honor clean
And a hand to help at need.
That he rear fair sons and assoil his soul
With the virtue of good deed.

Would I had died when the world was young,
Ere death were a half-feared jest,
From a clean thrust sword or a strong flung pike
Or an arrow well addrest—
So had I died with a fortressed heart,
And long had I lain at rest.

E. B. OSLER, President.
C. A. BOGERT, General Manager.

In your last Annual Report your Directors made reference to the general financial and commercial depression then existing, which condition was much intensified through the outbreak of the war in Europe in July last, necessitating the exercise of unusual care in administrating the affairs of the Bank. It has been our endeavor to fully provide for the requirements of deserving borrowers, particularly those engaged in producing and marketing the foodstuffs of the country, at the same time maintaining strong cash reserves and liquidity of assets. This policy has been satisfactorily carried out.

The earnings were somewhat smaller than in 1913, but justified the declaration of the usual dividends and bonus after ample provision had been made for all accounts of a doubtful character and for possible depreciation in the value of assets.

The Directors feel that you will approve of certain unusual disbursements that were made from the profits of the year, namely, contributions to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the Canadian Red Cross Society, and the Belgian Relief Fund, reported in detail in the Statement.

It will be observed that the issue of new Capital Stock of the 15th of February, 1913, is now fully paid up, the Capital Account standing on 31st December, 1914, at $6,000,000, and the Reserve Fund at $7,000,000.

A notable event in the history of the Bank has taken place since the Sharholders last met, in the completion of the new Head Office Building, which was occupied in November last. The results obtained may be considered highly satisfactory. Allowance has been made for the natural growth of the Bank's business, and every facility has been provided for the convenience of its customers; furthermore, considerable revenue will be derived from the space rented by the various tenants of the building.

During the year branches were opened at Fort Frances, Ont., and in Toronto at Yonge and Hayden streets, and at the corner of McCaul and St. Patrick streets.

The following Western Branches were closed, as the business secured and the prospects did not justify their further maintenance: Hanley, Sask.; Claresholm, Alta.; Granville Street Branch, Vancouver; South Hill Branch, Moose Jaw; Hillhurst Branch, Calgary; Riverside Branch, Calgary; Fernwood Branch, Victoria.

In accordance with Section 56 of the Bank Act, and following their appointment at the last Annual General Meeting, a complete audit of the affairs of the Bank was made by your Auditors, Messrs. G. T. Clarkson and R. J. Dilworth, whose certificate is attached to the Statement now submitted.

In addition, the usual inspection of all the Branches of the Bank have been made during the twelve months under review, and the Head Office Cash, Investments, and Balance Sheet of the 31st December were verified by a committee of your Directors.

E. B. OSLER, President.

Toronto, 27th January, 1915.

It was moved by Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P., seconded by Mr. W. D. Matthews, and resolved, that the Report be adopted.

The retiring Auditors, Messrs. Geoffrey T. Clarkson and Robert J. Dilworth, were re-appointed Auditors for the current year.

The thanks of the Shareholders were tendered to the President, Vice-President and Directors for their services during the year, and to the General Manager and the other Officers of the Bank for their efficient performance of their respective duties.

The following gentlemen were duly elected Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. A. W. Austin, W. R. Brock, James Carruthers, R. J. Christie, J. C. Eaton, J. J. Foy, K.C., M.L.A., W. D. Matthews, A. M. Nanton, E. W. Hamber, H. W. Hutchinson, and Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P., was elected President, and Mr. W. D. Matthews, Vice-President, for the ensuing term.

AUDITORS' REPORT TO SHAREHOLDERS.

We have compared the above Balance Sheet with the books and accounts of the Chief Office of The Dominion Bank, and with the certified returns received from its Branches, and after checking the cash and verifying the securities at the Chief Office and two of the principal Branches on December 31st, 1914, we certify that, in our opinion, such Balance Sheet exhibits a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs, according to the best of our information, the explanations given to us and as shown by the books of the Bank.

In addition to the examinations mentioned, the cash and securities at the Chief Office and two of the principal Branches were checked and verified by us during the year, and found to be in accord with the books of the Bank.

All information and explanations required have been given to us and all transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have, in our opinion, been within the powers of the Bank.

EGGS DOWN TO 35 CENTS PROMISE TO GO LOWER

To know it was cold last night and this morning one had but to look at the farmers and their wives as they drove on to the market square. Though swathed in furs and big coats they were coated with a layer of frost and ice, and as a consequence the stoves in the hall looked good until the thawing-out process had set in. In spite of adverse weather, however, there was a rather respectable-sized market and trading was brisk up til eleven o'clock. Prices have not changed much during the week with the exception of eggs, which, as noted in the Review on Wednesday, are down to 35 cents and promise to be even lower. Only the one price for eggs was asked today. Butter shows no particular change, being purchaseable at 32 to 33 cents a pound. Apples were not over plentiful, but some sold at 1.25 a bag. Potatoes were rather reasonable at 65 cents. There was all kinds of beef and pork, and competition among vendors in these lines is growing keener. A nice hindquarter of lamb could be bought for 18 cents a pound. Beef was mostly 11 and 12 cents, and pork 13 and 14 cents.

A good turkey is within reach of the lowest pocketbook these Saturdays and nice specimens sold at $1.50 to $2.00. Chickens found a pretty good sale at low prices. It was hard to locate a goose, and ducks were also rather inconspicuous.

The market list is as follows:

Potatoes, per bag	$ .65	$ .65
Apples, per bag	1.25	1.40
Onions, per peck	.30	.35
Parsnips, per bag		.75

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 29.—The wheat market was much easier this morning, although at times there were spurts of activity. May opened from the record, $1.45½, to $1.48, July was ½c lower, oats opened ½c lower and flax 1½c lower for May.

May wheat fluctuated widely during the early market, while July dropped ½c under the opening.

Export business was less keen and the cash situation was slow. There was light inquiry for No. 2 and No 3 northern, but only a few odd cars were transferred. The weaker tone keeps buyers in a waiting attitude.

Inspections yesterday were 160 cars, as against 139 last year, in sight today, 150 cars.

Wheat futures closed 1½c to 1⅝c lower. Cash closed 1½c to 2c lower, oats 1½c to 1¾c lower, and cash oats 1½c lower. Flax closed 2c to 4½c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 29.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat today was quiet, in fact there were few firm bids in the market and no new business was reported. The local market for coarse grains was also quieter, but the feeling is firm with a steady business doing. Flour is firm with a steady trade passing. Millfeed in good demand with prices firm. Butter unchanged and cheese steady. [illegible] active and firm.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 29.—Wheat [illegible] $1.43¾ to $1.44¾; No. 1 northern [illegible] to $1.44¾; [illegible] May $1.43¾.

The death of Erwin Beit von Speyer, nephew of James Speyer, of the New York banking firm of Speyer & Co., while fighting with the German forces in France, has just been announced in the Frankfurter Zeitung.

PETES LOWERED COLORS OF THE SCUGOGVILLE SEVEN

Lindsay Midgets Took the Short End of the 6 to 2 Count

Although a win had no bearing on the district race, so far as the Peterborough juniors were concerned, it was great satisfaction to trim the pride of Scugogville. The score was 6-3 for the Petes but the count hardly indicates the play. The visitors were in the swim all the time, but were outlucked a dozen different ways. They played all the latest songs on the Peterborough goaltender's pads, and the net posts. Twice, the local goaler fell a victim to the merry strains, and on those two occasions, the puck found its way into the nets. The Midgets certainly had a bunch of hard luck in their shooting. The Petes also deserved a few more scores. The Lindsay netman made some clever blocks following shots on rushes that had beaten his two defence men.

Few and far apart, were the evidences of good organization. Both teams batted the puck here, there and everywhere, the visitors at times, being particularly erratic. Stiff checking, probably accounted for most of this kind of play. The Petes scored the first goal, after the first period had been well advanced, Richardson doing the trick. Thirty seconds later Morrow scored on a nice individual play.

In the second period Lindsay got one back, but Morrow repeated his former performance and beat O'Loughlin with a side shot.

The fur flew in the third period and the game developed into an exhibition of shinny. The Lindsay seven felt defeat coming, and in their frantic efforts to hold down the score, they slashed everything in sight. The teams:—

Lindsay—Goal, O'Loughlin; defence, Sandercock and Flavelle; rover, C. Carew; centre, McElroy; right wing, Griffis; left wing, A. Carew.

TOO SMALL TO ANNEX

If there is an advantage in a country being large there is also an advantage in its being small, provided it is small enough. The republic of Maresnet, also called Klemis and sometimes Alterberg, owes its independent existence to the fact that it is so small that the European powers don't even take the trouble to annex it.

Maresnet lies on the border of Belgium and Prussia, between Verviers and Aix-la-Chapelle. It has an area of 1,400 acres, a population of 3,500.

At one time the community belonged to Austria. It was later annexed by France and made the subject of quite a little dispute between Napoleon I. and the Prussians. But at the Congress of Vienna in 1815 nobody seems to have thought of Maresnet, and to this day the country is an independent republic. For a time there was some dispute between Belgium and Prussia about the territory on account of the rich cadmium mine located there. But even this is now extinct.

The republic has an administration of its own, composed of a burgomaster and 10 members of a council. The burgomaster is both a Prussian and a Belgian subject. The inhabitants speak both German and French, and decide individually whether they will perform military service for Prussia or for Belgium.

Maresnet has not yet been heard from in the present conflict.

SIX UP IN ORILLIA GAMES

Return Games to be Played Here Monday

CURLING NEWS

With the assurance of so many curlers coming to the city next week to take part in the open bonspiel, it is believed some of the rinks will have to snatch hours from their slumber periods if they want to have a voice in the disposition of the trophies. One of the largest bonspiels in the history of the local club is confidently anticipated, and the rink management are at their wits' end wondering how they will accommodate them in the short time the bonspiel lasts. There may be rinks from Toronto on hand, while Bobcaygeon, Orillia, Lindsay and a host of other centres are certain to be represented.

The four rinks who went to Orillia yesterday to contest the Neill-Sheppard trophy brought home the first honors by winning out with six shots to the good on the round. Orillia has to play the return games here.

The rinks were as follows:

R. Neill (skip), P. Fitzgerald, T. Hooper, Alex Kay.

H. F. Foote (skip), A. H. Webb, A. Archibald, R. M. Waddell.

Herb Martin (skip), J. Skinner, E. G. Patterson, T. F. Matthews.

George Morrow (skip), E. L. Bowes, G. Henore, R. Sturgeon.

The local curlers were treated extremely well and had a most enjoyable time.

Constantinople.

Constantinople was known as Lygos until 658 B. C., when it blossomed forth into Byzantium and bore that name for close on 800 years. Byzantium, like Rome, was built on seven hills, and this resemblance led Septimus Severus to rechristen it Nova Roma. On making the city the capital of the Roman empire Constantine the Great bestowed his own name upon it, and ever since it has been known as Constantinople in the western world. This name, however, is ignored by orientals, who have called it Istambul and Stamboul since its capture by the Turks in 1453.

CUP FOR TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE

Trophy is Donated by J. R. Cook M. L. A. of Stirling

LAST NIGHT'S GAMES

Mr. J. R. Cook, M. L. A., of Stirling, has donated a handsome silver trophy for the winners of the Trent Valley Hockey League, and the teams around the circuit are putting forth greater effort to bring the silverware home.

In the Trent Valley League last evening Madoc fell before the Tweed septette on Tweed ice, while Stirling secured a 7-6 victory over Marmora in Stirling. The latter game was exceedingly close, the score at the close of the first period being 2 all, twenty minutes later it was 5-4 for Stirling, and 7-6 for the home seven at the final gong. Tommy Moffat's team from Marmora put up a real stiff argument and Bill Whitty and the rest of the Stirling aggregation had a big contract to win. Bill Whitty is the self-same Bill, plus a few gray hairs, who played in the Trent Valley Lacrosse and Hockey Leagues years ago. He has a nifty outfit gathered together and will take a lot of beating. The goaler, Conley, is particularly brilliant.

Marmora will be heard of again. The blue and white are very speedy and when they get a little more team play, will make the other three teams step fast to keep the Cook trophy from Moffatville. Shannon, on the defence, and Jones and McWilliams, on the forward line, were about the most effective men last night.

The teams—

Marmora — Goal, Clairmont; defence, C. Jones and Shannon; rover, J. Callahan; centre, J. Jones; wings, Froates and McWilliams.

Stirling — Goal, Conley; defence, Whitty and Gould; rover, Ackers; centre, Bailey; wings, Maloney and Cooke.

NO FAITH IN COMEBACKS.

The Old Man's Experience Justified His Warning.

Two tourists in Florida while drinking water at the so called "fountain of youth" in the outskirts of St. Augustine were importuned by the youth who served them the crystal beverage to go into the house, where for 25 cents they could see some wonderful "relics of Ponce de Leon."

"I fear we haven't time this morning," politely declined the lady of the party. "Perhaps we can come back."

"I reckon if you don't see 'em today you all won't ever see 'em," drawled the attendant dolefully.

"Oh, I think we'll come back."

"Well, I don't reckon you will no how. My father, he's been in business sixty years, and he says to me if you don't get 'em the first time you never get 'em. He says he ain't never seen a comeback come back yet."—Judge.

Beef Tea Custard.

This is often appreciated by an invalid who has tired of the tea itself. To make it pour a cupful of beef tea over a well beaten egg, see that it is seasoned properly, and either cook in a little dish in a slow oven or in a mold with buttered paper over and steam until set. Mutton, chicken or veal broth, if made strong enough, may be turned into savory custards in the same way.

Friend—What! You pawned your one good coat to get canvas for your painting?

Artist—Yes.

Friend—And how much did you get for the picture?

Artist—Nearly enough to get my coat out.

PICTON HERE ON MONDAY

Peterborough's win last evening in Bowmanville completes the schedule games in this district and leaves Picton and the locals tied for first honors. The O. H. A. has officially announced that the Petes and Pirates will play home-and-home games, total goals to count. The first game will be in Peterborough on Monday night, while the second will be in Picton on Wednesday.

Monday night's battle should be a strenuous and exciting affair. When Picton played here two weeks ago, soft ice prevented both teams from going at their best. Judging from the delivery of Old Probs today, the ice will be extra fast, thus team play and speed will be an important factor if victory is to be won. That the Pirates are a speedy aggregation need not be mentioned. Hubbs, the big defence player, and Bert Hudgins and Burns on the wing line have gained a reputation around the district as Cyclone Taylors. How strong they can go against the Petes remains to be seen. The Petes have improved vastly the past two weeks, and can be depended upon to be in the game every second of the sixty minutes.

Big Crowd Expected.

Picton will be accompanied by an excursion carrying upwards of 300 fans and rooters. Local followers will be out in a multitude. The crowd, is has been estimated, will be in the neighborhood of 3000. Reserved seat tickets are now on sale.

HE GOT HIS CHOWDER.

The Hotel Guest Insisted on It, and They Led Him to It.

A man arrived at the Waldorf from Havana the other night and registered.

"What sort of room do you wish, please?" asked the room clerk.

"I vant a chowder," was the reply.

"A chowder?" repeated the clerk.

"Yes, dat's vat you call him—a chowder."

The affable room clerk turned pink behind the ears. He wondered if the others were chaffing him and turned to the desk clerk with an inquiring look.

"He wants a clam chowder, of course," the second clerk translated. "Men's cafe; down the corridor; second door to the right. Not yet closed." Then he turned to his list.

"But I want not ze dining room," protested the traveler from Havana. "I vant a chowder. Surely you have ze chowder?"

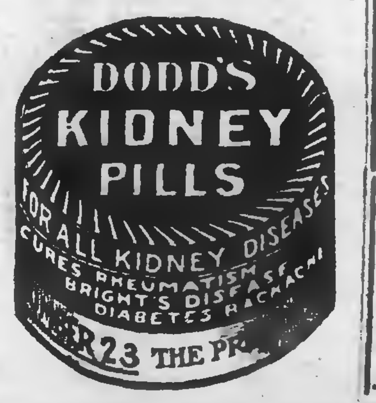
"Is it something to eat?" inquired the clerk.

"Ah, no! Eet is in a room. I vant a room with chowder. Ze t'ing were ze water comes out from ze top of ze room and falls on ze head."

A sigh of relief went up behind the desk.

"Oh! A room with a shower is what you wish."

"Zat's him—chowder." And he was led to it.—New York Times.



PETES HAD FOUR GOALS TO THE GOOD

Bowmanville Went Strong in the Final Period

Bowmanville, Jan. 30. — By defeating Bowmanville by 12 to 8 here last night, Peterborough is now tied with Picton for the district. Peterborough started in at a fast clip and scored seven goals in the first period while the local boys got two goals. In the second period Ack Hunter's stalwarts added four more. In the final period Bowmanville came back strong and got the puck past Janes six times by good combination, while Peterorough only scored once.

The teams—

Bowmanville — Goal, Spry; left defence, Jones; right defence, F. Williams; rover, R. Williams; centre, Roenick; left wing, Hooper; right wing, Higginbotham.

Peterborough — Goal, Janes; left defence, Pethick; right defence, Hunter; rover, Halpin; centre, Park, left wing, Kelly; right wing, Moinse.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

POOL DISPUTE.

In the Bishop's Carriage

Mr. Ralph E. Cummings who is managing the tour of "In the Bishop's Carriage," was formerly an actor and as such was well known to Canadians especially in Toronto and Montreal where he was a great favorite. In fact when he appeared in Toronto no other theatre could do any business for he was considered the ideal hero of his day but he turned his attention to the producing of plays and is now regarded as a master stage director and directs the original productions of plays for the biggest New York managers, so when a play is under his immediate supervision it at once bears the stamp of excellence. Mr. Cummings will be here with his company which is en route to Toronto and which will be seen at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night, Feb. 4th. The price of seats has been placed at 25c., 50c., 75c. and $1.00.

Conservatory Orchestra CONCERT

The Conservatory Orchestra Concert will be held in the GRAND OPERA HOUSE on MONDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 8th, under the auspices of THE WOMEN'S WAR FUND.

Soloist, Mr. Frank Oldfield, baritone; Mr. Leo Smith, cellist; Miss Lina D. Adamson, violinist; Miss Ada Richardson, soprano; Miss Jeanette Kilmaster, pianiste. All seats reserved. Admission 50 cents.

FAREWELL TO REV. F. J. SAWERS

Ministerial Association Lose Another of Their Number

The members of the Ministerial Association met in special session at luncheon in the Oriental yesterday, the occasion being a farewell by the ministers of the city to Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., retiring rector of St. Luke's Church. After the repast, the members retired to one of the private rooms, where a very pleasant hour was spent, in which each of the ministers spoke of their happy relationship with Rev. Mr. Sawers. The high esteem in which he was held, both as a clergyman and citizen was testified to by each one present. His departure from the city, while greatly regretted by friends in Peterborough, will be a special benefit and help to the town of Cobourg.

Rev. Jas. Rollins, B. A., president of the association, occupied the chair.

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, B. A., the new minister at Knox Presbyterian Church, was welcomed to the city and the association.

OBITUARY

MRS. GEORGE MEHARRY.

Mrs. George Meharry passed away at Nicholls Hospital last evening at seven o'clock. Besides her husband there are three children.

The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. JAS. BRADLEY.

Helen Kilby, beloved wife of Mr. Jas. Bradley, passed away at the family residence, 617 Aylmer street, yesterday afternoon, in her seventy-second year. The late Mrs. Bradley had been in poor health for some time, and her condition became serious a short time ago. The deceased lady was born in England. In 1870 she left London, with her husand, and came to Peterborough, where she resided until the time of her death. She was a conscientious and consistent member of the George Street Methodist Church, and her demise is regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Her loss is mourned by her husband, five sons, John, of Cavan, James, of Edmonton, Charles of Winnipeg, Wm., of Rochester, N. Y., George of Toronto, and two daughters, Mrs. A. Ash, this city, and Bertha, at home. One brother, Daniel Kilby, resides in Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 2.30, to Little Lake Cemetery. House service at 2 p.m., conducted by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D.

Tricky Transportation

His Travel Was Enlivened by a Musical Accompaniment.

When war is in the air on the continent of Europe a man who is liable for military service often finds it very difficult to escape from the country. In the Wide World Magazine T. J. Thomas tells the story of the escape of one Petre Cocan from Hungary when on account of the Balkan crisis the decree had gone forth that no man between the ages of sixteen and fifty-two should leave the country without a passport.

Cocan, who was a Roumanian by birth and had lived in America, could not get a passport. He than went to the agent of a transatlantic line and bought a ticket for America on the assurance that the agent would get him out of the country. After several days of suspense Cocan, with three other fugitives, was sent to a place near the border, where they were met according to agreement by a band of Roumanians disguised as gypsy musicians, four of whom carried huge bass viola. The backs were removed from the viola, and in each there was a small seat. Cocan and his fellow fugitives took their places, the backs were fastened on the viols, and again the musicians set out for the border. All passed the guard safely except Cocan. His bearer got into a dispute with a soldier of the guard, the quarrel waxed violent, the bass viol fell to the ground, the back came off, and Cocan landed in a ditch by the roadside. He was arrested and sent home again.

He tried the same trick again, but on a different road and at a place on the border far removed from the first attempt. This time he made his escape, but as the musicians were crossing the border the soldiers of the guard demanded a tune, and Cocan endured the agony of sitting inside a bass viol while it was played upon. The noise in the narrow space was deafening.

After his many adventures Cocan arrived safely at Canton, O.

A Hungarian named Monos attempted to get into the United States from Canada. He was unsuccessful. He tried another route and got through, reaching Watertown, N. Y., when the immigration agents captured him and returned him to

An important meeting of the staff officers and captains of the Home Guard will be held in the Bank of Montreal chambers at eight o'clock this evening.

Why They Came Back.

There are many young men in Canada these days who do not even now seem to know why they were sent back from Valcartier. They are in a quandary over being able to pass the local medical examination flying only to be rejected at the concentration camp. "I'll tell you why," volunteers a veteran. "Take me, I know the record of at least twenty young men who signed on from around my factory. It's like a yachting cruise or going away hunting, everything lies in having a congenial company — no kickers. One kicker will spoil the whole outfit. The first thing the corporals and sergeants did, down at Valcartier, was to hunt up the inevitable grumbler. The delinquent would be quietly warned; if incorrigible his name was passed along to the captain, and he did the rest. When that man stripped before the doctor, the hemming and hawing started at once. If he never [illegible] before there was certain to be some defect shown up—bad eyes, teeth, or a toenail—any excuse to weed out the growler, the kicker. Somebody should pass that out to the [illegible] now drilling."

A MAORI OFFICER OF A NEW ZEALAND REGIMENT.

The Germans who have hurled abuse at the British for bringing colored soldiers from India and other countries into the fight, probably would be utterly disgusted if they learned that New Zealand aborigines actually held commissions as officers.

Something Entirely New in Eyeglass Mountihgs

No more poor lenses and very few weak eyes, if you use the NEW TAIT NO-SCREW MOUNT. These mounts are attached to the lenses without the use of screws or rivets and thereby do away with the need of drilling a hole in the lenses which of course weakens the lenses.

Also the mounts never work loose like the old style. These mounts are manufactured at the Tait Optical Co.'s Hamilton factory and are sold here exclusively by Tait Optical Co. See sample in window.

THE LUCKY INDIAN

"The Indians are the most fortunate people in Canada to-day," said A. F. Fugl, district manager of the Hudson Bay Company at Edmonton Alberta. "They have fish and fuel at their very doors and it costs them nothing to build their houses."

These remarks were made by Mr Fugl when asked if the report were true that the Hudson Bay Company had cut off the food supply of the Indians in the far north. "Absolutely rot," said Mr. Fugl. "These reports that the Indians of the north are starving are altogether untrue."

Mr. Fugl stated that his company would continue to buy all the furs the Indians could supply and also stated that the public were under a false impression when they thought that the Indians required a large supply of food for the winter. "Such is not the case," said Mr. Fugl, "in fact, it's quite the reverse. It is when the Indian is loafing about the towns and settlements that he requires the food supply and not when he goes on his winter's hunt for furs. When the Indian leaves for his hunt he takes just as little food supply and other articles as possible as he wants as small a pack to carry as it is possible to make. His winter's supply of food comes mainly from what he shoots and from fish."

Fur prices, according to Mr. Fugl have dropped 85 per cent. in the past year, but the Indians continue to get a very good price for their skins. For mink skins, where the Indians one year ago got $5 for a good skin, to-da, he gets but one dollar. Mr. Fugl stated that as high as $15 is paid for a good martin skin, so it would seem that after all the Indian should be better off than many white people.

"If I were to lose my job to-morrow and had no means of livelihood I would go straight to the far north country," said Mr. Fugl. "There I would at least have enough to eat." Mr. Fugl states that he is well acquainted with the Indians of all parts of Canada, having lived among them and dealt with them from the Labrador coast to the Arctic coast and he says that of all Indians in Canada to-day, none are so well off and have better means of livelihood than the Indians of far northern Alberta.

The annual report of the Indian Department shows that although the Indians of the northern region of Canada who depend on hunting are suffering from the effects of the war on the fur market, and have to be aided by the Government, the Indians of the Dominion on the whole have made considerable progress in the past year. They raised 400,000 bushels of grain more than the year before, and their agricultural products were worth $208,000 more, the total being $1,856,000.

The total value of real and personal property owned by the Indians is $46,500,000, an increase of $7,292,000 for the year. The Indian population is given as 100,000, or 2,716 less than last year, though it is impossible to take an accurate census.

Looking For Privates.

Visit Salisbury camp any Sunday and watch the battery of limousines drawn up close to the battalion lines says J. A. Maclean in a recent article in The Toronto Sunday World. Sunday is visitors' day, and thousands of relatives and friends motor out to the camp from the south and north east and west. Practically all that troops do on Sunday is to attend church service in the morning and receive visitors. Many, of course, go to London and elsewhere on leave for the week end.

"Is Private Johnston in this battalion?" asked a silk hatted plutocrat in a limousine which has stopped at one of the camp roads near the quarters of the Toronto or Montreal Highlanders, the Queen's Own or some other battalion. The soldier addressed sprints alongside the rows of tents and yells the name out: "Private Johnston." The soldier wanted appears most likely in mud and grease stained kakhi and walks out to meet his uncle who is connected with the War Office, or the Admiralty, head of a half a dozen banks or something like that.

"When you see these visitors searching for relatives in the ranks you get a pretty good idea of whom these Canadians are," said an officer. "They are of the best."

Another officer remarked: "You know we must have discipline and we are gradually getting it. But it is hard going some times especially if a man is almost unmanageable. Most of these fellows had no previous knowledge of soldiering. It's rather tough when you have got to call down the son of your boss for coming in late on parade."

DON'T WASTE TIME.

Many Men Have Accomplished Wonders In Their Spare Moments.

Great men are economical in their use of time. They not only work hard for hours together, but they also save the spare minutes, which most persons waste in profitless employment.

As the distinguished naturalist Cuvier rode from place to place he read and thought, and the results of his saving these odd quarter hours are seen in his books.

Napoleon, as he hurried over Europe in his camp carriage, was busy in planning for the government of conquered countries and in contriving new conquests.

Elihu Burritt learned no less than eighteen languages and twenty-two dialects by the economical use of time. While he worked fourteen hours a day at his trade of a blacksmith he found a few minutes each morning and evening to study Latin or French.

His Greek grammar would fit into the crown of his straw hat, and as he stood at his furnace, waiting for the fusing of the metal, he would catch it up and commit to memory a part of a Greek verb.

Sir William Jones, the oriental scholar and a judge in the supreme court of India, had so well improved his time that before he reached the age of twenty-one he knew Greek, Latin, several modern languages and had studied the Arabic and the Persian. His use of the spare minutes made him both learned and famous.

John Wesley said: "Never be unemployed; never be triflingly employed; never while away time."

So Goethe, the great German poet and thinker, said:

"Do not wait for extraordinary opportunities, but make use of common situations."

Be careful of the minutes, and the hours will take care of themselves.

PEACE PARTY IN GERMANY

Hold Meetings and Post Placards to Stop the War

ARRESTS MADE AND TWO ARE SHOT

Stories of Sweeping Victories Over British No Longer Credited

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 1. — Alfred Arnold, who has just returned to London from a tour of Southern and Western Germany, cables the Herald that the most significant symptom he observed was the appearance of a definite peace party in industrial centres and the holding of peace meetings and posting of placards to stop the war. A number of persons attending these meetings were arrested and two were shot. The prevailing sentiment is one of depression and anxiety. War news is scanty and has lost its power to encourage. Stories of sweeping victories, especially over the hated British, are no longer credited.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—A message this afternoon from Southport says that a German submarine, supposedly U 21, was seen off there early this morning.

Southport is a seaside resort of England in the Irish Sea.

PARIS OFFICIAL STATEMENT

PARIS, Feb. 1. — This afternoon's official statement says: "Yesterday was calm in the Argonne, where the Germans seems to have suffered heavily in the recent fighting. An attempt by Germans to attack the Allies' trenches north of the canal south-east of Ypres was promptly checked by combined rifle and artillery fire.

"Artillery fire was general throughout the day, and along the entire Aisne front, from a junction with the Oise to Berry-au-Bac, our guns succeeded in demolishing shellers and trenches and in silencing artillery detachments and mine throwers."

MR. DUMBLE ASSERTS BY-LAW IS NOT LEGAL

Argument is Presented and Judge Haycke Reserves Judgment

The arguments in the case, in which the George Street Methodist Church is seeking to recover the sum of $84 which was paid to the city for garbage taxes for 1914, were made to Judge Huycke this morning by Solicitors D. W. Dumble and Joseph Wearing, acting for the church, and G. N. Gordon acting for the city. The evidence had been taken on a previous occasion, and at the close of arguments this morning Judge Huycke reserved judgment to permit him to go over the evidence, read up the bylaws and the sections of the statutes referred to.

Mr. Dumble, in presenting his arguments, ponted out how there was a sitting of the court of revision in 1913, but not in 1914. The assessment was made previous to the passing of the garbage bylaw, and the assessment could not be made, therefore, to meet the requirements of the garbage act. That the assessment was not a fair, honest one was shown by the evidence given by the city witnesses. They testified that the following year (1915) a drop was made of some $30 in the bill. Mr. Dumble quoted the Statutes, Chap. 195, Sec. 5, which stated that all lands and buildings in the interest of the Crown, all places of worship, and lands in connection with places of worship are exempted from taxes.

The city's bylaw he claimed to be illegal. It provided for six months' imprisonment for non-payment of garbage taxes. Mr. Dumble claimed that that is not according to Statutes. One cannot be sent to jail for not paying debts. Another argument set forth by the church's solicitors was that no notice had been given the church. Notice should have been served on Mr. Brownscombe, and it was not. The only notice the church ever got was for 1915, made in 1914.

Relying on the fact that the assessment was not made after the passing of the bylaw, Mr. Dumble claimed the church was, according to law, exempt. The Statutes do not cover a case of this kind, and looking at the bylaw of the city it is very evident that the party who drew it up had not churches in his mind.

City Solicitor Gordon pointed out how a claim was made on the grounds of payment being made by mistake. Evidence showed that Mr. Brownscombe had the necessary authority to make the payment, knew what he was doing, paid the right sum to the right man, and therefore there was no mistake about it. The bylaw in question was drawn up under the authority of the Municipal Act, which stated, "No land shall be exempt." The penalty clause is not in the bylaw, but rather in the bylaw governing the agreements between the city and people. The bylaw governing the imposing of rates does not carry a penalty clause.

As to no court of revision being held in 1914, the Assessment Act provides time for taking assessment, for the adoption of the assessment for the current year, and when adopted, the holding of a court of revision for that particular assessment. The first assessment was made in 1913, and the court of revision sat that year. Therefore the assessment was made in the ordinary time, and the court of revision sat in the ordinary time and confirmed the assessment.

Mr. Gordon referred to the church being assessed $84 for 1914 and some $30 less for the year following. His Honour thought it might be possible to arrange some agreement by having the city refund $30 of the taxes paid in 1914, but Mr. Dumble would not hear of it. He said the whole thing was illegal.

Mr. Gordon then handed His Honour a copy of the evidence taken at the last sitting, and urged him to fully consider the scope of Mr. Brownscombe's authority.

IMMIGRATION MOVEMENT.

The immigration movement between the United States and Canada has naturally lessened in volume during the past few months, but it is still in favor of Canada. During the week ending January 19th, for instance, there entered Western Canada from the U.S.A. 102 settlers with cash valued at $45,317, of whom sixty nine were American citizens and 38 farmers. In the same period of 1914 there left Canada to reside permanently in the United States 52 persons of whom fifteen were farmers.

SPENT SIXTY YEARS HERE

Alexander Edmunds Passes After Long and Active Life

At the age of ninety-five years and six months, Alexander Edmunds passed away early this morning at his residence, 338 Stewart Street, death being practically due to his advanced age. He was a familiar figure on the streets of the city and there were few citizens more widely known or highly esteemed. During his long and active life, he witnessed many changes in Peterborough and of late years, liked nothing better than to chat about things as they were half a century ago. He had resided here for about sixty years.

The late Mr Edmunds was born in the County of Northumberland. At an early age he went to live with a Mr. Keeler of Norwood and spent some seven or eight years with him, engaged in the milling business. From there he went to New York State where he fololwed the same occupation and then returned to manage the mills for Mr. Keeler. He later assumed charge of the Otonabee mills, Ashburnham, where he was employed for many years. His wife predeceased him twenty-five years. Of late years he lived a more or less retired life although he bought grain and wool.

He is survived by his daughter Mary J. Edmunds, with whom he had been living.

Mr. J. W. Pearce, ex-M.P., of Belleville, and J. P. Pearce of Norwood, are nephews.

The funeral will be held from the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at 2 o'clock, Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., officiating.

WRIST WATCHES ARE PRESENTED

To Members of St. John's Church Who Have Enlisted

To the large number of men who are either at the front or preparing for it from St. John's congregation, seven more at least may be added, viz.: Major Medd, C.O., Messrs. D. Eldred, G. Harris, R. Perry, A. Theobald, E. Tucker, and W. Flowers, of the Mounted Infantry, who may leave within a few days. After Evensong last night a reception and presentation was held in the schoolhouse. Short addresses were given by the Rev. Canon Davidson, Mr. H. Rush, Mr. J. Howden and Mr. R. J. Devey, from which it appeared that the recruits had been valued active workers in the choir and congregation. Midget wrist watches were handed to Mrs. Howden and Mrs. Devey by Mrs. Rush. The ladies then buckled them on to the six enlisted men on whose behalf Messrs. Theobald and Tucker replied suitably. At this stage Major Medd arrived, and in a short speech expressed thanks for the hearty reception accorded him, and stated that whether they returned or not every man was out to do his duty. The Rector referred to other officers and men who had gone and mentioned that a complete list was being prepared to be placed in the church. The prayers of the church would be offered on their behalf as in the last few months.

The singing of "Blest be the tie" and "God Save the King," ended an impressive gathering.

SHIPPING RAID BEGINS

SUBMARINE WAR ON ENGLISH VESSELS

Berlin Newspapers Comment Enthusiastically on It's Inauguration

SAME THING MAY HAPPEN LINERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 1. — The steamer Icaria, from Brazil, was twenty miles northwest of Cape Le Heve yesterday, when a violent explosion occurred on her starboard side below the water line. She began to sink by the head, and in response to signals two tugs put out and towed her into Havre.

A member of the crew of the torpedoed steamer Toko Maru, who has arrived here, says his ship was virtually stationary, waiting for a pilot when the explosion occurred. No sign of a submarine was to be seen. The vessel soon had a heavy list. The captain ordered boats out, and everyone was away from the ship in fifteen minutes.

A German submarine in the Irish Sea attempted to torpedo the steamer Leinster, which plies between Holyhead and Dublin, although the sea was so rough that not one of the Leinster's passengers was on deck. The Leinster's engines were speeded up to twenty-four knots and soon distanced the submarine.

Berlin newspapers comment enthusiastically on the inauguration of Admiral Von Tirpitz's threatened submarine war on English merchantmen, and say the same thing may happen next to the big liners.

STEAMERS AND COLLIERS HELD IN PORT.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — Nine steamers which ply across the North Channel between Ireland and Scotland are being held in Belfast, and fourteen colliers are also anchored there, owing to a submarine peril. The insurance rate on coasters which was five shillings per hundred pounds has advanced to twenty shillings.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — Five British merchant steamers were sunk by German submarines during Saturday and Sunday at various points in the Irish Sea and the English Channel. These exploits have caused intense excitement, especially in British shipping circles. The first announcement of the success of the submarines was in the following official statement issued by the French Minister of Marine:

"The British steamer Tokomaru has been sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine. The British vessel Icaria also was torpedoed in the same locality. In the Irish Sea the British steamers Linda Blanche and Ben Cruachen were torpedoed.

"Hitherto the Germans, before attacking a merchant vessel, always allowed the crews sufficient time to embark in the ship's boats. That custom has now been abandoned, as is shown by the bombardment of the Admiral Gautheume, which was filled with Belgian women and children refugees. The German marine has decided to violate systematically and deliberately international law."

The new raid brings the information from French naval experts that Germany has a fleet of eighteen powerful submarines capable of attacking Britain's overseas commerce. Each craft has a radius of 2,500 miles, while a radius of only 2,000 miles is necessary to enforce Admiral von Tirpitz's threat to chase British commercial ships from their home seas.

The torpedo made a hole below the water line, but the Tokomaru remained afloat for half an hour. This gave the crew of fifty-seven men a chance to get off in the small boats. The crew was picked up by the trawler Hooper and brought to Havre yesterday afternoon. No details are available concerning the torpedoing of the Icaria.

Advices from Fleetwood say:

The German submarine U-21 on Saturday torpedoed the North Shields steamer Ben Cruachen off this port. The entire crew, number twenty, was landed here.

The captain of the steamer says he was overtaken by the submarine on Saturday morning and ordered to leave his ship within ten minutes. Hardly had the crew got into the boats when a torpedo was fired, and the steamer went down.

The Ben Cruachen, which was of 1,978 tons and belonged to the Morrison Shipping Co., was on a voyage from the Orkney Islands to Liverpool with a general cargo.

Fleetwood is one of the principal fishing and shipping ports on the west coast.

The steamer Graphic, with passengers, Belfast to Liverpool, the paper says, passed wreckage and soon afterwards saw the Ben Cruachen sunk. The Graphic was chased, but eluded pursuit and reached the Mersey safely.

Two other vessels besides the Ben Cruachen were sunk by the German submarine U-21. This fact became known when a trawler brought in the eleven members of the crew of the steamer Linda Blanche, which was sent to the bottom by the German raider.

The Linda Blanche was on its way from Manchester to Belfast when the submarine suddenly appeared alongside. Officers came aboard and in perfect English ordered the crew to leave the steamer. As soon as the men of the Linda Blanche were in their boats the Germans attached a mine to the bridge and another to the forecastle. When these were exploded the vessel was destroyed.

The skipper of the trawler stated that at two o'clock Saturday afternoon he sighted another ship, on which an explosion evidently had occurred. He was steering in the direction of this vessel when he picked up the Linda Blanches' boats. When he reached the point where he had seen the other ship he found no trace of wreckage, and believed it went down after he first sighted it.

The crew of the British steamer Kilcoan has been landed on the Isle of Man, in the Irish Sea, by the coasting steamer Gladys. The crew reports that the Kilcoan was sunk by a submarine. The Kilcoan was a small steamer of 456 tons.

Leinster Chased; But Escaped.

DUBLIN, Feb. 1. — The steamer Leinster, from Holyhead to Kingstown, reports that she was chased by a German submarine for fifteen minutes off the Kish Light vessel, but succeeded in escaping.

The Kish Light vessel is opposite the mouth to Dublin Bay.

The Allan Line steamer Scandinavian, from St. John, N.B., Jan. 22, for Liverpool, with 500 passengers on board, learned of the raid of the 21st, and put into Queenstown. After remaining in Queenstown for a short time, the steamer proceeded for Liverpool.

TWO CENT RATE ON LETTERS FOR SOLDIERS

Arrangements have been made whereby the ordinary rate of two cents per ounce, applicable to all letters sent from Canada to the United Kingdom, will apply to letters addressed to British and Canadian troops on the continent. The rate on ordinary letters from Canada for the continent is five cents for the first ounce, and three cents for each subsequent ounce, so that this extension of the two cents an ounce rate to letters addressed to our soldiers on the continent is a decided reduction in favor of correspondence going to the soldiers.

ONTARIO SHOULD AVOID TOO EXPENSIVE EDUCATION.

PRESIDENT LOWELL of Harvard University, in presenting his annual report, announced a deficit of $52,000. This deficit was occasioned by increasing the teaching accommodation a few years ago. A large number of instructors were appointed, who, having grown older, necessitating yearly increases in salary, have been the chief cause of the Harvard deficit. This statement of the case is clear, and presents a reason for over-expenditure that was quite justified, if Harvard was to maintain its standard of education.

The President said that Harvard could not hope to compete with the state universities in providing cheap education. It would have to rely on the quality of the instruction offered. To meet the increased expenditure, he intimated that it could be met by increasing the tuition, which has been $150 a year since 1869. In the medical faculty the fee is $200, and in the applied science faculty, $250. The enrollment in the freshmen class for 1914 was 664. The age of 17 is advocated as the age at which students should be admitted.

These facts are interesting, in view of the statements of Ontario universities. Ontario universities are providing instruction at a much lower cost to the student. If a university is to perform the best service to the state, it will administer, not to the rich few, but to the hungry many. That is why there should be considerable opposition to increasing the cost of instruction to the students, especially in those institutions receiving government aid. The cost of a course at Harvard makes it prohibitive to many brilliant students; makes it, in fact, a rich man's college, for the President himself says the state institutions give instruction more cheaply. This is what Ontario should strive to avoid as much as possible.

WOULD ABOLISH CHURCHES AND PREACHERS.

A CALIFORNIA MAYOR advocates the abolition of all churches and ministers and the building of one municipal tabernacle for the whole city, having an expert preach on religious matters, and furnishing the best music available. This is the proposition of Mayor J. W. Catick, of San Bernardino. He figures out that a building seating 2,500 people will accommodate all who want to go to church, and he would lessen the expenses of upkeep of several churches by having one run by the municipality, financed on taxes and debentures, and having the other church buildings made into apartment houses. He does not say whether the preacher and choir of his proposed municipal church would belong to the union, or what their scale of wages would be. He might favour paying the preacher by piece-work, so much per yard of sermon, and the choir by the volume of its music. He doesn't mention prayer-meetings, but we presume overtime would be charged for them. There may be something in this, but we have thought of an improvement. Why not substitute a big phonograph for choir and preacher? Any small boy could run it.

GERMAN TRADE WITH U. S. SMASHED.

SOME PEOPLE have asked the question: What has the British navy done? The obvious insinuation is that they have not done as much as was expected of them. Those who ask such a question display more an ignorance of the facts than anything else, due principally to the fact that outside of battles the navy has accomplished a great work that is not spectacular.

Exports from Germany to the United States in the year 1914, according to statistics compiled by Julius G. Lay, American Consul-General at Montreal, amounted to $159,051,250. This total shows a falling-off of $31,552,185 as compared with the previous year. That this decrease falls entirely within the period of the war is proved by a comparison of the last six months of 1913 with the last six months of 1914.

This change, perhaps, is not so much due to general trade depression as to the prohibition on the export of articles of military value. Hides and leather alone account for $12,000,000 of the decrease. there not having been a single shipment of these goods during the last quarter of the year.

The figures show that German trade with the United States has been almost annihilated, and that this alone means a decrease of nearly fifty cents per head of the total population of Germany. Had Britain's fleet not been in control of the North Sea, no such heavy blow would have fallen on German commerce.

PRICES all along the line are advancing, says an advertisement. Most householders are thinking that it is time for a precipitate retreat. Let everybody advance.

SOMETHING ABOUT ROUMANIA.

ROUMANIA, which has been mobilizing her army and threatening to cast in her lot with the Allies, is a kingdom in the south-eastern part of Europe, situated between the Black Sea on the east, Bulgaria on the south, Servia and Austria-Hungary on the west, and Russia on the north and east, says the Montreal Journal of Commerce. The country has an area of 50,720 square miles, and a population of 7,100,000.

Roumania has played an important part in the history of the ancient world. When the Romans crossed the Alps they cast longing eyes upon the rich valley of the Danube held by the Dacian tribes. After a fierce conflict, they were conquered by the Roman Emperor Trajan, who converted it into a Roman province. It is very probable that from the Roman occupation the name of the country originated. The valley of the Danube is exceedingly fertile, and the country grows and exports large quantities of grain. In addition, Roumania possesses valuable oil fields. Roumania is anxious to acquire Transylvania, and Bukowina Provinces, which now constitute part of Austria-Hungary, but which contain large numbers of Roumanians. As a matter of fact, these are Roumanian provinces in all but name. Russia has already overrun Bukowina, and unless Roumania bestirs herself, her big Slav neighbour will soon overrun Transylvania, in which case she is not likely to hand them over to Roumania as a gift when the war is over. Russia has practically told Roumania she must go in and conquer them for herself.

It is not the first time that Russia and Roumania have taken sides. In the Russian-Turkish War in 1877, Roumania allied herself with Russia. She came to the rescue of her big neighbour at the battle of Plevna and saved the Russian army from annihilation. As a result of the war, Roumania was recognized by Russia as an independent nation, and was given a small strip of swampy territory, while Russia herself took possession of another province. During recent years Roumania has built up a powerful army, and at the end of the second Balkan war, by threats of intervention, succeeded in obtaining a considerable strip of land from the Bulgarians. Should Roumania enter the fight with her half million army, she would prove an important factor and aid materially in the breaking up of the Austrian-Hungarian defences.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. W. J. FRANCIS, the only member of the Canadian Society of Engineers who spoke at their annual banquet, is head of the firm of W. J. Francis & Co., consulting engineers, of Montreal. Mr. Francis was born near Toronto on January 28th, 1872. He was educated in Toronto at the Collegiate Institute, and at the School of Practical Science of the University of Toronto, graduating with honours in 1901. He has been on the engineering staff of the Grand Trunk Railway and of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and was also for a number of years in the service of the Department of Railways and Canals at Ottawa. His most important work was performed in connection with the building of the famous Lift Locks on the Trent Canal near Peterborough. He has written extensively on engineering and scientific questions, and is regarded as one of the coming men in his profession.

MR. JOHN R. MOTT, who is delivering a series of lectures to the students of McGill, is probably better known among college men throughout the world than any other man. Mr. Mott was born in New York in 1865, and after a brilliant college course became Student Secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association and also head of the World's Student Volunteer Movement. He has visited every country in the world and has lectured before the students of all the great colleges. Mott is undoubtedly one of the world's great men. His genius for organization and his power to enthuse men makes him an ideal man for his work. President Woodrow Wilson recently referred to him as "one of the most nobly useful men in the world."

MR. H. C. COX, who presided at the annual meeting of the Canada Life Assurance Company, is a son of the late Senator George A. Cox. He was born at Peterborough in 1873, educated at Jarvis Street Collegiate Institute and at Victoria University. He entered the service of the Canada Life Assurance Company in 1894 and succeeded to the presidency last year on the death of his brother, E. W. He is a director of a large number of financial and insurance corporations, but apart from busines finds his chief recreation in music.

A Doubting Thomas.

(Bowmanville Statesman.)

Toronto people made an endeavor some months ago to initiate a movement suggested by the misfortunes of war-time, to solve at a single stroke the problem of unemployment in the cities, and the lack of female help on the farms. In the first few days of operation we read of eight girls who had been working in factories in the city and were released from employment, being placed on Ontario farms as household helpers, and we have been curious ever since to hear how they worked and how the scheme worked, for we confess we had our doubts. Girls who have lived in cities and who had every evening after 5 or 6 p.m. to parade in their good clothes, we feared, would not take kindly to ordinary farm life where "man's work is from sun to sun, but woman's work is never done." If the girls would only take a sensible view of the situation and strive to learn all they can about housework, cooking, butter-making, sewing, mending, etc., a period spent in good farm homes should prove a great blessing and benefit to them. The overworked housewives, too, would thank the day that much-needed help came their way to lighten the burden of their daily duties. They can do very much to make the movement from city to country popular by showing wise consideration and exercising patience while initiating the girls into their new duties.

Too Good to Be True.

(Daily Sketch.)

A delightful story, which is, of course, untrue, is going the rounds of the clubs. An Irish soldier was told off to bury the German dead. Suddenly one of the Boches raised his head and in perfect English said: "Don't bury me; I am not dead." 'Hold hard," was Pat's cautious answer. "I am making no promise until I have consulted the corporal. You Jarmans are such awful liars."

REDUCE THE SALARIES.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I read in your paper that the report of the finance committee as to reduction of salaries, etc., is to be considered by the council on Monday night, January 1st. Now sir, what the ratepayers want done in my humble opinion is what is just and fair considering the conditions that all are placed under.

There is scarcely any wage earner who is receiving as good remuneration for their services today as they did one year ago. In fact many have been reduced 25 per cent. while also reduced by short time.

Is there any good reason why our city officials should not also be reduced. Now it is only fair to all that they should bear their share of the burden. They surely can afford to do so as well as the pick and shovel man whose wage by the hour is 20 cents and only half time at that. It costs the laborer just so much for the necessaries of life as it does any city official.

City aldermen, for once stand firm for what is fair and not be held up by any clique or society but consciously act up and above board as the situation calls for.

The ratepayers, I thing are in favor of a reduction not of one or two, but in a business manner of say 20 per cent. from the highest down, leaving out the man who only earns $500 or $600 per year.

Allow me to suggest to tax collector Green that he can cut his expenses down considerable instead of paying $250 or $300 per year for delivery of tax notices. Why not use the mails or cheaper still give to Mr Stenton who does that house to house delivery for our merchants advertising. But I doubt if it costs him $25 per year for such expense.

I am yours,

BRIDGE ACROSS THE OTONABEE.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—We notice with a great deal of pleasure that the County Council has decided to grant forty per cent. of the cost of a new bridge across the Otonabee at the foot of Lock street, better known as the street railway wharf. This will prove a great boon to this growing suburb. and goes to prove that the County Council recognizes the importance of this thriving locality. This is the spot where our City Council contemplates erecting its odoriferous sewerage brewery. How different the action of the two bodies—the county distinctly progressive and the city retrogressive. For brains and foresight comend me to the men of the back townships.

Potatoes as Food

When potatoes were first used for food it was the "seed" or "apple" that was used, and it was some time before the tuber was found to be the most delicious food. Up to the end of the seventeenth century the potato was out of the reach of people of moderate incomes. It is recorded that in 1662 potatoes were sold at 1 shilling (25 cents) a pound in the London markets but the sale was small because so many people believed that the potato caused leprosy and fever. Others declared that they were endangering their souls if they ate the potato, since the tuber was not mentioned in the Bible.

The late Duke of Argyll in his history of Scotland says that little or nothing was known of the potato in Scotland until long past the middle of the eighteenth century. The Duchess of Buccleuch, in her "Household Book" for the year 1701, speaks of the potato as "an esculent of great rarity."

Hugh Miller, in his "Schools and Schoolmasters," says that his maternal grandfather about the year 1740 used to bring home in his pocket some three or four potatoes as great rarities grown by the gentry, for he was a friend of the head gardener at Balnagown castle. Thomas Carlyle tells us that his father got possession of four potatoes and knew so little about them that he hid them away for a possible time of want and that potatoes were saved to be eaten at Halloween. There is no doubt that the Irish were the first people to recognize the value of the potato as a staple article of food.—Youth's Companion.

COLORED MOTION PICTURES

They Are Made by Using Screens of Red and Green Glass.

There are colored motion pictures that are made so by hand, each little picture being painted separately. In making pictures "in natural colors" the film is the same as that of the ordinary motion picture. But in making it the speed is twice as fast, thirty-two pictures to the second.

"Colored" pictures are photographed through mats or screens of colored glass. Two primary colors are used, red and green, with a sympathetic touch of blue. When the machine that makes the photograph is started a device causes the red screen to pass before the lens as the first photograph is taken, and the green screen passes the same way as the following picture is made. They continue to do so alternately as the film continues to be exposed.

The negative is developed and a positive printed, and when run through the projecting machine the color screens are used in the same way as when the negative was made, red and green pictures being flashed on the screen alternately. Those colors that are in sympathy with the red are brought out, and those that are in sympathy with the green are shown in the same way, and through the persistence of vision we do not notice the changes. Instead they blend harmoniously to our delight.—Charles M. Seay in American Boy.

When Gas Was New.

There is a tradition to the effect that when domestic lighting by gas was still a novelty Sir Walter Scott introduced it into every room and staircase of the house that he was building at Abbotsford and did so without provision for any unexpected failure. His entering into possession was made the occasion for a house warming on a scale of considerable magnitude, and in the very middle of the festivities all the lights suddenly went out. The guests were left in absolute darkness until such time as mounted messengers could return from Melrose, whither they had been dispatched with instructions to collect all the tallow candles and tin sconces or candlesticks which the village contained.—London Times.

Kingston had its coldest weather of the winter during Friday night, when the thermometer showed 24 degrees below zero. At eight o'clock Saturday morning it was 18 below.

This unexpected admission made Matt's heart leap; again there was that dart of pain, that sense of overwhelming and somehow elusive happiness. The fragrance of that enchanting young womanhood was in his brain. For a while he remained silent, as though under a spell he was loath to break. "I don't believe I can laugh any more," he said at last, looking up strangely at his companion. "I don't believe I can even go on talking as we have done. I would like to go away as I did yesterday, and think, and think, and think."

"That's what I did, too," she returned in a voice that was almost a whisper. "When great things happen one wishes to be alone, doesn't one?"

"Tell me your name," he said, still in that wondering tone. "It's incredible, but I do not know it."

"Christine, though they call me Chris—always call me Chris."

"And mine such a horrid one—Matthew—and it's always Matt, you know, which is even worse."

"I like it. Matt and Chris—it sounds old fashioned, doesn't it, like one's Mayflower ancestors? And ye aforesaid Matthew was a young man of noble presence and of signal worth and understanding, withal sober and upstanding in the fear of God, ye whilk of all ye pilgrim maids he chose one Christine Marshall, avowing for her"—

"Go on—don't stop there."

But she did stop there, looking down at him with eyes like stars, all wonder and tenderness and shining, girl-like with just a quiver of the pretty mouth.

Alas for the lie that came back to roost, accompanied by a peremptory knocking on the pulpit panels, and the apparition of a very impatient young man in a high collar.

"Say, brother, ain't you ever going to give us that there recitation?"

"It has been unavoidably postponed," said Matt brazenly, rising, as Miss Marshall did the same. He pleaded with her to remain a little longer, but she would not. It seemed that by this time the general would be as a roaring lion, and prudence dictated a return. They found him not exactly roaring, but certainly fretful, not to say crusty, and his recognition of Matt was of the scantiest.

"For heaven's sake let us get out of this place," he said, smothering an expletive. "You might have had some thought of the horses even if you hadn't for me. Come along."

"Oh, papa, wait. I've invited Mr. Broughton to have tea with us tomorrow—about 4." Then she added to Matt, "Please come, won't you?"

"Shall look forward to it," snapped the general, with the manner of a person temporarily blocked in a burning building. "Good night, good night!" And with that and the pressure of a slender, gloved hand, Matt was left alone—more alone, so it seemed to him, than he had ever been before in his life.

CHAPTER V.

Heart Break Hill.

He rose the next day a very different man from the night before. A pitiless consideration of his circumstances, begun at dawn, and carried to the bath hour, had shown him facts as they were—the dismalest facts imaginable and as gray as the first peep of that gray morning. Who was he, to be calling on aristocratic young ladies and whispering things in pretty pink ears? He whose fortune amounted to less than $4,500 and who had need to strive very energetically to keep his own somewhat large red ears above the engulfing waters. His business was indubitably mules—not to linger in fools' paradises, waste money and time, and drift into the most heartbreaking of false positions.

He tried to put that sparkling face out of his mind; tried not to linger on those girlish admissions that made his pulses beat; called himself, oh, so many times, a fool—a crazy, silly fool—and vowed all sorts of tremendous things. He would excuse himself from that tea; would leave the next day for Kentucky; would get back to dry land and mules and sanity. But he did not wish to appear rude. He would hate to have his action misconstrued. He would go at 4 after all, and if the occasion presented itself would tell her the truth quite frankly—that he had hardly any money, no profession, and a long, uphill fight in front of him. Though how idiotic he was to take it all seriously—himself and her and the whole affair—as though it were any more than a passing flirtation. It was just the incurable way he had of exaggerating everything—of making mountains out of molehills. He laughed at himself a little forlornly. What an ass he was, to be sure! What an ass!

After breakfast he made it up handsomely with Daggancourt, expatiating on mules with much ardor and enthusiasm and gradually recovering the mulatto's sorely shaken confidence. He proved his sincerity by promising to leave for Kentucky on the morrow. They shook hands on it, and any lurking grudge that Victor might still have felt disappeared in that hearty clasp. But there was still a weight on the mulatto's mind. He stammered out something about the San Francisco money—hoped that it was all right—hoped that it had come.

"Excuse my mentioning it," he said, "but you know we'll be needing it pretty soon, and I'd rather not sell the garage till"—

"Oh, that's all right," returned Matt. "It ought to be coming along soon, and if it doesn't I'll telegraph. Don't you worry about that," he added reassuringly. "It's one of those splendid jewelry stores with diamond necklaces in the window and is good for a hundred times the money."

But Victor's concern remained. He had kept better tally on the dates than Matt. It was exactly twenty-four days since the latter had written, a long while surely. Victor asked for the receipt and examined it closely. "That's all right as far as it goes," he said, handing it back with a relieved expression, "though they don't have to buy the ring if they don't want to or change their minds."

"If people like Snood & Hargreaves offered $5,500 for the ring it's pretty sure to be worth it," replied Matt. "Even if they backed out we could sell it somewhere else."

"Yes, that's true," said Victor, recovering his cheerfulness, "and maybe for a better price, considering you took the first bid they made. Depend upon it, you could have raised them a few hundred dollars."

They lingered awhile longer, talking about the $300 commission Victor hoped to get on a secondhand car and as to the advisability of taking $1,000 cash for the garage or a thousand down and another thousand on a nine months' note.

Perhaps Matt kept closer to the veranda that morning than usual, for it was warm and sunny and likely to tempt the presence of Mrs. Sattane with her rocking chair, her darning and her interminable tongue. For once Matt was eager for Mrs. Sattane, and when at length she appeared he was very agreeable and friendly, drawing up beside her, with his pipe, instead of dropping off the end rail, as he ordinarily would have done. After a few false starts he got her on the subject of the Marshalls, and, though as a narrator she was as uncertain as a rabbit and apt to give conversational jumps in the most random directions, Matt always contrived to bring her back and running again in the way he would have her go.

The general when a young cavalry officer, hardly indeed more than a boy, had made a runaway match with a Miss Koenig of Philadelphia, who was so rich that people used to call her Miss Kilmansegg. He had thereupon given up the army and taken to law instead and from law had graduated into politics and congress. After seven or eight years his wife had died, leaving him with two little boys, who were now middle aged men, one a traveler and writer of some reputation and the other an ironmaster on the lakes, with a railroad of his own and fleets of ships. The general had taken his bereavement terribly to heart and for awhile went all to pieces until his friends made interest for him and had him appointed minister to some faraway and insignificant post, more with the idea of benefiting him by the change of scene than launching him into what was to be a distinguished career. He rose rapidly, was constantly promoted and was one of the first American ambassadors when that grade was inaugurated by President McKinley.

In the meanwhile he had married again, losing his second wife many years later in a carriage accident. His daughter, Christine, had narrowly escaped the same fate, and for several years had been a helpless invalid, nobody ever thinking she would be well again. But at last she recovered, and was as strong as most girls, or stronger, to judge from the daring way she rode and her much talked of flights on skis.

On the Spanish war breaking out, Marshall had thrown diplomacy to the winds, and returned to Connecticut to help organize the state's quota for the national defense, receiving his commission as a brigadier general of volunteers, and earning much local renown by his energy and patriotism. It was not his fault that the enrolled citizens never saw a Spaniard, or burned anything more deadly than mosquito powder. The picnic stage was hardly past before the war was over and the general reappointed to his former post. Since then he had definitely retired, more on his daughter's account than his own, it was said, to let her see something of her own people, and marry in her own land, his regard for courts and court life being none of the best.

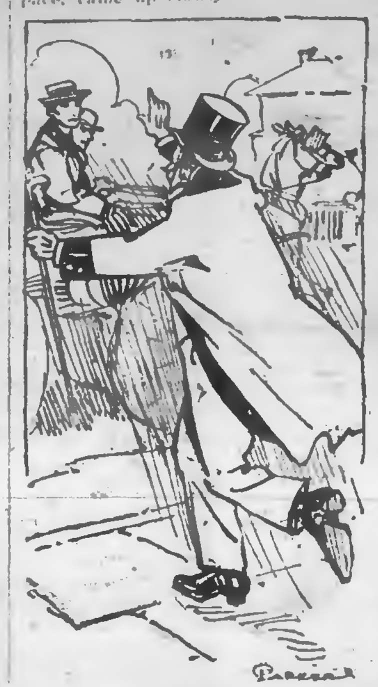
He kept up three establishments—one in Washington, another at Bar Harbor, and the third, his big, comfortable old colonial house at Fair Oaks, about four miles out of Manaswan—moving from one to another as the humor seized him. Fair Oaks was his favorite, as he had owned it ever since his first marriage, and had never closed it, partly from sentiment and partly from the political advantage of preserving a roof tree in his native state. He was a Connecticut man, and there was the proof of it for all to see.

It was a very dragging afternoon for Matt. He was restless, could settle to nothing, was both stirred and depressed at the prospect of his call at Fair Oaks. He had dressed with such care that he was afraid to sit down, or to leave the porch lest his immaculate shoes might suffer, and was horribly conscious of the crinkling nature of his fresh white waistcoat. No girl could have been in more of a tremor. Periodically he went upstairs to look at himself in the glass, to make sure there was not a hair on the neck of his coat, to brush and brush and worry again that his hands were so large and so sunburned.

He had ordered a buggy for half past 3, a buggy and a man to drive it, for he meant to take no chances of missing his road. It came too early and caused him renewed agitation in consequence—a quarter of an hour too early, when, as a matter of fact, he would not dare to start before the half hour—giving him a whole fifteen minutes, therefore, to be dawdled through, with more crinkling of white waistcoat and more risk to shoes and a whole new access of that suffocating feeling, which he supposed to be pleasure, but was in reality much nearer agony.

Punctually to the minute he took his seat in the buggy and was just starting when of a sudden he was hailed from behind. The driver pulled up and Matt turned to see an oldish man in a silk hat, still breathless from running, who had evidently been exerting himself to overtake them.

"Hold on there!" he exclaimed. "Hold on—stop!" and, relaxing his pace, came up slowly on Matt's side and steadied himself a moment with his hand on the wheel. He was an important looking personage, with a crisp, gray, pointed beard and heavy lidded, penetrating eyes. His subdued yet faultless costume suggested a judge or a banker or some one of equal standing—certainly not one who was accustomed to run or shout upon the public highway or to hold on to buggy wheels to recover his breath.



"Hold on there!" he exclaimed. "Hold on—stop!"

"I beg your pardon," he said in a decisive, arresting sort of voice. "I am looking for a gentleman named Broughton—Mr. Matthew Broughton—and as you somewhat conform to his description and were driving from the house to which I was directed"—

"I am Mr. Broughton," interrupted Matt, surprised, a trifle alarmed and most of all impatient. "What do you want?"

"I've come a long way and on very hurried notice to have an interview with you," explained the stranger, gazing at him fixedly, "a very important interview, indeed, and you will oblige me greatly by postponing this little excursion of yours and affording me your undivided attention for half an hour in private," he added, with a glance at Matt's companion. "I cannot be more explicit here."

"I am sorry, but it'll have to wait," said Matt. "I haven't a minute to spare. Please let go my wheel."

"But it can't wait!" exclaimed the stranger with indignant animation. "You do not realize what you're saying or the issue there is at stake. I simply must insist, Mr. Broughton—yes, sir, I must insist."

"So must I," returned Matt angrily. "Tell me what you want in two words and I'll give you an answer in one—and let go my wheel."

Matt fully thought the stranger would take fire at this, but he did not. Instead anxiety spread over his upturned face.

"Where are you going?" he asked.

"A short drive—to pay a call."

"Then let me take his place," pleaded the stranger, indicating the driver. "We can talk on the way—and on the way back. For God's sake, young man, don't go on thwarting me like this! I can't tell you how pressing it all is, how peremptory and urgent. Only half an hour—if you knew what was at stake you could not refuse half an hour."

Matt was thunderstruck. Such importunity was startling, yet he had not a moment to spare if he were to be on time at Fair Oaks. Nothing should come between him and Fair Oaks, and the delay already incurred put him in a fever. "Go on," he cried to the driver, and with that the expostulating gentleman was deserted—in the middle of the road, with his message still unsaid and his arms waving madly after the retreating carriage.

Matt was very much thrilled and tantalized, but at last came to the conclusion that he had been mistaken for some one else. Nobody could want to see him on a matter so secret that it could not be divulged except in private. Though possibly—and here was an idea—he was again the victim of those newspaper lies, the "Kanaka king" and all the rest of it. He put his visitor out of his mind and settled back to dream of Miss Marshall with mingled torment and joy.

(To be continued.)

It is reported that Charles F. G. Masterman has resigned as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, in the British Government.

CLANNISH MANXMEN

They Still Use Their Own Tongue in Promulgating Their Laws.

The Isle of Man is in the Irish channel, about equidistant from England, Scotland and Ireland and is famed for its lovely scenery, excellent climate and the quaint old world flavor of its places and people.

Home rule has been enjoyed by the Manxmen for many years. Although there are fewer than 60,000 Manxmen, they have their own parliament and courts. The house of keys and the house of lords hold annual sessions in Douglas, the capital, and the laws they pass are read aloud every year from Tynwald hill. The statutes are proclaimed in the Manx tongue, a language as distinct from English as Italian or German.

The Isle of Man was long a bone of contention among the kings of Northumberland, Scotland, Norway and England. The government, as it is in operation today in Hall Caine's island, was established by Orry, a Scandinavian adventurer who made himself king of the island. He divided his kingdom into six sheadings, and this division, with four municipal districts, still serves in the election of members of the house of keys. The bishopric of the Isle of Man is declared to have been founded by St. Patrick, who stopped off and established the see while on his way to Ireland.—New York World.

Doughty Berbers.

The ancient Berbers, who still live in the mountain territory of Kabylia, were never conquered by Roman, Goth, Vandal, Arab or Turk. They made their first obeisance before the firearms of the French under the second empire. Through all these millenniums they have lived in their populous villages perched high on the tops of steep hills. Around them in all directions is a zone of trees, with pasture above, beginning at about 3,000 feet, and the oft conquered open valleys below. Here for unknown ages the Berber has lived among and from his trees. There are four staples of life in Kabylia—dried figs, olives, bread and meat. For miles there is one unending succession of villages set in this open forest of figs and olives.—Argonaut.

Cordovan Leather Boots.

At the court of Elizabeth the wide topped Spanish boot, handsome and, to our eyes, theatrical, became popular among the rival courtiers, each endeavoring to outvie the other in the queen's eyes. The most handsome and admired of all were made of white Cordova leather, edged with costly lace and having gold spurs. Sometimes buff and red and much more rarely the now prevalent black leather was the material. Boots for men seem to have gone out of fashion during the Stuart era, so far as the upper classes went. Your plain citizen always adhered to a more or less substantial shoe when at home and seldom drew on boots save when on a journey.—London Saturday Review.

Gentle Reminder.

A gentleman, on a visit to another city, entered a restaurant and on leaving took away with him by mistake a hat belonging to another man. The hats were so nearly identical that the mistake was not detected, and the surprise of the gentleman may be imagined when, reaching home, he glanced at the lining of the hat and found written there the words, "You darned fool, what did you take this hat for?"—Lippincott's.

RADIUM AND LIGHTNING.

And the Better Protection of Horses During Thunderstorms.

Radium has been discovered vastly to improve lightning rods in their protection of buildings during thunderstorms. Of course the enormous cost of radium prevents any practical use of the fact as yet. But there is a very fair possibility that the information gained in this way will lead to a new form of lightning rod which will be more efficient or that further experiments will show that a tiny quantity of radium at a reasonable cost will improve the protection.

The purpose of lightning rods, of course, is to catch the electrical currents in the air during a storm and lead them safely into the ground instead of allowing the lightning to pick its own course down through a house or church steeple, and their use is based on the principle that a metal rod will give the electricity a smoother path of less resistance than ordinary building material.

The whole trouble with lightning rods now is that, though they can be made to do the trick if the electrical discharge is near them, there is no way to lead electricity through the air to the rod. Radium will do this part of the work, as has been demonstrated in scientific experiments. Two milligrams of radium on the end of a rod made the air a considerable distance away a vastly better conductor.

Thus any electrical discharge within several yards of the rod had a path open for it along the radium rays to the rod and then down the rod to the earth.—Saturday Evening Post.

Downfall of an Astronomer.

M. Gudule was the aged cook of the French astronomer Lalande. Like many men of distinction in his country and era, Lalande at one time dabbled a little in the culinary art himself. He contrived a sauce or two which Gudule pronounced promising for an amateur, and he was an expert maker of salads, which he was wont to prepare at table for the delectation of his guests.

"But there is now no more of that," Gudule lamented. "With his head full of miserable stars he hardly knows oil from vinegar. He makes no more salads, the unhappy man, and those which I prepare for him with the utmost care and serve charmingly—salads to tempt a king—he devours without a glance, without a word, without savoring, without appreciating, as if they were no more than boiled cabbage! A donkey eating thistles along the highway is more grateful for his dinner. Stars are well enough in the sky, look you, but it is imbecile to permit them to interfere with your meals here on earth. Heaven, which created victuals and inspires cooks, never intended it. I, Gudule, say so."

HOME GUARD HEARD PATRIOTIC SERMONS

Stirring Discourses at All Saints and St. Peter's Cathedral

The Home Guard made another splendid showing Sunday morning, when nearly five hundred men turned out for church parade. The 57th band, bugle band and Temple Band, also, were well represented and hundreds of citizens watched the parade.

The Protestant members of the Guard attended service at All Saints' Anglican Church, and the Roman Catholic members, attended service at St. Peter's Cathedral. Stirring patriotic sermons were preached.

The preacher at All Saints' was the Venerable Archdeacon Perry, M.A., of St. Catharines. His text was part of the 22nd verse of Kings 1, 10 ch., "The King had at sea a navy."

Members of the Guard afterwards said it was one of the best addresses they had ever heard. It was a discourse appropriate to these times of war and also to the occasion—that of the presence of a body of men, who, unable to go to the front, had joined together to do their duty at home.

The preacher made one striking contrast. He first referred to the fact that some men, make only an annual visit to the House of God, that being in a parade to church. Yet, in the North Sea, where the British navy was watching and waiting, ever alert night and day, while the ships on Christmas Day were cleared for action, three celebrations of the Holy Communion were held.

The preacher who had spent some months in the old country and was in England when war was declared, was able to give utterance to personal impressions. He paid glowing tribute to Lord Kitchener, Sir John French, Premier Asquith, Lloyd George, and Sir Edward Grey. These men he said, had been raised up for special duties, for special times. Of Lord Kitchener he said, "Thank God, we have that man there today." The preacher also laid emphasis on the unity shown by the political parties when the crisis came and of the response made by India.

German Plan Went Astray.

In dealing with the accomplishments of the navy, Archdeacon Perry said the navy had been called upon to do three things. The German plan was: four weeks to Paris and seven weeks to London. The plan however had been somewhat broken.

In the first place the navy was called upon to protect the Empire, to keep up the food supply and permit the transport of troops. In the second place, it was called upon to cut off the food supply of the enemy and in the third, to destroy the hostile fleet and their naval base. The first two had been carried out and the third partly done. Some of it had been accomplished last Sunday. The British navy ruled the seas and the German navy ruled the Kiel Canal.

"Ships That Pass in the Night."

The navy had been criticized, but said the preacher, "If it were not for the British navy, God have mercy on the whole world. He told of the naval review last summer by King George. The King suddenly hurried back to London. The Germans thought the fleet still there, but that very night, like 'ships that pass in the night,' the ships steamed out, and passed into the North Sea and had been masters ever since. "Those of us," he said, "who had to cross the ocean at that time, had reason to thank God for the British navy.

Another thing to be considered was that Ireland was not at war. He had been in Ireland last May and the impression made upon him was that nothing could prevent war. Yet Ireland stood united and with England.

Several other phases of the situation was reviewed by the preacher, in which he spoke of the staunch and true allies, the prayerful and earnest spirit of the people, the temperance movement in England and Russia, the King and Queen and their two sons.

To show the boastfulness of Germany and her hatred of England, Archdeacon Perry gave a list of things which Germany hoped and expected to do in the war, and recited the hymn, expressive of the deep hatred toward England, and for which the composer was decorated with the Red Eagle.

A translation of the last stanza which summarizes the spirit of the hymn reads:

"You will we hate with a lasting hate,
"We will never forego our hate,
"Hate by water and hate by land,
"Hate off the head and hate off the hand,
"Hate off the hammer and hate off the crown,
"Hate of seventy millions choking down,
"We love as one, we hate as one,
"We have one foe and one alone,
"ENGLAND."

The Home Guards were welcomed to the church by the rector, Rev. R. H. Grobb, M.A. Col. Miller read the first lesson and the musical part of the services was assisted by the introduction of trumpet and drums, played by Messrs. W. Hughes and R. Beach. "Sound the Alarm" from Judas Maccabaeus was splendidly sung by Mr. Geo. Chandler.

At St. Peter's Cathedral.

Some forty members of the Home Guard, under the care of Ald. J. J. Duffus and headed by the 57th Regimental Band were present at the high mass at St. Peter's Cathedral. The mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Phelan while His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., delivered the sermon.

His Lordship pointed out how a Catholic has respect and love for kings and rulers because Christ himself respected authority. It is possible for Catholics to serve both the laws of the country and the laws of their church for the laws of the church are for the spiritual while the laws of the country are for the material.

Bishop O'Brien stated that he had respect for the men who left with the first contingent, those who are with the second contingent and those who are joining the third contingent. He would urge those at home who could not join the contingents to join the Home Guard and in case of emergency he assured them they would find the clergy and their Bishop ready to assist.

CHURCH IS CHALLENGED TO RIGHT WRONG CONDITIONS

Rev. T. A. Moore D.D. Shows Where the Battle at Home Must be Fought

Large congregations were on hand to hear Rev. T. Albert Moore, D.D., preach in Charlotte St. and George St. Methodist Churches.

At George St. Church in the evening Dr. Moore read as his lesson Psalm 146, and took as his text Acts 17-6 "These that have turned the world upside down have come hither also."

Paul, and those accompanying him, had reached the city of Thessalonica. There were some good people there who were not disturbed in their piety, but Paul had caused changes and these people were not going to have a revival of this kind. However, the people did not get up early enough and Paul had started his work before they were aware of it and caused a great commotion.

There is great truth in this statement. David led the people to sin and caused a commotion. It was said of Paul also that he turned the world upside down. All our lives, the speaker said, are to be given to the glory of God.

To illustrate what it means to let in the light of the gospel the speaker described the turning on of a strong electric light in a cave in the Southern States he visited and how as a result the bats screamed and how the insects crawled. When the light of God comes in touch with vice and sin there is a great commotion. The darkest spots in the world are caused by sin and the light of righteousness always causes a commotion. You and I who have so many endowments and the centuries of Christianity behind us should do something to let the light come in.

A Welshman preaching on this text divided it into three parts: 1. The world is wrong side up; 2. It can be turned right side up; 3. We are the lads to do it.

A Challenge to the Church.

The church is challenged to right wrong condition. We must be determined to work in this great struggle to right wrong conditions. Referring to the first contingent he said they were gallant men fighting in a righteous cause. "But you and I have a battle to fight. If we are going to fight this fight we must be right with God—to do our part and turn things upside down. Is everything in your town all right? Which builds most in the character of your people, work hours or play hours?"

In Regent's Park, England, he said the children did not know how to play. He was glad we were getting supervised play grounds in cities and towns and community centres in the rural districts. He condemned the commercializing of amusements which should be attractive and at the same time uplifting.

He pointed out how necessary it was to have clean moving picture shows because of the crowds that visit them. He went to five in Montreal a short time ago, and, in spite of the hard times he could not get standing room. He felt it his duty to know what was being done in the "good" theatres. "There isn't a first-class theatre in Canada that I would want to see my daughter of sixteen go to because they say things and do things I wouldn't want her to hear and see. The time is coming when there will not be a theatre that will not be safe to go to."

He referred to clean literature and family life said that there was no such thing as a double standard and described in some particulars the rescue work being done among women by the Rescue Homes of the Methodist Church. He hoped all young people would aim high, right the wrongs of life and build up the best things for God, and home and life.

The music was quite attractive. The choir rendered a fine anthem entitled, "The Home Light," by Macey, which was unaccompanied and very pleasing. Miss Lottie Hanson sang a solo, "Beyond," by St. Guentin, that was a difficult selection but well rendered.

The proceeds of the special collection were very good and are expected to equal last year's sum of $160.

At Charlotte St. Church.

Matthews Is. v. 2:10-14:2, "Jesus called a little child unto Him and set him in the midst of them, and said verily I say unto you except ye be converted and become as little children ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven."

10. "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones, for I say unto you that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in Heaven."

14. "Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven, that one of these little ones should perish."

From the above text at Charlotte Street Methodist Church yesterday morning Rev. T. Albert Moore, Superintendent of Social Service and Evangelism of the Methodist Church in Canada, preached to a fair sized congregation. Before commencing his address which really was more of a recitation of personal experiences in connection with his work than a sermon, he explained that the general conference had changed the name of the department over which he presided from that of Temperance and Moral Reform to the Department of Social Service and Evangelism but the work is practically the same.

A year ago he had preached in Charlotte Street Church, and since that time he had travelled forty-five thousand miles in connection with his work, and had become possessed of a lot of information regarding crime it was difficult to believe existed. He then referred to his text and said who will measure the possibilities, the potentialities of the child its worth to the home, to the nation; who can tell the value of a little child. Every child has a right to be well born; every child has a right to be well educated; should be educated to know that the use of liquor is detrimental to health and to good character, and in connection with this we would soon see temperance taught in the public school of this country

The speaker referred to pleasures for young, saying that during the time of leisure was when the character was forming. He was pleased to see the skating rinks, for the children needed healthy exercise and pleasure, and he was pleased to see the church is taking more interest along these lines, in order that play may be brought under the shining light of God's love.

The speaker then told his hearers that a great campaign was to be put in operation, whereby the distribution of food supplies to be manufactured into whiskey was to be curtailed.

The preacher recited many instances of crime, that came under his notice, and the great work that is being done in his department, among women, men and children. The homes for fallen women, he stated, are being especially looked after and are doing a great work.

DEMAND IS GREAT FOR MEN MONEY AND PRAYERS

Rev. Geo. Brown Reviews the Needs of Missionary Situation

Stirring in nature and touching in its sincerity was the appeal made on Sunday by Rev. George Brown of Millbrook, to the congregation of St. James Methodist Church on behalf of the missionaries laboring for the cause of Christianity in the heathen countries. The occasion was the observance of Missionary Sunday and the preacher made a forcible plea for men, money and prayers, the needs of the hour for the noble cause. His remarks acquainted his listeners with many details and facts of the vocation of those heroic men and women who battle against the very agents of hell and carry forward the cross of Christ.

"And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations." St. Luke 24, 47, was the text of Rev. Mr. Brown's morning sermon. The gospel of Jesus Christ was intended for the British Empire but not for the British Empire alone. It never was intended that there should be a monopoly on the Gospel of Christ. We were made executors of the will of the Heavenly Father and the heathen were made joint heirs with us to His manifold blessings. Although a century ago they objected to receiving His Word they are now awaiting it with outstretched hands.

China's Closed Doors.

In 1807 when the first missionaries appeared at the door of China they found it impossible to penetrate the interior. In 1854 Hudson Taylor formed the first inland mission in that Empire and now there are hundreds. When in 1793 missionaries set to work in India they found it necessary to commence their work on a part of India owned by Denmark. Japan forbade Christian worship a century ago, in fact the offence was punishable by death. Now it has all changed. Christianity has advanced, Africa, once called "the continent of history, mystery and tragedy," is now a continent of opportunity. Never before was the heathen world yearning so for the gospel than it is today as Rev. Donald Fraser has remarked "They used to object to Christianity, now they seek it by deputation."

The reasons for the advancement of missionary work lies in the advanced knowledge of the geographical conditions of countries, the excellent steamship and railroad service available, the post office service ever awaiting use and the protection the various governments give to Christian missionaries. At present there are 22,000 missionaries in heathen lands, the population of which is some 1,100,000,000. Half of the missionaries are women. Half of the number fighting the hardest battles for Christianity are ladies. Rev. Mr. Brown remarked that had the contingent going to fight against the Germans been composed half [illegible] the men of Canada would have need to feel ashamed. Nevertheless they permit the female division of the population to supply half the missionary workers.

Men are Needed.

What is needed, he said, is some thirty or forty thousand men to help those already at work. There is one Protestant missionary worker for every 50,000 heathens.

The speaker stated that the converted natives are of great assistance as they are accustomed to the climate and the method of living. To have these natives as assistants to the missionary workers they must be trained and to train them there must be schools and universities erected in the heathen lands. In China alone the financial needs of the missionary workers amounts to $100,000. The great needs of the hour are men, money and prayers. It is true the work is dangerous but danger is found in everything worth while. Why should a little sacrifice be begrudged when it means the spreading of the gospel of Jesus Christ?

If men cannot go, it is possible to assist them who are there, to give them the tools with which to work. The prayer of the day should be: "God help me that my offering may be according to Thy will." Rev. Mr. Brown's closing appeal was for assistance from all. Some $650,000 was required last year and to supply this need all should assist. The collectors for the work which is the greatest this side of heaven should be met with a smile and a little silver too.

Impertinence of Genius.

Dr. Johnson once called upon David Garrick in London and was shown into his study. Unfortunately, a door being open, he strayed into an adjoining room, which contained the novels and lighter works which had been presented as tributes to the highly admired actor. Johnson first read a bit from one and then another and threw them down, strewing the floor with the expensive volumes. Garrick was angry at finding Johnson there and said, "This is a private cabinet, and no company is admitted here."

"But," said Johnson, with impertinent coolness, "I was determined to examine your valuables, which I find consist of three sorts—stuff, trash and nonsense."

Origin of a Word.

Few words have so remarkable a history as the word "bankrupt." The money lenders of Genoa, Venice and Florence had benches or stalls in the bourse, or exchange, in former times. At these benches they conducted their business. When any of them became insolvent his bench or bank was broken, because he had no further use for it, and the name banko rotto, or broken bench, was given to him. When the word first came into use in England it was nearer the Italian than it now is, being "bankeroot" instead of bankrupt.

FAREWELL WORDS AT ST. LUKE'S

Rev. F. J. Sawers Speaks of Loyalty and Enthusiastic Support

It was the somewhat painful duty of Rev. F. J. Sawers M. A., rector of St. Luke's, to say farewell last night to a congregation among whom he has spent the last four years in faithful service and has watched it grow to practically twice its strength.

"This is the last time I am to have the privilege of addressing you as your rector," he said, "and I want to testify to the marvellous joy my ministry among you has been. We can never forget the loyalty and enthusiastic support and warm friendships that have helped us so much. My congregation has always been considerate, but I have always felt that a minister has a work in the community in addition to his congregation. I have never made any difference between those of my congregation and those on the outside.

"The sorrow of parting is always keen," he said, "but I appeal to you to give your new rector, whoever he may be, the same loyalty and enthusiastic support you have given me. I venture to say there are in the whole Dominion few congregations like St. Luke's. Their heartiness and enthusiasm are infectious. I have rejoiced with you in joys and been with you in sorrow. Our relationship is changed, but our friendship remains the same. I have always striven to lay before you the loftiest ideals. I have tried, while preaching to you, to also teach, so that you would have been instructed, but my greatest ambition was to put within your hearts a desire to be reconsecrated to Christ, to be faithful in the discharge of your duties. And so, my friends, while it is with sadness we must part, yet I must confess to the great help and support you have been to me.

"I pray that God's richest blessing will rest upon you and yours. Be ye faithful unto death."

Rev. Mr. Sawers' farewell sermon was in keeping with the occasion. He eulogised the immortal hymn of John Greenleaf Whittier, the Quaker poet:

"Dear Lord and Teacher of mankind,
Forgive our foolish ways;
Reclothe us in our rightful mind,
In deeper reverence praise."

He appealed for clean living and a pure heart. If there was one thing that would keep young men and women away from God it was by pandering to our lowest criminal natures, to impurity, to unchastity, licentiousness in thought and word and deed. But the pure mind was intent upon God's glory and God's will for man. There should be reverence for God and for the bodies of men and women, which were the gift of God. People must feel the inspiration of the commonplace in their daily life and face the daily round of duties bravely and with eagerness. Three elements that entered into the life of every one should be worship, work and recreation, but, alas, there was a danger in the last, inasmuch as too much time was spent in it, and often it was degrading recreation.

Rev. Mr. Sawers leaves the city on Wednesday to assume charge of his new parish in Cobourg.

The congregation has agreed on a successor to Rev. Mr. Sawers and is awaiting the decision of the Bishop.

W.C.T.U. MEETING

Service Will be Held in Honor of Frances Williard

At the W. C. T. U. regular monthly meeting at the Y. W. C. A. last Friday, there was a good attendance, Mrs. Whalley, the president, occupied the chair. As the second week of February is the week of prayer, Mrs. Knapman kindly offered her home for a special meeting, to be held on Friday, February 12th, the object to be a special prayer service in honor of Miss Frances Willard.

Mrs. Kennet was appointed superintendent of a new department of work, "The Little White Ribboners."

A number of soap wrappers were handed in to Miss Wells. The manufacturers pay the W. C. T. U. 50 cents per hundred, and with this money, which amounted to $1,700 last year, two travellers' aid were kept at the Union Station, Toronto. Miss Roberts spent 477 hours at the station, assisted 175 persons, and sent 12 girls to Willard Hall in December, and to date has spent 140 hours on duty, assisted 165 people, and sent 15 girls to Willard Hall. Miss Currie, travellers' aid, was at the station 206 hours and assisted 154 persons. The W. C. T. U. will be pleased if anyone will send in their wrappers to the society.

It was decided to send an invitation to the Lakefield union to join in the next meeting at Mrs. Knapman's.

After the busines was concluded, Mrs. Campbell spoke on systematic giving. On the subject of giving, as on every other subject which touches our religious life, the Bible is our standard, because it is God's word. By systematic giving we mean giving according to some rule or law. It means thinking of God's claims and providing for them.

Proportionate giving is setting apart a certain share of what God has given us, and here God's word meets us with a specific claim. The tenth is the Lord's. Many people think that giving the tenth was a Jewish law, but such is not the case. Abraham gave tithes to Melchisedec hundreds of years before the Jewish nations were organized. If we would each put aside one-tenth of our income for the Lord, such a great effort would not be required to raise funds in the churches of today, and there would be no difficulty in sending missionaries to the ends of the earth.

State Department officials in Washington have declared that the purchase by the Government of ships belonging to the belligerents had not become a subject of official negotiation.

Prisoners Are Troublesome.

KINGSTON, Ja., Feb. 1.—German prisoners are giving some trouble by attempting to escape. Some have broken camp, but have been recaptured. The authorities are vigilant, but while maintaining discipline, have no desire to be extremely severe. Men who refused to work for the pay offered, have been tried and punished, and one prisoner, while attempting to escape Monday night, was wounded by a sentry. The prisoners who number nearly seven hundred, are being well treated, but made to understand that insubordination will be punished.

Wheat Monopoly Favored.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — The general trades unions in a document issued Saturday regarding the high prices of food in the United Kingdom, recommend chiefly that the British Government take over all wheat supplies, as has been done in Germany.

"The British farmer," the document reads, "would suffer no real hardship or loss if the Government commandeered the home-grown and unmarketed wheat at 42 shillings ($10.50) a quarter, and immediate action on these lines would tend to moderate prices."

MEN FOUGHT WITH FISTS

Observer Describes Struggle in Vicinity of Givenchy

LONDON, Feb. 1. — "Our men in many cases fought with bayonets in their hands, and even knocked out many Germans with their fists. A story is told of one man who broke into a house held by eight Germans, bayoneted four of them and captured the rest, while he continued to suck at his clay pipe," says the official eye-witness with the British expeditionary force, in a description of the battle of Jan. 25, when the Germans attacked the British north and south of La Bassee Canal, and succeeded in capturing some of their trenches, which the French official report yesterday says have all been retaken.

"A great part of the area where this fighting took place consists of brick fields, where the adversaries fought hand-to-hand. During the day we captured 52 prisoners, including two officers.

"The total casualties of the Germans are reported to have amounted to considerably over 1,000 in their effort against our lines. Against the French also, to the south of us, their attacks were repulsed with slaughter. They also made an attack in some strength on the French to the east of Ypres in the neighborhood of Zonnebeke. Here they were repulsed with ease in an abortive attempt at a surprise, leaving 300 dead bodies hanging on their wire entanglements.

"In Givenchy Village the fighting was of the most desperate nature, being in many cases at close quarters.

"On the whole, it may be said that Jan. 25 was a bad day for the enemy in this portion of their line. They paid very dearly for the one small gain in ground they achieved."

Paper Has Striking Solution.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The News, commenting on the submarine raid in the Irish Sea, and the best method of protecting British commerce, says, "In last resort there is the possibility of transferring British merchant vessels to neutral flags. Those who are clamoring for drastic action against the Dacia or for pushing to the extreme the notion of British rights against commerce, would do well to remember their views in the light of the submarine."

Villa Is Wounded.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 1.—Details of the shooting affray in which Gen Francisco Villa, chief of the army of the north, was wounded, reveal the fact that the bullet inflicting the single wound be received was a stray missile fired during a duel between two of Villa's staff officers. The bullet struck Gen. Villa, near the heart, inflicting a slight flesh wound. The injury is not serious.

Villa has continued his duties, despite his wound.

Cocking-Main Raided.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 1. — A big cocking main, the second pulled off here within the last few weeks, was rudely interrupted early yesterday morning, when the county police raided a shack at the corner of Adelaide street and the 4th Concession of London Township. Fifteen birds were captured and six others were dead when the police arrived. The names of twenty-two men were taken, and all will appear in the police court to-day.

TWO OFFICERS OF "PATS" ARE KILLED IN ACTION

A Number of Men Are Reported Wounded Among Canadians at the Front—Dead Are Capt. Fitzgerald and Lieut. Price—Reinforcements For Canadian Regiments Have Arrived.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1. A Reuter despatch from northeastern France says:

"Princess Patricia's Light Infantry, the first of the Canadian contingent to reach the front, took part in the defence of the British trenches near La Bassee, which were attacked by the Germans on Jan. 25, and lost four men killed and a number wounded.

"The next day Lieut. Price of the Canadians was killed while leading his company into a trench, and another officer named Pearson is reported to have been killed.

"The Canadians took a number of German prisoners and inflicted severe losses on the landsturm regiment, which attacked their trenches."

The following casualties are reported by the Government here:

Killed in action—Jan. 26, Capt. Frederick Fitzgerald, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Mrs. N. A. Gamble, care commissioner, Agra, India.

Seriously ill—No 26012, Pte. Herbert Boyd Symonds, 14th Battalion, Admitted to hospital, Jan. 29, with suspected meningitis. Next of kin, H. Symonds, 841 Oxenden avenue, Montreal, Que.

Dangerously wounded — Jan. 23, Sergt. S. Martin, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Fred Martin, 4 Codrington place, Clifton, Bristol, England.

Severely wounded—Jan. 24, Pte. A. R. Baldock, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Mrs. J. Baldock, 610 Namayo avenue, Edmonton, Alta.

Slightly wounded — Jan. 23, Lc.-Corpl W. Bullen, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Mrs. M. Bullen, 972 Eastern avenue, Toronto

Dangerously ill—Jan. 23, Pte. C. J. Nixon, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Rachel Nixon, 94 Nassau street, Toronto.

Seriously ill—Jan. 23, Pte. G. R. Phillips, P.P.C.L.I. Next of kin, Mrs. M. Phillips, 9,344 107th avenue, Edmonton, Alta.

A despatch from London says:

"Col. Farquhar, commanding the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, reports the casualties in the regiment up to date to be less than 70, mostly wounded.

"Major Lindsay, 14 officers and 500 men from Canada arrived Saturday. They will reinforce the Patricias later."

Capt. Frederick Fitzgerald was a native of Ireland. His next of kin is given in the lists as Mrs. N. A. Gamble, Agra, India. His death was officially announced by the Ottawa authorities on Saturday.

Lieut. C. H. Price was an Englishman. His next of kin is given as Mrs. Renny, Manchester, Eng.

FIVE YEARS FOR SYMONS

Sentence on Dr. Hughes Reserved Until May 25th

TORONTO, Feb. 1. — After two weeks of the most arduous and nerve-racking legal battling the Union Life case came to a close Saturday afternoon, when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty against Harry Symons, K.C., on the first count, Dr. Hughes not guilty on the first count, and both guilty on the second.

Mr. Justice Clute sentenced Harry Symons, K.C., to five years' imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiary. Dr. Hughes was held on $15,000 bail and will receive sentence May 25.

This now famous case was prosecuted by the crown on the charge that the defendants, Harry Symons, K.C., Dr. Hughes, H. Pollman-Evans and Dr. Millichamp had defrauded the public in Canada on the first count, and in England on the second count. Dr. Millichamp is dead, and H. Pollman-Evans is a fugitive from justice.

In the judge's remarks to Symons he explained that defendant had intended to defraud from 1902 till the wind-up of the company. That from evidence submitted he had not tried to stop the public from investing their money, taking from poor and rich alike, just as long as the money was put in. It was a gamble pure and simple with the people's money. This was said in respect to the first count. As to the second count they were trying to float an English company when they knew that both companies were insolvent. Even when they knew the losses amounted to $150,000 a year. I say that every single step was known to you, and I must regret that I agree with the jury in their verdict and do not feel inclined to show much leniency, and I hereby pass sentence on you to serve a term of five years."

A Broken Pledge.

There used to be in Albany an eccentric character named Pete, who pledged himself to be neither shaved nor shorn until Stephen A. Douglas came to the presidency. He did not keep his resolution, however. One day John Morgan, a negro, who had acted as barber for many governors and who described himself on a sign over his shop door in Greene street as a "tonsorial operator and capillary abridger," had a slip pasted on the mirror in front of his "operating chair" on which he had written, "Douglas not elected, but Pete's hair is off."

Amounts to the Same Thing.

Two young Clevelanders met on the street. One of them said:

"Well, I understand that our old friend Griggs has gone and married a wife."

"It's not true. I understand nothing of the sort."

"What? Well, what did you hear about it?"

"I understand that a widow has gone and married our friend Griggs."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Foreign Relations Can't Vote.

"What is your opinion of our foreign relations?" asked the patriotic citizen.

"They don't do you any good," replied the local politician. "What you want is a lot of relations right here in your own country that'll vote the way you tell 'em to."—Washington Star.

NEUTRALITY NOT POPULAR

Meeting at Rome Meets With Disfavor of War Party

ROME, Feb. 1.—Troops with fixed bayonets had to be called out yesterday to re-establish order at a meeting which had been organized by Senators, members of the Chamber of Deputies, and other prominent persons with the purpose of forwarding a movement in favor of Italy maintaining neutrality in the war.

A large number of persons, mostly Republicans, who are against the maintenance of neutrality, gathered at the entrance to the hall, and in spite of the efforts of the police attacked the neutralists. Deputy Bruno Belmonte, leader of the neutralists, had his ears boxed, and someone spat in his face. He defended himself with his cane. During the disorder cries of "Shame; Prince von Buelow has bought you. You supporters of Austria!" rose from the anti-neutralists.

Finding that the police could not properly handle the situation, troops were called out and restored order.

Two Hundred German Dead.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The following statement was made Saturday night by the official press bureau:

"An attack was made in some force yesterday near Guinchy (northern France), but the enemy was easily repulsed.

"Over two hundred German dead were counted in front of the trenches occupied by the British, among whom the casualties were small."

School Burned Down.

WALLACEBURG, Feb. 1. — Fire originating from spontaneous combustion in a coal bin, destroyed the North Side Public School here yesterday afternoon. The estimated loss is $20,000, with insurance of $17,000.

Alberta Legislature To Meet?

EDMONTON, Feb. 1.—A rumor is in circulation in the city that a session of the Alberta Legislature will open on Thursday, Feb. 18. It is also rumored that the Legislature will be asked to authorize an increase from four and a half to five per cent. in interest rates on $3,000,000 which the Government has been given power to raise, but which it has been unable to secure up to the present time except at an excessive discount.

Where Was Wales?

Spencer Leigh Hughes, M. P., tells of the following amusing experience: He was once passing the war office building in Whitehall when his companion, a Scotchman, pointing to the emblematic devices engraved over the door, indicated the Scotch thistle, the English lion and the Irish harp. "Where is the emblem of Wales?" asked his friend. "Oh," Mr. Hughes replied, "I expect there is a leak in the roof."—London Express.

BATTLE IN CARPATHIANS

General Engagement Reported Along Entire Front

LONDON, Feb. 1. — Despatches from Petrograd yesterday claim success on every front on which the Russian army is engaged. In East Prussia, in central Poland, on the Carpathian front, where the Russians say the fighting is assuming "the character of a general battle," in the Caucasus, and in Persia the armies of the Czar are advancing against the Turks or holding their own. In the Caucasus, indeed, their successes are claimed to be more pronounced. There is no confirmation of the unofficial report that the Russians have recaptured Tabriz, in Persia, but the report may be true, as the official despatches tell of a severe defeat of the Turks in that neighborhood and the flight of the fugitives toward Tabriz.

Vienna reports of the capture of 10,000 Russians and the recapture of the Carpathian passes are regarded with skepticism.

The Russian General Staff yesterday gave out the following statement:

"In the region of the forests north of Pilkallen and Gumbinnen (East Prussia) the battles continue. Here in the region of the village of Lebegalen we repulsed the Germans by a counter-attack with bayonets.

"On the left bank of the Vistula, and the approaches to Borlimow, the Germans, during the night of Jan. 29 and the next day, repeated their attacks upon our positions, but were everywhere thrown back with great losses, except at one trench, which remained in the hands of the enemy.

"On the Carpathian front, in the passes of Dukla and Wyszkow, the fighting is gradually assuming the character of a general battle."

Japan not Seeking Any Concessions From China

PEKIN, Feb. 1. — The Japanese Minister to China, M. Hicki, was questioned yesterday concerning the political demands made by Japan upon China following the occupation by Japanese troops of the Kiachau territory, and which are now under discussion between the two countries.

He denied that Japan had demanded the cession of any territory of China. He explained that his Government was pledged by its alliance with Great Britain to maintain the territorial integrity of China, and he said further, that the demands made by Japan did not interfere in any way with the rights enjoyed by other nations.

In Norwegian Waters.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — The Morning Post has the following from Paris: "The Copenhagen correspondent of Le Temps hears from a trustworthy source that German submarines are cruising in Norwegian waters, contrary to international law. It is believed they have depots in deserted islands farthest away from the coast, and reconnoitered during the manoeuvres held for several years past off the Norwegian coast."

Bread Goes Up in the U. S.

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Six cent bread was endorsed here Saturday night by the National Association of Master Bakers, through its secretary, Joe. M. Bell. While the bakers were considering raising the price of the five-cent loaf, the Clean Food Club was outlining a campaign to teach housewives the economy of home-made bread.

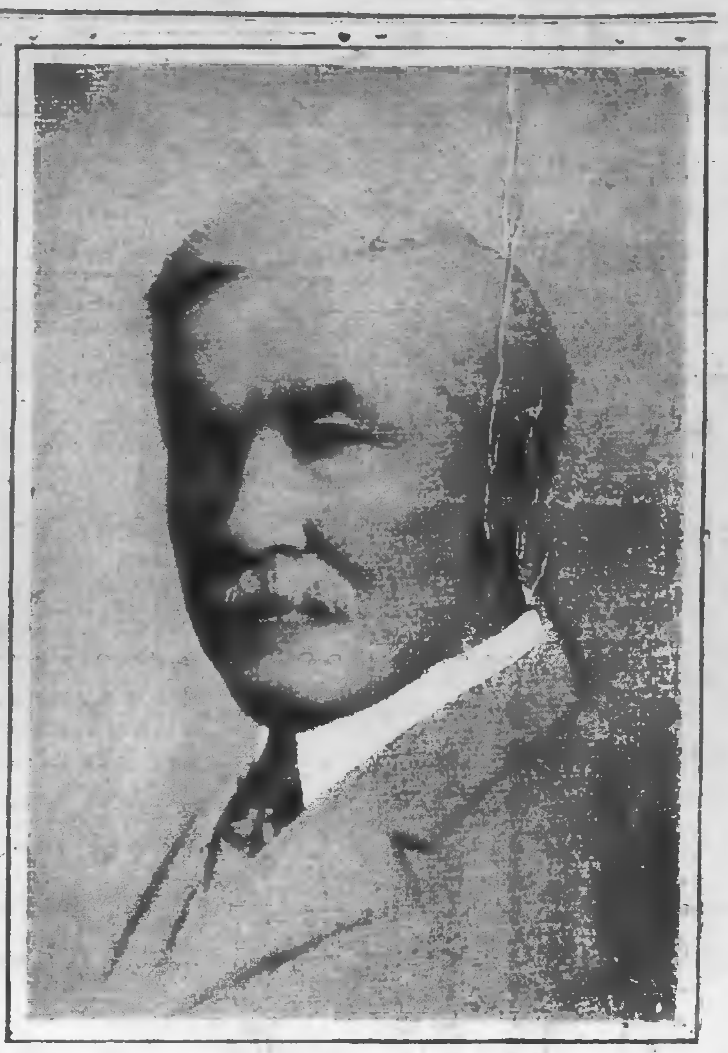
HAUGHTY DUSKY ROYALTY.

When This King Waved His Toes the Insulted Guest Fled.

There was much ceremony observed at the African king's court, says John H. Weeks in his book, "Among the Primitive Bakongo." No one approaches him without first seeking his permission, and no one is allowed to sit on a chair in his presence except his sons and nephews.

Ordinary men approaching the king had to kneel three times—once just inside the last entrance to the king's inclosure, then near the door of the "palace" and lastly immediately in front of his majesty. And the last time they knelt they put the palms of their hands together, rubbed their little fingers in the dirt and then transferred the dirt from their little fingers to their foreheads or temples and clapped their hands. This ceremony they repeated three times at the last kneeling place, and the king answered by putting the palms of his hands across each other, with the fingers of the right hand well above the thumb and index finger of the left hand, and waving them. If the king did not answer thus or if he thrust out his foot and waved his toes, which was an insult, the sooner the man retreated the better for him.

If a man omitted to send or take the king a share of his trading products he would not be favorably received and might expect to see his majesty's toes wave instead of his fingers. Well to do chiefs who failed to send him occasional presents were also coldly received, and the waving toes reminded them of their delinquencies. No written account was kept, but the king, like all natives, had a remarkable memory for what was owing him and never forgot when a debt was to be paid or a present was due. Chiefs and noblemen had to render homage to the king the same as ordinary men, but not every time they went into his presence.—Washington Post.



Mr. James W. Leonard

MR. LEONARD, who on February 1st takes up his duties as head of the Toronto Terminal Company at Toronto, relinquishes his position as assistant to the Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific, which he occupied for four years. He was born at Epson, in Ontario, named after the famous English racecourse village. All his life Mr. Leonard has been connected with railroads, which service he entered in 1872. Mr. Leonard became a telegraph operator and was agent of the Midland Railway of Canada. In August, 1877, he was transferred to the Victoria Railway as agent. In 1878 he became the Assistant Manager of that railway and held that position until March, 1880, when he was appointed Assistant to General Superintendent of the Credit Valley Railway, which was subsequently incorporated with the Canadian Pacific, and his services have been entirely with this company since that date. During that time Mr. Leonard witnessed rapid development in Canadian railroad history, and saw the first transcontinental train cross the Dominion.

In June, 1880, he was appointed General Passenger Agent of the Credit Valley Railway, and in November, 1883, became Manager of Transportation of the Ontario & Quebec Railway, which now forms an important link in the Canadian Pacific Railway System.

In May 1884, he was appointed Superintendent for the C. P. R., and held that position until March, 1893, when he was appointed General Superintendent of the Ontario & Quebec Divisions. In May 1901, he was transferred to the West as General Superintendent of the Western Division. In March, 1903, he went to the Central Division, being the line between Port Arthur, Pasqua and Estevan. After holding this position until April 15th, 1903, he was appointed Assistant General Manager of all the Company's lines west of Lake Superior.

In June, 1903, he returned to the East and was appointed Manager of Construction. During his tenure of this position, what is now known as the Short Line to Ottawa was constructed. In October, 1905, he became Assistant General Manager of the Eastern Lines, being promoted in March 1st, 1907, to General Manager of Eastern Lines, and on January 9th, 1911, he was appointed Assistant to the Vice-President at Montreal, and now retires from operation work with a long and faithful record to his credit.

ALL LOSSES TO BRITISH AT LA BASSEE ARE RETRIEVED

While Weather Along Western Front Favors Infantry Movements the Ground is Not Yet Hard Enough For Movement of Artillery—Allied Guns Are Now Far Superior to the Krupp Weapons.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—All the trenches momentarily lost by the British army at La Bassee were retaken in a strong assault by the first division Saturday night. Fighting at this important position was no child's play, for the French official statement says that the report has been confirmed that the Germans left a great many dead before the British trenches.

Owing to the setting in of frosty weather, with an invigorating element in the atmosphere, the soldiers are full of fighting, and constant attacks along the front may be expected, but owing to the condition of the roads, which are not yet suitable for the movement of ponderous artillery a general advance can hardly be looked for till after the break up of spring.

The Germans made a movement to overcome the French at Fontaine Madame Sunday morning. Three attacks were driven off here with great slaughter.

Heavy artillery firing was the feature of the operations Saturday night and Sunday morning and in the work the allies more than held their own, and they had successes to their credit. As time goes on the allied artillery gains more and more of an ascendancy over the Krupp artillery. Effective work was performed by the French guns Saturday night and Sunday morning in the sections of Arras, Roye, Soissons, Rheims and Perthes. Two of the German guns were destroyed, several field works were made untenable and collections of lance bombs were exploded. The long range field pieces got the range of several concentration of troops made for attacks, and caused their hasty dispersal. Bivouacs and convoys were also severely handled by the same fire.

The answer of the allies to the German revival of the offensive last week has been to move additional batteries to the front, so as to cope with the increased armament of the Germans. It may be surmised that when the allies begin to advance in earnest the Germans will be given a few matters for wonder in the gunnery branch of warfare.

The French still hold the Village of Ancomont, near Badonviller, which the German official statement claimed the Germans had occupied.

No change is reported in the situation from the Argonne to the Vosges.

The Germans heavily bombarded Arras, Rurie and Roolincourt. They exploded a mine on the plateau of Nuvron without attaining any results, as they expected. The French troops in the Argonne were forced to withdraw on Saturday about 250 yards, owing to the long occupation of the trenches making them untenable. Serious losses on both sides occurred in the performing of these operations.

DACIA HAS SAILED.

German-American Steamer Will Test International Law.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The British embassy was officially informed last night that the cargo steamer Dacia, formerly of the Hamburg-American Line, but now under the American flag, had sailed with her cargo of 11,000 bales of Texas cotton for Rotterdam. This is in the face of the general and specific warnings uttered to the State Department through the British embassy within the past fortnight, that the vessel would be seized, and expressing the intention of contesting the transfer in a prize court.

It is believed here that the sailing of the Dacia yesterday was with the full consent and upon the advice of the State Department, which is desirous of testing the strength of the British position.

The Dacia will be stopped by British cruisers and her detention and conveyance to a prize court is expected to follow at once upon the report from her commander that he has made the seizure. It is probable that if the Dacia is taken in western waters she will be conveyed to Halifax for the trial.

AMONG the Indians of the Coast of British Columbia there is a legend of the coming of the Santiago, a Spanish vessel captained by Juan Perez in 1774. The vessel was seen far at sea from the Indian village known as Oum-Mis, near what is shown on the chart as "Hole-in-the-Wall." On first sighting her the Indians thought it was an enormous bird, but when she came nearer and they could see people on board it seemed to be "some wonderful and very large canoe come back from the land of the dead with their bygone chiefs.

The colonization of the Pacific Coast dates back four hundred years from the day when Balboa first gazed on this Western Sea, but it was not till 1769—just ten years after Wolfe captured Quebec and France handed over her Empire in North America to the British—that any serious movement was made by Spain towards the Northern Pacific Coast. The cross accompanied the sword, and the history of California became the history of the religious settlements founded by Fray Junipero Serra and his brave Franciscan brothers. From San Diego de Alcala up north, at intervals of forty miles, the bells of their simple round—arched missions tolled the knell of paganism and carried the gospel of faith and irrigation along the sun-kissed shores of the Pacific. Captain Vancouver, in 1792, voyaging from England in the "Discovery" to settle the claims of Spain and England to this Northern Coast describes the Mission Sam Buenaventura, as he found it at Santa Barbara, with a garden "far exceeding anything I had before met within these regions—not one species having yet been sown or planted that had not flourished."

"The "Discovery" had sailed on the Pacific on an earlier voyage. This was in 1778 with the redoubtable Captain Cook in command under instructions from the British Admiralty to search for the North West passage—a passage for which the expedition of the Hudson's Bay Company had vainly explored from the Atlantic side.

The Gospel of Faith which had heralded this settlement of the Pacific Slope yielded place the further North it went to the trade in furs, for Juan Perez, Captain Cook and Commander Vancouver found the Indians willing to barter the precious skins of the Farther North for goods from the Old World. So too it was the fur traders who blazed the trail over the Canadian Rockies for the overland route of the Pacific.

Alexander Mackenzie, for the North West Company of fur traders, reached the Pacific on July 20, 1793, at a time when Captain Vancouver was cruising on that self same coast. He found the natives hostile, owing, as he said, to having been fired at by Vancouver.

David Thompson, also sent by the North West Company, crossed the Canadian Rockies by the Howse Pass and discovered the Columbia River.

Simon Fraser, another emissary of the Nor' Westers, shot the rapids of the Fraser River to reach the shores of the Pacific in 1806.

John Jacob Astor, a German merchant of New York, organized the Pacific Fur Company in 1810. The expedition, which founded Astoria, March 22, 1811, had hardly driven the last pallisade when the news came that the North West Company was erecting a fort at Spokane. The Canadian traders eventually bought out the Pacific Fur Company in 1813. In 1820 the Nort West Company amalgamated with the Hudson's Bay Company. The fort at Astoria was transferred to Fort Vancouver, near the present Portland, six miles above the junction of the Willamette with the Columbia River. Neighboring land was put under cultivation to supply food for the fur traders at Alaska. Anticipating a change in the International Boundary, a new headquarters for the Hudson's Bay Company was established at Victoria on March 1, 1843.

The gold rush accelerated the development of the Pacific Coast. From May to July, 1858 over 30,000 miners left San Francisco in search of gold along the Fraser and Thompson Rivers. The invasion of this populace required a stronger rule, so it was natural that the political privileges of the Hudson's Bay Company were taken over by the British Government and the colony of British Columbia was founded on August 2, 1858.

When the various independent provinces had been united under the Dominion of Canada nine years later, British Columbia agreed to come in on condition that a railway should be constructed to link Atlantic with Pacific. The Canadian Pacific Railway was the result, being built, so far as possible, along the lines of the old fur traders' route and the trails taken by the seekers after gold along the Fraser Canyon.

Thus are the Spanish explorers, the pious colonizing Franciscans, the dauntless English Sea Captains, the fur trader the gold seekers, and the builders of the Canadian Pacific linked together in the history of this lovely and romantic Coast. The fur trader is now overshadowed by the tourists who pour in countless thousands through the precipitous passes of the titanic snow-capped Canadian Rockies. Past the glaciers where grey-green cliffs overshadow the transcontinental train, they speed to the palm trees of Los Angeles, lingering perhaps at the Lakes in the Clouds, six thousand feet above the sea, before they bathe their eyes on the azure bay of San Francisco or gaze into the submarine depths of the Pacific through the glass bottomed boats of Catalina Island.

The year 1915 should be a red letter year in the calendar of the Pacific Coast. Two of the most interesting Expositions ever organized are being held in two of the most interesting cities—San Francisco and San Diego. Each of these Expositions has its particular characteristics. San Francisco exhibits the manufactures and civilization of the United States and of the World, from the Panama Exposition it is that the pictures portrayed here have been drawn representing the magnificent sculptor work which will meet the eyes of the visitors. Over 250 distinct groups and hundreds of individual pieces of statuary will be shown. These comprise among others the following: "Nations of the East," "Nations of the West," "The Colossal Column of Progress," "Spring," "Summer," "Autumn," "Winter," "Fountains of Energy," "Primitive Woman," "End of the Trail," "Electric Power," "Fountains of the Rising and Setting Sun," "Fire," "Adventures," "Soldiers," "Nature," etc. Besides these figures and groups are many beautiful friezes, spandrels, capitals, niches, and columns decorated with allegorical subjects.

NO PROTEST IS THREATENED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—That the United States Government was notified by Sir Edward Grey on Jan. 19 that the British Government would protest the purchase by this Government of German interned ships is absolutely denied by the State Department.

The Department denies not only that such notification was received, but that any communication of any date bearing on the subject of the purchase of German ships by the United States was received.

Cattle May Be Imported.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—The Federal authorities are now allowing the importation of cattle from the Channel Islands. Permit must first be obtained from the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa in the usual way. Such importations are not allowed from Great Britain and Ireland.

Kingston police have unearthed a half a ton of brass belonging to the Grand Trunk. It had been shipped to a local junk shop from Ottawa.

Charged With Fraud.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 1.—J. Luther Wyatt, general manager of the American-Canadian Securities Co., with offices here, was released on bond Saturday, after having been arrested on a charge of using the mails to defraud. The charge against Wyatt is in connection with the operations of the Commonwealth Securities Co. of Dallas, which is now involved in voluntary bankruptcy proceedings.

Patient Burns Hospital.

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., Feb. 1.—Fire destroyed a small building on the outskirts of the town, which was used as an isolation hospital, Saturday. The fire is supposed to have been started by a patient, Arthur Cooper, a man who was quarantined in the building as a smallpox patient. He has been placed under arrest on suspicion of incendiarism.

American Cotton Reaches Germany.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The leading German textile trade journal states that 115,000 bales of American cotton from the new harvest, destined for Germany, have arrived in Europe. According to this authority 40,000 bales have been landed at Alex Gothenburg, 25,000 at Bremen and 40,000 at Rotterdam.

Two-tone net tops are among the most fashionable laces.

Net top lace with hand run design is likely to be much used.

Costumes of white net or lace are trimmed with ornaments of jet.

Tulle and lace are extensively used both for day and evening robes.

A very dashing novelty is a gold lace with the flower pattern in so light a silver as to look white.

Overdresses of lace hanging straight from the shoulders and fringed with beads are among the new fashion features.

Skirts of lace, tulle or chiffon in ivory, white, black or creamy tones may be worn with the same black velvet basque.

Wide black chantilly and filet lace are for full skirted tunics, flounces and are mounted over taffeta, but made separate from the foundation.

PEGOUD'S LATEST.

French Aviator Destroys German Munition Depot With Bombs.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Pegoud, the well-known French aviator, just distinguished himself by a remarkable feat. Information was brought in that there was an important depot for ammunition nearby, and Pegoud set off with bombs. He dropped to 1,800 feet, and, despite the quick fire from the enemy's guns and cannon, dropped nine bombs, all of which reached their mark. Successive explosions caused so great an atmospheric disturbance that Pegoud had the greatest difficulty in recovering his balance, but at last he got back safely.

A few days ago Pegoud brought down a German captive balloon, and damaged two heavy guns belonging to the enemy.

Helping Him.

A section foreman on a southern railway heard the following conversation between two of his dusky laborers:

"Jim, you bettah come here an' he'p me. I's talkin' up fer you."

"How's dat?"

"W'y, dis here man say you ain't fit fer de dawgs, an' Ah tole him yes you is!"—Everybody's Magazine.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Threatened enlargement of the war zone in Europe was accompanied today by the greatest upward whirl yet in wheat and the May option going to a new high record, $152. Excited buyers lifted the market four cents a bushel, as compared with the level at which many nervous traders were yesterday selling out, on account of vague reports of peace. The close was strong at 2 1-2c to 3 1-2c above last night. Other net gains were: Corn, 1 5-8c to 1 3-4c; oats, 1 2c to 1c; provisions, 21-2c to 10c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 30.—Wheat made new records today. The previous high points were on January 28. Following are the high prices of Thursday as compared with those of today: May, today $143 3-4, Thursday $1.48 5 8. July, today $1.50 5-8, Thursday $149 1-8.

Prices were enhanced without any undue excitement. Cash demand indifferent except for all rail shipments for which there was a strong inquiry and considerable business was transacted. Oats were strong.

Wheat futures closed 1 3-4c on both months. Cash wheat, No. 1 northern, closed 3 1-4c higher, oats 1 1-8c higher, both month's futures and cash one cent to 1 1-4c advance.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 30.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today and as cables were stronger at a further advance a fair amount of business was done, including sales on No. 1 northern to London at 60s 9d. No. 2 at 59s 9d, and No. 3 at 58s 9d. There was no further change in the condition of the local makret for coarse grains, the feeling being firm with a fair amount of business passing in carlots. Millfeed is active under good demand. Butter is firm, under a steady demand, small receipts and a steady decrease in stocks on spot. Eggs active and firm.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 30.—Wheat, No. 1 hard, $1.49⅝, No. 1 northern, $1.43⅝ to $1.49⅝. No. 2, do., $1.41⅝ to $1.47⅝, May $1.44⅝.

Bottled Soda Water
A Cold Weather Delight

You drink Cold Water in winter. Why not Cold Soda Water?

Every member of your family needs soda water in winter even more than in summer, because the blood grows sluggish and the system becomes clogged with impurities because of lack of out-door exercise.

Liberal draughts of our delightful bottled beverages flush out the system, tone up the nerves, and digestion, and gives both health and happiness—especially to the children. Try a case. You will repeat the experiment. Be sure you get Knox's.

PETES OR PICTON DRAWN TO PLAY BRAMPTON OR BOLTON

Winners of This O.H.A. Group to Play off With Champions of Group No. 2

The O. H. A. sub-committee met on Friday evening and made the draw for the second round games. The winner of this group, Picton or Peterborough, will play off with either Brampton or Bolton who are fighting it out for the championship of District 2. In all probability it will be Brampton.

The following is the complete list of second round games:—

Intermediate.

Picton or Picton v. Brampton or Bolton.
Collingwood v. Hamilton.
Berlin v. Drumbo.
Seaforth v. Wiarton.
Sarnia v. Paris or Ingersoll.
Bracebridge v. Midland or Orillia.
Dunnville, Niagara Falls, or Port Colborne a bye.

Junior.

Kingston C.I. v. Port Hope.
Oshawa v. St. Andrews or De la Salle.
Univ. of Toronto v. Welland.
Hamilton R.C. v. Berlin.
Barrie or Collingwood v. Midland or Orillia.
Western University of London or Woodstock, a bye.

ALL READY FOR THE BIG GAME

The stage is dressed for tonight's battle between Peterborough and Picton. The ice is in splendid condition and the fans can look forward to a well contested exhibition of the winter sport.

The team that played Bowmanville will take the ice.

TANKARD GAMES.

Two rinks went to Toronto this afternoon to play for the Tankard cup, and intend making a desperate effort to annex a victory. The personnel is as follows:—

L. Hall, Geo. Hill, R. M. Waddell, W. H. Taylor, (skip).

Dr. Wightman, W. Hall, R. Sturgeon, W. M. Lang, (skip).

We have always strength enough to bear the ills of others.

Youngstown, Feb. 1. — "Curley" Blount, who managed the Peterborough team in the Canadian Baseball League last season, will be at the head of the Youngstown club next summer in the Central League. This was definitely decided when President Heilbroner, of the Central, came here and assisted with the organization of the club. Wm. Terry was elected president and Doc. Morgan director. The entry of Youngstown will be the means of saving the Central League. Erie will also be admitted.

COMMENT
As You Like it

IF FRENK HEFFERNAN is called the cleanest defence player in the O.H.A. as he has served but one penalty this season Fred Kelly of the Petes can justly be termed the cleanest forward. The local wing man has made but a solitary trip to the penalty box this season and furthermore has won the respect of the fans all over the district as the result of his clean playing. It is very seldom a man of Kelly's aggressiveness keeps on the ice sixty minutes of the game. It shows that a player can be in the thick of the fray all the time and play the best brand of hockey.

IT LOOKS LIKE St. Michael's and the Heff-Meek aggregation again for the Senior O.H.A. finals. The latter team has changed the name of T.R. and A.A. to Victorias but the nucleus of the champions is still there. The Vics have practically clinched their group honors and the dope calls the Irish to do the same.

REFERRING TO the spurt Bowmanville made in the last period of Friday night's game, Lou Marsh wrote as follows in the Toronto Star:

"In the final period Ack Hunter's crew became completely disorganised, and before they knew where they were at the Bowmanville squad was bombarding Skid Janes like a British fleet after the Germans. It was rip-bang from all over the lot, with everybody shooting from every old angle. The way the goals strung in was a crime, but try as they would the Petes could not stop the landslide. Bowmanville got six goals in a row, while Petes were notching one, and the score ended 8 to 12, with the crowd on its toes yelling like mad. It looked as if another five minutes would have seen Peterborough beaten and Picton the group champions. It is lucky for the Petes that they got this spasm of sadness out of their systems before they meet the Picton team Monday in the playoff. One break like that and it is "Good-night, nurse," for the Lift-Lock city squad, for the Picton squad is playing great hockey right now."

TO START BUSY WEEK OF CURLING WITH BANQUET

Orillia and Bobcaygeon Rinks to Contest Trophies Will Arrive This Evening

There will be witnessed tonight the commencement of a busy week for the curling fraternity when the first of the visiting curlers who will be here for the open bonspiel will arrive in the city. Word was received by the secretary of the local club that Bobcaygeon and Orillia rinks would arrive on the C. P. R. Port McNicoll train, which is due at 6.30 p.m. The visitors will be entertained if they arrive on time, to a banquet that will be held in the curling club rooms, after which no time will be lost in getting down to business. The Orillia rinks will endeavor to defeat local curlers who are contesting the Neill-Sheppard trophy. They will find it a tough proposition on the showing the Quaker City curlers made in Orillia, where they triumphed with six shots to the good. Then Bobcaygeon will fight for the Fitzgerald-Bottom trophy. Just how many rinks they will bring in is unknown. Orillia, however, will bring four at the very least. The delegations from each place will remain over for the bonspiel, which commences next day.

Trains Running Late.

While the heavy snowfall of last night and this morning was responsible for holding back railway passenger trains, it is not thought that it will prevent many of the teams competing in the bonspiel from reaching the city in ample time.

Train service on both lines suffered from the snow, which drifted in upon the tracks and retarded progress. The Port Hope train, which usually arrives here at 12.10, had not reached the city at two o'clock. The Belleville train was half an hour late while the Lakefield morning train had to have two engines to make the grade.

The bonspiel will be on for three days.

It is estimated that forty-five rinks will participate in the bonspiel. Up to three o'clock, H. F. Foot had received information that the following would be on hand:

From Beaverton—Two rinks skipped by Messrs. Birchard and McMillan.

From Colborne—One rink, skipped by Mr. Ira Edwards.

From Cobourg—One rink, skipped by F. M. Field, K. C.

From Fenelon Falls—One rink, skipped by Mr. McCallum.

From Hamilton—One rink, skipped by Peter Smith.

From Keene—Four rinks, skipped by W. Campbell, R. McCamus, G. Howson and J. Moore.

From Lindsay—Five rinks, one of which will be skipped by J. D. Flavelle, the veteran curler.

From Markham—Two rinks, skipped by Joseph Malcolm and A. Davidson.

From Millbrook—Three rinks, skipped by Messrs. Edmunds, Steele and Needler.

From Norwood—Two rinks expected.

From Orillia—Two rinks, who will take part, skipped by B. F. Stewart and F. Toogood.

From Oshawa—Three rinks skipped by A. J. Sykes, F. P. Bayles and H. E. Smith.

From Scarboro'—Two rinks.

From Stouffville—Two rinks skipped by S. Armstrong and H. W. Saunders.

There will be ten rinks from Peterborough taking part at the very least. It is to be one of the largest 'spiels ever held at the local club's quarters and the district is making a much more representative showing than in past years.

THE IMPORTANT senior O.H.A. game this week will be between St. Michael's and the Argonauts in the Toronto Arena tomorrow night. The last clash between the two teams was a great battle and the Irish must repeat their victory over the Scullers to retain their lead in Group No. 2.

FRANK HEFFERNAN

The speedy defence player of the Victorias, is displaying improvement around the nets of opposing teams this season. He has scored more goals to date for the Vics than he did all last season. He is the cleanest defence player in the O.H.A., and has been penalised only once this season. — Toronto Star.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Maud Catrick, of Toronto, has returned after a two weeks' visit with Mrs. W. Wilson, 868 George street.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McQuaig have returned to their home, 474 Sherbrooke street, after a visit with Madoc friends.

Miss Dorothy Allan sang at the morning and evening services in the Millbrook Presbyterian Church yesterday, it being the church anniversary.

The Study Class of the W.M.S. of the George St. Methodist Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Storey, 588 Waterford St., Tuesday evening, Feb. 2nd, at 7.30.

Mr. G. A. Carson, physical director at the Y.M.C.A., left on Saturday for Guelph where he is to attend a conference of physical directors of Eastern Ontario. Mr. Carson will return Wednesday.

Mrs. Hopkins, Lindsay, mother of G. H. Hopkins, K.C., Major Eustace Hopkins and J. H. Hopkins, Lindsay, celebrated her 99th birthday last week, and received the congratulations of many friends. She is a regular reader of the daily papers, and takes a keen interest in what happens around her.

Mr. H. Staples, M.A., a former Peterborough boy, who was a student in Germany at the outbreak of the war has consented to give a lecture on his experiences on Friday evening in the Collegiate Hall, under the auspices of the Women Teachers' Guild. That he will have a stirring and eventful story to relate is certain, for among other experiences Mr. Staples was arrested as a spy, held as a prisoner of war for three months but was eventually released on the strength of the papers he carried. Mr. Staples was studying music when the war broke out. He saw the German mobilization and all the exciting incidents in the early stages of the war and consequently an interesting address is anticipated.

PARENTS' CIRCLE DID GOOD WORK

Forty-six Children Comfortably Clothed for School

The regular meeting of the Parents' Circle, Queen Mary School, was held on Friday and was largely attended. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. W. Waugh.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. W. J. Cox.
Secretary—Mrs. H. S. McDuffee.
Treasurer—Mrs. C. E. Canfield.

The first report of the society was as follows:

On February 27th, 1914, Mrs. Conway and Mrs. Christie representatives from the Y. M. C. A., organized the Parents' Circle of Queen Mary School, the object being to promote the welfare of the child, closer relations between parent and teacher, and in every way to help one another.

Eight regular metings have been held, with an average attendance of 28.

At these meetings addresses have been given by Mrs. Rollins, Mrs. McElhiney, our teachers, and different members of the circle.

In June we concluded our meetings for the summer months by holding a lawn social at Mrs. Moyer's. This was largely attended and a great success in every way. In October, a sewing club was started, to meet each Monday afternoon, to fix and make over clothing for the children who needed it, in order to send them to school neat and comfortable.

We wish to thank all those who have sent us clothing or helped us in any way in this work, and feel they would be doubly repaid could they only see the comfortable garments we made for the children out of the clothing sent in.

Fifty-six children have been comfortably clothed for school, nine mothers have been helped, some warm quilts have been made and given out to needy families. We have been paid for the tieing of 15 puffs, and used the money to carry on the work.

On December 8th, through the kindness of Mrs. Scott, Weller street, we held a Santa Claus tea at her home and made nearly $25.

With this money we sent out 16 baskets to needy families at Christmas. These baskets besides groceries, contained warm clothing and stockings.

We would like the co-operation of all mothers interested, and feel sure they would enjoy the meetings and work of the circle.

PAULINE J. McDUFFEE,
Secretary.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC CONCERT

Popular Artists Have Been Engaged

An imposing array of talent has been secured by Mr. Rupert Gliddon in anticipation of the annual Conservatory of Music Concert which will be held in the Grand Opera House on Feb. 8th. Four out-of-town artists of the highest calibre, whose names are by-words in the musical world are to contribute while the pick of local talent will also be heard. Music lovers have come to look for the best at the annual Conservatory concerts and consequently expense has been a secondary consideration with those who are preparing the program. This year a departure is also being made in the disposition of proceeds which will be donated to the Women's War Fund and after expenses are paid whatever remains will go to the fund committee to use as they see best.

Miss Lina D. Adamson, world famed violinist will be one of the contributing artists whose ability has been frequently demonstrated to local audiences.

Frank Oldfield, baritone, is down on the program, the management having gone to considerable expense in securing him.

Leo Smith, cellist, will also be heard. It is said of this performer that he can bring more harmony and melody out of the cello than any other man now before the public.

Miss Jean Killmaster, pianist, will also be on hand and needs no introduction to Peterborough people.

The local talent consists of Miss Ada Richardson, soprano soloist, and the Conservatory Orchestra of 35 pieces. Miss Richardson has firmly established herself in local musical circles and her vocalism has proven extremely popular. That the Conservatory musicians will contribute a delightful and varied program goes without saying and with such a wide and selected choice of artists the public is assured of a concert that should prove the outstanding event of the season in the realm of music.

EXCISE OFFICER.

Mr. Robert Grandy of Port Hope has been notified of his appointment by the Dominion Government as excise officer of Port Hope. The appointment is a most popular one. Mr. Grandy was born in Manvers township.

Another skirmish with the Turkish advance guard not far from Suez is reported from the British forces in Egypt. It was not of a serious character.

MR. ELMER THOMPSON

DOUBLE WINDOWS ON LOCOMOTIVES

Mean Much to the Men at the Throttle

Engineers on the Grand Trunk feel like extending a vote of thanks to the Railway Commissioners for the order which compelled all engine cabs to be equipped with double windows in winter. During intense cold weather like the present, the two windows in front of the engine cab through which drivers view the line have a habit of getting coated with frost, shutting out entirely their view ahead. This meant exposing themselves to the cold when they looked out the side windows in order to see if the line was clear. Now however this disagreeable procedure is eliminated by having the windows in front fitted with outside windows thereby keeping them free from frost and ice and permitting an unobstructed view ahead.

Engineer Lavoie of the Belleville train related an instance of the danger that attended having this view in front shut off before the advent of the double window scheme.

He was coming into Hastings about two years ago on a cold winter day and kept looking out of the side window periodically, to make sure the line was clear. It happened that an engine was at the water tank just inside Hastings and being unable to look ahead, he failed to see it until luckily he opened his cab window to look ahead, and managed to bring his engine to a stop not two lengths away.

"Had I not opened the window and looked out when I did, I would not be living today," he said.

H. H. STEVENS M.P. TO GIVE ADDRESS

H. H. Stevens, M. P., of Vancouver, B. C., has accepted an invitation to address a men's mass meeting under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A., on Sunday afternoon, February 21st, on the subject of "Canada's Duties to Her Immigrants." Mr. Stevens is a strong, forceful speaker and a prominent figure on the floor of the House of Commons. He is considered a master on the subject of immigration, and was very prominent in the fight against the landing on the Pacific coast of a boat load of immigrants from India some months ago. It is hoped that every man will plan to hear Mr. Stevens.

The Life Problem Club yesterday afternoon was addressed by F. H. Dobbin. Subject, "The Land of the Nineteen Hour Day." Alderman Dobbin gave a very interesting account of his trip to the Pacific Coast last summer and a very vivid description of the conditions that surround Prince Rupert, which is the western terminal of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Alderman Dobbin told of the heavy wind and rain that are experienced on the western coasts as the results of the Japanese currents. He spoke of a wind that lifted a building the size of the C. P. R. freight station, carried it into the river, and floated it to an anchorage on the opposite side. He stated that he saw a church building which had been moved nine inches by the wind.

Travelling through the mountains is rather a hard proposition, so he states. He once took a drive in the vicinity of Prince Rupert, where they met a loaded waggon descending the mountain. They unhitched their horses and led them into a small recess in the side of the mountain, took the wheels from the carriage, laid them up on a cliff, and hung the body of the carriage on the limbs of a tree, that the loaded waggon, which had the right-of-way, might pass.

The buildings are of such light constructon that in case of a fire they don't try to save the buildings, but all hands turn to to move the nearby structures to a place of safety. One man told Mr. Dobbin that he and his wife were in their house when it was moved, and while being moved their greatest concern was to keep their pots and kettles on the stove.

Prince Rupert is located entirely on the rocks, the levelling of which for building purposes is very expensive. The men that be found at Prince Rupert are largely college-bred, who are in the west as miners, surveyors and assayers. While it is a rough country, still it has a great future, and with the advent of the railroads will build up quite rapidly. Mr. Dobbin showed the young men a large number of photographs taken along the Pacific Coast, and when the meeting adjourned received a hearty vote of thanks for his very interesting address.

"READY MONEY" AT EMPIRE THEATRE

Edward Abeles, playing in James Montgomery's interesting play "Ready Money," will be seen at the Empire Theatre today, tomorrow and Wednesday. There is comedy abundant in the five reels and there is also a very fascinating story revealed. Given a young mining engineer seeking a fortune in the west and a girl expecting him to "make good" and you are bound to have an interesting tale. The film is a Paramount production and well worth seeing.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The Dairy Branch of the Department of Agriculture of Saskatchewan is holding meetings throughout the Province in respect to the promotion of dairying, for which the C.P.R. is providing specially equipped cars. The Department of Agriculture for Alberta commenced on January 25th with a series of short course schools of agriculture to facilitate which the C.P.R. provided eight cars.

ANOTHER SIDE TO SUNDAY MEETINGS

What happened at the beginning of the second week of the Philadelphia campaign by Billy Sunday, is told in the Presbyterian Sunday School Times. The article is taken from the Philadelphia Public Ledger and is only a part of the fifteen columns that were given in one issue of Mr. Sunday's work.

"Billy" Sunday has called, and the people have answered. Eight great seething rivers of humanity twice passed down the tabernacle aisles and hurled themselves into surging, turbulent seas. The center of the human whirlpools was the man Sunday. For the first time in this city he was calling for converts.

And how they answered his call! They swept down upon him, grasped his hand for an instant, in so doing "accepting and publicly confessing Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour." Then, hustled and bustled by officials of the Sunday party and by the police, they poured into the front benches, where they sat, tense, eager, some weeping, many trembling, looking up at the man who had shouted to them "The hour is come!"

Twice in one day, night and afternoon, that same scene. Twice within six hours the great rivers hurling themselves no toward Sunday, standing there shouting, "The hour is come!"

At night it was a woman on crutches who first grasped his hand.

After her came two colored women, one of them blind. Behind them, two young women, sobbing in each other's arms and reeling as though about to faint.

Next, two sailors from the battleship Minnesota. Next, an old gray-bearded, stoop-shouldered man, with his bent wife.

Back, back, back, row after row, the hard pine benches filled up. The human rivers surged on, down, down, down upon the evangelist. His face deep-lined, his lips muttering blessings upon the "trail-hitters," he leaned over his platform and grasped hand after hand, smiling mechanically, but with a light in his eyes that fairly burned.

> You can analyze the evangelist's methods, outline his preaching, but you can't fathom scenes like those of yesterday. The 30,000 witnesses to the two meetings realized that there is something in a Billy Sunday campaign that has never been and probably never will be told.—The Philadelphia North American.

He was the same man to everyone, no matter how they grasped his hand. Some barely touched it. Others gripped it as though they would hold on to it forever. The human river poured on. A big athletic man, features bronzed and chest heaving, leaped for the evangelist's fingers. A woman in silk, with diamond earrings, and with an ermine colar to her fur jacket, turned her head away as the evangelist crushed her hand. As she was crowded to her seat she kept looking backward at Sunday, as though mesmerized. A young woman, with tossing aigrettes in her chic little hat, and costly tawny furs, took Sunday's fingers, then buried her head in her muff and wept as though her heart was breaking.

A boy in short trousers was lifted up by a woman to grasp the evangelist's hand. A woman, a shawl about her head, pulled that ceaselessly moving palm down to her lips and kissed it. A man raised himself on tiptoe and pressed his lips to Sunday's fingers.

"At the Cross, at the Cross!"

Eighteen hundred voices, those of the men in the choir in the great rostrum, thundered out the words of the old hymn. The converts on the front benches started singing it. All over the tabernacle people sang it.

Few in the tabernacle were seated. The building was packed to its capacity of 15,000, and thousands were standing on benches, hanging in vestibule windows, straining every muscle, every nerve, every eye, to witness the wonderful sights.

"Oh! Oh!" shouted Sunday, mounting a chair and pausing for an instant's rest in the strenuous work. "Oh! Oh! Oh! Pray, you Christian people, pray, and your prayers will shake the world and shake the gates of heaven. Pray! Pray! This is only an indication of what God will do! We verge on the greatest time for God that His Church has ever seen!"

Down again from the choir and the rivers surging on, on, on to him; police and ushers, toiling like men in the mines, to herd the vast throng into the seats for the converts. On, on, on, the seething rivers flowed.

Up and down the benches on which his converts sat rushed Sunday's men, giving every one a card reading, "I now accept Jesus Christ as my personal Saviour." Pencils flashed all along the benches while people signed their names below those words. Sunday was up in his chair again, thundering out a prayer, a prayer that the Lord would help every man and woman in this great city battering at the tabernacle doors to hear him. And—

"Oh — Oh — Oh!" he shouted, trumpeting his hands and hurling his words out over the tossing sea of white faces, until it seemed the place trembled from its sawdust aisles to its squat white roof; "Oh, God, we should be ashamed, ashamed that we have not had the manhood and the womanhood to accept Thee before."

In unison the converts chanted after Sunday the words "I accept Jesus Christ as my personal Saviour." In unison, and with every one else in the great building singing, they lifted up their voices, as the rivers still swept down upon Sunday:

"I am coming, Lord!"

And still they came. Men in sweaters, men with dirty hands and faces smeared; men in frock coats and ministerial-looking coats and ties; women in shawls and dresses that looked as though a wind would cut clean through them; good-looking people; people who had come to the tabernacle in their limousines; people who were going away from it to squalid homes; people of every color and every walk in life.

On, on, they surged, singing, "I am coming, Lord!"

Tensely dramatic and powerful was Sunday's surprise call for converts. He had preached his great sermon, "The Hour is Come," dinning its forceful phrases home upon his thousands. He had scored with every verbal thrust. He had prayed a great prayer for the city's redemption, and it seemed it was all over. Then, electrically:

"The hour is come, oh, you people! oh, you ministers, to rescue for the perishing, care for the dying. The hour has come to go out into the highways and byways, out in the broad roads of the earth, and bring in souls for Christ! Will you do it? Will you go out in His name?"

Hands went up over the whole house.

> Doorkeepers went up and down the line of waiting throngs outside with megaphones, announcing that there were no more seats. The evangelist began his sermon a half hour before the usual time — there was no use in waiting; every nook and corner was filled by 6.15 o'clock.
> And the campaign is only one week old.
>
> Men and women stood on the board benches in the tabernacle, craned their necks and stared in wonderment at what was being enacted before their eyes. Choir singers forgot to sing or were swallowing hard to keep back the tears. Ushers, whose duty it was to make way for the converts and clear a section of seats in the front of the tabernacle for them, stood bewildered at the rush of trail-hitters and permitted the aisles to block up.
> They had been praying for weeks and months for just this sort of revelation of divine power, yet when it came they couldn't believe it.—The Philadelphia North American.

"Oh," he cried, "straining his eyes upward and crashing his fist down over the throng, "will you put my name tonight in your prayers? And will you pray for the success of this campaign—pray that hell may shake before it and souls stream here to God?"

Another great show of hands and a murmur like a strong wind, "Amen! Amen!"

There was a long pause, a rustling of expectancy in the throng and then the clarion call:

"'The hour is come!' How many of you men and women will come up to me, grasp my hand and say, 'Here's my hand. I give my heart for God, and will go out to live my best in His name'?

"How many of you? How many of you? How many of you?"

He was thumping the pulpit until it quivered with every question. Suddenly he stilled his shouts, leaped out over the throng and in a voice—a soft voice, a sweet voice, a voice he had not used in Philadelphia before—he cried:

"Then, come!"

He stretched his arms out in invitation. His eyes sparkled.

And the eight great rivers hurled and thundered, surged and swirled, up, up to him.

"There stands Jesus Christ," he cried, "Jesus with the thorn-crowned brow and the bleeding hands, pointing to the unsaved and saying, 'They're lost! They're lost!'" His voice sank to an awed whisper.

"But, O Jesus, we thank you for this great day. We're weak in body, but we're willing in heart. They're crowding the doors. They're so anxious to press through. They're standing there hoping that just a word now and then of Thy truth may pass through the walls.

"Oh, Christ, they're hungry for truth; they're sick of sin. They're seeking something to lead them to the glorious liberty of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"Make the multitudes here accept Thee tonight. Make this a marvelous time. Lead us and guide us to Thy glory. Amen!"

First Important Part of Government Improvements at Banff Completed

To tourists to the Coast who will use the Canadian Pacific Railway, either going or coming, this season, the attractions offered by the railway will be greatly supplemented by the work already done by the Dominion Government in the development of the Banff National Park. While the general scheme of Thomas H. Mawson, the well known authority on town planning and landscape improvement, will be far from completion this year, the new concrete swimming pool and bath house originally planned by the Government and incorporated into the scheme, has just been completed. The pool occupies a site on the side of the Sulphur mountain, where there is a large spring of sulphur water rising out of the mountain side. The pool and bath house lie parallel to the mountain side, one end abutting the well known Basin, the other covering a tunnel entrance to the Cave. The structure of reinforced concrete is built upon a bench excavated in the mountain side, 4,575 feet above sea level, and about 200 feet above the bottom of the Bow River Valley, of which it affords an excellent view. The pool itself is 150 feet long and 35 feet wide, with a depth varying from 3 feet to 8 feet. The sides are formed by light reinforced concrete walls, lined with white enamelled brick, and finished at the top with a terra cotta scum trough and hand rail. The bottom is a reinforced concrete pavement on an asphalt base. The bath house has a length of 137 feet, is 27 feet wide, and 40 feet high. The roof will be used as a promenade, and will also provide daylight for the dressing rooms, as it consists of 4,000 square feet of prism lights. To soften this light, and also to protect the prisms from the steam arising from the bathers, there is an arch diffuser sash over the dressing room, with openings from which the air and steam are removed by a fan. There are a total of 132 individual dressing rooms in the bath house, with fresh water shower baths and other toilet facilities.

BUILDING PERMITS.

But two building permits were issued, one for a residence, $1800, and another for alterations, $100. Total, $1900.

In January, 1914, four permits were issued for construction, amounting in cost to $25,500.

San Luis Potosi is again in the hands of Carranza forces. It was turned over without a battle Friday and the fall of Monterey now held by Villa troops, is reported imminent.

C.P.R. BRIDGE IS DAMAGED

One Span of Structure Crossing St. Croix River is Destroyed and Arrest is Made

GERMAN ADMITS CRIME

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

VANCEBORO, Maine, Feb. 2. — One span of the Canadian Pacific railroad bridge across the St. Croix river between Vanceboro and St. Croix, N. B., was blown up early today. Preliminary investigation indicated that the explosion was caused by dynamite. The bridge is on a direct line from Montreal to St. John and is twelve hundred feet long, in three steel spans on granite piers. The portion destroyed was on the New Brunswick side of the river. The bridge connects the Canadian Pacific tracks with those of the Maine Central, over which the Canadian Pacific has traffic rights between Vanceboro and Mattawamkeag. The bridge was built five years ago, replacing the old one.

Later a man claiming to be a German officer was arrested on the American side of the line on suspicion of having caused the explosion.

MONTREAL, Feb. 2. — A C. P. R. official report on the dynamiting of the railway bridge near Vanceboro this morning says the structure was only slightly damaged. An alleged German officer, under arrest, is said to have admitted trying to blow up the bridge. The explosion occurred at two o'clock. Only a slight delay occurred to traffic. Passenger trains are crossing the bridge, the pasengers not being required to leave cars.

VANCEBORO, Feb. 2. — The man arrested for dynamiting the C. P. R bridge gave his name as Warner Van Horn. He is a big fellow just under forty. The police assert he admits the crime, and that a dynamite cap and a plan of the bridge were found in his pockets. He gave as a reason for his crime that his country was at war with Britain and that Canada was part of the enemy's country.

ALLIES MAKING IT HOT FOR FOE ON BELGIAN COAST

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 2. — A Daily Telegraph despatch from a point on the Dutch frontier indicates that the German hold on the Belgian coast line is becoming more and more precarious, due to the increasing activity fo the Allies and the bombardment by warships. Recent severe fighting in the vicinity of Nieuport, in which the Germans lost four hundred killed and three hundred prisoners, resulted in French marines carrying at the bayonet point a ridge, from which the Allies' guns now command Slype and other points south of Ostend.

GRANDSON OF PAUL KRUGER IS CHARGED WITH HIGH TREASON

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PRETORIA, Feb. 2. — Pieter Grobler, a member of the South African Parliament and grandson of Paul Kruger, has been committed for trial on the charge of high treason.

Seventy-one burghers who refused to serve against Germans have been ordered court-martialled and five hundred others, who advanced reasons for exemptions, will be sent back to their home districts, where local boards will enquire into the facts.

SAME STORY FROM ONE END OF PROVINCE TO THE OTHER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Feb. 2.—From one of the province to the other there is the same story today, of heavy snow and sleet storms with high winds. Snow drifting has blocked steam railroad lines, trolley lines and country roads. Many trains are blocked and others are running hours late.

Several accidents are reported.

MADE ATTACK ON HOSPITAL SHIP

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 2. — The ministry of marine announces that a German submarine unsuccessfully attempted to torpedo the British hospital ship Asturias yesterday, fifteen miles northeast of Havre, thus violating the acts of The Hague convention.

ANOTHER RAID MADE ON DUNKIRK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 2. — The Daily Mail says Germans made another raid on Dunkirk last night, dropping sixty bombs but doing little harm.

GERMAN SOLDIERS CAPTURE A SPY IN POLAND.

CITY WORKING HAND IN HAND WITH THE BOARD OF HEALTH

In Regard to the Disposal Plant in Otonabee--- Ald. McIntyre Moves That Council Secure a Permit From Provincial Body but is Voted Down --- Says Mistake is Being Made

Ald. McIntyre seems to be very much of the opinion that the city has made a mistake in proceeding with the outfall sewer on King George street before being possessed of a permit from the Provincial Board of Health, to place the disposal plant as provided for in the plans, namely, on property in Otonabee, and almost directly across the river from the street railway wharf. If the permit could not be obtained, he favored discontinuing the work on King George street and proceeding with operations on Park street. His motion to this effect was seconded by Ald. Weir, but none of the other aldermen voted for it.

Trouble Ahead.

Ald. McIntyre said there was going to be trouble with the residents of Otonabee, and he understood they were going to fight the city for all that was in them. On King George street the city was spending at the rate of $100 per day. The work should have been started on Park street, where the city would be sure. Otherwise a mistake would be made.

Mayor Buller endeavored to make it clear that the city had been proceeding with the sanction of the Board of Health, but this was not satisfactory to Ald. McIntyre, who said that if the opposition got a better site the Board would force the city to take it and the money so far expended would be lost.

Ald. Weir Uneasy.

Ald. Weir said be had been uneasy since the work was started. It was going to be a big expense to take the property from the owner. The Council had, in his opinion, made a big mistake in not starting operations at the junction of King George and Park streets and working north.

In his explanation of the situation, Ald. Green, chairman of the board of works, said they had been working strictly under the Board of Health. The plans of the disposal plant were not complete, and might not be for some time, unless Council gave the engineer a chance to get at the work. They talked of spending too much money in the engineer's department, but, "I tell you, gentlemen," said Ald Green, "we are not spending enough." The men had too much to do.

As to the site, the Board of Health engineers had said the site selected was the place where the plant would be built. If there should be any change, it would only be a case of going down hill two or three hundred feet.

"But they're going to put a bridge there," said Ald. Weir.

"That won't make any difference," replied Ald. Green.

Returning to the question of sewer operations, Ald Green said the work had been started to give work to as many men as possible. They could work on Park street, but it was the wrong way. The engineers had visited the proposed site for the disposal plant, and had said the plant would be built there.

Ald. McIntyre said the Otonabee residents did not want it there, to which Ald. Green replied that it didn't matter. The Council should not get cold feet nor be afraid of H. P. Kennedy (who owns property there) or any other parties.

Ald. McIntyre then took exception to the fact that the city engineer had no diploma, and when Ald. Green expressed his complete satisfaction with Mr. Parsons, Ald. McIntyre held that many citizens were of a different opinion.

"I do not wish to find fault," began Ald. Edgar.

"It don't make any difference to me whether you do or not," broke in Ald. Green.

The clashes continued without any headway being made. Ald. McIntyre told Ald. Green he tried to make them believe he was the whole Council, but the representative from the west answered nay.

The bridge question and the fact that the County Council had offered to contribute forty per cent. of the cost was brought into the discussion, but nobody except Ald. Weir was inclined to take a serious view of the matter. In fact, Ald. Dobbin laughed at the idea of the city contributing the other sixty per cent. for the construction of a bridge at this point.

Flag Presented

A large and beautiful silk flag, the gift of Mrs. Margaret Downham, hangs in the city council chamber. It was presented to the council last night by Rev. Canon Davidson, acting on behalf of Mrs. Downham, who also was present.

The gift was acknowledged by the singing of God Save the King and by remarks from the Mayor who in conclusion said: "We appreciate the gift with very much pleasure."

The flag bears the Union Jack and the Canadian Coat of Arms. It is presented in memory of the late Peter Downham.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Mr. Peter Campbell, representing the Horticultural Society asked for the usual grant of $1,000 and more if possible. This matter was passed on to the Finance Committee.

DISCIPLINE UNDER GERMANS TOO IRKSOME FOR TURKS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CAIRO, Feb. 2. — No further fighting has occurred in the Suez Canal district, but a considerable number of Turkish deserters have surrendered. They say they were insufficiently supplied with provisions, and found discipline under the Germans exceedingly irksome.

One Turkish soldier was ordered to climb a pole and cut a telegraph wire, and when he refused a German officer struck him with his sword, cutting off his hand.

ASKED FOR GRANT TO HOME GUARD

Thirty-five Members go With Third Contingent

Major R. E. Layfield on behalf of the Home Guard read a letter which asked for the remainder of a grant of $1,000, asked of the city. The 1914 council gave $300.

The letter also told of the progress of the Home Guard and gave the financial position of the organization.

On motion of Ald. Green and Ald Dobbin the matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

Twenty-five members of the Home Guard have enlisted with the third contingent.

BRAKEMAN MEETS DEATH ON TRACKS

Struck Down by Engine and Instantly Killed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

St. Thomas, Feb 2. —Thirteen cars of a freight train on the Wabash were derailed Monday afternoon, east of Jarvis. A wrecking train went out from St. Thomas and P. H. Beattie, a brakeman of the wrecking crew while walking on the track was struck by an engine and taken from under the wheels dead.

Father of His Country.

Besides George Washington, the men who have borne the title "Father of His Country" were Julius and Augustus Caesar; Cosmo de Medici, 1389-1464; Andrea Doria, 1648-1560, and Andronicus Palaeologus II.

GERMAN ATTACKS ARE REPULSED WITH LOSSES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 2. — The official statement says Monday was marked by redoubled intensity in artillery fighting on both sides and by a series of German attacks which were repulsed with losses to the enemy of considerable importance, considering the numbers engaged.

RUSSIANS LOSE GROUND ON THE ROAD TO WARSAW

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 2. — The official statement today says a renewal of a fierce offensive by the Germans in the region of Sochaczew, on the road to Warsaw, compelled some of the Russian units to retire to the second line of trenches.

Counter-attacks later recovered part of the trenches, but a portion remain in German hands.

COUNTRY HARD HIT BY STORM

Its Equal Has not Been Seen in Years

According to comment from various rural centres the storm of last night and today has not had an equal in years. All the roads are completely blocked and no mail left Ennismore today for either Peterborough or Lakehurst. The greatest effect is on the attendance at the country schools. In almost every section only two or three pupils were present. In many cases the schools were closed.

The trains are running hours behind time and some have been cancelled.

The over abundant fall of the "beautiful" has also caused work on the outfall sewer to be suspended. City Engineer Parsons stated this morning that it was impossible for men to work under such conditions. The men employed in removing snow from the streets also gave up in despair.

This is also Bruin Day, but his nibs was snowed in. His chances at seeing his reflection were very short.

EARTH SHOCKS

Many Men in Mines Had Narrow Escapes

ONE MINER KILLED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Feb. 2.—Earth shocks occurred last night in a number of districts in Yorkshire. One miner was killed and many had narrow escapes from the shaking down of coal in pits and several pits were rendered unworkable.

FIRE ALARM SYSTEM — IS DEMORALIZED

Demoralization of the fire alarm system in the north end of the city, and in the vicinity of the water works plant has been caused by the severe storm which has been raging since last night. Chief Howard has been endeavoring to repair the damage as much as possible, but, owing to the severity of the blizzard he finds it a difficult task. Fortunately no alarms have been rung in, and while the present brand of weather reigns it is to be hoped that none will.

CITY TO PAY OVERDRAFT

But School Trustees Must be Good and Not Repeat

The city council made an attack at eleven o'clock last night, on the $18,000 overdraft of the Board of Education and were decisively repulsed. The heavy artillery of the board, supported by the Department of Education, won the day and the city dads will pay up. The simple fact of the matter is they are compelled to.

The situation has been made clear on other occasions when the city councils have objected to what they described as "vast" demands made by the Board of Education, but will bear repeating.

The Board of Education must provide adequate accommodation and facilities because the Department of Education says so. If the city refuses to pay, the Department could and would refuse the yearly grants.

Ald. Stratton made a motion that a by-law authorising the issue of debentures for $18,000 be prepared and that in future if the Board overdraws the appropriation without first reporting to the council, the accounts will not be paid.

Mr. Eastwood, Minister of Finance on the Board of Education, who was present, did not like the idea of such a motion being thrust back at the Board. He explained the Board was supreme and nothing was to be gained.

Ald. Green opined that a mistake had been made when a by-law of $85,000, the estimated cost of the schools was not placed before the people for a vote. The powers held by the council, might better be exercised by the people and particularly in cases of this kind. Then the people would be responsible.

Ald. Weir wanted to know what would transpire if the people refused to sanction the by-law.

Mr. Eastwood answered that the Board could proceed with their plans and the city would have to provide the money. Refusal meant that the annual grants would be withheld.

Ald. Edgar said he understood that the Board of Education could issue debentures, but Mr. Eastwood said this was not so.

The object of Mr. Eastwood's visit was to explain the reasons of the overdraft. Ald. McIntyre made some inquiries regarding the price paid for the property used as the site for the East City School, but he was the only inquirer.

A Bad Start.

CONVENTION OF MEDICAL MEN COMING TO THIS CITY

Dr. Cameron and several other members of the Medical Association, waited on council last night asking for financial assistance towards the entertainment of the delegates to the combined meetings of the Ontario Medical Association and the Ontario officers of health, which on invitation, will be held in this city on May 25, 26, 27 and 28.

Between four and five hundred delegates will be present. It is the first time the Medical Association has held its convention east of Toronto and the first time the convention was ever attempted in one of the smaller cities.

The sessions and meetings will be held in the armouries, Collegiate assembly hall, public library hall and Y.M.C.A. There will also be exhibits in the armouries, of medical and surgical supplies.

The local association is getting out two different programs which will be quite an item of expense.

Dr. Bell, of the Provincial Health Department, whom the Mayor introduced as "one of the best citizens Peterborough ever had," was cordially greeted by council. "You will have no better medium of advertising," said Dr. Bell as he told of what might be expected as a result of the convention. It would be, he felt, in the interest of the city to help the local association.

Dr. MacPherson, Dr. Amys and Dr. Carmichael also spoke.

His Worship felt that the association had done honor and had brought credit to the city by securing the convention. On motion, the matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1915

ARE WE MISMANAGING THE MILITIA?

UNDER THIS CAPTION the Canadian Courier criticizes the manner in which the first Canadian contingent has been managed. It charges that the first contingent should have had a Canadian officer in command of it, that the privates received too much money, that the shoes were not properly made, that a leather equipment for carrying knapsacks should not have been used, and that the purchase of horses was bungled. It also condemns the Ross rifle.

The Courier has not been fair in its criticism, although it has pointed out some weaknesses in the mobilization of men that should not be present in the handling of the second and third or subsequent contingents.

In the first place, only the country that is determined to make war can be properly prepared for it, because it has worked out the details on which it is to move. The offensive country always has that advantage. The defensive country has the tactics of the enemy to meet, which are not known until they actually occur. Hence a war such as this one always brings out in strong light the want or deficiency of the defensive country in some things.

The Courier seems to think that if a Canadian officer had been in command of the first contingent, they would not have remained so long on Salisbury Plain, the inference being that Salisbury Plain was no place to train soldiers. Perhaps the Courier is not aware of the fact that England has experienced this winter the greatest rainfall in fifty years, and, whether a Canadian officer had been appointed or not, it is likely that the Canadians would have been sent to Salisbury Plain. Unfavourable weather could not be foreseen. Besides, the trenches on the firing lines are much worse than Salisbury Plain, if we are to believe the letters of wounded members of the Patricias. The mud in France and Belgium has been even worse than at Salisbury. The truth is that the weather is milder there than in Canada, and involves more rain, and consequently mud, than snow and frozen ground. But unusual amounts of rain have produced floods, which entailed exposure, sickness and discomfort that was not expected. This is part of a soldier's life. He must be prepared for unexpected contingencies that try his temper and stamina. The Courier seems to think the Canadians should have marched straight to battle as if on a dress parade.

As to the pay, a dollar a day is not too much for the work and the severity of the training, especially when life is risked in it. Three years of a man's life, at the age of most of the men enlisted, is a big period for those who will return. Many of them could earn far more working not nearly so hard, and have at the same time the comforts of life. Many of those who are not killed will be maimed for life and their future earning power lessened. A dollar a day is not nearly enough for these men, but it is about as much as we can pay. There are many things that should be considered in discussing a soldier's pay. He deserves reward for his patriotic stand. He risks his life and also his capacity to do his previous civilian work should he return. If he came back without an arm he might be totally unfit to resume his former occupation. We know an officer of the South African War who was shot in both ankles. He apparently recovered, and worked a while as a traveller, but paralysis started in his feet and spread so that for some years he has not been able to earn a dollar. Yet the Courier says one dollar a day is too much. It is true that many soldiers squander the money they receive. They know they may soon occupy only six feet of earth, and will try to enjoy the bit of life left to them. That is part of the war game. All men are not of the same moral outlook, and because some soldiers "act like millionaires on a toot" is no reason for reducing the pay of the whole army. The reckless volunteer finds his way into camps with the cautious man, and it is difficult to see how such conditions can be rectified.

As to shoes, the unexpected weather conditions did play havoc with them, but here, again, the soldier must expect to suffer. That is part of the business of going to war. It is hardly to be expected, however, that the second and third contingents will be given shoes like the first contingent. The Department will no doubt see that they are shod in a manner to stand active service. As for leather equipment of knapsacks, that is a matter of opinion. It is heavier than canvas, but will stand more wear than canvas under certain conditions. The Department was obliged to buy horses that were offered for sale—it could not confiscate them. Naturally, the farmers and horse dealers tried to palm off all the old skates they had, and, while the buyers need not have bought these, yet it is next to impossible, in buying horses in such numbers, not to acquire some that were unfit for service. But to say that a skilled horseman like Sir Adam Beck knew nothing of the kind of horses required is to say something without foundation. The Courier advocates military men doing the buying, when, in the mobilization of the first contingent, officers had more than they could do in the time allowed. The Courier entirely overlooks, in all its criticism, the time element in gathering together the first contingent. Even now, there are many good reasons why officers should not buy horses, and so long as suitable animals are obtained there should be no complaint. The complaint against the use of Ross rifles is petty. The weapon is one of the best in the world, and, if exigencies of the moment necessitated the Princess Pats discarding it, that is not an argument against it, because there will be considerable wastage in rifles, and a reserve supply of them, together with ammunition will be needed. The rest of the first contingent, we understand, will carry Ross rifles to the firing line.

However, there is this to say in favour of the Courier's criticism, and that is that while most of the deficiencies could not be avoided, so far as the first contingent was concerned, they can be avoided in the others. The Department has had ample time to make amends. The second and following contingents should not have to wear shoes unfit for active service. Their horses ought to be better, but they will likely have the training of Salisbury Plain to face, and will likely have to defend the Empire with Ross rifles, the Canadian Courier and the Toronto Globe to the contrary notwithstanding.

THE FRENCH QUESTION.

THE LEGISLATURE of Quebec, Laval University, Cardinal Begin, Archbishop Bruchesi and a countless host of the leading men and journals of Quebec have cast the die. They demand not only the constitutional rights which they have enjoyed, but so great an extension of them, that it becomes a matter of either giving way to an independent and separate French Canada within Canada or asserting the observance of the constitution as it has been and is. The authorities and leaders above named do not deny that they are making claims to new rights, but, basing those claims on natural or moral rights, they demand new legal rights of so extensive a character that to grant them means the virtual handing over of one-half of Canada to the French. It would be inconceivable if it were not so. They say that wherever the French are in the majority, English shall give way to French. We are up against a situation in Canada fraught with the gravest danger, and at a most inopportune time. However, we believe the Ontario Government, under the leadership of the Hon. W. H. Hearst, will deal with this question satisfactorily; that he will not permit minorities to be oppressed, nor grant them unwarranted privileges.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

EVERYTHING is absolutely normal in Germany, says Beck's Weekly. All the German ministers say so, whenever interviewed by an American correspondent. Just to show how absolutely normal everything is in Germany, the German Government has collared all the wheat in the country.

HON. W. L. M. KING, ex-Minister of Labour in Laurier's Cabinet, and now acting on behalf of the Rockefeller Foundation in the U. S., has incurred the fierce hostility of American workingmen. He will likely "return in five minutes."

ONE THING NOTICEABLE since the war broke out—American newspapers and magazines have been paying a great deal of attention to Canada.

WE CARRY all reliable makes of overalls, says an advertiser. We will keep this item on fyle, as we may need a new spring suit this year.

BY THE SPRING it is expected that Canada will have armed forces equal in number to the whole army of the United States.

War a Blessing to Some.

(Victoria Colonist.)

The war has been a blessing in disguise to London's vagrants. Even the criminal in the great city has turned patriotic, for there has been a remarkable decrease in crime. Before the war, the number of outcasts, women and men, rescued from the streets and given food and shelter by the Salvation Army, averaged 2,000 a night. Since hostilities broke out, not more than a hundred or two are nightly swept into its shelters. The explanation is found in the casually employed being now able to earn enough at steady work to pay for their accommodation. The small, utterly helpless and hopeless class at present alone comprises those who find refuge in the Salvation Army shelters.

A Doric Tipperary.

(London Sphere.)

Mr. Postom Shinton has been singing to the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, quartered at Gravesend. Here is his Scottish version of Tipperary:

"It's a lang way tae Auchtermuchty,
It's a lang way tae Perth;
It's a lang way tae get tae onywhere
Frae onywhere else on earth.
Guid-bye tae Ballachulish,
Farewell but an' ben;
It's a lang, lang way tae Auchtermuchty,
But we'll gang back again."

Trusted to the Pacificists.

(London Spectator.)

One of the reasons why the Germans hate us so bitterly just now, and, therefore, why the war has assumed so horrible a complexion, is that our opponents were fully persuaded that the pacificists would prevent England fighting. They now see these pacificists among the sternest of their foes. Is it to be wondered at that they are savagely angry and regard us as a nation of fiendish hypocrites—men who cant about peace, but who, when they are asked to put their theories into operation, reply by flying to arms? Peace must be girt with the sword, and must know how to be stern as well as gentle, if she is to bring a blessing, and not a curse, upon mankind.

Declined with Thanks.

ONLY A DREAM.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—By the reports in the papers from time to time, it seems to me that the citizens of Peterborough cannot get anything definite from their Council about the sewage disposal plant.

Only at last Wednesday night's meeting of the Council the chairman of the board of works was asked if he had anything definite to report with regard to the disposal plant, and his reply was, No, and in the face of his remarks Mr. Engineer Parsons a little later on at the same meeting states that they have. Now, who is running the Council, and who are the citizens to look to for authority?

Perhaps a few facts from Otonabee might be appreciated by the citizens of Peterborough about this question. The plans for the disposal plant have been approved by the Provincial Board of Health, but they have not as yet approved of the site, and in the face of this the Peterborough Council is spending thousands of dollars of the people's money without having anything definite to work upon. No wonder the taxes are at high water mark. The engineer claims that the proposed site was chosen to accommodate East City as well as the West. This is but a dream. When questioned by the township solicitor, Mr. Peck, at the hearing of the case by the Provincial Board of Health in Toronto as to how this would be done, he states that he has not gone into the matter, so how does he know it will accommodate East City? And, besides, he added that the plant could not be situated farther down the river, as the sewage would have to run below the water level. Then how he is going to run East City sewage under the canal and below the level of Little Lake for more than a mile beats me. The township is acting square with the city of Peterborough, and before one dollar was spent on construction work the city fathers were given to understand that if they tried to force the plant on the proposed site it would be fought to a finish, but Mayor Buller said that it was going to go there. It seems as if Mr. Buller has got more authority than the Provincial Medical Health Officer when he states a fact like this. The township was agreeable to let the matter drop if the plant was taken farther down the river where the property is not nearly so valuable and populated like the village of McMartinville. The importance of this locality was recognized last week by the County Council voting forty per cent. of the cost of a new bridge across the Otonabee at the street railway wharf, and endorses the township of Otonabee's contention that this locality is too populous and thriving a spot for the location of a nuisance such as the sewage disposal plant will undoubtedly prove.

Yours truly,
"OTONABEE."
Peterborough, Feb. 1, 1915.

A Disappointment.

"Uncle Jed," asked his neighbor, "how is your boy getting along at college?"

"First rate," answered Uncle Jed. "He hasn't cost me a cent. He's working his way through, he's winning all the class honors, and they've promised him a professorship of some kind."

"Great Scott," gasped his neighbor, "is that all he is doing? With that big, husky frame of his I supposed he'd be playing center by this time!"

She Had Enough.

As Mrs. May of Birchdale Corners was leaving the exhibition hall of the county fair a man stepped out of a booth and accosted her.

"Won't you enter," said he, "and see the startling spentharicopic scintillations of radium?"

Mrs. May shook her head—with a smile, however, for she is courteous if not scientific.

"I'm obliged to you," she said, "but my bag is chock full of samples now."—Youth's Companion.

THE POLAR EXPEDITION

Before starting on his present expedition to the antarctic Sir Edward Shackleton, the explorer, spoke, among other things, of the value of sugar as food to travelers in that region. The craving for it is very strong, he declared, and then he added:

"To show you how valuable sugar is to the explorer, there was an occasion when we marched 321 miles, drawing laden sledges, in fourteen days and a half. Every two hours we each took two or three lumps of sugar. Within ten minutes of eating them we could feel the heat go through our bodies. The highest temperature of that march was 62 degrees below zero.

"We shall take with us no stimulants except tea and cocoa. We drink the tea at midday to refresh us for the afternoon march. The cocoa is taken the last thing at night to preserve bodily heat during the hours of sleep. The greatest temptation that assails an arctic explorer is the desire to drink on the march. At his feet there is potential liquid in unlimited quantity. But the snow is at 40 degrees below zero and must be melted in the mouth. The heat required to melt it is much too precious to be used in that way; it is needed to keep up the bodily heat and energy."

Luminous Aeroplanes.

Phosphorescent aeroplanes and airships for night exhibitions, for advertising and for increasing safety in night flights are now proposed, and phosphorescent model flying machines were recently exhibited before an American aeronautic society. By some new methods the light may be made of other colors besides the familiar greenish blue, so that aeroplanes painted with this phosphorescent material may make a striking color display without carrying an appreciable amount of additional weight.

The Indian Memorial.

The Indian memorial, which is to stand near Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, will be largely the gift of Mr. Rodman Wanamaker of Philadelphia. The memorial is intended to stand for the American Indian (the entire race of red men, and not for any local New York tribe). The structure will be 165 feet high, will be built of granite and marble and be crowned by a bronze statue of an Indian chief.—New York American.

Exposition Searchlights.

More than 200 giant searchlights, which are to be used as a part of the 500 at the San Francisco exposition, have arrived and are being put in place. Those received are eighteen inch and thirteen inch and are the smallest sizes that will be used. There will be 100 thirty-inch searchlights, and many between three and four feet in diameter.

Australian Pearls.

Pearls found on the coast of Australia are of many shapes and colors. Those under ten grains are sold by the ounce, above that by the grain. Color has a deal to do with the value. The white pearls go mostly to Europe and the yellow ones to India. In Australia an ounce of good white pearls will fetch up to $500, but sometimes realizes only a fifth of that amount. The yellow pearls may be rated on an average at about half the value of the white ones. The seed pearls used for cheap jewelry can be had for $5 per ounce and discolored pearls for 7s. 6d., but if the discoloration is peculiar the value is sometimes enhanced. For the low class of seed pearls there is a constant demand among oriental physicians and apothecaries, who grind them into a powder and administer it to patients as a cure for many ills.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

They passed through a stone gateway of a massive and towering design that reared its head like a mausoleum in the lonely woods. The winding road led through more, and was so narrow that the trees met overhead and the air turned chill in the defile below. It was a very big place, the driver said—miles and miles of it, and he flicked his whip in the direction of unintelligible local landmarks. It hadn't been worth taxes till the wood pulp business began, and now even the stumpage would bring all of $10 an acre. "A stroke of luck for the general, wasn't it, what with pulp getting dearer every day—though he just let it lie like it was, and did nothing. Thousands and thousands of dollars in wood pulp and stumpage, and as good as money in the bank."

Matt suffered under these reflections; it made him feel more of an intruder than ever, poorer and of less account. Who was he to be driving through such unnumbered acres of wood pulp and daring to lift his eyes, however timidly, to its owner's daughter? It emphasized his presumption, and every tree became a new barrier, abhorrent to look upon. It was in a very crushed humor, indeed, that he approached the lawns and shrubberies, the tortuous brick walks and at last the house itself—a stately old colonial structure, with that dignified frontage of classic white columns so dear to our forefathers and so expressive of their lives and aspirations.

Matt descended, dismissed the conveyance with the thrifty intention of walking home and turned to mount the wide, high steps. He was greeted at the top by Miss Marshall, who seemed to spring up from nowhere, smiling and radiant and bewitching to look at in her boyish riding costume. Her father and she had just got back—and, oh, so afraid that he might have been made to wait—papa having met a long lost lovely friend in a teuf-teuf and a tiger coat and wanting to remain the rest of the week to talk to her. But they must go right in, or papa would be at the muffins and disgracing himself. Papa was terribly elemental about muffins.

Amid this laughing cordiality Matt found himself being guided through a lofty hallway, lined with books and engravings, to a large, low ceilinged room, where the old general, also in riding dress, was standing before a log fire and refraining in the most exemplary manner from any premature onslaught on the tea table. This in spite of the fact that it stood temptingly near by, gleaming with old silver and set about with red roses.

What were Matt's sensations as he sat beside Miss Marshall on the sofa, balancing a teacup on his knee and stealing little sidewise looks at her? The dismalest imaginable, it must be confessed. She was prettier than he had remembered her—maddeningly pretty, and every mark of her consideration came as a fresh stab, as a fresh realization of the gulf between them.

He was constrained; he knew he was not appearing at his best; he seemed to feel her artifices to draw him out, to overcome his awkwardness, to display him to some advantage before her father. But those old, profound eyes were not to be deceived and had the look of wondering at her trouble. An ex-ambassador could read a young man like a book—even while eating muffins and joking about tiger skin ladies in teuf-teufs. It appeared that a teuf-teuf was an automobile. Matt's ignorance of the word seemed to stamp him as a boor. What a misfortune he had never heard of it before. He made an anxious note of it for future occasions, and then it came over him with despair that there would be no future occasions. He would never see Christine Marshall again. Thus altogether daunted and depressed how hard it was to affect liveliness, to talk about the islands, to try to hide that grinding sense of failure.

He hoped afterward that he had not talked too much about the islands. It was all he knew to talk about. Cannibals, fighting, pearl diving and the shuddering, bloody business of the bark Moron—things that people usually liked to hear, especially from a survivor of the last. The general with a big laugh called him Captain Othello—a sally that induced Chris to repeat with a whimsical acceptance that made Matt's heart beat: "That it was strange, most passing strange; 'twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful"—causing him to flush and feel very self-conscious indeed, though thrilled, too, as those fine eyes turned on him so kindly and with such smiling significance. How little she realized their havoc on a poor devil who, then and there, could have knelt down and kissed the hem of her skirt with such reverence and adoration that it would have been an added rapture to include a pair of trim, small riding boots as well and the very bit of carpet on which they stood. These thoughts, however, were not good for sustained and conventional conversation. Such as it was, it languished terribly at times, and the general's mouth could be seen to purse under his mustache as though concealing—yes—a yawn. Captain Othello grew bluer and bluer and more abstracted and constrained until finally an unmistakable yawn brought him to his feet.

CHAPTER VI.

Lovers.

THE end had come; he was holding out his hand; he was saying goodby; all over and forever. No, not quite forever. Learning that he had sent away his buggy, Miss Marshall offered to walk with him as far as the tennis courts. She volunteered this in spite of rather a sharp look from her father, and a request that had the quality of a command, not to stay out too long.

Side by side, Matt and she walked together, both silent till the house was left behind.

"What's the matter?" Miss Marshall asked at last. "You've been so different today—so changed. I couldn't make it out, and, and"—

"And what?" inquired Matt.

"It hurt me a little. I thought you might be glad—glad to come, you know."

"I was glad to come."

"Poor fellow—I suppose you have to say that."

"I knew I was dull and disappointing, and the more I tried the duller I got, and—that's it, if you want to know."

She moved closer to him, and announced, with a shade of relief in her voice, that he was a very foolish person. He hadn't been a bit dull, nor disappointing—the idea! But did not seem himself, that was all, and mopy. Dreadfully mopy.

"It's because I'm going away tomorrow," he said. "Because"—and he faltered at anything so outright—"because I'll never see you again."

There was a pause.

"You mustn't," she murmured at last. "I don't want you to go away."

"But I have to."

"Oh, you have to?" she repeated questioningly.

"To do things—to start in seriously." He could not say mules. Mules stuck in his throat.

"But how does that mean never seeing me again? That's what you said, wasn't it?"

"It's hard to explain; you wouldn't understand."

"No, I don't suppose I would," she assented. "I was foolish enough to think that you—that you"—

"That I loved you?"

"Oh, no, no, not that; that would be absurd"—

"But I do."

He walked along, grimly, stiffly, in a fury with everything. "That's why I was on such pins and needles up there," he broke out passionately. "I had no right there, and I knew it. Every look at you drove it home—the utter hopelessness of it. I have to go away with the few thousands I have and try to do something—work—earn money. But if I succeeded beyond all my expectations you would be as inaccessible as ever—as unattainable. I am nothing, nobody, the dirt under your feet. You wonder why I was so dull, so stupid—I was grinding to pieces, if you want to know; yes, grinding to pieces and almost hating you!"

"If I felt like that about anybody I'd stay," she exclaimed breathlessly. "I wouldn't give anybody else a chance. I think if I really loved anybody I would kill them first."

Matt turned and caught her squarely by the shoulders, those slender, girlish shoulders, and held her out at arm's length in a vise. "You would, would you?" he cried. "Don't tempt me, or I will! I give you your choice. I told you I would go. It's for you to choose, the one way or the other. Choose, choose!"

But his revulsion was as swift as his act. He let her go, stricken at her pallor, her gasp of pain—appalled and incoherently remorseful. He smoothed her dress with his big hands; he was a brute, a crazy brute, he quavered conclusively; he saw her through a blur, trembling, swaying, obstinately averting her eyes and giving them little dabs with her handkerchief. As she recovered he waited for his sentence, his doom. He had transgressed the last law and might be thankful if she even spoke to him again. Perhaps she would turn away without a word, and that would be the end.

When she did speak it was not to annihilate him at all. It was all her own fault, she said, tremulously smiling. "That's what always happened when you goaded elemental people—great, big, rough, elemental people. They grabbed you in their great, big, rough, elemental way and shook the curl out of your hair, wanting you to choose. As though anybody could choose while being shaken like a rat! And what was she to choose, anyhow? Would he please tell her like an ordinary, grownup, unelemental person?"

Matt was more abashed than if the heavens had opened with thunderbolts. He had expected thunderbolts, and in a sort of way had braced himself to receive them; but he had no armor against these teasing shafts. He colored to the ears and was acutely embarrassed, wincing at every allusion to his outrageous conduct. She seemed to enjoy making him wince—found a wicked zest in it. Everything he said was gently ridiculed. That he should be in love with her was apparently the most ridiculous thing of all. She referred to his word "choose" and tangled up all his blurting explanations.

"Men are all egoists," she said cruelly, "and the contempt you have for us is really disheartening. To you we're all little ninnies without the least will of our own—just laid out on the sideboard like prizes at a bridge party. It has never dawned on you that I have any courage, any individuality—now, has it?"

Matt vehemently protested that she had both—lots of both—till he was abruptly cut short.

"No, no," she said. "To you I'm just a charming little drawing room ornament, sparkling in the firelight—just a dear little noodle that you'd like to put in a crate and take home with you—and you're horribly miserable because you can't and somebody else may—noodle having no voice in the matter at all, only rather hoping that the crate will be padded with pink silk—that being the limit of her poor little noodle intelligence. The last thing to occur to you is that I'm a woman, with a head of my own and a heart of my own, able to take my place at a man's side and work and fight with him."

She stopped, flushing and overcome. "That's what I meant when I said you mustn't go," she added piteously. "Can't you see?"

KIDNEY TROUBLE AFFECTED HIS SPINE

Suffered For Forty Years Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives"

BRONTE, ONT., OCT. 31st. 1913.

"For about forty years, I was troubled with Lame Back brought on by Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies which never did me any good. Then I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy.

My son suffered from the same trouble and frequently had to leave off working, but "Fruit-a-tives" remedied it for him. I would strongly advise anyone suffering from Kidney and Bladder Trouble to use "Fruit-a-tives".

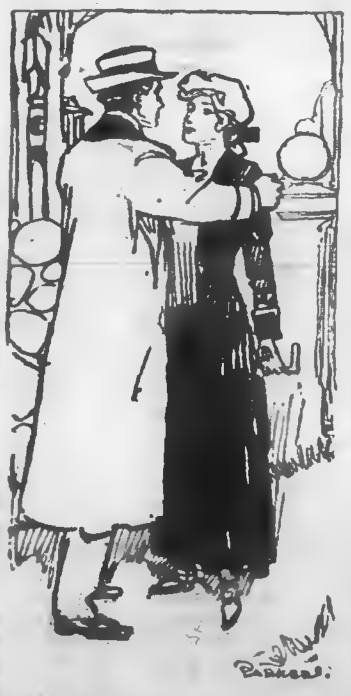
Matt was less backward than stunned. He must have misunderstood; he could not believe it. It was only when her hands went to her face and her head bowed in an extremity of shame that comprehension really flashed on him. He pulled away her hands, incredulous still, yet mad with joy—pulled them away and kissed her on the lips, her burning, averted lips—again and again and again, insatiable of her young beauty, and inflamed by a resistance that was no resistance at all, but the panting, shaking and almost terrified surrender of a woman to the man she loved.

"I hold you to it," he whispered. "I hold you to every word you said. I love you, and you love me, and nothing on earth shall ever separate us!" Then, obeying her stifled entreaty, he released her, and the pair gazed at each other in the deepening dusk, awed, struck to silence, and somehow at one with the trees, the sky, and all nature of which they, too, were one, and at whose altar they vowed themselves to each other and received the benison of the stars.

Matt would have clasped her again in his arms, but she gently resisted. He was to go, she said. Had he not taken enough already? Was she not so spent that to take more would kill her? Besides, she wished to be alone—to nestle to her heart the sweetest moment of her life, without even that great big him to disturb her. He was such a disturber! He would kiss her again and she would lose all the others—those precious first ones that would always be the dearest. No, he was to go. Please, he was to go. Please, it was a favor.

He perceived that she was in earnest, and something told him, moreover, that she was with difficulty holding back her tears—those tears which it would be a sacrilege for him to share. So, manfully, and with a quickening perception, he made no further demur, but turned and left her, looking back once to wave his hand, and to take one last look.

But she loved him. That was all his dizzy head could hold. She loved him. Christine Marshall loved him. She was willing to strip herself of everything to follow him the wide world over. Nothing could matter now, nothing could hurt him. Chris loved him!



"It's for you to choose."

He had completely forgotten the frock coat person, he of the silk hat and the beard and subdued masterfulness, who had clung to his front wheel with agitated pertinacity hardly three hours before. Matt was reminded of his existence by finding him on Mrs. Sattane's front porch, wearily blocking the road to supper. By all rights the stranger should have been excessively annoyed, but on the contrary he was suavity itself, rising at Matt's approach and greeting him with formidable politeness.

Might he take the liberty of repeating his request to see Mr. Broughton in private? Might he, without undue insistence, remind Mr. Broughton of the very serious issues at stake and the need—the very great need—of expedition? After three hours of waiting was he not entitled to an immediate interview—an immediate interview in private? No, it need not be long. In some aspects it was a very simple affair—a proposal on the part of certain principals, an acceptance—er—it was to be hoped, on Mr. Broughton's.

FOR PRE-LENTEN DANCES.

Gown of Shimmering Silver Tissue Contrasted With Black Velvet.

FETCHING NEW PARTY GOWN.

The gown pictured here is a shimmering affair of silver tissue, suggesting moonlight in effect. The bodice of shirred black velvet is supported over the shoulders with straps of black jet and finished at the top with a narrow plaiting of the silver tissue. A silver cord encircles the waist. The skirt consists of a series of circular tunics. For the many social functions that will be crowded into the pre-Lenten season a gown of this sort is both modish and becoming for most women.

SELVAGE RUGS.

Handsome Floor Coverings That Are Easily Made and Cost Little.

When tailors make men's suits they first cut selvages from the materials used. These selvages make much better rugs than ordinary carpet rags when woven in the usual manner, and they are warm and rich looking, especially if dark colored warp is used, says the Mother's Magazine. Another advantage in favor of selvages is that they come in long strips and require little work in preparation for the weaver.

In place of sewing the rags in the usual fashion lay the end of one strip flat upon the end of another and sew together without doubling. Tailors usually throw away selvages and would therefore give them away upon request; others sell them to rag men for a few cents a pound.

If you wish to make braided rugs of selvage they must be used double.

KITCHEN FURNITURE.

Should Be Comfortable and Attractive, Yet Adapted to Use.

Every kitchen should boast at least one comfortable chair, for the competent cook can learn to perform many of her duties sitting as well as standing.

For greater efficiency and comfort the kitchen table is also of importance, for not only should it be strong and steady, but it should also be of the proper height for baking and kneading bread. It should have a deep drawer to hold agate and wooden spoons, forks and knives, cookie molds, etc.

Over the table either a convenient cabinet or a simple board may be nailed into place, upon which can be hung egg beaters, bread knives, measuring spoons—indeed, all those small things which will save a busy woman countless steps during the day's work.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hardening of the Arteries.

Arteriosclerosis can be prevented. It is due to disturbances of the chemistry of the body. Periodical examination by a physician will reveal the first symptoms, which are so slight that they convey no warning to the man himself. The temporary exclusion of eggs, fish, meat, fowl and soup from the dietary and the subsequent limiting of both kind and quality is the first and most obvious precaution. Rest and exercise are the best of preventives. A real holiday—not a stay at some fashionable resort, but a complete change of air and scene, with freedom from worry, new interests, new associates, a natural diet, early hours and every inducement to open air exercise—should be taken at least once a year, and for long enough to bring back the tone to the liver, kidneys, blood vessels and heart.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

For The Children

The Picnic Game.

The leader alone should be in the secret and should proceed in this way: Begin by announcing that you propose to give a picnic and that it depends upon what your guests bring for lunch whether they will be allowed to attend or not and that each one must bring two articles of food. Then ask the person nearest to you, "What will you take to the picnic?" If the name of neither of the articles she mentions begins with the initial letter of her Christian or surname tell her she cannot go, and put the question to the next person, asking each one in turn, "What will you take to the picnic?"

For example, we will suppose that one of the party is Susan Davis, and she says she will take crackers and lemons. She cannot go, as neither of her names begins with C or L. But if she said she would take salmon and doughnuts she would be doubly welcome, as S and D are both initials of her name. If she said sugar and cream she could go, for one of her names commences with S.

Continue to put the question to each player until all or nearly all have discovered why their proposed contributions to the lunch gain them a welcome or prevent them from attending the picnic.

 Now, then, what can it be?

They always stand still,
 Yet run down and up too.
They come by the flight,
 And are tramped on by you.

It runs around a field, my dears,
 But never moves, and hence
I'll let you finish out this rime
 By saying, 'tis a ——?

APPEALS TO CANADIANS

Premier Murray of Nova Scotia Indefatigable in Efforts for Belgians

Premier Murray of Nova Scotia addressed a telegram to each of the Provincial Premiers, pointing out that although the people of Canada have already made substantial contributions toward the assistance of the starving Belgians, much more remains to be done. Two steamships have already sailed from Halifax, the Tremorvah and the Doric, carrying supplies which were contributed by a large number of people in the different provinces of this country. The steamer Calcutta laden by the Montreal committee sailed about December 15th.

It is gratifying to Canadians to know that the Tremorvah was the first relief ship to arrive from overseas.

On the 18th of September Mr. Murray issued an appeal through the press to the people of Nova Scotia for funds, food and clothing for the Belgians, and the response was spontaneous and gratifying. The Tremorvah, a British Admiralty collier, was loaned to transport the supplies, and it sailed on October 29th loaded to the hatches. As many cars of supplies had been sent from Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario, about one-half of Nova Scotia's contributions were held over in order to make space for those sent from outside. The SS. Doric sailed on November 28th, taking the balance of Nova Scotia's contributions, and further supplies from other provinces.

There still remains a number of cars of goods supplied by Nova Scotia, and Mr. Murray is communicating with the British Admiralty to secure another collier, and this will be an opportunity for the people of other provinces to send additional gifts.

The Halifax Committee, appointed by Mr. Murray, still continues in office, and is ready to place its services and experience at the disposal of any person desiring its assistance.

The contribution from Nova Scotia sent on the Tremorvah, and which was distributed in Belgium before Christmas were worth $500,000, made up as follows. Flour, 504,300 lbs.; biscuits, 141,990 lbs.; canned goods, 172,464 tins; meats and fish 193,276 lbs.; assorted groceries, 55,130 lbs.; potatoes, 47,348 bushels, apples, 2,256 bushels; clothing 2,021 very large cases, 1,414 cases 382 bags, 700 parcels; boots and shoes, 1,609 pairs; lumber, 84,000 feet.

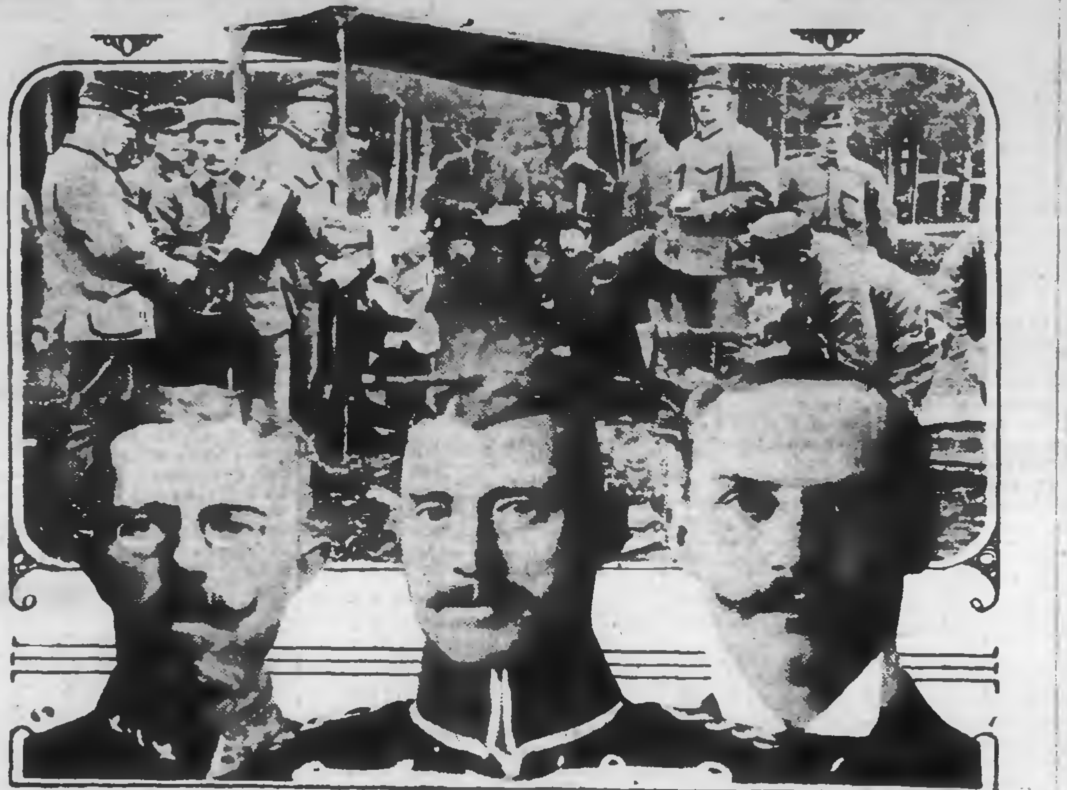
WHAT WILL DENMARK, NORWAY AND SWEDEN DO IN THE PRESENT CONFLICT

Belligerents Want Scandinavia to Enter War — Danes, Seeking Revenge for Schleswig-Holstein, Would be Serious Menace to Kiel Canal, Germany's Gibraltar

The Three Kings of Scandinavia and Types of Men Who Are Ready to Fight for Them



© UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

By W. H. Nevison, Special War Correspondent.

PETROGRAD, RUSSIA, Feb. 2.

How do the Scandinavian kingdoms stand in this war? Will Denmark attack Germany's Gibraltar—the Kiel Canal?

With Italy, Roumania, Greece, and even Switzerland, wavering on the brink of indecision, ready for the plunge into the European cataclysm, the favor of Norway, Sweden and Denmark is being carefully cultivated by both sides.

And neutrality, for this trio of nations, is a difficult thing to maintain.

Denmark has Germany to fear; and Sweden, Russia. Norway is by commerce cemented to England. And yet all three are by language, customs and derivatives, bound together.

At the outbreak of the war, Sweden, on whose iron ore countries Russia has frequently turned an envious gaze, saw its only hope in affiliation with Germany. This certainly did not please Denmark, still rankling because of the annexation of Schleswig-Holstein by Germany. Sweden held off, and now after six omnths of the war its people are still carefully guarding their neutrality.

But tremendous pressure is being brought to bear on the Scandinavian peoples, and their entrance into the war is not without the range of possibility.

The recent meeting of the three kings, Haakon of Norway, Gustav of Sweden, and Christian of Denmark, indicates that the three countries will act togther, either as neutrals or as participants.

"Turkey has been dragged into the war," declared one Stockholm paper, "by a farsighted diplomatic trick. Should Germany be defeated and her territory become the spoils for the victors, she can relieve herself of much of the burden of payment by informing Russia that she has made it possible for the latter to acquire Constantinople, the goal of a dozen czars. Thus, if we, as allies of Germany, were likewise vanquished, Russia would acquire our northern iron mines and reduce us to a state not unlike Denmark found itself after Prussian seizure of its southern half."

As most of the money coming into Norway is from Great Britain in payment for the immense lumber shipments, it is likely sufficient English pressure would put this nation in the war.

"Denmark is a serious menace to the Kiel Canal," declared the head of a ship line to me. "Three islands, of which Maribo is the largest, stand no more than 100 miles off Kiel, which is in the lower section of Schleswig-Holstein.

"Germany would need a million men to hold Denmark, with the natural strategic positions possessed by the former nation. Where would the million come from, with two other battle fronts to be kept up?

"If Norway and Sweden do not enter the conflict, Russian aid might be furnished for the attack on Kiel.

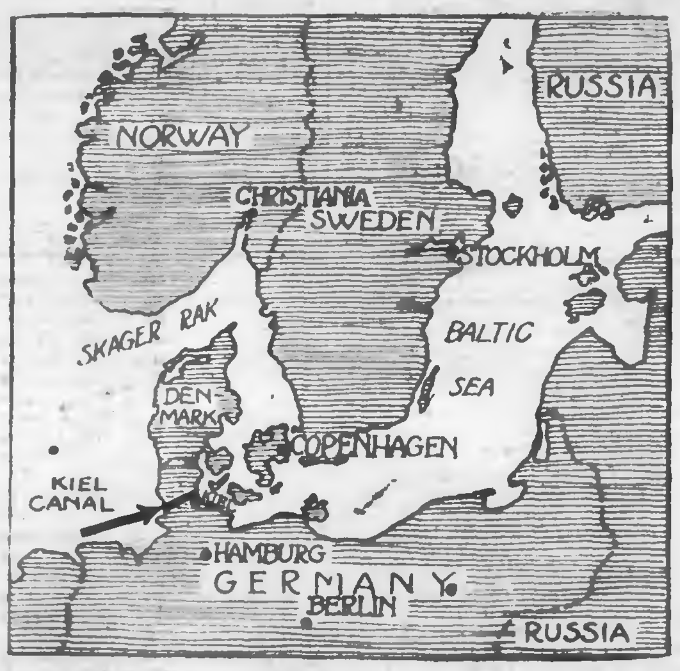
"But Denmark does not even have to enter the war until a decisive battle has been fought, to win her share of the spoils, which surely would be Schleswig-Holstein, or the northern or Danish-speaking half of it. Should enough territory be awarded her to include the Kiel Canal, Germany loses her Gibraltar forever."

Throwing her lot with the Allies, Sweden, if victorious, couldn't hope to gain the restoration of Finland, but might win the thorough friendship of Russia and preserve the highly valued commercial relationship with England.

Although Britain has not by direct means, so far as I can discover, attempted to compel the Scandinavian powers to join the war, it is true that agents of both England and Germany are working to create sentiment for their respective causes in the three kingdoms.

I have talked to many Swedes, and among the thinkers find that it is their belief that the Scandinavian nations cannot long remain out of the conflict. Let the now neutral Southern European nations plunge into the melee, and the Scandinavian countries would probably also find reasons for entering.

Stockholm seems to think, and without pessimism, that all Europe must be embroiled before the conflict ends, and that means Norway and Denmark, too.



Map showing the proximity of the Scandinavian countries to the war; also how Denmark, with its islands, menaces Kiel.

Sweden is the greatest power of the Scandinavian countries. It could produce 485,000 trained soldiers in event of war and have an additional 200,000 men available. It possesses a navy of 86 ships, including one dreadnought, but made up mostly of coast defence monitors and gunboats. The naval enlistment is 5,715 men.

In war time Norway could furnish 115,000 trained soldiers, with 100,000 more available. The navy is made up of 49 small ships with a complement of about 2,000 men.

Denmark has an army of 56,000 men, with 125,000 more available. Its navy is made up of 36 schips and 4,000 men.

This makes a total of 1,092,715 men on land and sea that the three Scandinavian nations could throw into the war.

A Dramatic Arrest.

For committing a particularly brutal assault on an aged man, Geo. Dickson, a well known character in the tenderloin region of Toronto, was sentenced recently to two years in Kingston Penitentiary. Several weeks ago Dickson entered the little shop of Alan G. Duncan, an aged man, beat him over the head with a club and then kicked him under the counter. The screams of the victim summoned aid and Dickson had to flee. He left town for some time after which he thought it safe to return.

Detective Walter McConnell met Dickson the very next day, which was Sunday, just in front of a well-known down-town church. Dickson, recognizing McConnell, made a quick getaway into the church, where service had just started. McConnell followed. Dickson took a seat in the main auditorium and McConnell sat down beside him and snapped the bracelets quietly on him.

A tragic comedy was then enacted. The two rose together and sang hymns from the same book, bowed together in prayer, listened attentively to the sermon, and then, after the benediction, walked out of church together, Dickson quietly handcuffed to McConnell.

A Happy New Year.

A steamship official of Irish birth who resides in Montreal during the summer navigation season and spends the remainder of the year in Halifax, the winter port of his line, was explaining the compensations of his mode of life to his Montreal friends while preparing to leave them a few weeks ago. "I do like to spend New Year's Day in Halifax," he said. "In fact, I wouldn't miss it for any amount of money. Every time you enter a bar, the bartender always insists on buying the first drink. It's a local custom there, and a good one if you start out early enough, by noon you feel so good that you start buying drinks yourself."

Heard of War September 17.

C. D. Melville of Edmonton, who is on the fisheries staff of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, did not know anything about the European war until September 17. He had been busy up in the James Bay region all summer and on September 17 arrived at Moose Factory where he learned of what was going on in the outside world.

He is now en route to the Old Country to serve as an officer in one of the regiments there.

A Masterly Retreat

One of the cleverest retreats in the history of warfare was the one effected by Marshal Belleisle in December, 1742, when he evacuated Prague. France, then at war with Austria, had a year previously advanced an army into Bohemia and stormed its ancient capital. There, however, her energies ceased, and before many months were run her troops found themselves besieged in turn in the captured stronghold.

Midwinter found Belleisle blockaded in front and rear by forces that cut off supplies, and to clear out became the only alternative to surrender. The city itself was bitterly inimical, and every plan he devised was instantly made known to the besiegers, but by great adroitness he set forth on Dec. 16 into the darkness with 14,000 men, cannon service and baggage trains, unmolested by the foe, but facing one of the cruellest journeys an army could undertake.

He had for his route the choice of two roads—one going north, the other south, equally bad, and both in possession of adverse hussars. Instead of taking either he struck into the space between — across mountains, streams and bogs — in the depths of an unusually rigorous winter. Fortunately for him the very severity of the weather made the passage of the marshes possible, but the sufferings of his men were indescribable, not to mention the attacks of eager enemies, who hung on his flanks and rear like wolves.

When he at length reached his haven of refuge at Egger, eleven days after quitting Prague, 1,300 of his force were left frozen in the wilderness, but under his brilliant leadership his army was otherwise intact. It had driven off two fierce assaults of the enemy and overcome difficulties which, but for his consummate ability, would have sunk it in ruin and disaster.—London Globe.

CONSTANTINOPLE WILL NOT THIRST IN SIEGE; MYSTERIOUS LAKE, MILES IN AREA, LIES UNDER SURFACE OF THE CAPITAL

However Constantinople may fare at the hands of a besieging force, it is not at all likely that the city will fall through a shortage of water. There is an almost illimitable supply contained in that wonder of the world, Yere-Batan-Serai, the mysterious Palace of Waters.

No city in the world has anything to compare to this wonder, and it is so truly marvelous that even tradition is silent concerning it. It is now some years ago that, by accident, an opening was discovered which showed the existence beneath of an unknown extent of waters, a gigantic underground reservoir.

Upon several occasions foreigners have endeavored to probe the mysteries of the Palace of Waters. In one case, two Englishmen were viewing the opening when one of them impulsively jumped into the boat and pushed off.

A wonderful sight was presented as he rowed away, as the torch he carried illuminated the arches in a wonderful manner. Gradually the light became fainter and fainter until it vanished,

The adventurous Englishman was never seen again.

In another case, an Englishman, after encountering the greatest difficulties, obtained permission to investigate the palace.

He fastened a torch to each end of the boat and provided himself with a store of others. He lighted the two main torches, and fastened strong twine to the pillar from which he started, running this out as he rowed along.

He returned in an exhausted condition, nearly frozen. He said that he had rowed in a straight line to the end of the great length of twine he had taken with him.

Even then, however, he had not come to the end of the palace, for its beautiful pillars stretched away into the darkness on every hand. To this day nobody has solved the mystery of this Palace of Waters.

A NEW MINISTER

The Hon. T. W. McGarry, Ontario's Treasurer is a Hard Fighter

One of the still-young men of the north country who is doing much smiling these days because of the Christmas-box honor of Cabinet Ministry which has just been conferred upon him by his Premier is the Hon. Thomas McGarry, the new Provincial Treasurer in the Ontario Cabinet, says The Toronto Star Weekly. It is well to note that Mr. McGarry is of the north, even though it is no nearer the pole than Renfrew, for there is about the man something typical of the zone which breeds hard-fighting men, and it is safe to say that if Mr. McGarry hadn't been a lawyer first and a politician afterwards, he would have been a lumberman. To one who has seen this young spirit of the north in action for any length of time, it is hard to think of him in any other role than one which entails dynamic power, physically, mentally, or even in any other capacity.

It was no surprise to his friends and acquaintances when the Hon. Mr. Hearst chose Mr. McGarry to fill the Treasurership, for all have recognized that he could not be overlooked much longer. Politically, he has been one of the Government sledge-hammers for many legislative sessions, and he has boosted the north country with only one degree less vigor than has the Prime Minister himself. Bludgeon is the word which fits him admirably when he comes to measuring swords with the Opposition benchers, for he rarely bends to the finesse of rapier words, and doubtless the environment of the north and the type of manhood which it produces has had something to do with that characteristic. Mr. McGarry hits hard, and some say he likes it. As a matter of fact, he has displayed some of the old Irish trait which believes that a fight isn't complete unless he is a part of it.

Physically, Mr. McGarry has all that is to be desired, and it is his great physique which encourages one in the impression that it was only from such types as his that the nation-carvers of the forest were bred in the olden days. When it comes to fighting, verbally, Mr. McGarry comes by it naturally, for in his choice Mr. Hearst was but living up to his established rule that an Ontario Cabinet to be complete must be Irish. Such a united front, it is recognized, is a pretty solid one against a common enemy, and can likewise furnish interest at home in duller times.

In picking the Renfrew member, Mr. Hearst has also shown his preference for young men. Since he is young himself he is following out the belief that the best work can be done by the younger men. The new Treasurer began life forty-three years ago, both of his parents being Irish. He was born in the Township of Drummond, Lanark County, passed through the Almonte High School, the Toronto School of Law, began practice in the town of Renfrew, and was made a K.C. in 1907. In his home district various honors have come his way. He occupied the position of town solicitor and acted as member of the Board of Education before entering the political arena. His first advent into this conflict was not a successful one, since he contested the bye-election of 1896 against the Hon. T. R. Latchford. It was not until 1905 that he won the riding of South Renfrew for the Conservatives, and has held the constituency successfully for three contests.

Record-Making Deal.

What is probably the greatest cattle deal ever consummated in America was put through recently, when Yule & Bowes of Calgary, purchased 120 head of shorthorn cattle, comprising the H. L. Emmert herd at Oak Bluff, Man. These cattle represent the cream of live stock of all America, and include Gainsford Marquis, the champion bull of all America, and Winnipeg champion in 1914. As a three-year-old, two years ago, this animal was bought for $5,000.

REAL "DOGS OF WAR"

They Used to Wear Coats of Mail and Carry Firebrands.

"Dogs of war" is a phrase which once meant a thing as real as the war horse. Dogs have played their part in battles and campaigns, and in the old wars between England and Scotland dogs were used by both combatants for pursuing and killing fugitives after a defeat.

It is related that Wallace and Bruce each had close escapes from capture by English bloodhounds. Bruce is said to have thrown the English dog off the scent by the now well known expedient of wading up a stream far enough to baffle his pursuers, and Wallace evaded the hounds by having recourse to a trick more or less common in those bloody times of killing a follower and leaving the body in the dogs' path for them to come upon. The dogs finding a body believed that their task was done and discontinued the hunt.

In the history of the wars of the middle ages one finds reference to the use of big dogs against cavalry for the purpose of throwing the horses into confusion and not alone for causing panic, but casualties, for these fierce canine partisans were clothed in coats of mail studded with spikes and having scythes fitted to their harness.

Instances are recorded where war dogs with fire brands fastened to their coats of mail have been set on an enemy's camp with destructive results.

Henry VIII. must have found dogs useful in military ways, because in English history it is written that he offered the use of 40,000 auxiliaries and 4,000 war dogs to King Charles V. of Spain to aid that monarch in his war with Francis I.

In the reign of Queen Elizabeth when the Earl of Essex entered Ireland for the purpose of suppressing insurrection there his army was accompanied by a hundred bloodhounds.—Detroit News.

War News From Pulpit.

A wireless despatch of 300 words will be sent each week by the Canadian Government to the clergy of the Magdalen Islands, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, to keep the islanders informed of the latest war news and other world events.

The despatches will be read to the congregations each Sunday morning from December to May. The demand of the natives for war news caused the Government to authorise the reopening of the Marconi wireless station there, which was closed after the war began.

QUESTION OF SALARIES IS NOT YET SETTLED

But Majority of Aldermen do not Speak in Favor of Cut Being Made

Ald. Edgar expressed his dissatisfaction with the report of the Finance Committee, made to council last night, and moved, seconded by Alderman Saunders that the whole question of salaries be considered by a special committee. He said everybody was suffering as a result of the hard times and the scarcity of money. Business men, to whom the city looked for a large share of the taxes—excepting those who had contracts for war material—were not doing the business they expected to do and not as much as last year.

He felt it was up to the council to see that something was done in aid of the taxpayer. He admitted that some of the officials were not getting too much money but at the same time he thought there were certain illustrations where the case was different. The tax colelctor received $1,300 for from three to four months and was using the office, the city's fuel and light in doing work for which he received revenue for himself.

The salary of the City Engineer was such as did not call for his pounding a typewriter. There was a man for that work. If he was not capable, the council should appoint some one who was capable.

He did not think the city needed two street commissioners. One inspector who had had an increase in salary, did not, he understood, spend all his time on the street.

Ald. Edgar said he did not mean that the salaries should be slaughtered, but action should be taken, which would be consistent with the times in which we were living.

Ald. McIntyre said he was not satisfied with the report and would support Ald. Edgar's amendment.

Ald. Stratton could not understand the dissatisfaction with the report. The finance committee, he said, had gone over the question of salaries very carefully. Ald. Edgar took exception to Mr. Green's salary but he did not think that in consideration of the calibre of the man and the fact that he handled $300,000 a year, that the salary was too much. As for the commissioners, he said the council did not pay two men. They did not pay the second man a salary that would correspond with what he might earn with his time in the winter.

The salaries generally speaking, were in his opinion conducive to good civic business. "I don't think getting a lot of cheap men is going to enhance the city's affairs," said Ald. Stratton in conclusion.

Ald. Johnston had no objection to the question going to a committee for further consideration. Let there be all the explanation possible, he said.

Some Bouquets.

Ald. Green explained, that, that part of the question affecting the Board of Works in regard to the Engineer's department would be taken up as soon as the Board knew where they were at. While one of the engineers (Mr. Hay) was critically ill, they did not intend to deal with the matter. So far as Mr. Evans was concerned, his salary was directly charged to permanent works, sidewalks, pavements and sewers. Mr. Evans was one of the hardest worked men in the city. Mr. Fitzgerald was honest and diligent. There was no other man who paid the city better, for the greater part of the year. This winter he was working from daylight till dark and Ald. Green felt that it would not pay the city to be without him.

Ald. Edgar explained that he had no intention of insinuating against the honesty of any city employe. He however felt that in the winter time, one man could do the work. He could not see where the city required three engineers.

Ald. Duffus suggested that the whole question be referred to the Board of Works, which is composed of the council and members not satisfied, could discuss it. He explained that Mr. Green paid for his help in times of rush and paid all postage from a salary of $1,300. Fireman Jamieson got $100 as engineer at the pumping station, a job that required one trip every day.

Ald. Edgar said he was receiving this salary while he was also receiving a salary as fireman.

Mayor Buller did not think Mr. Green or Mr. Adams were getting too much money. There were reports on the streets but to those on the inside, who knew what was being done, the salaries did not appear excessive.

Ald. Duffus upheld Ald. Edgar in so far as to his inquiry. If he heard reports and did not investigate he would be remiss in his duty to the ratepayers.

Other Revenue.

Ald. Edgar said some of the aldermen failed to see that Mr. Green had other revenues. He should not use the city's light and fuel to carry on outside business. Why not let the city treasurer collect the taxes and give him a decent salary.

Ald. Johnston asked what the other revenues were.

Ald. Edgar replied that he received $200 for the issuing of marriage licences and $200 for doing work for the Oddfellows.

Besides the motion of the chairman that the report be adopted as read, there was also Ald. Edgar's amendment and an amendment to the amendment, moved and seconded by Ald. Duffus and Ald. Weir that the report be adopted with the exception of clauses A B C and D. This was carried by a vote of 7 to 3.

Then Ald. Edgar who scented defeat said that he wished to be placed on record as having tried to do something for the ratepayers.

Ald. Stratton said that the matter could be brought up again and then Ald. Edgar could bring in another resolution.

There seemed to be some uncertainty as to the decision of the council so to make the position clear, Ald. Duffus and Ald. Stratton moved that clauses A B C and D be taken up in committee and the motion carried.

Finance Report.

The complete report of the committee was as follows:—

1. Your committee considered the resolution passed at the last meeting of the council in regard to the employes of the council and recommend as follows:—

(a) That it be left to the City Engineer and the Board of Works to decide whether a street inspector is required the year round.

(b) That the matter of the salaries in connection with the City Engineer's department be left with the Board of Works.

(c) That the salaries of the following officials be left as they are at present: City Treasurer, Street

RED CROSS NURSING WOUNDED SOLDIER IN BELGIAN CHURCH

The sanctuary of a Belgian church is the refuge of wounded soldiers. Beneath the veiled statue of the Madonna many wounded men have been nursed back to life by gentle Red Cross nurses.

REMAKING A HARBOR

When the harbor improvement scheme was first made public, and maps, charts, and graphic explanations of it were being shown at public meetings and at club luncheons, it was labeled and stowed away, in most people's minds, as being one of the family with tubes schemes, or the new Union Station; a dream, a fancy. Out of the lot, the harbor improvement is one of the dreams that come true. And to-day, after one year of planning work and one year of actual work, there is, on Toronto's waterfront from the Humber to the Don, one million and a half of dollars already spent in materializing the foundations of the dream, and of the total cost of nineteen million dollars, there are contracts already let for eleven million dollars worth of work by the Harbor Commissioners and the Dominion Government.

Activities of the improvers are to be seen all the way from the Humber to the Don. Vast engines of modern engineering are laboring in the Bay. Thousands of men are employed. For them, at least, the dream is gratefully materializing. What this great labor plans to do is to create, out of Toronto's natural and somewhat crudely-formed harbor, a fully developed harbor of even, economic formations, to fill in and make solid land of those bays and marshes and inlets of it that have heretofore been useless and wasted space. In short, it is planned to make the most of the materials and advantages with which nature has blessed Toronto. Shore lines will be protected by breakwater. Marshes will be made solid land for factories and warehouses. Instead of a waterfront covered with nondescript docks built out from a casual, uneven shore, there will be a shore line filled out to an even front, from which uniform docks will project. The whole, when finished, will be orderly and economic. No space will be wasted. In a way, Toronto may be said to be performing only her natural, moral duty in rebuilding her harbor.

The engines in operation at this east end scene of activity are the most remarkable collection. For instance, in order to prevent the mud that is being pumped to fill up certain places from flowing back into the Bay, these areas have to be walled off with huge logs driven into the Bay bottom and made into a sort of vast box. Hundreds of carloads of forty-foot logs have to be used. The pile drivers that do the work so speedily, so miraculously, are like scows with a tower on them. One of the 40-foot logs is yanked high in the air. A steel pipe, from which is issuing a two-inch stream of water at high pressure, is forced down into the mud of the Bay bottom, blowing a hole as it goes. When the pipe is jerked up, the log is dropped into the hole as far as it will go. Then, from the top of the tower there drops an eight-ton weight which hits the projecting end of the log a tremendous blow, driving it home. This is all done in a moment, with the utmost regularity and precision. The minute that huge hammer falls, up swings a new log to be driven.

The dredges that are cutting into the solid marsh move slowly but perceptibly, like giant snails. In the front of them are four-bladed knives that cut the marsh into ooze, and this ooze is instantly sucked into a long pipe and deposited into one of those walled-in areas of the Bay to settle and gradually become land.

HUNTING IN THE KONGO

In his book "Hunting and Hunted in the Belgian Kongo" Mr. R. D. Cooper speaks of the remarkable people who live in the forest wilds:

"Threading our way down the stony path, winding in and out among the trees, we began to walk the remaining few miles along the sandy shore to Butiaba. A slight breeze sprang up from the southwest, and very shortly the sun had kissed the Bulegga mountain peaks that rose thousands of feet sheer from the water's edge in the west.
